Trolleymen's Outing.

The Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company Employees' Benevolent Association met in Odd Fellow's hall, Thursday, and decided to hold its annual picnic at Riverside Park, instead of Midway Park, as first arranged. Tuesday, August 1. There will be a drawing for three prizes. The first will be $5 in gold, the second $3 50, and the third a badge. There will also be a drawing for a ticket to the St. Louis Exposition.

Petty Thieving.

During the past few days petty thieving has been a source of annoyance to Morris C. VanArsdale and Thomas H. Stafford, of East Front street. It has been their custom to store their bicycles during the day in the hallway, next to Mr. VanArsdale's shoe store, and the theft of 4 bicycle lanters and tool bag has caused the owners of the wheels to be more careful about their property.

State's Anti-Spitting Crusade.

The State Board of Health is about to begin a crusade on all the railroads in the State against expectoration. The Pennsylvania Railroad consented to have warning signs in its cars and other companies are expected to follow suit. The movement is to prevent the spread of tuberculosis.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 17.

Topic—The world's gain through universal peace.—Ps. xlvi, 1-11; Isa. ii, 2-4.

Universal, worldwide peace would be the greatest blessing that ever came upon the human race. Yet how improbable it seems. The elements of nature are at war. In the heart and life of the same person there is constant conflict; among the nations and races of the world strife and contention are ever present. "Wars and rumors of wars" are ever with us; the sword is scarcely ever sheathed, and the soldier has little else than dreams of rest. Nor among the people of God, over whom the Prince of Peace rules, is there unity of faith and love. Instead of being one in Christ, they are divided and subdivided time and time again. But let us also remember that war has not always been an unmitigated evil nor has peace always been necessarily a great blessing. The law of life, in our universe at least, is development through struggle. Conflict develops character, and often is necessary to bring out the best that is in nation or in the individual. Yet the goal is peace and not warfare, a time when we shall no longer need struggle to develop or perfect our lives, but when, having reached a point of superior excellence, the pursuits of peace shall appeal to us more strongly than the battle din of war.

It is well to remember also that war and its issues are in the hands of an infinite and all wise God. "He maketh wars to cease unto the ends of the earth; He breaketh the bow and cutteth the spear in sunder; He burneth the chariot in the fire." When will He do this for the whole world? Men differ as to whether it will be before the coming of Christ or after His coming. But God knows, God has promised, and He will bring it to pass in His own time, and in His own way, and when it comes it will redound to His honor and glory. "Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth."

In his prophecy of universal peace Isaiah comprehensively sets forth the gain to the world through such peace. "He (God) shall judge among the nations and shall rebuke many people." This is the preliminary step. God shall take charge of the nations. The purposes of war having ceased He shall "control all the nations for peace, with the result that "they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks (scythes); nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." What a tremendous gain to humanity if this condition should be brought about. God should occupy His proper place among all men and nations. War should give place to the arts and sciences. The immense sums of money now spent for standing armies and navies in peace and in war could be invested in the pursuits of peace and in the betterment and uplifting of humanity. Why, even the instruments of war could be turned into tools of usefulness. The words that describe the human life in war could be beaten into plowshares to cut up the earth for the support of human life, and the spears which in war cut down men could be turned into scythes that they might cut down grain for man's preservation. Let us work and pray for the hastening of the time when these prophecies shall be fulfilled and there shall be brought about through Christ, the Prince of Peace, the realization of the angel's song at His birth, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men."

BIBLE READINGS.

Num. vi, 22-26; Isa. ix, 6, 7; Jer. xxxi, 7-9; Isa. xxvi, 1-3; Ps. xxix, 1-11; Nah. i, 15; Luke ii, 14; John xiv, 27.

Ohio's President.

Ohio is justly proud of its talented young leader in state work. Rev. J. E Fout of Fostoria is a West Virginian by birth and an active Endeavorer in every sense of the word. He gained prominence in the District of Columbia union. He has also been president of the Ohio union since 1902. Last year, with the field secretary, he made a tour of twenty cities in the state and raised over $1,200 for the spread of Christian Endeavor in Ohio.

REV. J. E. FOUT.

The Great Need.

The great need of our country societies is not the need of a more complex organization, of more variety in the meetings, of more committees, of more members on our rolls. These are very important considerations, but really minor secondary details. What we need most of all in order to be successful soul winners for Christ is the spirit of prayer. These little, petty importances which sometimes burden our minds and get into vital union with the great source of all true Christian endeavor—Christ Himself. We need to be filled with His Spirit and then, and only then, we shall be strengthened for quiet, prayerful, persistent, individual work, without which no society is of any value.—Miss Maggie Anderson in Irish Endeavorer.

Tithing.

A recent poll of the members of the society in the Central Presbyterian church of New York city showed that 95 per cent of the members gave one-tenth or more of their income for benevolence.

ONE WOMAN'S CURIOSITY.

How It Led to the Discovery of the Only Turquoise Mine Known to Exist in Mexico.

Perhaps the first mine in all the world that has been discovered because of a woman's insatiable curiosity has been developed in the state of Zacatecas in the Santa Rosa district, near Bonanza. From time immemorial, says the Mexican Herald, it has been an adage among miners that the best mines have been located by accident. Prospectors have been known to discover a lode through the kicking of a piece of metal from an unknown ledge by their mules' hoofs. Cripple Creek was discovered through the merest accident by Stratton; but it remained for a woman, Mrs. V. M. Clement, to discover a rich deposit of turquoise, reputed to be the only one in Mexico, in the Santa Rosa mine, while searching for pretty stones on the dump of the Prospect.

The mine was then being worked by V. D. Williamson and some associates as a lead-silver property. They had never even suspected the existence of turquoise. Telling the story, Manager Williamson said:

"Mrs. Clement was a large stockholder in the company. She lived at Bonanza, and it had been the joke of the other members that she was always prowling around the dump picking up pieces of ore and claiming they were all sorts of things, other than what they were. One day about 12 months ago she went out to the dump and picked up a pretty light blue stone which was very hard and shiny. She thought it would do for her collection, so she took it home.

"Upon her arrival she compared it with a piece of turquoise she had bought in the United States, and came to the conclusion that it was turquoise. The other members of the company laughed, thinking it was another joke on Mrs. Clement. We had been mining the property for lead and silver. Mrs. Clement was so persistent that we sent the specimen to Mexico City and had it analyzed. The report came back that it was pure phosphate of aluminium, or turquoise.

"After this report was made, other samples were taken, and the company became satisfied that the stone was turquoise. Now the mine is being worked solely for the gem."

NEWSPAPERS FOR KINGS.

Monarchs of Europe and Great Britain Pay Particular Attention to Press Matters.

The first royal newspaper was published for the emperor of Austria. About thirty years ago he gave orders that a private newspaper should be supplied to him every morning. Each important article is condensed by a competent writer, and the results written out on small, square sheets, which are slipped into a binding cover and laid by on his majesty's breakfast table. Nothing which concerns him personally, whether discussed favorably or otherwise, is omitted, and it is said that occasionally he orders a bundle of fresh papers to be brought to make sure that his orders are obeyed, says the New York Herald.

The German kaiser, who is one of the busiest men alive, has a court officer, with a staff under him, whose whole duty is to cut out all the items of information which may be of interest to his majesty and submit them each morning neatly pasted in a scrap book. These books are kept on file, and should ever be really prove an interesting record of the history of a stirring time. Official circles in Russia were filled with something like consternation last June when the tsar called together 200 of the best educated men in his kingdom. This was the result of his majesty's thirst for news. Till quite recently the Russian rulers were content to receive their news from the outside world through official channels.

King Edward VII. is said to be a perpetual reader of the many clipping bureaus which are now in existence, and receives from them several hundred clippings weekly.

The Turkish Idea.

In Turkey it is considered no honor to be photographed by the side of a heap of small game that has been killed, as the huntsman do in this country. A Turk would consider that frivolous. In the officers' quarters of a Turkish garrison the walls are covered with grewsome photographs. After a battle with Albanians or Macedonian insurgents, the bodies of the dead are decapitated and the heads are set out in rows. The officers pose behind them and the groups are then photographed. A young Turkish officer who has no photograph of himself in such a group to hang up on the walls of his quarters feels that he has still to prove his manhood.—Detroit Free Press.

Accommodating.

"Madam," said the most courageous of the boarders to the sour-visaged landlady, "the only vegetables you have been serving us of late for dinner are asparagus and potatoes. Can't you vary the monotony of the menu?"

"With pleasure. I'll omit the asparagus."—Detroit Free Press.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 17: "The World's Gain Through Universal Peace."—Ps. xlvi, 9-11; Isa. ii, 2-4.

Passages of Scripture representing Jehovah as the God of battles are not few, and this aspect of the divine nature and the corresponding truth in human history have been greatly magnified.

The lesson for this week places emphasis upon another phase of affairs and shows Jehovah as ruling the nations of earth in such a way as to bring them into harmony and secure universal peace.

Such a condition has long been dreamed as possible and desired by many who dislike strife and contention. How it may be secured has long been the search of many of the wisest and best. At times it has seemed as if the way would be found by human diplomacy and statecraft, but each time some unforeseen and often frivolous event has arisen and destroyed at a stroke the most carefully wrought out schemes until we are forced to conclude that if peace ever comes permanently to the nations it will not be because of some superficial sentiment or selfish human device for personal gain, but because in the truest and deepest sense Jehovah maketh wars to cease unto the ends of the earth by a radical and permanent lifting of human nature into the plane of right reason and good will by the masterful possession of His Spirit.

Our lesson this week calls for a study of the means to be had by such peace rather than by war.

The first and most apparent advantage would be the effect produced on the world's food supply. A large fraction of the people of the earth have never yet been well fed. Millions have never known what it is not to be hungry. Wars make a wilderness of the fairest provinces and ruin their harvests. Armies eat the food which others produce, but never add an ounce to the stock nor turn a furrow nor harvest a meal. Equipped with hoes instead of guns, the armies of the great nations would in a year banish all dearth and feed all the hungry. The military and naval expenditures would irrigate deserts, drain marshes, span continents with rails, build fleets and load every man's table with the products of many climes.

Again, peace would give industrial arts an impetus never yet enjoyed. Clothing and equipment of armies might be changed into that for mechanics, artisans and producers of goods instead of being wasted on destroyers of goods and lives. The millions of the earth's naked people would be clothed and make homes for themselves then. Interior China has no roads. Her rivers and canals are her only highways. Mud hovels house the greater part of her people. Camels bear much of the goods carried on her great river, the Yangtse, are lost in the rapids. Her great cities like Fuchau have never seen a pump. All water is lifted and carried in buckets. Peace would of new might give highways, waterworks and sewers, houses and home comforts and all the betterments of improved living. What a field for invention and uplift is opened!

Peace means more knowledge possible of disease and conditions of health. It means in building a Panama canal that the first work is to make the isthmus a healthful place for men, which it never has been since time began. It means the redemption of earth's plague spots for the homes of men.

Best of all, it means a higher regard for the rights and worth of man, and deeper reverence for God. It means the breeding and rearing of men of giant strength for good; of stalwart sons of righteousness and gentleness.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm that will last is that which God approves and which He enkindles in the soul. It must have a meritorious object in view; it must have truth for a foundation. The best enthusiasm for that which is not based on truth the better. The sooner men become discouraged in a false undertaking the better for them and the world. God will not inflame men with the spirit of fanaticism. He will not be that He cannot approve. Such zeal comes from another quarter and is without knowledge. Extravagant representations of a good cause or a false coloring always produce a reaction sooner or later, when men come to see. While a few may be ensnared, the mass of people will see through the thin coating and beware. Honesty is the best policy in all things.—Christian Instructor.

Substantial Religion.

I will not quarrel with you about opinions. Only see that your heart is right toward God, and that you love the Lord Jesus Christ, that you love your neighbor and walk as your Master walked, and I desire no more. I am sick of opinions, I am weary to bear them. Give me solid and substantial religion, a spirit of humble, gentle love of God and man, a man full of mercy and good fruits, a man laying out himself in the work of faith, the patience of hope, the labor of love, let my soul be with these Christians, wheresoever they are and whatsoever opinions they are of. Whosoever thus doeth the will of my Father in heaven, the same is my brother and sister.—John Wesley.

God's Work.

God works in you to will. He does not work to make you feel, because feeling ends in smoke so often. God does not work in you to think, because you think and think again. But God works in you to will. That is, there rises up in your heart a desire which becomes at last a purpose to be free.—F. B. Meyer.

FALLS FROM WINDOW AND DEATH RESULTS

ONLY 17 YEARS OLD

MARGARET EATON'S SAD END AT AUNT'S HOME.

Three Doctors Work Over Her All Night, But She Passed Away at Noon Today — Came From Pittsfield.

Miss Margaret Eaton, aged seventeen years, of Pittsfield, Mass., fell out of a sleeping-room window at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Warren, of Fanwood, Friday, and she died the next day as a result of the injuries she sustained. The young woman is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Warren and she arrived at Fanwood Thursday for a visit.

That night she retired as usual, but some time before midnight she left her bed and walking in her sleep went out of the window. She was found lying on the ground about 11:30 presumably in a critical condition, suffering from shock and hemorrhages. It was this that caused death.

Dr. W. H. Murray, the family physician, was called and he together with Dr. F. W. Westcott, remained with Miss Eaton all night. The severity of the hemorrhages forced the end and at no time was there much hope for recovery.

JR. O. U. A. M. INSTALLATION

BENEVOLENT COUNCIL, NO. 256, HOLDS A SEMI-ANNUAL CEREMONY.

One of the bustling organizations of the city is Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., although the youngest of that order. Since its inception, the Council has steadily grown in numbers, until today it has a large membership. Scarcely a meeting passes but that new members are not initiated and the interest in the principals of the order is increasing. The Council met Friday to witness the installation of the new officers. Past Councilor Arthur G. Adams was the installing officer.

Those on the various persons who will have charge during the coming term:

Councilor, Edward C. Searing; vice councilor, Harry C. Runyon; recording secretary, Horace G. Adams; assistant secretary, John V. Beckman; financial secretary, Theodore A. Kurzhals, Jr.; treasurer, Jacob M. Higgins; conductor, Donald Bechtel; warden, John VanHorn; inside sentinel, Samuel Pope; outside sentinel, Gilbert S. Martin; trustee for eighteen months, Alfred Traschand.

BOROUGH'S PETITION HELD UP.

Application for License Fee Reduction May be Decided in the Fall.

The North Plainfield higher license matter, which has been held up in the Somerset County Courts at Somerville ever since the opening of the April term, is still undecided and is sure to be until Friday, July 29, at least, as Judge Sobenck, who has the matter under advisement with Justice Garretson, has announced there will be no more Court until that date. It is the usual summer vacation.

The Court may not decide the question until the opening of the September term, as it seems he cannot get Justice Garretson's definite views on the subject, and he will not render his decision until he does.

W. R. Millar is Graduated.

Among the graduates at Yale on Wednesday was William Robert Millar, son of Alexander Millar, of Madison avenue. He went to Yale after preparing at the Roxbury Latin School, Boston, and Leal's School, of this city. During his course at Yale he has been a leader in hockey and golf. He captained his class hockey team and one year was a member of the 'varsity. He will enter the Harvard law school.

Freedom Castle's Drawing.

Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, have arranged a drawing for a set of china, the receipts to be applied to the general fund of the organization. The drawing will take place on August 2. The china set is on exhibition at J. W. Gavett's store.

Pictures of Hunt Club.

Two views of the Plainfield Hunt Club riding to hounds are shown in this month's number of The Burr McIntosh Monthly. The plates are remarkably good, which is characteristic of the magazine.

CHILDREN'S HOME NOW TO BE ENLARGED

Contracts Are Made for Additions and Improvements to Building.

TO COST ABOUT $10,000

THE WHOLE STRUCTURE IS TO BE REMODELED.

Work to be Rushed—During Progress of Improvements Children to Occupy Nurses' Old Home on Muhlenberg Place.

Actual work on the remodelling of the Children's Home has been begun. Using the $10,000 given and bequeathed to the home by the late James Clark the managers of the Home have given contracts to enlarge and improve the institution to an extent that will result practically in a new house of refuge for the city's homeless tots.

An addition is to be built on the present structure. The old building will be turned around from Jackson avenue, to face upon Watervelt avenue, the addition going up on the side left open by the change of frontage. All the plans for the improvements are out, but there was no copy of them at the Home this morning, and the exact size of the addition could not be learned. It was stated that the remodelled home will have room for from forty to fifty children, almost a doubling of the capacity. At present the home is able to house properly only twenty-eight children.

In addition to enlarging, the managers will remodel the entire structure outside and in. The exterior is to be improved in design and appearance to a very material extent.

Inside, the remodelled home is to bear an entirely different appearance. A spacious open stairway will be erected, and, more notable than that, the little ones are to have a splendidly equipped new playroom. The old laundry is also to be replaced by a new room of wholly modern appointments.

All possible speed will be put into the work by the contractors. It is hoped that the children will be able to hold their Christmas celebration in the new and brighter home.

During the progress of the work the children will be housed in the nurses' old home.

SEA GIRT SHOOT EVENTS

ANNUAL TOURNAMENT OF NATIONAL AND STATE RIFLE ASSOCIATIONS.

The annual shooting tournament under the auspices of the New Jersey State Rifle Association and the National Rifle Association will be held on the Sea Girt range September 1 to 10.

Most important of the events is the Wimbleton cup match, for the National individual championship and the President's match for the military championship of the United States. F. Meany match; Spencer match; Reading match; souvenir medal match; Schutzen match (German ring target) and the hypscope match.

The revolver and pistol matches will be: Novice military revolver match, all-comers' military revolver match, all-comers' rapid-fire military match, any revolver match, pistol match, disappearing target revolver match and all-comers' squadded revolver match.

ALIS WHITEWASHED BY CHATHAM F. C.

The First Shut-Out This Season for the Local Baseball Team.

FANS DISAPPOINTED

BADGLEY RECEIVED RAGGED SUPPORT THROUGHOUT THE GAME.

Fine Work of Cregan and Walton—Manager Johnston Promises a General Shakeup Before Saturday.

The Alis team received its first whitewash of the season on Saturday. The fast aggregation from the Chatham Field Club visited Crescent Oval and applied the brush good and proper, the score being 7 to 0. It was a discouraging contest to witness, the work of the locals being no relation to that of a week ago when the Acolians were defeated 1 to 0 in a twelve inning game. With a very few exceptions they played in listless fashion, and there were only two or three redeeming features. Badgley pitched good ball, but could scarcely hope to win with such ragged support. He allowed but eight hits, while Speer was touched for ten safeties.

The remarkable features were that Alis made ten hits, eight errors and had thirteen men left on base, yet were unable to score. Several times they had men on the cushions and once they were filled, yet no one was able to do the trick and bring the runners home.

Cregan and Walton were up to their usual form. Out of eleven chances, Walton accepted ten and made only one error. One chance was a most difficult hot line drive. By catching the sphere, the short-stop was able to make a double with Patience's assistance. Another pretty double was made by Davis and Heckman, the right fielder making a long throw to third, after catching a fly.

The majority of the team played like amateurs, and even Farmer, who has been putting up the finest article, was off color. While Alis made errors, Chatham made runs with little difficulty. As a result of this wretched exhibition, Manager Johnston has promised a change. He says that such kind of playing must come to an end and the fans can depend on him to keep his word.

When Alis goes on the field next Saturday, it is said a great improvement will be seen.

This is the detailed score:

ALIS.	R	1B	PO	A	E
Walton, ss	0	0	2	8	1

Central Boys Play Ball.

On Saturday afternoon the employes of the New York office of the New Jersey Central played the employes of the Philadelphia office a game of baseball, the contest taking place at Philadelphia. The company placed a private car, attached to the express service, at the disposal of the employes who wanted to take the trip and root for the New York end. What a difference between the present management and the Wanis reign when employes were denied even an occasional pass.

Funeral of Mrs. Randolph.

Funeral services over the remains of Mrs Jeanie Randolph were held from her late home on West Front street, Saturday afternoon. They were in charge of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being William Fitz Randolph, Arthur Tappan, Ellis and Lewis Dunn, John Morris and Eugene Kenyon.

Surprised Miss Parent.

Miss Bessie Parent, of Lee place, was given a surprise party Friday night by fifty young friends. The affair was held on the lawn. A musical programme was rendered and games were played until a late hour, after which refreshments were served.

WINNERS OF MEN'S DOUBLES

EAST NEW JERSEY LEAGUE TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT ROSELLE.

By winning the title in the men's doubles at Roselle, Saturday, G. H. and R. McK. Miller, of the Roselle Casino, scored for their club five points in the tournament being held by the East New Jersey Lawn Tennis Association and Roselle now ties with the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club for first place.

The Miller brothers defeated A. L. and R. A. West, of the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3. The courts were in excellent condition and the play was fast and tiring through all three sets. In the semi-finals, also played Saturday, A. L. and R. A. West won from M. S. Charlock and Charleton Hudson, Jr., the team representing the Elizabeth Town and County Club.

The four clubs represented in the tournament have the points distributed as follows: The Roselle Casino and the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club have seven points each, the former having won the men's doubles and secured second place in the mixed doubles, while the latter holds the title in men's singles and second place in doubles. The Ridgeway Outing Club, of Rahway, won five points by carrying off the honors in mixed doubles. The Elizabeth Town and County Club, winning second place in the singles, has two points.

The disposition of the large silver cup, offered by G. H. Miller, president of the association, thus rests on the outcome of the women's doubles, the fourth and last tournament of the season. Instead of holding this tournament at the Westfield Club, as was originally planned, the committee has decided to play the matches at the Bergen Point Lawn Tennis Club in the third week in September.

The speed tournament of the association will be held at the courts of the Elizabeth Town and County Club in the last week of August.

NEW PARISH PUBLICATION.

The Kalender Makes Its Appearance at St. Mary's.

The initial number of the Parish Kalender, a monthly magazine to be published by St. Mary's church, appeared Sunday for distribution. This month's issue contains fourteen pages and seven illustrations, among which are half tones of Pope Pius X, Cardinal Gibbons and Rev. Father A. M. Egan, pastor of the church. The number contains a short history of the church and its work as well as a monthly calendar and the hours of all services.

Twilights Twice Victors.

Just like the New York National team, the Twilight ball team played a double header Saturday afternoon and won both games. The first game at 2:30 found the Pilot A. C. team, of Plainfield, ready to do battle. Johnston and Mooney were the battery put in to do the work. This game went to the locals by the score of 10 to 5. The second victim was the Potter A. C. team, of Mt. Pleasant. Alberts and Baldwin as a battery proved to be too much for the visitors and the locals won by a score of 16 to 2.

Chas. Boerman Obtains Divorce.

E. Douglass Drake Monday received an absolute decree of divorce for Charles Boerman, against his wife, Mrs. Carrie Boerman. The decision was granted by Vice Chancellor Pitney, of Jersey City, upon testimony taken by J. H. VanWinkle, Sr., Special Master in Chancery. According to the decision, Mr. Boerman gets the two children.

Tennis Finals.

The finals in singles at the Holiday Tennis Tournament at the Hillside Club were played off Saturday. In the final round Owen H. Fleming won from Atther Lovell, 6-1, 9-7, 6-1.

A GENERAL STRIKE

Meat Packers of Seven Cities Go Out For More Pay.

WILL AFFECT THE WHOLE COUNTRY

Trouble Started in Chicago and Was Followed Out of Sympathy by Men and Women in Packing Plants at Other Points.

CHICAGO, July 13.—The strike in the great packing plants of the country is on and a meat famine and immediate advance in prices are looked for.

Fifty thousand men are affected by the strike order, and at a late hour 15,000 had gone out here, 5,000 in East St. Louis, 5,000 in St. Louis, 4,000 in Omaha, 8,000 in Kansas City, 1,000 in Sioux City, 700 in South St. Paul, Minn., and 500 in Fort Worth, a total of nearly 40,000.

New York city is still to be heard from.

The strike is the result of a stubborn disagreement, chiefly over wages for unskilled labor, and will be the most extensive in the history of the meat packing industry of the United States. If prolonged the suspension is expected to cause widespread inconvenience, possibly equaling the anthracite coal famine of two years ago.

The unanimity of the strike is complete. More than 45,000 employees are directly involved. In Chicago alone 18,000 men are on strike.

Arthur Meeker of Armour & Co. said: "We consider the demand of the union for an advance in wages of unskilled labor entirely unwarranted by industrial conditions. We could not possibly grant it, and refuse to submit the question to arbitration, which the union declined and called a strike at all our plants. Every department is kept running, however. We have had applications from hundreds of unemployed men for positions at less wages than we have been paying and every day expect to increase our output."

President Michael Donnelly, the strike leader, said:

"I wish to make it clear that we are not fighting for an increase of wages but against a decrease.

"Our original demand was for a minimum of 20 cents an hour for laborers. This demand was amended after our second conference with the packers in June.

"We then agreed to a scale of 18½ cents an hour, except in Omaha and Sioux City, where the scale is 19 cents.

"The packers, on the other hand, refused to pay more than 17½ cents an hour and declined to make any agreement at all except with a small proportion of the workmen."

The last of the packers here will not be out until near midnight. One hundred girls employed in Nelson, Morris & Co.'s label department struck in sympathy.

Many thousands of men who did not strike are compelled to be idle in the various cities.

While the strikers were passing out of the gates of the packing plants women, children and other sympathizers congregated and shouted encouragement.

Although no definite arrangements have been made by any of the packers for the hiring of nonunion men, five car loads of cots are distributed among the various plants.

The stock yards commission houses at once began wiring to all shipping points, advising cattle men to hold their stock until further notice.

The packers say there is fresh meat enough in Chicago to last about ten days.

Edward Morris, vice president of Nelson, Morris & Co., said that the company's plant did not have more than three or four days' supply of dressed meats on hand. The Swift plant has about three days' supply.

Before there was cessation of work Chief of Police O'Neill made a tour of the stock yards with a view to deciding that additional details of police for protection against possible violence. Half of the total number of policemen at the stock yards station and at two adjoining stations were ordered held in reserve, to be available at a moment's notice.

Other stations in the southern divisions of the city were notified to have policemen prepared for extra duty.

New men will not be employed for ten days, so the police profess not to expect trouble for that time.

The butcher workmen demand a minimum wage of 20 cents an hour for common labor and that the wages of the skilled workers should be equalized in each branch of the trade.

Bey of Tunis at Paris.

PARIS, July 13.—President Loubet gave a dinner to his guest, the bey of Tunis, at which there was a significant exchange of toasts, the president referred to the respect which the French government entertained for the traditions of the Mussulman population of Tunis, and the bey in reply expressed his appreciation of French support.

Church Struck by Lightning.

GENEVA, N. Y., July 13.—The First Evangelical Lutheran church in this city was struck by lightning and set on fire during a severe electrical storm today. The heavy downpour of rain, which was without precedent here, extinguished the flames before much damage was done.

Kaiser Visits New Gooler.

BERGEN, Norway, July 13.—From 1 o'clock to 4:30 yesterday afternoon Emperor William was the guest of Mrs. Robert Goelet on board the yacht Nahma in this harbor.

HIGHBALL BROKE A LEG.

American Derby Winner Did Not Finish and May Be Shot.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Highball, the American Derby winner and one of the best of the three-year-olds, broke his leg at the ankle during the running of the Seagate stakes at Brighton Beach. But May, half owner of Highball, would not consent to have him shot, as Highball is insured for $25,000. A telephone message was sent to a representative of the insurance company in New York to come at once to look at the Derby winner and end his agony.

Only three faced the starter for the Seagate stakes, with Highball favorite at 11 to 20. Highball showed in front in the first turn, when he bore out and Odom had to hit him over the head to keep him in. Knight Errant then assumed the lead and showed the way to the finish, winning easily by two lengths from St. Valentine.

As the field swung into the stretch Highball was seen to falter, and Odom at once pulled him up and dismounted. After several attempts to walk him off the track a man held the broken leg while a half dozen others pushed him to the infield, where his leg was strapped up so it could not touch the ground.

Americans Will Win Cricket Match.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The international cricket match between Canada and the United States, on the grounds of the Merion Cricket club at Haverford, was cut short by a thunderstorm while the Canadians were at bat in the second inning. When stumps were drawn the Canadians had lost eight wickets in their second inning. Their grand total for the first inning and eight wickets of the second inning was 343, or 14 runs more than the Americans made in their first inning. The probabilities are that the Americans will easily win the match.

Brady Won at Harlem.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Backed from 9 to 2 to 3 to 2, Brady, under severe punishment, got up just in time to win from Acton by a head in the final stride in the mile and a sixteenth handicap at Harlem. The struggle between the two lasted the full length of the stretch, Acton holding the advantage to within three jumps of the wire, where Helgesen's superior finish on Brady landed the latter in front. Outcome and Handzarra were the winning favorites.

Racing at World's Fair.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—Three horses went to the post in the fair grounds feature. The race was a loaf to the stretch turn, where Jack Young, in the best going on the outside rail, and Toby Tosa, held in the heavy going by Young, began their run to the wire. The pair raced head and head down the stretch. Neely on Jack Young gradually forced Toby Tosa into the heaviest part of the track and won by a nose.

Spring Meeting at Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 13.—The spring meeting at Narragansett park opened with excellent racing weather and a large attendance. Favorites won in two of the three classes, Jim Kyle taking the 2:15 pace and Ralph Wick having a walkover in the 2:13 trot. Anna Belle, a local horse, defeated the favorite, Pauline Simmons, in the 2:20 trot handily.

Chicago Basket Ball Champions.

ST. LOUIS, July 13.—The Buffalo Germans defeated the Central Y. M. C. A. team of Chicago in the last of the world's championship Olympic basket ball games at the Stadium, the score being 39 to 28. The victory carries with it the world's Olympic championship, each team having previously won four games in the series.

Tennis Tourney at New York.

NEW YORK, July 13.—In the second day's play of the invitation gentlemen's round robin tennis tournament in doubles of the Country club of Westchester, R. D. Wrenn and G. L. Wrenn, Jr., beat W. J. Clothier and Edgar Leonard in a four set match. Wright and Ward also won in four sets in the other match of the day's play.

HIS RIBS BROKEN IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Sidney B. Frasee, of the Fire Department, Falls Beneath Wheels of Road Wagon.

TWO OTHERS ARE HURT

CHARLES KREGAR AND GEORGE VOEHL SUFFER INJURIES.

Kregar is Kicked in the Thigh and Voehl is Struck Several Times—The Wagon is Also Badly Damaged.

Sidney B. Frasee, driver of the chemical engine at fire headquarters, was severely injured, and George Voehl and his nephew, Charles Kregar, were badly hurt in a runaway accident which took place on Madison avenue Saturday afternoon. Three of Frasee's ribs were fractured and he suffered greatly from shock, having been off duty for the past few weeks on account of sickness and being in a weakened state.

The horse belongs to Voehl and is a recent importation from the West. It was attached to a road wagon in which the three started for the Alis baseball game, going down Madison avenue. They were just passing beneath the railroad bridge when the rumbling of a train frightened the animal and it started to run away. Voehl held it in and it started kicking. In the excitement Frasee rolled from his seat to the ground and the wheels passed over him. Kregar was kicked in the thigh and Voehl was also struck several times. The animal finally started on a mad run and was only brought to a standstill by Voehl pluckily guiding it into a pole near West Fifth street. By that time there wasn't much left of the wagon.

Patrolman Mesnier, who witnessed the accident, called the patrol wagon and had Frasee and Kregar removed to Mr. Voehl's home. Dr. Adams, who was summoned, placed the former in a plaster cast and ventured the opinion that he would be confined to his home for several weeks. He also secured several stitches in a bad gash on Kregar's thigh and found him suffering with bad bruises from the horse's hoofs. Voehl's injuries were the least of the three but he also sustained numerous abrasions.

GREAT WORK ON RANGE

CORPORAL PHILLIPS, OF CO. K, GIVES FINE EXHIBITION AT SEA GIRT.

Corporal Arthur Phillips, of Co. K, made one of the best performances of the present season, Saturday morning, on the State range at Sea Girt. He made the highest possible score at the 20 yards range, in the shooting under rapid fire conditions, scoring five successive bullseyes in seventeen seconds, or three seconds inside the time allowance. He followed this with a second string of five shots, the first three of which were bullseyes, giving him a run of forty points in eight shots, rapid fire.

In long range work Corporal Phillips showed up just as well, going on the 800 yards' range and making a maximum score of twenty-five points in five shots. Phillips' work on the range is also remarkable for steadiness, he being one of the most dependable men on the State team.

Fanwood Woman Injured.

In a collision between a Anheuser-Busch Brewing Company wagon and a roadcart driven by Mrs. Goodwin, of Fanwood, near Scotch Plains, Friday, Mrs. Goodwin was thrown heavily from the rig and sustained severe injury to her left knee, aside from a number of painful bruises about the hands and face. She has been confined to her home since the accident. Her husband was severely cut on the head and sustained cuts and scratches about the face. Both rigs were badly smashed, the shafts of the beer wagon being badly shattered. George La Tourette, the driver of the wagon, escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Looser to Build House.

Permits have been issued to Mrs. Annie M. Looser, of East Seventh street, for the erection of a house on South avenue, near Belvidere avenue, and the excavation work will be commenced at once. Fred Lancaster is the architect.

Gave a Wreath.

Fellow-employes of G. H. Bellis in the paint shop of William Chamberlain, gave expression of their sympathy with Mr. Bellis in the loss of his wife by presenting a handsome wreath.

Mrs. Robert Lowry has returned to her home on East Ninth street, after spending a number of weeks in Missouri, where she has occupied the chair of oratory at a summer school.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT FRESH AIR HOME

Mr. Torrey Conducts the Meeting in the Morning and Mr. Parker in the Afternoon.

SOME HAPPY TOTS

ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIVE LITTLE ONES ARE NOW AT THE CAMP.

New Play Houses and Swings on the Grounds—A Few Changes About the Place—Dormitory Accommodates About 100.

The first Sunday at the Mary Morgan Memorial Fresh Air Home proved far from being an unpleasant day for the little metropolitan visitors. Despite the unsettled weather, no effects of storm and rain were evident upon the dispositions of little ones within doors, and when, in the afternoon, the sun did strive to make an appearance, the little boys and girls thronged outside and romped about in swing and sand-pit with shrieks of delight.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the little ones again assembled in the long west wing of the main building and the second service of the day was conducted by James F. Parker. After Scripture reading and the singing of some hymns selected by the children, Mr. Parker taught the assembled little ones the text, selected from I Timothy, 1-15 and gave a simple explanation and application of the thought.

There were 145 little ones at the camp yesterday, some score of whom were accompanied from the city by their mothers. Five children arrived Saturday afternoon with Miss Curry.

While no new buildings have been erected since last season, the grounds have been made more attractive to the children by the installation of several new play houses and a number of swings. The so-called dormitory in the rear of the main building has been more fully equipped and is now capable of offering sleeping quarters to about a hundred. The west wing of the main building is to be used this year as an assembly room and it is here also that the meals are served.

A delegation of ten little ones arrived this morning. Several of these little visitors are cripples and the hot, trying weather in their city homes will make this country outing of great benefit to them. The children come from the thickly populated tenement district of East Eighth street, New York.

ITALIANS ATTACK WOMEN

TWO NURSES NARROWLY ESCAPE ROUGH TREATMENT.

Frightened into hysterics by an attack made upon them by two Italians, two nurses attached to the Grossmann School located in the former Mountain Park Inn, are in a state of nervous collapse and under a physician's care. They were assailed by the men Friday night as they were ascending the mountain road and narrowly escaped rough treatment. Both screamed and the fellows, fearing their cries would attract some one from the school, ran away. The nurses made their way to the building and the borough police were at once notified by telephone, but the assailants had made good their escape.

It is the belief of Chief Weis that the Italians belong to the colony which works in the quarries at the "Notch" and he is keeping a sharp lookout in that direction. The young women furnished a good description and are positive they could readily identify either one.

Dougherty Captures Thieves.

Chief of Police Dougherty, of the New Jersey Central, arrested George Blume on a charge of robbery, at Hampton Junction Saturday. Blume, who was formerly employed by the company, has given the officials considerable trouble. A brakeman from Hampton was caught with the "goods on." Both are now locked up at Flemington. Cigars, jewelry, money and household goods were the principal articles taken.

First Shave by Barber at 85.

Peter T. Latourette, aged 85, who lives on a farm a short distance from White House station, underwent his first experience in a barber chair Wednesday. He got into the chair and after he had been neatly trimmed he remarked that it was the first time he had ever been shaved by a barber.

WOOD PAVE ORDINANCE TO BE INTRODUCED ANEW

Common Council to Pass Measure on First and Second Reading Again.

SOME FAVOR BRICK

BUT MAJORITY OF COUNCIL ARE READY TO FOLLOW MR. GAVETT'S ADVICE.

President Tolles Believes That Original Vote Was Legal—Work Likely to be Completed in the Fall.

It now seems an assured fact that the 5 to 4 vote taken at a recent meeting of the Common Council in the matter of providing wooden pavement for Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street, will not stand legally and that a new ordinance will be introduced and another vote taken. The last vote was 5 to 4 in favor of the pavement mentioned, but the city charter specifies that six votes must be recorded in favor to insure the adoption of an ordinance.

President Tolles, of the Council, is of the opinion that the 5 to 4 should stand. He argues that if there were six members present at a meeting it would be necessary to secure a unanimous vote to pass an ordinance, according to those who hold that the other vote was illegal. However, rather than cause any trouble, the Council appears to be perfectly willing to have a new ordinance introduced and another vote taken.

There are still many, if not a majority of those who have expressed opinions, that the brick pavement is preferable to wood. They have in mind the wooden pavements laid in Park avenue many years ago and which was not a success. It is hard to convince these persons that the present pavement, the kind proposed for Watchung avenue, is a great improvement over the old style. In fact, this improved pavement is to be laid on the Williamsburg (N. Y.) bridge and is now in use in a number of streets in New York and other large cities throughout the country.

Street Commissioner Gavett has made a special study of the proposed pavements and in his own mind he seems satisfied that it would be preferable to other pavements for Watchung avenue. The kind of wood block and the method of preparing it and the manner of laying the same is such as to produce the greatest possible wear with the least possible objection.

Aside from the fact that brick pavement is known to be in favor among many private citizens, there are some of the Councilmen who favor it and it is possible that the wooden pavement may not be accepted. The Councilmen say that if the people want brick they are willing to vote for it. They are desirous of putting down the kind of pavement that will give the best satisfaction and they have no pet schemes to follow.

It is likely that a new ordinance will be introduced at the August meeting of the Council and taking the ordinary course, it would be possible to commence laying the pavement the last of August or first of September. The actual work would require but a few weeks and could easily be done before cold weather and frost arrives. This will probably be the course adopted as the Council is anxious to have some style of permanent pavement laid on Watchung avenue before winter arrives.

BAN ON SUNDAY BASEBALL

NO MORE GAMES TO BE PLAYED AT RIVERSIDE PARK ON THAT DAY.

The Riverside Park authorities have placed the ban on Sunday ball playing within its confines. It has been the custom since the pleasure resort was opened to allow opposing teams to meet on the diamond in the place Sunday afternoons but sentiment has been against the plan all along and the officials decided to accede to the wishes of the quiet-loving public.

Teams which had games arranged for succeeding Sundays have been notified that they will not be allowed the grounds and that they must make other arrangements.

—The Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company Employes Benevolent Association will hold its annual picnic at Riverside Park on Tuesday, August 2.

VAN ORDEN'S POCKET PICKED

BOROUGHITE LOST $15 WHILE AT ITALIAN CELEBRATION LAST NIGHT.

The Italian fireworks celebration at Concert Park last Tuesday cost Daniel B. VanOrden $15, the money being taken from his pocket while in the crowd watching the display. VanOrden lives on Stony Brook place in the borough and last night went to the Park with his wife to see the celebration.

After having spent some time near the band stand listening to the selections, VanOrden took his wife to the soda stand on the edge of the grounds. After paying for this refreshment, VanOrden replaced his coin purse in his pocket, and after making sure that his large purse, which contained $15 in bills, was safely stored in with the throng which was moving toward the place where the fireworks were being displayed, in order to witness the "Santiago" set piece. That was the last he ever saw of the pocketbook or its contents. While moving through the dense crowd holding his wife by the arm, VanOrden says he felt numerous people jostle him, some, it seemed to him, intentionally.

Having gained the desired position for witnessing the display, VanOrden felt for the pocket book and found it missing. It had been in the right hand pocket of his trousers, where he had put it for special safety, and, on account of its size, was a noticeable bulk. Realizing the fruitlessness of action by the police in such a dense throng, VanOrden made no report of the matter.

ALIS SHOULD WIN MATCH

MANAGER JOHNSTON PREPARING FOR WESTFIELD'S DEFEAT ON SATURDAY.

The fans are now assured of the team that will represent Alis on the diamond Saturday against Westfield. After last Saturday's contest Manager Johnston announced that he would not change his team again this season, barring accident or some unforeseen cause. The only possible change for Saturday will be a pitcher. That Manager Denman will strengthen his battery goes without saying and the locals will be prepared. Close observers of baseball feel sure that Alis will win this contest with Westfield, comparing man with man.

As any fan, Johnston's aggregation will give the down-the-line boys a great run for their money and he, as well as the team feel confident of victory. Since the two teams have played, both organizations have had their bumps, Westfield having undergone many changes and having lost several contests. The same is true of Alis. Both teams have reorganized and claims are put forth that each are stronger than ever. The disputed contest of June 11, while it will always be remembered by the cranks in both towns, is to have no direct bearing on the coming series. To be sure Westfield gets the decision, but it is a whole lot of empty glory.

MEAT NOT SCARCE HERE

FALLING OFF IN TRADE, BECAUSE OF PRICES, BUT SUPPLY AMPLE.

Despite the fact that there has been few shipments of beef during the past week on account of strike troubles in the West, the local beef houses are receiving meat, and there is no immediate fear of a famine along that line. There has been some increase in the prices. The proprietors of the beef houses, as well as those of the meat markets have noticed a falling off in trade, many families being frightened by the increased prices. This has had a tendency to keep the beef houses fairly well stocked. Those who handle the meat for the city are looking for an adjustment of the strike troubles within a short time.

In the meantime, reports received from the West indicate that cattle is being killed and there is about 50 per cent. of the usual shipment. Out of this Plainfield is sure to get a fair proportion. One meat dealer said today that in his opinion the increase means but little to the consumer, and as an illustration said that in an ordinary family where an average of ten pounds of meat is used a week, the increase in cost would not amount to more than $3 a month.

—Street Commissioner Gavett today commenced the work of re-macadamizing Madison avenue, between Second and Fourth streets. The preparatory work includes the laying of a heavy and substantial bottom.

GRANDSTAND FALLS, NONE HURT SERIOUSLY

Temporary Structure at Concert Park Collapses, Throwing Occupants in a Heap.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

FIREWORKS IGNITE THE DRESSES OF TWO CHILDREN.

Exploding Bombs Too Near the Spectators—Some Narrow Escapes From Being Injured by Fireworks.

Several minor accidents occurred during the progress of the Italian celebration in Concert Park, last Tuesday, one of which all but resulted seriously.

The latter was due to a faultily constructed grand stand, put up for the occasion. Early in the evening when not yet filled it gave several ominous creaks and the more timid hurriedly left it. Their places were quickly taken by others and a second time there was a swaying and cracking that should have left no doubt as to the danger of the structure. Even this failed to warn those on it and in the midst of the celebration the center portion collapsed entirely, throwing men, women and children to the ground in a confused heap. They were extricated quickly and it was found that no one had sustained broken limbs or severe injuries, but many had bad bruises and contusions. That the crash did not result more seriously is considered miraculous.

On several occasions rockets and sparks from the fireworks dropped into the crowd and two children had their dresses set on fire. Prompt action was all that prevented a fatality. Toward the close of the celebration, an aerial piece which hurled bombs in all directions, dropped one of these deadly affairs a little too soon and it burst just over the heads of the people in the main grandstand. The concussion was terrific and many were dazed for several minutes. The bombs contained enough dynamite to wreck a barroo in a crowd and that this one did not get nearer is extremely fortunate.

LEADERS IN GOLF CONTESTS

THOSE IN THE RACE FOR TROPHIES AT PARK AND HILLSIDE GOLF CLUBS.

George T. Rogers is now leading with six points in the weekly competition for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club, and his nearest opponent is Arthur Peck with 5½ points. Rogers and Peck follows in second place with 5½ points and Charles A. Reed is third with seven points.

At the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club there is much rivalry in the competition for the Golf Committee cup. C. B. Morgan by winning one point on Saturday, took the lead with nine points and Willard Wadsworth holds a close second with 8½ points. Robert Abbott is in third position with 5½ points. As the play this year has shown a decided improvement among the younger members this standing is liable to change any Saturday. From present indications no one contestant is likely to have any great advantage over another, as the handicap committee is closely watching the work and pairing accordingly.

Pythian Officers at Somerville.

The Grand Lodge officers of the Knights of Pythias were in Somerville yesterday and went over the ground where the annual Field Day is to be held there on Labor Day. They expressed themselves as being delighted with the town and the prospects of an enjoyable outing. They were entertained by the committee of citizens appointed and dined at Cawley's Hotel. In the afternoon a drive through the Duke estate was enjoyed. On Labor Day there will be a grand march over Main, High and Cliff streets and Altament place in the morning and in the afternoon prize drills on High street in front of the schoolhouse.

Miss Ethel Titsworth, of West Fifth street, has gone to Westerly, R. I.

VANNANZE OUT ON BAIL

ITALIAN WHO KNIFED HIS VICTIM RELEASED ON FILING A $500 BOND.

Carmas Vannanze, the borough Italian lodged in the Somerville jail as the assailant of Giovanni Colucci in the Hudson Lace School, yesterday again secured his freedom. His wife placed a cash bond of $500 with the county prosecutor and he was released for appearance before the Grand Jury on a charge of atrocious assault.

In the borough court tonight, Vannanze and Dominick Feloool, the other Italian arrested after the trouble, will be arraigned on a charge of disorderly conduct. When arrested they were let out in a short time by depositing $20 with Recorder Dond to insure their appearance.

EDWARD S. SIMPSON DEAD

SON OF FORMER PLAINFIELD CLERGYMAN SUCCUMBS AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Edward S. Simpson, son of Rev. Stephen P. Simpson, formerly rector of St. Stephen's church, Motherwood, but now of New York, died Monday evening in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, where he had been since June 1. The young man, who was very well known throughout this city, had always been in delicate health and had been confined to his bed for nine months before removal to the hospital. The latter place was selected for him because of the skillful treatment given by its staff of physicians but it proved of no avail. Despite the long illness he was a patient sufferer and maintained his loveliness of character to the last.

Funeral services over the remains will be held from the chapel of St. Luke's Hospital tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and interment will follow in Woodlawn cemetery.

SCORE, 15 TO 14.

Firstbrook's Team Defeats Nash's Nine on Crescent Oval Yesterday Afternoon.

Two picked teams, one captained by V. W. Nash, Jr. and the other by George H. Firstbrook, played "fast and exciting" ball on Alis Field yesterday afternoon. The final score was 15 to 14 in favor of Nash's nine.

While not the grade of baseball generally witnessed on the Alis Field, both teams made runs in bunches for a few innings with such marked regularity that up to the sixth inning the score was a tie. At this juncture of the game, the Newspapermen weakened and their opponents began to pile up the runs on their errors. Though the last innings showed a brace on the part of the Newspapermen, the lead could not be entirely overcome.

George Firstbrook's playing behind the plate was of major stamp and "Archie" Hacqeur played his customary cautious game in the right meadow. Bross did some good work in his position at center field, George Coes played first base, Jack Hall, third, and "Bill" Fairing handled the ball adeptly at short stop. Henry Blaine was signed to shoot the leather over the plate, and made a great success of his work, keeping the spare six hits well scattered. E. Laing played second base and "Van Eaton" Mullen was in left field.

The battery for the other team consisted of V. W. Nash, Jr., in the box and Banks as his assistant across the plate. Nash allowed but four hits through the entire game and fielded his position well. Fred H. Huff played center field and Harry DeMess held a job on third. The other players were Edward Texier at first, Percy Vail at second, Bert Conover at short, Elmer Cutting in right field and Jack Todd in left field. Walter Hetfield umpired the game.

Mrs. Howe in Newport.

Society notes at Newport, R. I., in reporting one of the largest receptions of the season given on Monday by Mrs. J. Amory Codman, of Boston, at her villa on Bellevue avenue, makes the following comment on Mrs. Howe, the mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Madison avenue: "The venerable Mrs. Julia Ward Howe drove in from her country home, some miles away, and was one of the conspicuous guests, holding a little court of her own in one corner of the drawing room."

—M. C. Lndlam, of Bound Brook, has tendered his resignation as superintendent of the New Brunswick line of the Public Service Corporation. He will soon leave for the New England States where he will identify himself with another trolley company. James Butler will succeed Mr. Ludlam.

J. B. DUKE'S ESTATE MANAGED BY A WOMAN

Magnificent Country Place, Near Somerville, Under the Supervision of Miss Smith.

GETS $5,000 A YEAR

FROM MILL GIRL TO SUPERINTENDENT OF 400 SERVANTS.

Beautiful Suburban Property Covers 2,500 Acres and She is Absolute Boss—He Call His Home a "Club."

From a mill girl to the manager of property valued at millions of dollars. From an employe at the call of the factory whistle to the virtual boss of a force of 400 servants on the largest "landscape farm" in the United States. From wages at the loom, which averages $60 a month under the most favorable conditions, to a salary of $5,000 a year and Christmas gifts of blocks of profitable stock. From a modest frame cottage to a granite palace, with servants at her command. And all within ten years.

This, in a nutshell, is the story of the meteoric career of Margaret Smith —or Maggie Smith, as she signs her name to checks for thousands of dollars every week—who runs James B. Duke's great farm near Somerville, Although the Tobacco King's suburban property covers 2,500 acres and nearly $3,000,000 already has been spent in beautifying it, he persists in calling it his "farm." He raises nothing there but sufficient hay and vegetables to meet the needs of his horses and servants, and rare flowers and shrubs to gratify his own sense of the beautiful; but he invites you to put in a week-end at his "farm."

Maggie Smith is the absolute manager of it. Mr. Duke has so much confidence in her that he authorizes her to sign all checks for vast expenditures on the estate in her own name. All he cares to see is the balance sheet every month or so. Ask Miss Smith how she accomplished all this, and her terse reply is:

"By hard work and a will to succeed."

Maggie Smith would not be deceived by flattery that told her she had achieved the usual success that falls to the lot of a beautiful woman who knows her power. Miss Smith is not beautiful. She is an excellent type of the shrewd, observant American working girl, who sees all that is going on around her and understands how to rate it at its exact value.

She is somewhat short in stature and somewhat delicate in appearance. By dressing her hair in the prevailing pompadour fashion, she appears taller than she is. Her dress is simple—a black skirt and white pique waist with a bow of bright colored ribbon at the throat. It is quite in contrast with the magnificence of her office surroundings, which make even the comfortable quarters of Katherine Harrison, the Standard Oil kings' Cerberus in the Bowling Green fortress, look commonplace.

In 1892, ten years before Mr. Duke thought of building this garden spot in the heart of Somerset County, N. J., she Smith family moved from Easton, Pa., to Raritan, which is close to the Duke farm. There was quite a family of girls. They all worked in the silk mill. Maggie was not satisfied to remain a weaver at the loom. She went to Newark and studied accounts and bookkeeping. She arranged so that her sister Kate went to a cooking school and received instruction in the details of housekeeping. Neither of them knew anything about James B. Duke at that time or of the immense fortune he had raised from tobacco smoke. Just how Mr. Duke and the Smith girls "got together" it is difficult to ascertain. But the girls are there on the farm—Maggie as manager and Kate as housekeeper, under her sister's direction, of one of the finest bachelor establishments in this country. Miss MacWilliams, a cousin, assists Kate in the management of the house.

It is another fad of Mr. Duke's not to call his magnificent home a "house." He calls it "the club." But it is a club of one, for Mr. Duke is the only member. Although a Southerner, he has no colored servants around.

When he wishes to treat his guests to a mint julep a trim maid brings in the ingredients and Mr. Duke prepares the compound in a manner that gives himself and everybody concerned supreme satisfaction. Miss Maggie

POLITICS AND PROSPERITY

L. V. F. RANDOLPH THINKS THAT CROPS HAVE MORE TO DO WITH GOOD TIMES.

Under the caption, "What has politics to do with prosperity," the New York Sunday Herald in its last issue, printed the opinions of the leading metropolitan financiers. Among those quoted is Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of this city, who is president of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange. In detail he spoke as follows:

"America has not made history in spasms. The resources of the United States are so broad and its activities are so continuous as not to be seriously affected by any event except one of towering importance, such, for example, as was the Civil War of 1861-1865. In the main political agitations have had but limited influence on American prosperity. It is true that when the tariff was seriously in danger of being permanently reduced industries were affected by it.

"The important thing with us now lies not with politics but with crops. Winter wheat is turning out better than was expected. If the promise of spring wheat and corn and cotton holds good we shall be a happy people. Our prosperity will in that case go on for this year and next at least. We are a country at peace. We have no foreign complications or dangers. We are not supporting an extravagant military establishment. Our people are intelligent, capable, purposeful. All this tends toward and in fact insures prosperity if Providence blesses us with good crops. Other industries we't only on crops."

BETTING ON BALL GAMES

MANY POOLS MADE ON CONTESTS IN THIS CITY EACH WEEK.

An exciting feature of the local baseball contests here this season is the system of pools made up each week by the fans. Every week pools are made on hits, the person holding the name of the player making the most number, wins the stake. The names of the players are written separately on slips of paper and are then drawn by those wishing to join the pool. Some of them cost from ten cents to $1, scarcely ever exceeding the latter amount.

In many instances persons in the various pools care little or nothing as to the winner of the contest so long as the player they have picked makes the greatest number of hits. There are several persons who have failed to make anything thus far, while on several occasions others have won the pool two or three times, making from $10 to $30, and some times less.

HURT IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

MRS. H. A. WOODRUFF, THROWN FROM CARRIAGE, SLIGHTLY INJURED.

Mrs. Hiram A. Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, is confined to her home suffering severely with nervous prostration and slight injuries received in a runaway accident.

She was driving along Somerset street yesterday afternoon when at the corner of Fairview avenue her horse became frightened and turned into the latter thoroughfare at a high rate of speed. Before she could control it, the animal was running madly and at the corner of Watchung avenue the carriage was overturned.

Mrs. Woodruff was thrown out and received several minor hurts but fortunately escaped entanglement in the vehicle. She was taken home and Dr. Pittis furnished immediate medical attendance. The shock placed her in a high nervous state and she is now under the care of the family physician, Dr. Long.

The runaway was caught before it had injured itself or demolished the rig.

"LARRY" AT HOTEL DODD.

In Police Court Mayor Gives Him Twenty Days Board in Jail.

Larry Wallace, who does a weekly turn at police headquarters, will be Warden Dodd's guest for twenty days. He was in a fighting mood yesterday noon and after vanquishing several cronies he measured strength with Patrolman Higgins. Larry went "down and out" and when arraigned before Mayor Jenkins this morning, was asked to pay $10 or go to Elizabeth. He was financially embarrassed and his friends were in no condition to advance a loan.

6,000 PEOPLE ATTEND ITALIAN CELEBRATION

Pyrotechnic Display the Attractive Feature, $1,000 Worth Set Off.

BAND GIVES CONCERT

ITALIAN MUSICIANS RENDER A SPLENDID PROGRAMME.

Set Pieces of Fantastic Design and Big Bombs Among the Fireworks Pleasing to the Crowd—Mt. Carmel Society in Charge.

The two days' celebration of the Feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel came to a climax Tuesday in a burst of fireworks at Concert Park that proved to be the feature of the observance. Fully 6,000 persons crowded the grandstands and enclosure to within a few feet of the upright holding the set pieces. The band was in attendance and rendered a pleasing programme, but it was not enjoyed fully as well as it should have been owing to drawn out intermissions and the long delay in commencing the pyrotechnic display. It was almost 10 o'clock before the first bomb was fired and the finish did not come until 11:15, making a tiresome wait for mothers and children.

Practically $1,000 had been spent for the fireworks and the display was one of the best seen locally for many years. There were a dozen set pieces of fantastic designs and scores of bombs and aerial effects that kept the heavens reverberating with sound and blazing with lights. The most spectacular piece of the lot was "The battle of Santiago" in which bombs and colored balls were hurled into the air with a deafening cannonade effect, from different directions, and at the close the American flag burst out in colors. It was greeted with prolonged applause and the band saluted it with national airs. A picture of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, surrounded by a frame work of colored fire, aroused the Italian enthusiasm and brought the crowd to their feet to mass effectively render an appropriate religious selection.

The Carabinieri band was in charge of Prof. S. Nardiello and the programme announced for the evening was as follows: March, "Sinfonica," Mascini; overture, "Cleveland," traviata, Verdi; "Mezzonnatte," opus, Carlini; "The Holy City," Adams; obligato for baritone and trombone, Vanucci; "Nabbuccodonosor," Verdi.

The Mount Carmel Society, which arranged and had charge of the celebration, is fully pleased with the success of the affair, both from an entertainment and financial view. Last year Salvadore Velard, president of the society, individually sustained a $300 loss but through the admission fees last night and contributions made by business men and others, the cost of this celebration can easily be met. A great deal of credit is due Velard, who has been a Plainfielder for many years, because of his efforts to have a local celebration open to the outside public and from the fact that he assumed the entire financial risk.

PAT KEARNS A BANKRUPT

"WHITE WINGS" PLEADS LACK OF FUNDS AND GOES TO JAIL.

Patrick Kearns, a leading member of the city street cleaning department, filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy this morning. His straitened financial condition was made known when Mayor Jenkins asked him to pay a $5 fine because he had so far forgotten himself yesterday, to overestimate his drink capacity and get "barrelled," "jagged" and "raw" and the arresting officer expressed it at various times.

"Five dollars," said Pat in amazement, "Your Honor, I haven't five cents to me name, nothing to raise it on or no credit."

There was nothing else for the court to do but equal matters up in days in jail and so the well-known "white wings" will rusticate for ten days.

Fig Bananas.

Alex Lamardi, the West Front street fruiterer, received yesterday a consignment of Spanish fig-picked bananas, the first that has ever come into Plainfield. The bananas are very small and have a distinct fig taste which makes them greatly sought after. They are quite rare and it is seldom that they are sent outside of New York.

AT THE CONVENTION

WHAT CHICAGO SAW AT THE REPUBLICAN GATHERING.

IT WAS NOT THE OLD STYLE

The Contention That Makes Attendance Worth While Was Lacking—Uncle Joe Cannon the Whole Show.

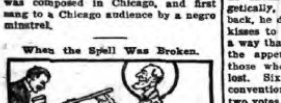
Chicago.—A thousand men of one mind; a thousand men gathered from the four points of the compass, from more than half way around the globe for one purpose—to nominate one man as candidate for president of the United States.

Political conventions are at all times picturesque gatherings. Within the past half century Chicago has entertained more of them than any other city in the country. Many have been memorable gatherings which will stand for all time as marking mile stones in party history; many of them have been fiercely waged contests between political giants seeking preferment at the hands of their party; many of them have lasted for days while the leaders fought to find solutions for difficult political problems, but none have ever been quite like that of the republican convention of 1904.

The distinguishing feature of the convention that has placed Theodore Roosevelt and Senator Fairbanks before the voters was its unanimity—its thousand men of one mind. It was a unanimity that to the spectators that flock to such gatherings was painful in its lack of hilarious enthusiasm, an enthusiasm that is, as a rule, born of contention. The Chicago public looked down upon the crowded seats of the delegates from gallery vantage points and called it tame.

Where usually there is a brass band for every delegation for this convention one served the purpose of all. It was a good band, led by Sousa, but even Sousa seemed to fail to arouse that degree of shouting enthusiasm characteristic of conventions. He played The Star Spangled Banner, and the crowd sat motionless waiting for inspiration. It was coming. From the national air the band drifted into the quickening strains of "Dixie," and it brought with it the inspiration that was lacking. The delegates of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, South Carolina, and every southern state for the moment broke the lethargy that seemed to possess the mass of men. Nor was the enthusiasm produced confined entirely to the south. Chicago, too, shouted to the familiar air, remembering, perchance, that it was of Chicago origin, that it was composed in Chicago, and first sang to a Chicago audience by a negro minstrel.

When the Spell Was Broken.

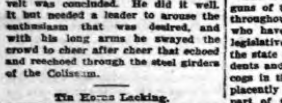


There were moments like this scattered through the sittings of the convention. When ex-Secretary Root surrendered the gavel to Uncle Joe Cannon and presented that distinguished son of Illinois with the massive mallet that was to serve as the emblem of authority during the two days during which he presided the crowd yelled itself hoarse in paying tribute to a general favorite.

No man ever had 1,000 men under his complete control so much as Uncle Joe had the delegates to the republican national convention. They laughed when he willed they should; they yelled when he gave the signal for yells; they stood up at his merest suggestion; they sat down and remained silent when his broad palms commanded silence. He was the general in command of the forces of the party. He was the guiding spirit, his the controlling will when the convention was in session, and his influence was exercised with that benign smile and those homely gestures which have made people liken him to Lincoln and point to him as the remaining link between the old and new type of political leader.

Uncle Joe led the demonstration when the nominating speech for Roosevelt was concluded. He did it well. It but needed a leader to arouse the enthusiasm that was destined, and with his long arms he swayed the crowd to cheer after cheer that echoed and reechoed through the steel girders of the Coliseum.

Tin Horns Locking.



The republican convention of 1904 was not a tin horn gathering. It was a decorous meeting of men who had assembled to perform a prearranged task. That which goes to capture the crowds was lacking. Noise-producing implements were there in evidence, banners, typical insignias that figure so prominently when favorite local sons are to be presented were lacking. Golden Alaska and little Connecticut were the two exceptions to the general rule. Above the heads of the Alaskan delegation on the first day of the convention roosted four dignified stuffed eagles, standing like totem poles rising above the sea of heads. When by action of the convention, the Alaskan delegation was increased from four to six delegates two more of the American birds rose beside the pioneers, from no one seems to know where.

These and the little silken national flags of the Connecticut delegation, that were waved when the chairman gave the signal, were the two bits of color in that sea of sweltering, black-clothed delegates. One of the most interesting features of the gathering was to watch the effectual efforts made by these two delegations to produce enthusiasm. The hardy gold miners of the north were deep-voiced and blessed with a wonderful development of lung power as well as muscle. Back and forth, and back and forth they carried the birds, through and through the convention hall marched the little procession, and every move meant a yell at opportune times.

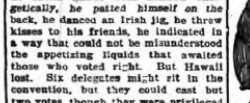
Of course the most enthusiastic moment of the convention was when ex-Gov. Black completed his speech nominating President Roosevelt as a candidate to succeed himself. Then the banners and flags appeared as if by magic, delegates and guests yelled themselves hoarse at Uncle Joe's bidding, but still the tin horn was absent.

When Hawaii Lost.

Of really amusing incidents at the convention there were few. Uncle Joe was the only one reliable funmaker, and played the part well, but one of the variations came with the effort to give little Hawaii six delegates after the report of the rules committee had recommended but two. Senator Foraker pleaded with the convention for justice for the little territory, and asked for the opinion of Gov. Carter, the territorial executive. He got it even before the chairman had an opportunity of realizing that it was to be given. It came in a few words, terse and directly to the point. He was fighting for Hawaii, and out of the incident grew the only roll call taken save that upon which the candidate for the presidency was nominated.

Gov. Carter replaced Uncle Joe as the comedian of the convention during the short time spent in settling this one variation from the prescribed programme. He gesticulated dire threats against all who dared to speak against Hawaii, and during the roll call on the question, which resulted 497 against and 490 for the territorial contention, he played a pantomine on the stage. At every vote for Hawaii he shook hands with himself energetically, he patted himself on the back, he danced an Irish jig, he threw kisses to his friends, he indicated in a way that could not be misunderstood the appetizing liquids that awaited those who voted right. But Hawaii lost. Six delegates might sit in the convention, but they could cast but two votes, though they were privileged to make all the noise they wished, and when the result of the close vote was announced the grief of Gov. Carter seemed real. He was disappointed in the party that had given his island territory a place in the American union. The great drops of perspiration that rolled from his face, produced by his efforts at pantomine lobbying, served the purpose of the tears he wished to shed.

The Makers of Candidates.



Out of a national political convention one may get a valuable lesson in American democracy. The cosmopolitanism of such a gathering is remarkable. The delegates were representative of at least a large proportion of 80,000,000 of people, and all classes and kinds of humanity were necessary to represent them faithfully. Occupy*ing that portion of the convention hall* assigned to the delegates were white and black and brown men, philosophers and fools, those of the latter there looked to be but few.

The audience picked out the big guns of the party, sprinkled liberally throughout the delegations, the men who have been at the wheel of the legislative ship at Washington and in the state capitols, the makers of presidents and party platforms. These big cogs in the great mechanism sat complacently beside the little cogs—that part of the mechanism which gets down close to the individual voters and sends them to the primaries and polls, the cogs that have no distinctive voice in the deliberations of the big conventions, and are seldom heard of outside of their local communities.

But a view of this man's delegation representing every class and creed and those who claim protection under the folds of the flag was a striking object lesson in American democracy, and taught that after all it is the people who rule.

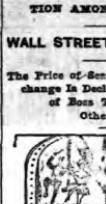
WRIGHT A. PATTERSON.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

MODERN BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION AMONG THE RICH.

WALL STREET SPECULATION

The Price of Seats on the Stock Exchange Is Declining—The Home of Boss Tweed Sold—Other Items.



NEW YORK—A young man had a birthday the other day. As we is the kind of young man for whom life holds many privileges and few duties it occurred to him that it needed celebrating.

One hundred guests were invited. You might say a quarter of the "400." They were the gayer, younger set, the Hempstead farmers and the yachtsmen, in both of which categories young W. A. Brokaw is reckoned. The celebration took place at Nirvana, his handsome country place at Great Neck, which he has of late been increasing by the simple expedient of buying up one side of a village street. There was an outdoor fete in the Italian garden, a great orchestra from New York playing soft music behind a veil of shrubbery.

Later the guests entered the house. It is a palace, rivaling the great French and English country places in size, but created in the impatient flat of a couple of years where many generations go to the building bit by bit of an old-world mansion. The plan of the house, for the purposes of entertainment, is a beautiful little private theater, all in white and gold, where, on the night of Mr. Brokaw's birthday, a performance was given by clever artists brought from New York for the purpose.

This is nothing new. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and others have taken whole troupes from New York to Newport to give single performances there, to the envy of a fashionable summer. Such lavish entertainment will be in future less characteristic of Newport than of the new country homes like Mr. Brokaw's, which are becoming so much more "correct." The private theaters recall those in French chateaux in the times of the "grand monarch." In New York city itself, owing to the excessive cost of land, the great ballroom and picture gallery which every great house must have takes its place.

Busy men often forget all about their birthdays until they are past. Women, too.

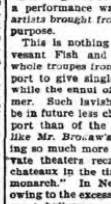
Stock Exchange Doldrums.



THE recent sale of a stock exchange seat for $38,000 has set Wall street to thinking. For there is a moral.

In 1878 a seat in the great gambling place of the country was worth $4,000. Membership being limited to 1,100, the price naturally rises as the city grows and as securities multiply. But 20 years later, in 1898, a ruling quotation was still only $30,000. It jumped to $40,000 in 1899, doubled to $80,000 in 1900. From that point it crawled more slowly up to high water mark at $82,000 last year. The drop since then, a decrease of $24,000, is pretty nearly the entire price five years ago.

The biggest speculative year was 1901, when 265,900,909 shares of stocks were "sold." Assuming that these shares were all on the $100 par basis —and most of them were—the sales represented in nominal valuation the incredibly great sum of $26,500,000,000 —or just double the entire capitalization of all the railway companies in the United States. But this was taking no account of bond sales, or of sales in other cities, or of speculation in the other exchanges of New York—those devoted to gambling in cotton, real estate, produce—or of the Consolidated exchange, or of the "curb." No wonder a seat that gives a man an eleventh-hundredth share of such a business has a value.

Consider the commissions merely. Most of the "sales" are mere gambling transactions between members. If the sales were all made by outsiders they would net to brokers under the inflexible rules of the exchange one-quarter of one per cent—one-eighth each way, for both buyer and seller pay commission—or $66,000,000 in commissions alone. Divide this by the 1,100 members, and we have the respectable average of $60,000 apiece as a yearly income.

Boss Tweed's House.

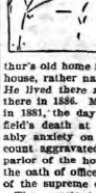
THERE is a house in Madison avenue that has a history. And it has just been sold, history and all, to the Sire brothers, neater men.

This place was, in his palmy days, the home of Boss Tweed. It is worth even now $80,000, mostly for the land. In its day it was a palace for New York, and filled with all that money could buy and that total lack of taste did not prevent a man from buying. After Tweed's arrest as a common thief he was permitted to revisit his home in custody of a keeper from Ludlow street jail. There was quick work. He shaved off his beard, cut his hair, put on a wig and a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles, jumped out of a rear window and made off over the fences. He went to Florida, to Cuba, to Spain, where, as he had been so incautious as to let his beard grow, he was at last recognized by Spanish reproductions of Nast's cartoons.

The house adjoins others that have been bought for the site of a great apartment house by the Madison Avenue Real Estate company. In a few months it will be no more.

In this way a number of houses of historic interest upon New York's darker side are disappearing. The house that Madame Restell made infamous is torn down. The house so long visible from West side elevated trains, from whose rear windows Banker Hatch leaped to his death while trying to grasp at the branches of a little stunted tree to escape from a "badger," has been torn down. For not a little while the house of the negress Hannah Elias, where Millionaire Platt was cajoled and browbeaten out of three-quarters of a million dollars, will take the place of these time-worn examples.

The Arthur Mansion.



HISTORIC in another way is the Chester A. Arthur mansion at 123 Lexington avenue, which has just been bought by William R. Hearst as his New York home.

His wealth has not induced Mr. Hearst to "splurge" in the selection of an abiding place. Arthur's old home is a modest four-story house, rather narrow, of brown stone. He lived there many years, and died there in 1886. Mrs. Arthur died there in 1881, the day after President Garfield's death at Elberon; unquestionably anxiety on the president's account aggravated her illness. In the parlor of the house Arthur took the oath of office before Justice Brady of the supreme court.

The constant rebuilding of New York sweeps away most of its well-known landmarks. The Stewart mansion, built with what palatial cards and at what considerable expense, lasted 20 years. A big bank and trust company's structure now stands upon its site. Even club houses far uptown do not last longer. The Progress club is 15 years old, and is being vacated, is to be torn down—a splendid structure costing half a million—to make room for a private house.

The old New York Athletic club had the oddest fate. It was bought for a song by the headquarters. Looking over the place to see where the records of the department could be kept, the "commish" concluded that the swimming tank was just the place. And so it is. A fireproof "lid" was fitted to the tank, and now the health records of the great city are safely kept; they never were before.

The "Roof Garden" Season.

NEW YORK, with a summer thus far rather cool, but averaging pleasant, is just in the middle of the roof garden season.

This type of hot weather entertainment seems to be fated to a long life, to judge from the fact that a great church is to be built over in Brooklyn with a roof garden; the biggest public schools already have them Roof garden restaurants are common.

The roof garden theater is, however, typical. New York readily enough pays a dollar or a dollar and a half for a trashy entertainment, if it is short enough, and well broken up by interludes that permit of wandering forth into an open air cafe where little tables are spread for refreshments. The plan of serving refreshments in the auditorium itself is found to interfere with the performance, though some of the largest "roofs" follow it.

The New York "roof" covers two great theaters; it is nearly 200 feet square, and that means that it will hold an enormous number of people at small prices. The "aerial gardens" New Amsterdam theater is rather unique. One is whisked by an express elevator ten stories aloft with magic swiftness. There is a pretty little auditorium; behind and at the sides are wide spaces where one may, and perhaps something to eat, if anyone is so eccentric as to require it, are served. Each side of the stage a broad passage leads out to the garden, gay with potted plants and fortunate as yet in furnishing an uninterrupted view right across the Hudson to the twinkling lights on the distant Palisades.

The roof of the Madison Square Garden has been famous for years. The most beautiful tower upon any house of amusement in America rises above it, and Diana perches ever drawing her arrow to her ear in spite of protests. For the present, however, the interest at the Garden centers rather within than upon it. Dass, the eccentric Dunker band leader, gives there his nightly "Venice." New York is not dull in summer, if one seeks stage amusement.

OWEN LANGDON.

THE PANAMA HAT

CHAT ABOUT THIS FASHIONABLE HEADGEAR.

Where It Is Made and How—Some Misconceptions Corrected—Straw Being Shipped to Europe for Manufacture.

The man with the Panama hat, whether the head covering cost ten dollars or ten times that amount, will be right in style this year, in fact, this light and airy and attractive top dressing is always the proper thing where old Sol gets in his work and the temperature reaches the boiling point. The man who is the proud possessor of a Panama quite naturally and properly takes a deep interest in the pedigree, the history and fiction in connection therewith.

The Panama hat does not come from Panama, as the name might lead one to suppose, but from Ecuador. The Indians of that country are the most skilful weavers, and produce the exquisite hats which sell in London, Paris, New York or Chicago for $50, $100, or even $300. One hears the story that the best hats are woven under water, that is heated almost to the boiling point, and that it requires months to produce the finished article, and hence the high price. Such stories are good enough to laugh at, but are not worthy of credit, for no hat is ever thus produced. Moisture and a high temperature are quite essential conditions for the production of the best hats, some of the finest being woven at night either by candle or moonlight when the moisture and heat are at the most favorable state.

Until a few years ago practically all the Panama hats were made at Jipijapa, in Ecuador, but now there is extensive hat weaving at Monte Christi, at a higher altitude. Men, women and children sit about the yard or in the doorways of their bamboo houses, weaving the hats over wooden blocks placed between their knees. In early morning and evening the best climatic conditions are found, and it is then that most of the work is done. During the heat of the day the straw becomes too brittle for safe and successful manipulation, but water is never used upon the straw, the weavers, however, occasionally dipping their fingers in a convenient jar of water sitting before them.

The Indians begin to weave from the center of the crown, and the beginning is called a button. The shape of the button, to an expert, determines where the hat has been made—Ecuadorian, Peruvian or in some other republic.

The children are put to work to learn the art of their ancestors at an early age, beginning at seven, and on very coarse straw. In 15 years the art will have been mastered for fairly good hats, but for Panamas par excellence it requires a life-time of close application.

In January the peasants begin to plant

the seeds of this palm and are usually a month in doing it. In about three months the leaves, pleated like a fan, are borne on three-cornered stalks 6 to 14 feet high. These leaves are about three feet in diameter, and cut into four or five divisions they are gathered while they are young and stiff, and the parallel veins are removed.

The Indians call the straw ripe when it is about the thickness of sugar cane. They remove the outer husk of green, split the snow white leaf into shreds, but do not separate them at the stalk ends. Then they cover it with boiling water for hour, half an hour and bleach it in the sun for 24 hours. It requires about one dollar's worth of straw for a hat, and no hat weaver ever buys more than enough straw at a time for one hat.

The straw—which grows at Jipijapa—is now being shipped to Brussels and to Epinal, France, where zealous manufacturers have proved that quicker and cheaper results from work can be obtained from the peasants there than through the doubtful channels of Ecuadorian labor.

A TRUE STORY FROM LIFE.

Traveling Man Says That Having a Room Next to a Nervous Man Is a Big Strain.

"A traveling man stopped at a hotel at Monticello. The proprietor told him he could not lodge him, not a room in the house," said a commercial traveler to an Indianapolis News man. "The traveling man protested. He must have a room. Finally the proprietor told him there was a room, a little room separated by a thin partition from a nervous man, a man who had lived in the house for ten years.

"'He is so nervous,' said the landlord, 'I don't dare put anyone in that room.' The least noise might give him a nervous spell that would endanger his life.'

"'Oh, give me a room,' said the traveler. 'I'll be so quiet he'll not know I'm there.'

"Well, the room was given the traveler. He slipped in noiselessly and began to disrobe. He took off one article of clothing after another as quietly as a burglar. At last he came to his shoes. He unlaced a shoe and then, man-like, dropped it.

"The shoe fell to the floor with a great noise. The offending traveler, horrified at what he had done, waited to hear from the nervous man. Not a sound. He took off the second shoe and placed it noiselessly upon the floor. Then in absolute silence he finished undressing and crawled between the sheets.

"Half an hour went by. He had dropped into a doze when there came a tremendous knocking on the partition. "The traveler sat up in bed trembling and dismayed. 'Wh—wha—what's the matter?' he asked. Then came the voice of the nervous man:

"'Blame you! Drop that other shoe!'"

BUYS COFFIN FOR HERSELF.

Healthy-Looking Woman Surprises Undertaker by Making Arrangements for Her Funeral.

A short, stout and healthy looking woman who said she was Miss Martha Olingsdorf, of 412A Germania avenue, Jersey City, entered Undertaker John Campbell's office in Central avenue, that city, the other day and asked the price of coffins.

"For some member of your family?" asked the undertaker, putting on his most solemn look.

"No, for myself," answered the woman, smiling.

"What style?" inquired Mr. Campbell.

"Something plain and not too expensive," replied Miss Olingsdorf. "I think I would like a nice black casket. And I want one carriage to follow the hearse. The carriage is for four professional pall-bearers. I don't want any flowers, and I want you to keep my body just one day. Then bury it. I haven't any family or relatives to mourn me when I am gone, and I'm glad to say there won't be any kind of a fuss."

The shopper said she believed in doing things on a cash basis, and paid the undertaker in advance after carefully adding up his list of items. She left as soon as she got her receipt.

Mr. Campbell said to a New York Sun reporter that Miss Olingsdorf seemed to be happy and well for a woman 69 years old.

Girl with Petrified Hair.

Miss Harriet Milward, one of the prettiest young women in Kenosha, Wis., was cleaning the wall paper on a ceiling at her home when some of the chemicals employed fell on her hair. When she washed the hair a short time after she found that it had become hard. The color was not changed, but the hair was so hard that it was impossible to separate it. It became necessary to cut off the greater part of the long tresses.

WITHOUT THE WIRES

HOW LONDON TIMES ESTABLISHED WAR NEWS STATION.

Its Efforts at Wei-Hai-Wei Raised a New Question in International Law—Problem as Establishing Wireless Telegraphy.

A correspondent in the far east sends an interesting account of the way it which wireless telegraphy has been employed in the war. It will be remembered that the Japanese admiral requested the London Times correspondent to keep south of a certain line, so that secrecy might be observed as to the Japanese fleet's operations; and previously the Russians had issued an order to the effect that if any wireless telegraphy operators could be caught they were to be treated as spies and dealt with out of hand without mercy. The correspondent writes:

The latest departure in war journalism is that made by the London Times, which, with an enterprise worthy of all its traditions, has called science to its aid in the shape of wireless telegraphy. The fact that wireless telegraphy exists and can be utilized by the expenditure of money is simple enough; but the installation of the system is a laborous and delicate matter, even when all the material is at hand and conditions are favorable. When the most trifling item required has to be obtained from a distance, the fixing of a wireless station becomes a serious undertaking. This, at any rate, has been the experience at Weihaiwei.

It was quite simple to leave Japan for Weihaiwei with telegraphic instructions to build a mast 180 feet high within 20 feet of the seashore, to be ready against the arrival of plant and operators by the next boat. But it was quite another matter to make the mast fit to withstand the gales and typhoons that periodically thrash the waters of the Gulf of Pechili. In Weihaiwei there was not a soul to undertake the erection of a pole. But for Russo-Japanese courtesy the British navy and army, who nobly came to the rescue of the distressed correspondents, a mast could never have been raised.

Spars for the lofty stick were obtained by the payment of lavish prices to Chinese junk captains, who reluctantly parted with their masts. Wire rope by the mile was cabled for to Shanghai, and arrived after weeks of delay. Treble wages were paid to workmen, who during the period of the China new year, which lasts for three solid weeks, abhor labor.

At the foot the diameter of the mast is 24 inches, and it tapers away to three inches at the summit. The length of the stays employed totals over 1,000 feet, and the weight of the structure is about ten tons. The lower stays are made of wire rope three-fourths of an inch in diameter, and the top ones are telephone wire not much stouter than grocer's twine. During a gale the wind plays the weirdest tunes amongst the vibrating guys, and the operator who lives in the house at the foot of the structure lives in fear and trembling of his life. But, wind or rain, sunshine or storm, the instruments give forth those little dots and scratches that signify news of the war transmitted from the Haimun cabling station round Port Arthur or skirting the coast of Korea. The Haimun cable tains the alter ego of the establishment at Weihaiwei, in the shape of a lofty but gallantmast rigged to her mainmast. And when she flicks her wireless nose into Chemulpo or Chinnampo or Port Arthur, who can tell that she is talking to her landmate in 'China 'erost the bay'?"

The position of the wireless telegraphy ship in warfare has aroused considerable discussion among students of international law; for as yet it is not certain that messages cannot be intercepted, and that information sent to a land station for transmission to a newspaper may not be made use of by an enemy. There is always the chance that such messages will cease to be private and confidential."

VANITY'S MIRROR.

Voile Dresses In Every Color Are Ultra Smart—Skirt Styles.

Voile dresses in every color are ultra smart. They are trimmed with taffeta ruchings, appliqueings of dyed lace and velvet ribbon of a deeper shade. The most effective colors are lavender, gray, ecru and rose pink. For really dressy hats chip and rice straw are most favored, and a commingling of hair braid, chenille and satin straw is also accounted very smart, while very effective headgear is formed by the addition of a frill of plaited mousseline to a hat of drawn lace work. One of the newest millinery shapes is an exact copy of a man's felt chasseur shape, the novelty consisting in the shape of the brim and the cockade shaped bow on the right instead of on the left.

For the plump girl there is only one skirt, that having a plain hip yoke or the upper half laid in plaits. The shirred effects are for the thin, tall girl whose outlines need filling out or whose height can stand the additional fullness and clumsiness.

Even the simplest dresses show such a deal of workmanship that it is impossible for the ordinary amateur to undertake them. While the coatless may be simple, there is such an amount of elaboration that even the plainest yoke is covered with bits of lace and hand work, the whole forming an appliqued design of beauty.

The tiniest hats are being worn in contrast to some of the picture shapes. An instance of the fickleness of Mme. La Mode is the revival of the turban carried through in tulle, with a single ostrich feather falling on the hair in the back.

The picture shows a gown of lavender voile. The jacket effect is trimmed with bands of Persian silk, and there are pipings of the same.

SUMMER DRESSES.

Some of Them Are Made Collarless. Chiffon Used Everywhere.

The collarless effect will be seen on a good many summer gowns as the season advances.

The Dutch neck slightly cut out in a round shape is especially trying to those who have not good necks. It is one of the fashionable dress features of the season.

Tulle toques are much worn, and a toque recently ordered from a Fifth avenue millinery shop is of burgundy red tulle having an edge of currants with dull tinted leaves.

Shirred yokes of chiffon are much used with veiling gowns, and this chif-fon also appears to eke out the sleeves and to give them an airy appearance. Chiffon plays such an important part in the dress of the moment that it is impossible to reckon without it. In fact, a dress without a touch of chiffon either in the lining or the exterior is apt to present a hard, uninished appearance.

Some very picturesque hats with high crowns are being seen in Paris, but high crowns for some reason do not seem to take well on this side of the water.

The picture shows a silk or linen blouse with an odd shaped yoke.

MODES AND FANCIES.

Skirts Are Growing Fuller—Dainty Shoes Worn With Short Skirts.

Skirts are growing fuller than ever, and the train is gradually giving way to the round length even for dressy gowns.

Hats are either very small or else large and flat. The straight brim sailor trimmed simply with a crown of small flowers or a bunch of feathers is very smart.

The picture hats now in vogue go with the modes in dress. For instance, there is the cavalier shape, with the curious straight brim and the high crown, the whole trimmed with a single long feather. The black lace picture hat is very pretty both for blonds and brunettes. These black lace hats are decorated with flowers or feathers or, better still, twists of tulle. The idea seems to be to make them look as airy as possible.

Red shoes are being worn with morning gowns of linen and serge of the same color. Soft suede shoes in pale gray, tan and mouse color are also smart.

The coiffure of the moment is low and waved a trifle. It is simple and for that reason elegant. The hair is either worn divided or in a moderate pompadour.

The picture shows a wide French hat trimmed with large roses and appliqué laid crisscross on the brim.

WHAT IS WORN.

Blouses of Embroidery—Long Waisted Children's Frocks Revived.

Blouses composed of bright canary colored embroidery is a decided novelty, and these waists are most effective when supplemented by a black silk stock and a wide belt of black leather.

Nearly all children's frocks are fashioned with the long waisted effect, the little skirt being composed of a couple of frills headed by a sash. These sheer gowns are miracles of hand needlework and embroidery which often suffer cruel treatment at the hands of the small wearers. A more satisfactory garment is the dress of blue and white linen, embroidered just a little in the center of the front and caught in with a wide kid belt.

Tussore silk blouses embroidered with pale blue and white spots are likewise among the season's novelties. They are usually trimmed with tinted lace and strapped with blue or white silk.

The long coat of the moment is made of pongee, strapped with the same material or taffeta matching in shade. The collar and cuffs are of black silk or else some contrasting shade, either pale blue or green being particularly effective.

The hat of ecru lace trimmed with flowers or fruit is one of the smartest of the season. It is useful to wear with many gowns, also because separate wreaths may be made and attached lightly to the crown.

The picture shows a dotted grass lawn gown trimmed with black velvet bows. The hat worn with it is particularly chic French creation.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

How a Woman May Obtain Them and Keep Them.

There used to be a saying that by the appearance of the hands one could tell whether a woman was a lady or not. There is a good deal in that.

No woman who is willing to do certain simple things need have rough or red hands. In the first place, lots of people make the mistake of washing their hands too often. Only do it when it is really necessary, and then don't half wash them. Half washing the hands and omitting to rinse out the soap makes them coarse and dirt grain-

RUB IN A LITTLE COLD CREAM

ed. If the hands are stained, a little olive oil rubbed into the skin will loosen the dirt and make the hands soft.

Dry the hands until not a particle of dampness remains. Press back the cuticle around the nails when drying them.

Occasionally before retiring rub in a little cold cream when you notice the hands are getting dry, but it is throwing it away to apply it to a dry skin. Soak your hands first in warm water, then, without drying, apply any skin food you may want to use.

Moist and clammy hands may be dusted with oatmeal after washing.

Nails filed twice a week never need cutting. Cutting is rather apt to make them split. However, if you have an aversion to filing soak the nails for about five minutes in hot water and use the file merely to round off the corners.

There is no better hand beautifier than lemon juice. Strain and bottle it and it will keep for weeks. It may be rubbed into the skin as often as you like. It whitens and softens it and takes away stains.

Above all, don't wear rings that are too small or gloves that fasten too tightly around the wrist. They impede the circulation and spoil the appearance of the prettiest hand. If your hands are large, avoid white gloves as much as possible and especially gloves stitched in a different color.

Some people buy expensive powders and polishers for the nails. Try rubbing them against the palm of the other hand. It gives them a very good polish.

The colonial style of interior decoration lends itself to small incomes and can be easily carried out by the woman of taste. Something, of course, depends on the woodwork, as this is apt to be one of the important features of the room.

The frieze is of greenish and bluish tones, and the quaintly molded ceiling adds to the charm of the room. The pictures are also of the antique description framed in dull gilt.

Sound Advice.

Women Swimmers

Several of Them Make Brilliant Records

In many of the London public schools swimming pools are provided for the pupils, both girls and boys, and teachers are employed to give them free instruction. Perhaps because Great Britain is surrounded by water on all sides more interest is taken in the noble exercise of swimming than is the case in America. In the lovely island of Jersey the public authorities have inclosed beside the sea at St. Helier's a spacious swimming pool for ladies. There, with the winds and waves of the ocean tempered by rocky cliffs that rise toward the northwest, with the sky of ineffable blue above, all the air full of electricity, seaweed odor and sunshine, the ladies' swimming pool lies in a sheltered cove.

Some of the rosy, hardy Jersey girls take dips in that bath in midwinter, although I have the word of one of them that she did not stay in the water very long. The Hilson sisters, who live near the pool, are among the best swimmers of Great Britain. Jersey sends some of these fine girl experts to England to the annual contests for the woman's championship. At Bath every year is held a series of swimming matches for women which attract native throughout the country. King Edward and Queen Alexandra sometimes attend the contests, and the king so much approves of the feminine sex learning to swim that he has presented a challenge cup, which is in custody of the ladies' swimming club of Bath, to be striven for by women of all nations. No American woman has won it.

In the United States unfortunately so far there is nobody to encourage the art of swimming among women, and they must therefore encourage themselves. This matter is quite a proper subject for action on the part of women's clubs and organizations of mothers. It is really a disgrace to our land that in quite half of its area a boy cannot learn to swim unless he and his mates sneak out surreptitiously to some "swimming hole" and splash in the water on the sly. They have no suits and when they take off their clothes and go into the water they are regarded as indecent and improper "bad boys." They are often hounded as nuisances off the property of the landowner to whom the swimming hole happens to belong. Nuisances they certainly are at times, yet it is only because they have no chance to be otherwise.

As for the poor little American girls, those who live away from the seashore have little opportunity to learn to swim, and thousands of our women have been drowned because they did not know how even to keep afloat upon the water.

Where the proper facilities exist fathers and mothers should themselves take their girls to the swimming pool at least once a week in the season. Unfortunately at present few mothers know how to swim, but most fathers do. That father is criminally negligent who, himself a swimmer, will not teach his little daughters also to become such. A bathing suit for a little girl is easily made. It need consist only of a single combination garment, as light and scant as possible, covering the body from the shoulders to the knees, with an opening for buttoning down the front to a little way below the waist. For girls in their teens a very scant skirt reaching to just above the knee may be buttoned around the waist. On general principles, the less clothing there is to weigh down and hamper the better.

American women are generally not so good swimmers as their British sisters. Our best are those who have been brought up near the seashore and learned to swim when they were little, practicing every summer. Several of these reside in the vicinity of New York city. One, Miss Margaret McDonald, has swum seven miles without stopping. She has saved several lives. Once, in a race in which four men and two women were her competitors, all the rest, even the men, gave up because of the rough water, leaving Miss McDonald the only one to finish.

Last summer the woman's world's record for a 100 yard dash in open water was made by another New York girl, Miss Ethel Golding. She made the distance in 1 minute 24 3-5 seconds. The world's record for the open water 100 yard dash is held by a man, who swam it in 1 minute 5 1-5 seconds. Elaine Golding, Ethel's sister, is also a noted swimmer.

HONORED ABROAD.

Distinguished Attentions Received by American Women in Germany.

What European nations think of American women in the wealthy social sphere all the world knows. In France, in England, in Germany and in Russia they are among the leaders of fashionable society. It has remained for the International Council of Women at Berlin to prove that the American advanced, serious minded woman is esteemed no less highly abroad than her rich sister who is in the social swim.

The welcome given to the council in Berlin, the distinguished honors paid to the strongminded delegates under the eyes and nose of Emperor William in his own capital showed—well, what? Thus, that the new woman of Germany is wide awake and is throwing all her influence and strong, solid mental power on the side of liberty and prog ress for her sex; that, too, in a way that ought to shame some of her lukewarm American sisters.

The gracious, delightful reception to the international delegates was the result of months of hard work by the German National Council of Women. Its president is Frau Marie Stritt of Dresden. The general secretary of the international meeting was also a German woman, Dr. Elise Ichenhauser. These ladies and their friends labored unceasingly to prepare the way for the meeting and make it the success it was. To their efforts was no doubt due the flattering reception accorded to the delegates in the city hall of Berlin, a reception at which Frau Kirschner, wife of the lord mayor, was chief hostess.

The chancellor of the German empire, Herr von Bulow, gave a reception in honor of the ladies. Most surprising, too, was it that that same Herr Podbielski-Wehner, German secretary of the interior, who lately put himself on record on the wrong side of the woman question, nevertheless held a levee for the international delegates. Certainly Chancellor von Bulow kissed the hand of Susan B. Anthony when she was presented to him.

What will probably linger in the memory of the American delegates as the pleasantest outside incident of all, however, is the audience granted by the empress of Germany, her majesty Augusta Victoria. It is not at all improbable that the empress of Germany would be a good advanced woman if she were not so overweighed by her husband. As it was, though, Emperor William did not deign to give sign that he had ever heard of a woman's congress. His gentle, kindly wife received in the most cordial manner the twenty-one international ladies who visited her and gave them an hour and a half of her time. President May Wright Sewall declared afterward that the empress' manner was a "lesson in kindness and courtesy." Certainly it is a lesson needed by too many American women. We are sometimes brusque, even impolite, in manner, forgetting that politeness and kindly courtesy are due from each of us to every living creature.

The women of our country cannot feel otherwise than proud and gratified that at the Berlin gathering American women were the recipients of special honors. A notable event was that Sunday afternoon meeting conducted by Rev. Anna Shaw, Miss Anthony and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. It was held in the English church at Berlin. I find an interesting and most respectful account of it in a German newspaper published in Dresden. In deference to German ideas the pastor of the English church did not call the gathering a divine service, but merely a meeting. The newspaper says that the church was packed to its utmost capacity by persons who wished to see "a woman in a pulpit," that sight being wholly new to Germany.

As usual, Miss Anthony was the lion of the occasion as she depicted "in her softly vibrant, motherly voice" scenes connected with her early battles for woman. It is not always that a reformer, at the end of half a century's struggle for a conviction, finds himself or herself thus honored. Miss Anthony found her audience of the rapidly increasing number of women engaging in gainful occupations in her own country. She told them further that it was a good thing for women to earn their own living, because it drew them away from the selfish life, made them a part of the human whole. Brave Susan!

Fitting it was that this meeting of representative women from all the world should close with a demonstration for universal peace and international arbitration. This will never be reached till the women of civilization bring it about.

The deep berthas on evening dresses are not left unadorned either, and some have complete wreaths of roses and foliage or folds of tulle dotted at intervals with clusters of small blossoms.

A dainty trimming for a low necked gown consists of a wide bertha worked in jeweled net, with tiny green cut beads, gold sequins and pink pearls, and this is set into a band of embroidery insertion worked to correspond in tints.

Accordion plaited coats of poplin or etamine are adorned with wide lace collars and are very pretty for afternoon wear.

FASHIONS OF 1830.

They Still Prevail Both In Gowns and Hats—Summer Coats.

The very long shoulder is still with us and promises to remain. In general it may be said that the 1830 modes still prevail and have become very popular. The mushroom hat goes with this period, but it is by no means becoming. The French sailor, with its crown or wreath of flowers, is seen on all sides, and the prettiest and newest development is to have the flower crown triangular instead of square. The torpedo toque packed closely with shaded flowers is also very smart. Every hat is very much trimmed with flowers, lace and foliage.

Mohair and alpaca make very smart dust coats and also pretty yachting coats in white trimmed with collar and cuffs of pale blue.

Champagne colored taffeta is being used a great deal for coat and skirt costumes. It is trimmed with touches of deeper brown or white.

Poplin makes an ideal summer gown, particularly in gray or pale blue.

The picture shows a gown of coffee colored grenadine. The applique girdle is well worth noticing. It has two long ends daintily fringed. The hat which accompanies the costume is of black chantilly lace.

ings and plaitings. In the case of a very handsome silk skirt the top may be raised by the addition of lace insertions. The lace insertion is sewed along its lower edge slightly above the knees. The silk is then cut close to the seam, and it is stitched on the upper edge of the insertion. Four or five of these insertions will allow considerable of the narrow part of the skirt to be cut away so that it can be gathered in to the belt band.

Evening gowns when worn low require special corsets, as a corset which is at all high or cut straight at the bust spoils the style of the bodice. The bust must be low and unconfined, and the little ribbon corsets are admirable in every way for slight and straight figures.

Brown is still worn, and we see stunning shirt waist suits of it combined with touches of gold or coral red.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,
ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,
HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

OUR CANDIDATES.

The Democratic National Convention has given to the voters of the country a winning ticket.

Alton Brooks Parker, of New York, for President, and Henry G. Davis, of West Virginia, for Vice President. This is a ticket that commands the most loyal support and unswerving allegiance of every Democrat.

The differences that for eight years past have sundered the Democratic party, and have made victory easy for the Republicans, no longer exist. Under the Parker and Davis banner will be found every Democrat, and thousands of Republicans who are tired of trust domination, tired of a protective policy that protects only favored monopolies and compels the consumer to pay enormous profits to the favored few, tired of the centralizing of power and usurpation of rights which has made one man almost a king.

The nomination of Parker and Davis is the beginning of a vigorous fight that will end in victory in November.—New Brunswick Daily Times.

If the high price of meat continues much longer we may expect to see pictures of loin chops and porterhouse steak adorning the dining room walls.

It is not too warm to think of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home and the King's Daughters' Baby Camp. They are deserving institutions depending entirely upon the Plainfield public for their support. Any contribution is welcomed.

Before it is too late, Judge Parker had better place a guard on his lands at Esopus. Americans are great souvenir collectors and the Democratic candidate is apt to find that his beautiful estate is likely to suffer as a consequence.

Newspaper correspondents appear to be a little shy on stories about the actress who loses her diamonds, war in South America, the sea serpent, man given up for dead returning home, and fortune left to one who befriended testator in his youth.

If the reorganized Alls team continues to play the kind of ball it put up on Saturday there will be a marked increase in the attendance. George Johnston is a capable man and should be given a free hand in managing the team. His announcement that there will be no further changes in the makeup of the nine is a sensible one.

It is said that Parker favors the selection of Senator Gorman for the National chairmanship of the Democratic party, and if it be true, it shows that the Esopus man displays unusual political sense for one who wears the ermine. The distinguished Marylander is one of the shrewdest politicians of the day and no better choice could be made for that most important position.

AMUSEMENTS.

The great Baltimore fire which laid waste acres of city blocks, destroying millions of dollars of valuable property and throwing out of work thousands of people, has been made the subject of a theatrical production and is now a new feature of entertainment at Dreamland, Coney Island. No catastrophy since the Chicago fire of years ago aroused public interest and sympathy to the extent that did the Baltimore fire. In two days the entire business section of the city was laid bare by the flames and to prevent the fire from entirely wiping out the city dynamite was used to raze buildings and stay the progress of the flames.

The change from the sultry shops and hot streets, to the cool and restful atmosphere of Keith's home like playhouse on Union Square is when taken in connection with the best vaudeville entertainment, that money can procure, which is going on, one of the many reasons why this popular resort is crowded alike summer and winter. To the tired shopper it is a veritable haven of rest these sweltering afternoons. It is at least twenty degrees cooler in the theatre than in the street and that this fact is widely known is manifested by the large audience always in attendance.

MARVELOUS GROWTH OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Dr. H. K. Carroll a Member of Board of Trustees Which Finds Society Prospering.

BIG GAINS REPORTED

IN ELEVEN MONTHS 2,264 NEW SOCIETIES ARE FORMED.

Total Number of Separate Organizations Aggregates 64,758 — Are Urged to Seek Originality in Methods.

Reports made at the recent annual meeting of the trustees of the United Society of Christian Endeavor show that this part of the young people's religious hosts is steadily growing in numbers and practical usefulness. Among the denominational trustees is Dr. H. K. Carroll, of this city.

Von Ogden Vogt, the general secretary, says that the total number of societies is 64,758. During the year the net gain in new societies was almost 2,000. The campaign for increase so widely blessed in the first months has gone on with unabated vigor. At the Denver convention, eighteen States were recognized for gains of ten per cent. or more. Since the report twelve other States have made a like gain, seven have added a second ten per cent., and one passed thirty per cent. The total number of new societies organized in the eleven months since is 2,264.

Mr. Vogt visited during the year twenty-five States and territories, in every great section of the country excepting the Pacific Coast States. In each of these States, New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois, the visit was for three weeks. Numerous small conferences of workers and their ministers gave abundant opportunity for careful inquiry.

He reports a much higher state of efficiency throughout the organization than he had expected to find.

"The majority of the unions visited," says the secretary, "are headed by a fine type of young business or college men, leaders of ability and standing as well as devotion. I was particularly pleased with the personnel of the delegates in the State conventions of Indiana, Alabama, Florida and Kentucky. I note this in order that the small numbers of the South may not be mistaken for weakness. In some quarters, greater attention on the part of older church workers to the young leadership is needed."

Regarding State field secretaries the report states: "When the fall season of 1901 opened up, there was no such thing as a salaried Christian Endeavor secretary with anything smaller than National territory. Today, Ohio, Colorado, Missouri, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Nebraska and California, each enjoy the labors of a regular paid field secretary. Five of these are appointments of the year. Florida has a splendid gratuitous service. Virginia received an uplift from the two months' visit of Colorado's secretary. Alabama, Washington, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont are definitely considering the plan."

The general secretary urges that individual societies seek originality in their activities. He finds that too many of the young people are content to follow the lead of older societies and adhere to stereotyped methods of service.

At this annual meeting the following officers were unanimously re-elected: Rev. Francis E. Clark, president; William Shaw, treasurer; George B. Graff, clerk; Fred H. Kidder, auditor.

New York's Roof Gardens.

Paradise Roof Garden.—Marian's dogs, in a "canine melodrama," have scored a hit, but there were many other features of interest in the show atop the Victoria and Belasco theatres. Rice and Prevost, after a week's absence, were back again and as amusing as ever in their comedy acrobatic act. Other features of the diverting warm weather bill include "The Mysterious Face," Charles T. Aldrich; the Gasch sisters, in their feats of strength; Willy Zimmerman, in his imitations of famous composers; Colbert and Harris, and, of course, Mr. Hammerstein's "Parsifalia" is still to be seen.

Evaris Tracy Hurt.

Evaris Tracy, the architect, is obliged to go about with the aid of crutches, he having sustained a severe injury to his right foot several days ago While stepping out of an automobile which had the wheels accidentally run over his foot, inflicting a severe and painful bruise and sprain.

GALVIN'S PARK WIDE OPEN SUNDAY

Dancing Introduced as An Attraction for the Patrons of the Resort.

BARKERS' ACTIVITY

CATCH-PENNY SCHEMES RUNNING IN FULL BLAST.

Residents of Embree Crescent Up in Arms Against the Place—Another New Park Said to be Just as Noisy.

Instead of a further cessation of amusements at Galvin's Sunday, the "lid" was removed entirely and every attraction conducted on week days, was open for business. A new feature was the introduction of Sunday dancing and the floor of the hall was crowded until late last evening. The barkers toned up their voices and sang the praises of their catch-penny schemes loud and long while the organ on the carousal beat out an accompaniment.

The Park is situated in the extreme easterly boundary of the township of Scotch Plains and being far removed from the village has aroused no complaint. Indignation, however, has been expressed all along by residents of Embree Crescent, which is in Westfield, and through them an attempt was made to have the place conducted quieter on Sundays. A few weeks ago the organ was not played on the Sabbath day and the barkers were not so boisterous, giving the impression that more toning down was to follow. Yesterday's "wide open" aspect upset this idea and it is now thought that no restraining hand will be placed on the management by the Scotch Plains police.

The residents of Embree Crescent never took any legal action but through the establishment of another park in their vicinity they may resort to it. The new place is being conducted by colored people who have been barred from Galvin's, and is said to be more of a sleep disturber than its predecessor.

WESTFIELD GETS DECISION

IN DISPUTED CONTEST WITH ALIS BASEBALL TEAM.

The Alis-Westfield baseball contest of Saturday, June 11, which terminated in a row in the ninth inning, must stand forfeited to Westfield by a score of 9 to 0. This decision was announced Saturday night by City Judge William N. Runyon, representing the Alis Club, and Robert H. Sumner, representing the Westfield Club.

The arbitrators met at the Hotel Kensington. Manager Johnston and then Manager Denman had his say. The latter relied entirely on baseball rules, while the Alis manager recited the many questionable and suspicious circumstances in connection with the contest and in the name of good clean sport urged that the contest be thrown out. The committee retired for a consideration of the facts.

Mr. Sumner made the specific statement that he was in the grandstand and distinctly remembered hearing Umpire Kenzie call "time" and later declare the game forfeited to Westfield 9 to 0. Accepting Mr. Sumner's statement and basing the decision on a strict interpretation of the baseball rules, there was nothing for Mr. Runyon to do but agree that the contest should stand.

The decision is final. The series between the teams will be resumed on Saturday, Westfield playing Alis on Crescent Oval.

New Jersey's Noted Authors.

Miss Kate Louise Roberts, one of the staff of librarians of the Newark library, has just completed a list of the noted authors and writers of New Jersey. In it she gives prominence to three Plainfielders, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, George Wharton Edwards and Samuel Merwin. In "well known writers associated with New Jersey" appears the name of Abraham Coles, of Scotch Plains, and Charles Battell Loomis, of Fanwood, is mentioned favorably in the previous list.

POLICE FIND BOOTY IN LONGO'S HOUSE

Property Belonging to S. A. Cahoone Found in Home of Man Arrested for Burglary.

GOODS IDENTIFIED

LONGO BELIEVED TO BE LEADER OF A GANG.

Man Under Arrest Refuses to Speak —He Has Been Taken to Elizabeth —Only in This Country Three Months.

Flaviana Longo, the young Italian who was arrested Saturday trying to dispose of some of the loot from F. A. Clark's Hillside avenue residence, robbed last week, may be one of a gang of burglars which has been operating in empty houses throughout the Netherwood district.

Upon the search of Longo's home on Lake street by the police Saturday, a considerable amount of silverware and jewelry was discovered, only a part of which proved the property of the Clarks. Stephen A. Cahoone, who has been spending the summer with his family on Jamesburg, N. J., reported Saturday that his home on Watchung avenue had been broken into and jewelry, clothing and silverware, valued at about $35, had been taken. Mr. Cahoone identified much of the stolen goods among the property taken from the Longo house. A valuable ring and several pairs of imported French gloves have been recovered, along with the lids of a couple of valuable solid silver tea pots. These lids had been torn off, as the thieves were evidently chary of making the attempt to sell the entire tea pots.

When summoned before Justice Huff to answer the charge of the Clark robbery on Saturday afternoon, Longo was positively non commital, refusing to speak. He was taken to the jail at Elizabeth and was held without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Statistics show that Longo, who is about twenty years of age, has been in this country but a little more than three months. His record in his native land is not known by the police.

FORT GLASSMATE OF PARKER

UNION CIRCUIT JUDGE AND DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE STUDENTS TOGETHER.

Supreme Court Justice J. Franklin Fort, of East Orange, who was assigned to the Union County Circuit, to succeed Justice Bennet J. Vansyckel, of Trenton, was a classmate of Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, the Democratic nominee for President.

Judge Parker was graduated with the class of 1879 from the Albany Law School, and there were three New Jerseyites in his class. They were Supreme Court Justice Fort, of East Orange; William J. James, of Toms River, and the late Congressman Joshua S. Salmon, of Morristown.

There was considerable friendly feeling between the members of the class, and just before graduation they had a set of albums made, one for each member. In these albums the members of the class placed various mementos of their law school course, pictures and autographs, some their political and religious beliefs and others a quotation of some kind or else a motto.

An interesting motto was written in the album of the late Congressman Salmon by the man who has now become the most talked-of in the United States. Judge Parker wrote his signature in one corner of Congressman Salmon's album, and after it the word "Democrat." Then comes this motto, in Latin:

"The laws aid the vigilant, not the negligent.

Dr. Leonard a Crack Shot.

Dr. W. G. Leonard, of Park avenue, an honorary member of Co. K, qualified as a sharpshooter on the range at Sea Girt on Saturday, and the feat was the occasion for much jubilation on the part of the Plainfield military boys. They carried the doctor about on their shoulders, cheering him to the echo.

Silver Cups as Golf Prizes.

Two silver cups, offered by Mrs. Walter Gaston, will be contested for Saturday afternoon in a clock golf tournament for women at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. It is expected that there will be about sixteen entries. Play will commence at 5 o'clock.

Lawn Festival Thursday, July 28.

The Willing Workers, of Trinity church, will hold a lawn festival at the premises of Horace J. Marion, on Marion avenue, Thursday evening, July 28. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the extension fund of the church.

W. L. GLENNEY IS CHAMPION AT HILLSIDE

Defeats Leighton Calkins in the Finals Nine Up and Eight to Go.

WINNERS AT PARK

C. W. McCUTCHEN IS LOW MAN FOR PRESIDENT'S CUP.

Westfield Defeats Arsdale Golf Club Team 13 to 7—Roger F. Murray Another Winner at Hillside —The Scores.

The coveted honors of being club champion in golf at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club for the coming year was won on Saturday by W. L. Glenney, one of the most active members of the club. He defeated Leighton Calkins in the final play, by 9 up and 8 to go; returning a score of 72 from scratch. For the consolation cup, Roger F. Murray defeated George Cathcart, by 2 up. The finals for the survivors of the third eight were postponed because one of the contestants was called away on business trip. After the play the winners of the finals were congratulated by the members of the club.

With a very large handicap of 27, L. B. Taylor won the first honors for the Golf Committee cup, with a net score of 68. It is safe to say his handicap will be greatly reduced before Saturday. W. L. Glenney finished second and C. B. Morgan third. These scores were returned for the cup:

L. B. Taylor, 95, 27—68; W. L. Glenney, 72, 0—72; C. B. Morgan, 83, 9—74; H. D. Hibbard, 85,[8—77; Dudley H. Barrows, 84, 4—80; C. W. Abbott, 86, 5—81; George Cathcart, 93, 11—82; A. E. Barclay, 104, 20—84; Olaf Sangstad, 101, 10—91; G. H. Condict, 126, 27—99.

In the clock golf contest for women, Miss Maude VanBoskerck and Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers tied with a score of 22, and in the play off the former won with the same score.

The play at the Park Golf Club on Saturday included the weekly competition for the President's and club cups, the latter a scratch event. Charles W. McCutchen, who has been abroad for eight months, made his first appearance on the course and won first honors for the President's cup. T. U. Dudley won second honors and Nelson A. Miller third. For the club cup, Morgan T. Townsend won first, G. W. Faber second and T. U. Dudley also won third honors for this trophy.

These scores were returned for the two cups:

C. W. McCutchen, 101, 21—80; T. U. Dudley, 94, 13—81; N. A. Miller, 102, 19—83; Morgan T. Townsend, 95, 0—85; G. W. Faber, 88, 2—86; R. S. Rogers, 97, 7—90; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 106, 12—94; J. L. Watson, 185, 30—95; Samuel Townsend, 113, 17—96; C. A. Reed, 109, 8—101.

An event of interest at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday was the team match between the home club and the Arsdale Golf Club, of East Orange. The home team won by a score of 13 to 7, Nassau system. The summary:

Westfield—M. Whitlatch, 3; J. Sherman, Jr., 0; R. I. Townley, 0; C. H. Halsted, 3; J. A. Woodward, 0; W. M. Townley, 2; E. D. Floyd, 3; F. P. Condit, 2. Total, 13

Arsdale—Kight, 0; Garfield, 2; Cheeseman, 3; Baker, 0; Wiswell, 1; Woodward, 0; McLaughlin, 3; White, 0. Total, 7.

Sunday Trains for Asbury.

It is stated on good authority at Asbury Park that the question of Sunday trains has been satisfactorily adjusted and that trains will stop as usual next Sunday and thereafter. It is understood that the railroad officials have conferred with the Ocean Grove Association and that a satisfactory agreement has been arrived at. There is a feeling in Asbury Park that the trouble will ultimately force a constitutional fight in the courts which will involve the legality of the Ocean Grove charter. In Asbury Park the feeling is intense and the conclusion is expressed that now is the proper time to test the question of Ocean Grove's power over its neighboring municipality.

No Return Trolley Tickets on Sale.

The Public Service Corporation failed to supply its agents at Somerville with the regular return trip trolley tickets on Sunday and hundreds of passengers were compelled to pay double fares between that place and Bound Brook. The company, for certain concessions, entered into an agreement some months ago with the Somerville Board of Commissioners, to keep tickets on sale at all times. The agents are unable to account for the company's action, and the matter will be laid before the commissioners at their next regular meeting.

ALIS WHITEWASHES THE COLORED GIANTS

Plainfield's Reorganized Team Plays Fast Game on Crescent Oval—Enthusiastic Crowd.

DAVIS ALLOWS TWO HITS

LOCALS GIVE FINE EXHIBITION OF TERRIFIC HITTING.

Captain Smith Takes Charge and Introduces System of Signals—Great Improvement in Play—Detailed Score.

It was the Alis Club's turn on Saturday and the reorganized aggregation with F. L. Smith, as captain, whitewashed the New York Colored Giants, the score being 11 to 0. This is the team that defeated Westfield twice this season. About 500 persons witnessed a contest that was remarkable for heavy hitting.

The new combination secured by Manager Johnston worked to perfection. In all eighteen hits were made off Dawson and Landing. Dawson held Alis down to two hits until the fourth inning, when the locals landed on the pitcher for three singles. This was a forerunner of a merry-go-round in the fifth inning, when Alis got seven hits, including three two-baggers by Ousick, Oregan and Smith. In the sixth Dietrich hit for three bases. Neither side made an error.

Davis only allowed the Giants two hits. Nelson got a two bagger in the third and Kelly a single in the seventh. The latter kept the crowd in good humor by his coaching. The colored players fielded well, making some phenomenal stops.

The score in detail:

HILLAIRE BLATZ INJURED

HURT IN ACCIDENT ON SCENIC RAILWAY AT CONEY ISLAND.

Hillaire Blatz, of the borough, was numbered among a party of pleasure seekers who figured in a bad accident on one of the scenic railways at Coney Island, Sunday. The car in which he was seated became stalled in one of the dark caverns through the blowing out of a fuse and before an alarm could be given, a succeeding car crashed into it.

Several people were so badly hurt as to necessitate their removal to the hospital and all were more or less shaken up. Mr. Blatz escaped serious injury but was cut and bruised in several places. He had practically no warning of the second car's approach and when the collision occurred he was thrown headlong against a side wall. He was assisted to a train after receiving medical attention but still feels the effects of his fall.

CRANFORD STATION TUNNEL

AT LAST THE JERSEY CENTRAL DECIDES TO BUILD NEW PASSAGE WAY.

The officials of the New Jersey Central have decided to build an underground tunnel at Cranford. For a long time the matter has been under consideration by the company, and the citizens of Cranford have been particularly anxious that either a tunnel or an overhead bridge be constructed at that point to lessen the dangers attendant upon grade crossings.

Now that the tunnel will be built, the town of Cranford is quite happy. It will be somewhat on the style of the ones at the North Avenue Station and at Elizabeth, although not quite so elaborate. It will answer, however, in every particular the purpose for which it is intended. Plans for the improvement will soon be adopted and work commenced.

CLINTON AVENUES WON.

Emeralds, of Perth Amboy, Shut Out by Plainfielders.

A team from Perth Amboy styled the Emeralds crossed bats with the Clinton Avenue team Saturday afternoon. The visitors were unable to connect with Scott's delivery, making only one hit, and also failed to get a man around the bases. Clinton Avenue scored three runs and put up a very good game in the field.

Score by innings:

Batteries—Clinton Avenue, Scott and O'Loughlin; Emeralds, Johnson and Cleney.

Dr. Jackson as An Editor.

Under the editorial guidance of Rev. Dr. E. E. Jackson, the Plainfield Herald is soon to make its appearance bi-monthly in the local field. It will be devoted principally to religious work and matters of interest to local colored people. The first issue will be made either on Thursday or Saturday of this week.

ANOTHER ELEVEN INNING GAME

DUNELLEN DEFEATS NEW MARKET IN A SENSATIONAL CONTEST.

Dunellen and New Market met in the second game of the series on Saturday afternoon, and, as in the first contest, eleven innings had to be played. Not a moment during the game did the excitement lag as there were sensational plays in every inning.

Dunellen scored first in the third inning when Garvey crossed the plate by clever base running. New Market evened matters up in the fourth and forged ahead in their half of the ninth by hitting Smith safely three times. When Dunellen came to bat in the ninth excitement was at a fever heat. With two out Fletcher got to first on an error and by the most daring kind of base running got home safely, tieing the score.

In the eleventh inning Craig reached third and came home on Fletcher's sacrifice hit. Smith and Squiers were both in fine form but Smith had somewhat the better of the argument. The fielding on both sides was good, Fletcher and Craig, both making hair-raising catches of fly balls.

The lineup:

Dunellen—Matthews, 1b, rf; Craig, 3b; Davis, c; Smith, p; Fletcher, 2b; Alberts, cf; Giles, ss; Garvey, 1b, lf; Emery, lf.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT RESULT

NINE EVENTS IN CONTESTS BETWEEN HILLSIDE AND PARK CLUBS.

Two tennis teams from the Park and Hillside Clubs played a series of friendly matches on the latter's courts Saturday afternoon. There were nine events in all, three doubles and six singles, of which the Hillside team won six.

The scores were as follows: Doubles, T. M. Day, Jr., and A. D. Beers defeated C. W. McGee and Charles Dupee, 6-2, 6-1; H. L. McGee and William Barlow, Park, defeated A. Lovell and J. L. Myers, Hillside, 6-1, 6-4; J.F. Middleditch and Howard Huntington, Hillside, defeated C. 6-4, 6-3.

Singles, A. D. Beers, Hillside, won from Charles Dupee, 6 0, 6-1; T. M. Day, Jr., Hillside, won from C. W. McGee, Park, 6-1, 6-2; Arthur Lovell, Hillside, won from H. L. McGee, Park, 6-1, 6-3; William Barlow, Park, won from J. L. Myers, Hillside, 6-3, *6 2, default; D. A. McGee, Park, de*feated J. F. Middleditch, Hillside, 6-4, 6 2; Howard Huntington, Hillside, defeated A. B. Laing, Park, 6-4, 6 2.

THE ASBURY PARK O. K.

Federal Officials Report Central Railroad's Flyer Satisfactory.

Federal inspectors went over the new Central railroad steamer, the Asbury Park, as Atlantic Highlands yesterday, and reported that the boat's equipment was satisfactory in every respect.

The Asbury Park is licensed to carry 2,159 passengers. The inspectors found 2,300 life preservers, which were separately handled by them and found to be in perfect order. The steamer has six lifeboats and three liferafts.

Part of the crew went through a fire drill and simultaneously the lifeboats were swung from their davits and lowered with precision and celerity. The bells, boilers and other machinery were also thoroughly tested.

ICE DEALERS REPORT DOING BIG BUSINESS

Sales This Season Likely to be Greater Than for Many Years According to Reports.

AN ABUNDANT SUPPLY

BUT THERE IS DIFFICULTY IN SUPPLYING THE DEMAND.

Natural Ice is Said to be Preferred —How the Territory is Divided —Manufactured Ice for Family Use.

The ice business in this city this season bids fair to exceed that of any year for some time. In fact the demand is much larger than some of the dealers have been able to supply, not because there is a scarcity of ice, but because of the limited number of wagons and available men. One dealer told a reporter of The Daily Press today, that in several instances he was obliged to refuse to serve families because he was covering all the territory possible at present.

The quality of ice this year is the best and the supply is an abundant one. Consumers have their choice between the natural and hygeia ice and according to reports the manufactured kind is in greater demand for family use. Persons prefer it for use in drinking water. Large consumers, such as the butchers and restaurant people claim that the natural ice produces the greatest amount of cold air and keeps refrigerators cold for a greater length of time. Some claim that this is imagination and that the hygeia will do the same thing.

Owing to the large crop of ice last winter the price was put down to a point within the reach of all for the summer. The ice business of the town is done by the Plainfield Natural Ice Company and F. T. Ostrom, both selling natural and hygeia ice. The territory is divided up so that one wagon will not conflict with another. In this way the city and borough is covered every day. During several recess warm spells the demand for ice has been the means of taxing the horses and men to the limit, it being almost impossible some times to reach everyone wanting ice. As soon as the temperature drops it will give both harvest and more as much needed rest. The dealers have no fear but that the crop on hand will last until cold weather comes again to replenish the stock.

KRINEY WITHOUT COMMISSION

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE STILL SEEKS HIS PAPERS FROM STATE SECRETARY.

Justice of the Peace Jacob Kriney, about whose commission there has been some delay, because, as Secretary of State S. D. Dickinson says, the returns from the First district of the First ward were not filed with him, has not yet heard nothing about the matter. City Clerk J. T. Mac-Murray has written to Mr. Dickinson, but has received no reply.

Mr. Kriney now states that he does not believe that his failure to receive the commission is due to any omission on the part of the local election board, but is inclined to believe that the fault lies with someone higher up.

This week Mr. Kriney secured through J. H. Coward, Esq., a true copy of the returns from the First district, First ward, taken from the returns filed at the county seat, and if necessary this will be forwarded to Mr. Dickinson. If the returns in question were not filed with the Secretary of State, it is pretty late to announce the failure, according to those interested. Why the failure, if there was one, was not discovered soon after election, is something that the local officers cannot understand. It is generally believed that Mr. Kriney will get his commission.

MISS C. M. HALL RETURNS

YOUNG ARTIST HOME FROM PARIS WITH NOTABLE PAINTING.

Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Prescott Hall, of Madison avenue, has returned from Paris, where she has been studying art and is now at the home of her parents. She will shortly visit her grandmother, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, at the latter's summer residence at Newport, and in the fall will return to Paris for a year's additional study. At its completion she will return to Plainfield to make her home with her parents.

Miss Hall brought with her the picture which received much favorable notice last winter and several other canvases, all of which have attracted attention.

WESTFIELD'S "KING" DEAD

OCHIETTO WAS HEAD OF BIG ITALIAN COLONY IN THAT PLACE.

Nicola Ochietto, known as king of the Italian colony at Westfield, died Monday at the General Hospital in Elizabeth from peritonitis, following an operation for appendicitis. He was ill eight days, but was only removed to the hospital Saturday night and the operation immediately performed. Ochietto, who was well known here, was a contractor for several years, lately he ran a hotel, also a bear bottling establishment and a large Italian boarding-house. Ochietto was known as the chief padrone of the Italians in Westfield and vicinity. He used to secure men for contractors in various parts of Union county. He was fifty-three years old and is survived by a wife and three children.

Some years ago a man was found lying stabbed to death in some bushes close to Ochietto's house. He was suspected by the county authorities and was arrested, but the State could not find evidence to hold him. The tragedy was never cleared up. His funeral took place yesterday, at Westfield, and interment was in St. Mary's cemetery here. Ochietto is supposed to have left considerable money.

STAMP CANCELLING DEVICE

MACHINE MARKING 600 LETTERS A MINUTE IN USE AT POSTOFFICE.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has been successful in his efforts to secure a new cancellation machine at the postoffice. The device was installed a few days ago and is now in use. Its capacity is twice that of the old machine, it being possible to cancel between 600 and 700 stamps in a minute. The machine is operated by electricity.

A person not acquainted with the amount of mail matter passing through the local office, is surprised to learn that the letters and other mail matter runs up in the thousands, the heaviest mail usually being received the first part of the month. It was because of this constantly increasing mail that the new machine was obtained. This is the seventh machine of the kind put in use by the Postoffice Department and the fourth or fifth in this State.

WM. HOLMES WEDS MISS CLARA DUNHAM

Marriage of Well-Known Vocalist to Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garrett T. Dunham.

DR. YERKES OFFICIATES

CEREMONY ATTENDED ONLY BY RELATIVES AND FEW FRIENDS.

Bride a School Teacher—Upon Return From Honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Holmes Will Reside in This City.

In the presence of only relatives and a few immediate friends, Miss Clara Gaston Dunham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garret T. Dunham, of West Front street, was married Monday afternoon to William Holmes, also of this city. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, was the officiating clergyman. The affair was simple in every respect, there being no attendants or any of the usual features.

The bride was attired in a very becoming gown of crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of bride roses. Following the ceremony a brief reception was held and at its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Holmes left on a wedding trip. They will make their home on West Front street on their return.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes are numbered among the city's most prominent young people. The former is well known as a vocalist and musician and has appeared in many local amateur operatic productions which he himself arranged. He has been leader of the First Baptist church choir for several years and was in charge of several of its recent musicales. His bride also comes of a musical family and has sung in several local choirs. For the past two years she has been teacher in the school at North Branch.

AN ENGAGEMENT RECEPTION

DAVID DREIER ENTERTAINS HIS FRIENDS AT THE WILLOUGHBY HOME.

Many friends of David Dreier, of West Front street, were royally entertained Sunday evening at the Willoughby Mansion in Brooklyn on the occasion of the engagement reception of Mr. Dreier and Miss Rose Freudenthal, of Brooklyn. The ball, which is one of the largest and most popular for such occasions, was handsomely decorated with palms and bunting and the banquet tables were gay with white American beauty rosebuds and pink carnations, the prevailing colors of the evening's decorations.

Scores of friends of the future bride and groom were present from Philadelphia, Newark, New Brunswick, New York, Brooklyn and this city. The company from this city consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier, of West Front street, Mr. and Mrs. William Newoorn, Esq., of West Front street, Miss Nettie Newoorn, Isador Newoorn and Samuel Dreier, father of the groom-to-be. From New Brunswick came Mr. and Mrs. Garret Dreier and Peter Krone. Guests from Newark were Mr. and Mrs. Sandberg, Miss Bertha Sandberg and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Riesman. Among the guests from New York and Brooklyn were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Singer, Mr. and Mrs. David Dreier, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cohen, Simon Freudenthal, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Sprinsch and sons, David and Carl, Mr. and Mrs. J. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Freudenthal, Miss Pauline Freudenthal, Mr. and Mrs. M. Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Miller and daughter, Mr. Stone and Mr. and Mrs. Dobbert.

Later in the evening there was a banquet. During the evening musical selections were rendered by a special string orchestra and a piano soloist from the Carnegie Lyceum. Speeches were made by William Newoorn, Esq. and Harry Dreier, of this city, Mr. Finch and Mr. Miller, of Elizabeth. Leo Sprinsch acted as toastmaster at the banquet.

The date of the wedding has not yet been decided upon, but will probably be set for some time in the late fall.

Mrs. George Morton, of Westfield, has been visiting relatives here for a few days.

FANWOOD CONTRACTS FOR ITS NEW SCHOOL

John Bornman Successful Bidder to Erect Building in the Willow Grove District.

TO COMMENCE AT ONCE

HOPE TO HAVE IT READY FOR OCCUPANCY BY SEPT. 15.

Two Room Structure to Accommodate 100 Pupils—Site on Raritan Road, Adjoining Darby Farm.

At a meeting of the Fanwood township Board of Education, last evening, John Bornman was awarded the contract to build the new school in district No. 3, known as the Willow Grove district. His bid was $2,800, which was well within the appropriation, the voters having placed a total of $4,500 at the disposal of the School Board. The site was secured at a good figure and there will be a small balance remaining.

Work on the structure will be commenced at once and it is hoped to have it ready for occupancy on September 15. This will be after the beginning of the fall session, but owing to delays in securing the appropriation it was impossible to award the contract sooner.

The specifications call for a modern one story building, Colonial in architecture. The plan of the structure as far as possible will be on a line with the plans recommended by the State Board of Education. The building will be a commodious two room school capable of accommodating one hundred pupils. The two school rooms will be separated by folding doors, so that when the occasion demands it the whole floor can be thrown into one large room.

For the present only one teacher will be employed as in the past, but the gradually increasing attendance, the board believes, will soon make it necessary to increase the corps. The location of the building will be on Raritan road, adjoining the John L. Darby farm. This will be a central location for the majority of the pupils and meets with the demands made by the taxpayers from this district when they petitioned the board last winter for better school facilities.

MERCHANTS MADE TO SUFFER

UNPAID BILLS CARRIED THROUGH SUMMER HURTFUL TO SHOPKEEPERS.

That many residents of the town will leave here early in the season, remain away all summer and fail to pay their debts before going, is getting to be a serious question with a number of the local merchants. In fact nearly every merchant of any importance has been obliged to experience this sort of thing, until it is now a well established habit among some persons.

A reporter for The Daily Press, in conversation with a member of a local firm today, learned to his astonishment that the firm would be obliged to "carry" certain well-to-do persons during the summer to the extent of about $1,500. The concerns of which this firm buys will not wait for their money, they must have it within a certain time, yet the customers of the firm think nothing of contracting bills to the amount of several hundred dollars and then let them stand for two or three months.

This practice is not found among the people of moderate means as a rule, but among those well able to pay cash. The firm mentioned the names of at least a half-dozen prominent families who have gone away for the summer and who are on the books for good sized amounts. Families depending on the weekly wage of the man or men of the house have been found to pay promptly and more regularly, while the wealthier class are extremely negligent about paying their bills.

One family leaving town early this season received a bill for goods purchased a month ago, and in reply stated that much of the goods were not satisfactory, using this as an excuse for delaying payment on the same. No one particular business is affected, but all the merchants have been forced in one way or another to oblige their customers in this way.

Just what course the merchants will pursue to offset this matter, cannot be determined upon now, but if the practice continues something will have to be done as some merchants depend upon this money to meet their bills and if they fail they are apt to lose the usual credit given retail houses by large concerns.

Miss Mary Duvier, of West Fifth street, has returned from a visit with Hoboken relatives.

FRONT STREET IMPROVEMENT

DR. PITTIS AND OTHERS TO BUILD ONE OR TWO STORES.

Dr. Albert Pittis and several other joint owners who control the plot of ground on East Front street between Fowlkes & Jones' store and the residence of Ephraim Compton, have combined their interests and contemplate the erection of one or two stores on the site. The interested parties own 22 feet, or one-third the entire width of the lot, and it will be possible to place two buildings in this frontage, similar to those erected by Dr. Pittis just west of it on the former VanName site.

The erection of the buildings will complete another step in the closing in of the north side of the block between Somerset street and Watchung avenue. It will leave the Compton residence and Dr. Probasco's home the only frame structures remaining and Dr. Probasco's lawn the only open space. Dr. Pittis is the owner of six buildings in the block.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make them an notation of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Readers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

REPTILES ON GUARD.

EMPLOYED AS WATCHMEN BY BIG MAINE CORPORATION.

Valuable Tools Are Left in Charge of the Companionable Snakes During the Warm Months of Every Year.

"Although there are steel tools valued at nearly $500,000 in the stone sheds of the Mount Waldo Granite company at Frankfort, Me.," says Edwin Batcheldor, the boss blacksmith on the works, to a New York Sun correspondent, "the company never has to employ a night watchman during the warm months.

"There are plenty of hoboes and others who would be glad enough to steal and sell the points and chisels and hammers, but from the middle of May until the middle of September every year the aged watchman, who has been on duty winters for more than 25 years, goes home and spends his vacation raising crops on his farm, while the sheds filled with expensive tools and machinery are left open to anyone who has a mind to call around.

"Fact is, nobody cares to call more than once after sunset. Several have tried it, but the first attempt satisfied them, so they had rather remain poor and honest than get rich by walking in and carrying off enough at a single load to furnish a house.

"I don't say that the sheds are not guarded, for they are. What I say is that the guards that these sheds are the only ones that cost the owners nothing for protection.

"More than 50 years ago, when Dr. Charles T. Jackson, of Boston, one of the claimants to the credit of having discovered the anesthetic qualities of ether, and at that time state geologist in Maine, came here and was frightened out of his wits almost by the number of big ringneck snakes sunning themselves among the white rocks which had been thrown out from the sheds. He asked John T. Rowe, one of the owners, why he did not kill the reptiles and make the place fit to work in.

"Mr. Rowe replied that so long as the big snakes were plenty the sight of them would keep the hands from getting drunk. He found that ringnecks six feet in length were more potent as temperance advocates than signing the pledge or 30 days in jail.

"As new contracts were taken and the sheds were enlarged, the heap grew bigger and bigger, and the snakes, being protected by Mr. Rowe's favor, just overran the whole premises. They were quiet enough in the day time, as they kept on top of the hot rocks and took sun baths most of the time; but as soon as it became dark they came out and swarmed to the sheds by hundreds, picking up the discarded bits of noonday lunch thrown away by the workmen, and gathering in all the toads and insects they could find.

"After the death of Mr. Rowe the boss stonecutter kept up the protection of the reptiles, so that if an employe killed one he was discharged from the works. The owners of the quarry, having endured the presence of the snakes so long, became accustomed to them and used to boast about having the largest collection of reptiles in the country.

"One night about six years ago, while the night watchman was drowsing, a band of tramps crept into the open sheds and began to pack up a kit of tools in readiness to take it away, when the watchman was rudely awakened by hearing bloodcurdling yells coming from the stone works. He hurried to the spot and found three of the most frightened men he had ever seen.

"One fainted from the scare he had received, and all begged to be flogged or taken to jail or put to work, provided they could escape from the reptiles. Since then a few strangers have attempted to steal from the exposed kits, but no one has succeeded in carrying away anything.

"A harmless snake is as harmless as a kitten and could not injure anybody if it tried, but the appearance of the great creatures squirming among the stone chips and wriggling through the sheds is enough to give one the creeps. Any way, they are good enough to save the company from paying $30 a month for a watchman for six months every year."

Mistook Dog for Burglar.

Mrs. Fred Eichler, of Bellentie, Ill., always sleeps with a revolver under her pillow. On a recent evening she imagined she heard a man breathing beneath her bed. Being blessed with a keen ear, she did her best to locate the exact spot occupied by the interloper. Then she fired through the mattress, and fatally wounded her pet Newfoundland dog.

LUCK IS ONLY FORESIGHT.

So Said the Humble Man, But He Heard Something Somewhat Contradictory.

"You think, then," said the gentleman who stood on the marble steps leading up to his $700,000 palace, "that your present condition is due merely to the fact that you have been unlucky?"

"Yes," replied the humble one who leaned upon the handle of the lawn mower, relates the Chicago Record-Herald. "I have made up my mind that I must have been born under an unlucky star. I've worked hard all my life. A dozen times after saving carefully and getting ahead a little I've tried to become a leading citizen, but something has always happened to spoil my plans. Once I started in the milk business and had just begun to see my way clear ahead when somebody brought into the neighborhood a cow with a contagious disease. Mine all caught it before I had time to discover the presence of danger, and I lost everything I had.

"I opened up a grocery in a manufacturing district next, and then a panic came on and they closed all the shops and the people moved away, so that I lost all I had saved again. Then I went to work and picked up every cent I could until I had $500 in a bank that was supposed to be as sound as the government itself. The cashier looted it one day, and I was penniless again. Then I thought I would buy real estate and I ventured again. I bought a lot that everybody supposed would rapidly increase in value. The day after I made the last payment on it the city decided to locate a dog pound on the adjoining lot, and I couldn't even get anybody to take the land as a gift."

"And you think all this has been mere bad luck, eh?" said the rich gentleman, with a smile of mingled pity and contempt. "My good fellow, there is no such thing as bad luck in this world. We succeed or fail according to our abilities. You lack foresight, that's all. You should before going into the dairy business have taken precautions to prevent your cows from being contaminated. You showed poor judgment in opening a grocery in a district that was liable to be affected by business conditions, and you should have known better than to put your money in a piece of ground that adjoined a suitable site for a dog pound. People never get rich or great through mere luck. Bad luck in all ways is the excuse of people who lack the ability to rise. It's as old as the world and as foolish as the belief of the man who thinks he can lift himself by his bootstraps. Go ahead now and finish mowing the lawn. After you're through I'll see about giving you a regular job for the summer."

The humble one went on with his work. As he was pushing his mower past the turreted stable the coachman emerged.

"Do you know how the man who lives here got his money?" asked the stranger.

"Haven't you heard the story? Thirty years ago when this city was a struggling village and nobody thought it would ever amount to anything a man who owed him $75 had a ten-acre lot here. It was mostly swamp and couldn't be used either for farming or buildin'. He couldn't pay the $75, and the boss here had to take the land. He tried to trade it for a mule, and I guess would of done it all right only the mule died just before they came to an understandin'. A little while after that the boom struck the place and he wanted to sell out for $30,000, but the people here got wise to the game and busted up, and he had to take his swamp back. He was so disappointed that he took sick and was out of his head for three weeks. When he got so he could set up and recognize people again his land was worth $40,000,000. The man with the mower then went on about his work, for he was cutting the grass by the job and couldn't afford to waste time.

Was He Game?

A young curate in England was once asked to take a class of girls of about 15 or 16, which had formerly been taken by a lady.

After a time the young clergyman consented, but insisted upon being properly introduced to the class. Accordingly the next Sunday the superintendent took him to the girls for this purpose, and addressing them, said:

"Young ladies, I wish to introduce to you Rev. Mr. Chirp, who will in future be your teacher. I should like you to tell him what your former teacher did, so that he can go on in the same way."

Immediately a demure young miss of 16 rose and said:

"The first thing teacher did was to kiss us all round."—Christian Endeavor World.

A Farmer on Farmers.

An Iowa farmer who was born in Maine, but went west many years ago, has been revisiting the east. Now he writes to say that in his opinion New England farmers would not complain so much of poverty if they would work harder. He thinks the western agriculturist could give his eastern brother some pointers on real toil. The New England men ought to take him the rounds of the old stone walls, which contain a good many hundred backaches to the rod, and challenge him to duplicate them in Iowa.—Springfield (Mass.) JERSEY ROADS AT ST. LOUIS

ROBERT A. MEEKER THE BUILDER OF MODEL HIGHWAYS.

The road exhibit of New Jersey in the "Model City" in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis portrays the method which has made the State so justly famous as the home of good roads. In the model street New Jersey has a section of trap rock macadam, flanked on each side by strips of New Jersey's famous gravel, exemplifying the standard methods of road construction, namely, macadam centre, sixteen feet wide, with gravel wings extending to the gutter. On the track just north of the model street the method of road construction is shown in progressive stages: (1) the sub-grade or compacted earth, shaped to the same form and curvature as the finished road; (2) the foundation course; (3) the one-and-one-half-inch course; (4) the finished road, covered with fine stone, commonly known as screenings.

The foregoing description applies to both the telford and macadam methods of construction. In addition to these samples, both gravel and oyster shell roads are shown. The latter is the only satisfactory road thus far devised for travel across the salt marshes, which connect the mainland with the beach along the New Jersey coast. These exhibits are attracting a great deal of attention, because every one is interested in securing as good roads as possible. New Jersey, being the oldest road-building State in the Union, it is but natural that the methods should attract widespread attention on the part of the citizens of her sister States, who are anxiously seeking to secure as good highways as those for which New Jersey is justly famous. New Jersey, though the forty-second State in area, has more miles of good, hard, smooth roads convenient for travel at all seasons of the year than any two States in the Union. Of course, there are States where the natural conditions give more good roads during the summer season.

The road exhibits of the State is under the direction and supervision of Robert A. Meeker, of Plainfield, State supervisor.—Newark News.

INVENTS A CUP HOLDER

ROBERT LOVE APPLIES FOR PATENT ON COMMUNION SERVICE DEVICE.

Robert Love, of the borough, has applied to the U. S. patent office for a patent on an individual communion cup holder. It is a neat and very simple affair and will undoubtedly be installed in all churches where there are individual sets for administering communion.

The holder is constructed of nickle-plated wire and has two circles to accommodate as many cups. They are held in a projection fitted with a pair of sharpened points which makes it easy for them to be attached to the back of any pew. As soon as cups have been used in communion they can be easily and quickly disposed of by placing them in the holder and can be collected at leisure. Mr. Love will have the holders manufactured in this city.

INCORPORATED AUTO GARRAGE

PLAINFIELD CONCERN STARTS WITH $25 000 CAPITAL.

The Plainfield Auto Garrage was incorporated yesterday, the incorporators being Joseph B. Longbead and Andrew Wilson and the capital stock is $25,000. The concern has leased the entire first floor of Washington Hall building in West Second street, where it will carry on a general auto business. Two stores in front, as well as the first floor comprising 100 square feet will be used. One of the stores will be handsomely fitted up as a waiting room for women, who have occasion to remain here while their autos are being fixed or cleaned.

It is proposed to make the place the most complete of any in the State, and there will be nothing in the repair line of autos or bicycles that cannot be done here. Special machinery has been purchased and the concern will be prepared to make all special parts for autos or bicycles.

A feature will be an independent electric plant, which will furnish lights for the establishment, and will also be used for charging electric machines. There will also be an equipment for charging gasolene machines. In the day time when the dynamo is not being used for lighting purposes electric machines will be charged direct.

2 Extensive repairs are now being made to the building and in a short time the new company will be ready for business. Mr. Longbead will have charge of the plant. A large space will be reserved for the storage of machines.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS PLAN BIG CONVENTION

Plainfield Organizations Expect to be Represented at the Louisville Gathering.

PROGRAMME FEATURES

20,000 MEMBERS OF UNIFORMED RANK TO BE IN PARADE.

Cash Prizes in Competition Drill Exceed $10,000—Nearly 100 Bands Entered in One Contest—Banners as Trophies.

As the time draws near for the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, to convene in Louisville, many of the lodges and companies of the uniformed rank throughout the country are busy completing their plans to attend the biennial. The meeting will open August 15, and will last at least ten days. A delegation from this city is expected to attend. There are three organizations of the order here, including Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Unity Lodge, 102 and Crescent Co., No. 13, Uniformed Rank. As a rule the uniformed rank plays an important part in these conventions. This year an effort is on foot to make the demonstration excel that of any previous session.

Cash prizes and banners will be offered to the companies leading in number of men in line and in distance traveled to attend. The music committee will offer prizes to the bands, and there will be competition for drum corps also. Santa Anna Company, of California, will bring its band of thirty-five pieces to try conclusions with the rest. So far the music committee has received advices that eighty-nine bands will be in the city during the convention week.

Reports received at the headquarters of the encampment committee indicate that at least 20,000 members of the uniformed rank will participate in the parade August 16. This demonstration will be in charge of Major-General James R. Carnalian, of the rank. It is said that at least 4,000 men come from Indiana.

It is promised that the business houses of Louisville will join in the work of decorating the city and that private residences generally will display the red, blue and yellow of the order in bunting during the day, and in electric lights during the night.

Clay Lodge, No. 1, of Louisville, invested 305 candidates with the first rank June 10. This represents the first division of the class of one thousand candidates which the lodge expects to put through before August 1. It is now planned to confer the third rank on all these candidates July 15. The lodge's degree team consists of 100 members. A liberal percentage of the money paid by these candidates as degree fees will be turned over to the general entertainment committee by Clay Lodge.

It is said that the cash prizes offered in the competitive drills will exceed the sum of $10,000.

Supreme Chancellor Tracy R. Bangs, of North Dakota, will preside over the deliberations of the Supreme Lodge. The companies of the uniformed rank in this State are planning to make up a battalion to represent this jurisdiction in the parade.

PHILLIP MAGUIRE PROMOTED

P. S. C. ADVANCES HIM TO POSITION OF DIVISION SUPERINTENDENT.

Phillip Maguire, of West Fourth *street, who has been local superin*tendent of the Plainfield trolley lines, received word from the P. S. C. headquarters this morning that he had been promoted to division superintendent, succeeding Frank Brown. His office will be at Picton and he will have charge of the lines between Plainfield and Elizabeth and Westfield and Scwaren. The position is an important one and the fact that it was awarded Mr. Maguire shows how his services have been valued.

Former Division Superintendent Brown will have charge of all the P. S. C. lines in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties and Mr. Maguire's place will be filled by Frank C. Scothard, of Elizabeth.

Alumni to Have An Outing.

Rev. Father Egan, of St. Mary's church, has arranged to give the alumni of St. Mary's school an outing at Lake Hopatcong some time next month. He will accompany the participants to the pretty water sheet and will have assistants to see that the day's programme is properly carried out.

Hello No More.

According to a new order, the telephone girls are not now required to give you the familiar "Hello" when answering your call. She simply says "Number?" or "Number, please?"

FORECAST OF COUNTY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Frank H. Smith's Nomination As Registrar of Deeds is Reasonably Certain.

ASSEMBLY CANDIDATES

EMBERY, TILLMAN AND COYNE LIKELY TO BE NAMED.

James C. Calvert Probable Candidate for County Clerk—Review of the Political Situation.

Friends of City Collector Frank H. Smith express themselves as feeling reasonably certain now that he will be nominated at the Union County Republican convention for Registrar of the Deeds, an office created by the last Legislature. There is only one other candidate in the field. He is Major Hicks, of Summit. The latter's boom is merely local and it is not believed that there will be any trouble from that quarter when the convention meets. If he is nominated, it is expected that Mr. Smith will receive such a vote as will insure his election by a good majority. In that event the Plainfield man will take office within one week after the election, which falls on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

Mr. Smith's candidacy has the support of County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean as well as the local leaders. James T. MacMurray, Andrew McCardell, Dr. Olin L. Jenkins, William N. Runyon and the other local leaders are heart and soul for the popular Fourth ward man. From Rahway has come the assurance that the politicians there favor Mr. Smith. Charles Codding says that Westfield will whoop it up for the Plainfield candidate in the proper fashion.

In addition to a registrar of deeds, there are several other candidates to be named. Three assemblymen are to be nominated. The fortunate men will likely be George H. Embery, of Westfield; Peter Tillman, of Rahway and Edward Coyne, of Elizabeth. Tillman and Coyne are popular here, but Plainfield politicians do not take to Embery, but they claim that Westfield should be allowed to name its own candidate and the choice should be respected by the convention. James C. Calvert, of Elizabeth, is likely to be named as county clerk.

The county committee will not select the date for the convention until its meeting during the forepart of September. The convention will take place during the latter part of the same month.

MADE HIS MARK OUT WEST

S. C. LINBARGER HAD ARISEN TO POSITION OF PROMINENCE IN CALIFORNIA.

Silas Clark Linbarger, a brother of Walter Linbarger, of the borough, whose death occurred on Monday, July 4, at his home in San Jose, Ill., was well known here, having been born at Martinsville, March 8, 1856. He went to San Jose in 1876 and a year later entered the employ of Cunningham & Chestnut, proprietors of a general store. On October 21, 1879, he was married to Miss Rose C. Leoni and to this happy union were born five children, four sons and one daughter. Miss Leo and Master Carl, with the devoted wife, an aged mother, one sister and three brothers, all except the immediate members of his family residing in the East, survive him.

Mr. Linbarger was a man of exceptional judgment of matters pertaining to business and his advice was much sought after. He held many responsible positions in public trust and for individuals. His relationship as the cashier of the San Jose State Bank has shown his marked ability as a financier. He was the leading man in organizing the bank and has had most of the management of it ever since. As a citizen he was always looked upon as the best, always having the welfare of the public at heart.

For several years Mr. Linbarger was Mayor of San Jose, and while in that office managed the affairs of the city as he would his own private business. At the time of his death he was a consistent member of the M. E. church and he was also a member of several lodges, including the Masons. At the funeral services held on the Thursday following the day of his death the Masonic lodges were in charge.

Enjoying Time Abroad.

Letters dated at Norway have been received from the members of Honeyman's European tour and show all members to be recovered from the effects of the sea voyage and ready for the land sight-seeing. From Norway, the tourists will journey to Scotland, where they will spend several days at Edinburgh.

THREE MEN NARROWLY ESCAPE SUDDEN DEATH

Collision Between Big Van and a Trolley Car Nearly Results in Fatal Consequences.

TRIO ARE INJURED

TWO ARE PITCHED HEADLONG FROM WAGON'S SEAT.

Horses Badly Hurt and Van a Wreck—Responsibility for Accident Not Placed—Front of Trolley Car Ripped Out.

In a collision which took place on West Front street, opposite Lafayette place, shortly after midnight, last Thursday, three men were hurt, car No. 44, of the Netherwood line, was badly wrecked, and a furniture van belonging to Max Kollman, of Paterson, was all but demolished. The impact was terrific as the car was on its way to the barn and was being sent along as a high rate of speed. The horses were thrown down and with the vehicle were shoved along 100 feet, being in under it when assistance arrived.

Motorman Henry Fleck saved himself from serious injury if not death by leaping back into the car after he had reversed the power, but as it was he received several very bad cuts. Kollman and his driver, Jacob Bream, who were on the front seat, were pitched headlong into the street and the fact that they escaped with their lives is considered miraculous. Kollman fell beneath the wagon and one wheel passed over his leg, but by presence of mind he avoided the car. Bream was thrown to one side and landed against the street curb. Both he and his employer were cut and bruised in a dozen places and Kollman's leg was sprained. Both horses were in a pitiable condition and although they were removed to a nearby barn it is possible they may have to be shot.

Responsibility for the accident has not yet been placed. Fleck declared last night that he did not see the truck until almost upon it and he then only had time to reverse the power and jump back after shouting a warning. Kollman and his driver stated that there was no bell sounded and the first they knew of the approaching car was when it was directly upon them. The conveyance is one of the small, closed affairs with a light on top and it is almost useless to the motorman.

The truck was on the way from Paterson to Belle Mead with a load of furniture and the latter was scattered all along the street from Lafayette to Oxford place. The entire front of the car was ripped off and the glass on all sides was shattered.

HELD HIM FOR GRAND JURY

JUSTICE HAND IS RELEASED ON HIS OWN RECOGNIZANCE.

On complaint preferred against him by John B. Hubbard in behalf of his wife, Kate Webster Hubbard, Justice H. K. Hand was arraigned in Justice Nash's court last Thursday, charged with assault. After a trial lasting several hours the defendant was held in his own recognizance for appearance before the Grand Jury.

The alleged assault was stated to have taken place in the accused's office on June 11 last but complaint was not made until July 2. To substantiate her charge Mrs. Hubbard's counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr., produced two witnesses, Game Warden O. M. Hawkins, of Elizabeth, and Andrew Love, Jr. Justice Hand entered a denial of the complaint and witnesses testified that the plaintiff was intoxicated at the time of the alleged occurrence and also that she had been acting in an unseemly manner with Hawkins and Love just previous to it.

Assisting in the proceedings was Paul Oliver, Esq., of Westfield, in the interests of Prosecutor English, who was personally requested by the defendant to investigate the charge. This is the first time on record where the defendant in a criminal case has asked for the prosecutor's action in order to fully clear himself but the charge was of such a nature that Justice Hand desired a clear vindication which he confidently expects from the Grand Jury.

Among the late arrivals at the Hampton House, Bridgehampton, L. I., are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peck and Miss Gladys Peck, of Myrtle avenue.

Miss Evelyn Buckley, of South avenue, is spending July and August with her grandmother, Mrs. Francis Wight, at Holland, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Coes, of Spooner avenue, have been entertaining relatives from Glen Gardner.

PLAINFIELD LADDIES MEET CRUSHING DEFEAT

Team From City of Churches Beat Local Aggregation to the Tune of 17 to 2.

CROWD AT THE OVAL.

SUPPER AT HOTEL WALDORF FOLLOWING THE GAME.

City Judge W. N. Runyon and Chief T. O. Doane Are Heard at the Feast—Prospects of Another Game at Brooklyn.

By the modest score of 17 to 2, an aggregation of ball players from the ranks of the local firemen was made to realise by a team of Brooklyn fire fighters Thursday afternoon, that they had lots to learn about playing the National game. The slaughter took place on Crescent Oval and not for a minute did the Plainfield end have a ghost of a show, greatly to the disappointment of a large crowd of sympathizers.

In the first inning the Brooklyn boys had an old-fashioned swatfest and the way they fell on "Tommy" Keeffe's curves was a caution. It must be understood at the beginning that "Tommy" was never a fireman until yesterday but neither was the Brooklyn pitcher or catcher, so it's all right as long as no one objects. Six runs were piled up before Chief Doane's rank and file stopped chasing all over the lot after the leather and came in for a try at batting. The visitors put a twirler in the box who said his name was Ward but forgot it two or three times and had to be reminded of the fact. He knew his business, however, and Plainfield only touched his delivery up for three hits, two of them made by Captain Townley and the other by "Cy" Jaeger. But two men got all around the bases and nobody knows just how they did it.

When it was Brooklyn's turn at the bat, the ball was out in the hay field most of the time and "Chuckie" Cline, "Dery" Larew and Frank Kessering, who were supposed to cover right, center and left garden, complained of overwork. Kavanagh, of the Brooklyns, was especially hard on the boys and one time made a circle of the bases before the ball was returned. There were some plays made that set the rooters in a high state of glee and all in all they got their money's worth.

The two teams were made up as follows: Plainfield—Young, ss; McCabe, 2 and 3b; Daly, 1b; Townley, 2b; Keeffe, p, Jaeger, 3b and c; Cline, lf; Larew, cf; Kesselring, rf. Brooklyn—Stamm, ss; Kavanagh, 3b; Ward, p; Alphonsus, c; Hendricks, 1b; DuFlon, 2b; Weber, lf; Hedermann, rf; Atwood, c. "Doc" Doyle officiated as umpire and so far as known made no enemies.

Following the game, victors and vanquished adjourned to the Waldorf Hotel, where Plainfield acted as host for the visitors. An excellent supper was served and at its conclusion there were songs and speeches galore. Among those who lifted their voices in vocal melody were City Judge William N. Runyon, John Todd and Frank McCabe. Chief Doane, Captain Townley and other Plainfielders made addresses and Brooklyn response was undertaken by Captain DuFlon, who accepted Captain Townley's challenge. It is probable that the teams will meet again in the near future over in Brooklyn.

HE WANTS $10,000 DAMAGES

GEORGE KEIDELING BRINGS SUIT AGAINST CENTRAL RAILROAD.

George Keideling, who lives at the corner of Washington and Fourth streets, has brought suit against the Central Railroad of New Jersey for injuries received by him while boarding a train at the New York Farms Street station on November 14. His claim is for $10,000 damages.

On the day mentioned, Mr. Keideling was in the act of boarding the train for Jersey City at the Ferry Street station when the train started, throwing him violently. His jaw and nose were broken and he was seriously injured about the head and face, for in some manner, he slipped through the station platform railing and fell nearly thirty feet to the road beneath. Internal injuries rendered his condition serious for a time and he underwent a long siege of illness.

The matter will come up at the State Supreme Court at Trenton in two weeks' time. William Newcorn, Esq., represents Mr. Keideling.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Rushmore, of West Seventh street, are spending the summer in New York.

Among the Plainfielders at the St. Louis Exposition is Edward Tomlinson, of East Seventh street.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 24.

Topic.—How to break down the spirit of caste.—Jas. ii, 1-5; Matt. xxiii, 1-12.

If we were asked the question, "Where does the caste system prevail to the greatest extent and to the greatest detriment to human life?" we would respond, "In India." The answer would be correct. The system of caste or of the separation of the people into classes with impassable gulfs between them has been the curse of India for centuries. Here the system of caste has reached its highest development, to the greatest detriment of the people, socially, politically and industrially. Next to India the caste system has been more thoroughly developed in countries where despotic and monarchical forms of government have existed and do still exist. But let us thank God that the system of caste is being gradually undermined. In England, Germany and France the aristocratic classes are being leveled down, while the common people are being leveled up, with the result that class distinctions are less and less marked and influential. And even in India there are not wanting signs that the system of caste is being strongly affected by English rule and the gospel of Christ. God speed the day when it shall fall like a house built of sand under the storm of God's wrath.

In America we would expect to see no class system, but, alas, even here, we have the spirit of caste, if not a developed caste system. How often we hear the expression "the classes and the masses," "the capitalists and the laborers," as if they were separate and distinct classes of people. But the saving grace of this fact in our land is the constant exchange of places. One day a man may belong to the masses and the next day to the classes and before many days he may be a laborer, the next a capitalist and vice versa. The spirit of industrial caste will not be very ruinous as long as such changes are possible. But we also have a social caste spirit. "Our set" is a common phrase.

But probably the worst form of the caste spirit in our land is the financial one. The rich man is looked upon as a demigod, while the poor man is shown into a back seat, even in our churches. Jesus came out against it, and so should we. What is more disgusting than to see a man who is ignorant, coarse and sometimes even vulgar wielding undue influence in church, state and society simply because he has been successful in life in the line of money or because by some hook or crook he has suddenly grown rich? Not that a man, simply because he has money, should have no place in the affairs of life, but only his just place. Possessing the same amount of ordinary brains, ability and great achievements in the pursuits of life where money is not a reward for service? It should not, but it has grown in doing so until today it would be a dangerous and threatening element in our national life were it not for two other factors that need to be considered—(1) God and (2) the middle classes. As long as the Lord is our God and we continue to have a large and healthy middle class we need fear no evil, though Mammon be the ruling god of so many who cringe and cower before the golden calf even in greater humiliation than did the ancient Israelites.

How many this spirit of caste in our land be broken down? Two methods are suggested. (1) The people should not unduly exalt men who occupy important positions or those who are rich. The church, the state and society would be better off if a man, regardless of whether he is rich or poor or in high or low position. God is no respecter of persons. Why should we be? (2) Those who for the time occupy high place or possess great wealth should remember that they are their brother, "in Christ," and that with God as their common Father all men are brethren. The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man should make it impossible for any man to take advantage of his position in life to impose upon his fellow men, to degrade and humiliate them to suit his whims and purposes. The man who does so will find that God will take a part in the game before it is finished.

BIBLE READINGS.

Lev. xix, 15; Deut. i, 17; xvi, 19; Prov. xxiv, 23; Matt. vi, 24; Luke xv, 11-22; xvi, 19-31; John xiii, 15, 16; xvii, 20, 21.

Four Ideals.

There are four ideals which I know we all have before us in the work of our Endeavor society. One is that we should be centers of Bible study and that each member should be an intelligent and growing Bible student. The second is that we should be centers of personal work so that each member should be active individually in winning others to Christ. The third is that we should be schools of Christian giving and that each member should become a systematic proportionate and joyful giver. And the fourth is that we should be centers of missionary interest and activity from which many missionaries would go out to the home and foreign fields and many workers develop missionary interest in the home church.—Robert E. Speer.

In Turkey.

Turkey has seventy-five societies, in spite of Turkish oppression, which will not allow constitutions to be signed, badges to be worn or even the word "society" to be used. The Canavera society was obliged at one time to burn its records.—Irish Endeavorer.

In Many Tongues.

The Christian Endeavor pledge has been translated and printed in more than fifty languages to the extent of more than fifty millions of copies.

JAPAN HONORS FUKUSHIMA.

He Is the Man Who Made All the War Plans for the Mikado's Victorious Armies.

Tokio (Japan) Special.

Maj. Gen. Fukushima is known as "the brains of the army" in Japan.

There are many other "honorably illustrious" men of brains on the mikado's staff, but none is quite so prolific of ideas as is Gen. Fukushima. In addition to his gifts of generalship, he has rare ability as a poet, and his contributions to his country's literature are honored by all Japanese as the highest expression of patriotism.

On leaving for the seat of war, every man in the mikado's army received a soldier's pocket book, containing instructions in military rules, the tenets of the Japanese religion, which reserves a special paradise for martyrs to their country's honor—and last, but not least, a war anthem written by Gen. Fukushima. The following translation of the last verse is fairly accurate:

MAJ. GEN. FUKUSHIMA.
(Known Throughout Japan as the "Brains of the Army.")

Break the ramparts of Port Arthur,
Tear the walls of Harbin down!
On the heights of Ural mountains
Float the banner of the sun,
Then unto our sovereign's glory
Praises sound and never cease,
While our hearts unite, rejoicing
In the great and world-wide peace.

Gen. Fukushima made a famous expedition across Siberia and Manchuria 12 years ago on a secret errand for the emperor, riding 6,000 miles alone on horseback, in the depth of winter. Almost insuperable difficulties attended the journey—the roads were impassable and the cold intense. Several times he was captured by bands of lawbreakers, who on one occasion tortured him with fire to force a revelation of the emperor's affairs.

It is agreeable to learn that his indomitable will overcame all obstacles, and that his commission was triumphantly performed. He was rewarded by being made inspector general of war, which position he held during the struggle between China and Japan, directing the campaign from Tokio.

Gen. Fukushima is one of the richest nobles in the empire, his ancestral estates being located in the peaceful inland province of Shinshiu, which is famous for its silk industries.

MOTHER JONES IN CHICAGO

Noted Woman Labor Agitator Thinks the Striking Miners in Colorado Are Heroes.

Chicago Special.

"Mother" Mary Jones, who was the central figure at a recent meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, has by her work for the trades union cause gained the name of "the stormy petrel of the labor movement." She was born in Cork, Ireland, 58 years ago, and immigrated to Canada when a girl. She taught school in the Dominion and in this country. The

(Familiarly Known as the Stormy Petrel of the Labor World.)

Kearney "sand lot" agitation in California provided her first experience in the labor movement. She became one of the most active members of the Knights of Labor, and is now associated with the social democracy. Her efforts on behalf of the United Mine Workers are a recent history. She is an orator and debater.

She spoke at length to the Chicago federationists on behalf of the striking miners of Colorado, taking, as might be supposed, a radical stand.

"You do not seem to be awake to the great issues before you," said Mrs. Jones. "If the miners of Colorado are coerced and suppressed by the militia you will soon receive the same treatment from the militia of this state. We are facing a crisis and we may as well meet it now as any other time. The miners in Colorado are fighting your battles as well as their own and should receive your support."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 24: "The Spirit of Caste."—Jas. ii, 1-5; Matt. xxiii, 8-12.
Words and Plenty.

Differences among men in certain particulars are inevitable. Features and various physical peculiarities divide the races from each other in appearance. Languages and mental habits raise barriers. Customs of many kinds and religious beliefs in particular are the fruitful sources of divisions and enmities.

Distinctions of wealth, parentage and training set boundaries hard to get over and determine in a harmful way many of the affairs of life.

The church of Jesus Christ is based on the brotherhood of all men as children of a common Father. All men are therefore to be held in loving regard and treated as members of the one family. This does not reduce all to a dead level of uniformity without scope for the exercise of personal tastes and selective affinities, but it does put the ban on all enmity and party antagonism except against the positively evil things.

Yet what a spectacle appears when we look at society and even the Christian church! There are many things spoken of in the Epistle of James as wrong which are so common in many churches as to provoke little comment.

If there is any one thing that is repeated assertion that the church has lost its hold on the masses the cause of this alienation on the part of the common folk may be due in part to the all too prevalent rulership of the rich in the church. Of Wesley it is said to have remarked at one time, "Woe to Methodism when she comes to depend on rich men!" He might as well have said woe to any church which depends on the rich.

The possession of wealth is no evidence of piety, and the church has no place for those not pious except as seekers after piety. We do not need to be rich, but we do need to be good.

No spirit of caste should be allowed to creep in. It makes no difference on what the distinctions are based. Intellectual culture, real or fancied, never raises one an iota above his fellows in the sight of God and should bring no pre-eminence in the church on earth. No heresy is so fatal to devotion as a sense of superiority to one's fellow Christians.

The spirit of caste has no redeeming feature of excellence. It is evil and wholly evil. It is rooted in pride, blossoms into arrogance and bears the bitter fruit of envy and malice. It should have no tolerance. Love the brotherhood; in honor prefer one another; keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

Spiritual Development.

How very distinct it is that the gospel is not only an instrument of salvation, but also of spiritual growth. Sin is not the only enemy Christians have as well. We are to leave the things that are behind—the milk diet—and get on and in advancing acquire an appetite for the stronger meat of the word. It is even more a peril than an advantage to come into the church without decided intention of growing. Alas, that there should be so much disposition to be shy of any marked advance, of anything really strong and beautiful in Christian character and life! How prone the average Christian is to limit the grace of God and to take this development of the spiritual being out of the Lord's hands! Men and women of immense struggle become strong in the grace of Jesus Christ. That is our effort, but the mastery does not come in that way. Christian growth is not to be a struggle any more than growth is to be a struggle in the tree and its sense of destiny. It is rather to be a willing, prayerful submission to God's own method, and then the growth follows as bud and blossom in springtime.—Lutheran Observer.

Intercessory Prayer.

Let him who has been persecuted, slandered and spitefully used by any one pray for his enemy. The very unpleasantness of the suggestion ought to be a revelation of the need and use to those Christians who nurse their injuries, talking of forgiveness without good will. He who cannot forgive his enemies in the sense of thinking less of his injury than of their good, in the sense of desiring with a yearning, active, helpful love to see them delivered from their wrong disposition, from the guile of sin or from the error which has led to injustice, is not a Christian. Till he learns to forgive in this sense he is bondage to hate, which is hell. It is perfectly safe to say no one learns and acquires this grace of forgiveness except in prayer for his enemies, for he cannot acquire it of himself, but of God only.—Helper.

Grow.

There is not enough breadth in many lives. We ought to grow in height, reaching up to the fullness of the stature of Christ. We ought to grow in the outreach of our lives. We ought to know more of God and of heavenly things tomorrow than we do today. We are told that if we follow on we shall know, that if we do the little portion of the will of God we understand we shall be led on to see and know more of that will. We ought to grow in love also, becoming more patient, more gentle, more thoughtful, more unselfish day by day, extending the reach of our unselfishness and helpfulness.

Peace of Mind.

Men feel and know that pain is a fact, although it is unseen. They need to learn that peace of mind is a fact, and comes by a well ordered soul; that repentance is a fact, and brings us near to God; that elevated sentiment is a fact, and raises us into a higher society than earth; that sober faith is a fact, and gilds the horizon of our being with a heavenly glory.—Starr King.

JERSEY'S SHOW AT FAIR

STATE'S EXHIBITS OF MINERAL PRODUCTS ATTRACT MUCH ATTENTION.

The most striking feature in the Mines and Metallurgy building at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis is the exact reproduction of the skeleton of one of those prehistoric monsters, half fish and half fowl, which inhabited the earth centuries ago.

The cretaceous dinosaur from a distance, at first glance, strikes one as the skeleton of an elephant. It measures forty feet from the tip of the tail to the tip of the mouth. It was discovered at Merchantville, Camden County, N. J. The reproduction of the skeleton is in plaster-paris tinted the natural color, which approaches that of smoked ivory.

The work of Henry B. Kummel, State geologist of New Jersey, is in evidence here. Mr. Kummel has constructed a relief map of the State in copper. It is eight by sixteen feet in size. Probably no map of the State has ever been made that indicates its topography so well as this. The mountains, valleys, rivers, lakes and canals of the State are indicated in a scientific and accurate manner. There is also a complete set of topographical maps of the State arranged in a cabinet so that when the door is open each one will swing outward. These maps were prepared by the New Jersey Geological Survey.

There is also a petrological microscope machine which was designed in the office of the New Jersey Geological Survey. It shows sixty-five specimens from the State, such as sandstone, gneisses, granites, trap, conglomerates and diabase, in their different varieties.

Jerseymen who have visited there express surprise that the State contains such a variety of stone as shown by the specimens on exhibition. The State Geological Survey first secured the chips or slices of the different varieties to be shown. The next step was the grinding and polishing.

After being cemented to a glass plate the rock chip is again ground on the revolving disk, forming a surface parallel to the first one, the slice becoming thinner and thinner until the desired transparency has been secured. The thin section is then immersed in turpentine and carefully heated, when the section may be transferred to a thin glass, imbedded in the balsam and a revolving cover glass placed above it. It is then ready for misercoscopical examination.

In addition to these exhibits in the building of Mines and Machinery is a fine display of the clay and sand products which add so materially to New Jersey's wealth. It is shown that the conversion of these natural products, with which the State is so abundantly endowed, gives employment to many thousands of workmen.

Near the New Jersey geological exhibit a great New York jewelry house has an attractive array of gems and precious stones which are deposited at night in a vault of manganese steel made in Plainfield. This particular manganese is a product of Morris County, N. J. It is the hardest and toughest steel compound that has ever been discovered. The manganese is added to the steel and, unlike other steel, it is not worked with the drill, lathe and planer, but has to be ground and shaped by emery wheels, an exceedingly slow process.

New Jersey has a wonderful display of brick terra cotta and fancy brick. There is an exhibit from Atlantic City which is attracting much attention. It is made from the ordinary sand from the seashore and New Jersey has limitless quantities of this sand extending along the coast line from Cape May to Staten Island. It is manufactured by secret process, which may be said to be one of the newest industries of the State.

The sand brick is manufactured at two factories in the State at the present time, one of them being Winslow Junction and the other at May's Landing. The brick is so hard and close grained that it might be more properly called artificial stone, in fact, it can be cut and carved with chisel and mead, these leading itself to much more artistic and decorative effects than can be obtained by means of molds and kilns.

Pills Not Likely to Recover.

John Dills, the employe of the Public Service Corporation, who fell off a car on East Front street, Wednesday, July 13, fracturing his skull, remains in the same critical condition. His chances for recovery are not considered good.

—G. H. Hudson, of West Seventh street, recently purchased a Hamiltonian mare. The animal was bred at Lyon's stock farm.

—President E. S. Thomas, of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, will leave for Europe, this month. He will be away about six weeks.

—Hudson Kitchell, an employe of the Crescent Reckoning Works, has left town for the present. He expects to secure a position elsewhere.

FOXY GAME PLAYED ON PROPERTY OWNERS

West End Avenue Residents Claim to be Victims of a Clever Land Deal.

BUY IN THE TRACT

GROUND IN RESIDENTIAL SECTION ADVERTISED AS FACTORY SITE.

Rather Than Have Their Own Properties Depreciate in Value It Is Said They Secure Control of Adjacent Land—No Danger Now.

Several well-known residents of West End avenue and owners of property on that thoroughfare have recently awoke to the realization that a short time ago they were made the victims of a very clever land deal. By means of an innocent advertisement inserted in a daily paper they were led to believe that their quiet precincts were to be invaded by factories which would naturally tend to depreciate the value of their homes. The more they became convinced this was to be done the more they determined to offset it and as a result they did just what was wanted of them—they banded together and secured control of the property They chuckled quietly and confided to friends that they had effected a clever move but the fellow owner of the other sixty winked one eye and said nothing.

The land in question was advertised for sale and a small note suggested that it would be an excellent location for factory buildings. As there are many handsome residences nearby the aristocratic owners realised the only way to prevent its sale for such a purpose was to buy it themselves and this they decided to do. The price placed upon it was very fancy but spurred on by the thought of ugly brick buildings and tall chimneys the residents soon came to terms with the owner. The money was paid over and to make doubly sure that no manufacturing plants would locate in that vicinity work was commenced on the erection of good-sized dwellings.

Now that the facts are out, the buyers are inclined to be a little chagrined but they are partially compensated for their over-zealousness by the knowledge that West End avenue is practically safe from factory invasion.

HIS SISTER-IN-LAW MUST PAY

BENJAMIN RUCKMAN WINS SUM CLAIMED FOR CARRYING MAIL.

Benjamin Ruckman, who brought suit against his sister-in-law, Mrs. Sarah Jane Ruckman, for the sum of $64.33, won his claim at Justice Huff's court Thursday afternoon. On the death of his brother, who was employed by the postoffice as mail carrier to Gallia and Watchung, Mr. Ruckman assumed the duties until the appointment of a successor, carrying the mail during the months of October, November and December.

The amount sued for is his wages for this work. Decision was rendered in his favor, but bond was put up for the appeal of the case at Elizabeth at the fall term of court. Coddington & Swackhamer represented the plaintiff and Hetfield & Hetfield the defendant.

INNOVATION AT TRINITY

Church Consistory Orders Individual Communion Cups at a Special Meeting.

In the entire membership of Trinity Reformed church only three persons signified any objection to the introduction of an individual communion service, the result of a canvas of the congregation on the question being held before the consistory Thursday by the committee appointed to investigate the subject. This committee was composed of three members of the consistory and three members of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, an auxiliary of the church. Their work was done systematically and an opportunity given every member of the church to express his personal views.

As there are approximately 600 members in the congregation, the committee did not hesitate to be direct and an order be placed at once for a suitable service of individual cups. The design has already been selected and the cost will be borne by the Ladies' Christian Work Society.

It is announced the individual cups will be used for the first time at the communion service in October and the consistory is confident that the innovation will prove very satisfactory to the congregation.

—West Front street, in the vicinity of Grant avenue, somewhat damaged by the recent heavy rains, will soon be repaired by Street Commissioner Garrett.

PROBATION SYSTEM WORKS WELL IN UNION

Much Good Accomplished in County Since Passage of Probation and Juvenile Act.

SOME STATISTICS GIVEN

MRS. EMILY E. WILLIAMSON AS PROBATION OFFICER.

Capt. Irwin Rendering Assistance—Offenders Are Brought Before Judge Vail—Provisions of the Laws.

Since the passing of the probation act by the New Jersey Legislature and its approval on March 23, 1900, great things have been accomplished. Mrs. Emily E. Williamson and her assistant, Captain Charles W. Irwin, since Mrs. Williamson's appointment as Union county's probation officer in 1903, have done a great deal for the betterment of the criminal branches of society in Elizabeth and in the entire county.

The probation system in New Jersey is too well known by this time to need much explanation. The act passed in 1900, chapter 102 of the State laws, providing for a probation officer to take prisoners who have some chance of reform and improvement into his charge and thereafter to keep a vigilant eye on him, see that he reports regularly and leads a proper, upright life, was amended on April 8, 1903, by a supplement which permits justices of the peace and police magistrates to probate prisoners.

The law provides a probationary term of three years for each prisoner placed in the probation officer's care. At the same time the officer is empowered to discharge probationers for good conduct.

Since February, 1903, thirty-six probationers have been discharged by Mrs. Williamson. These include twenty-one from the city court and fifteen from the county court.

The county offenders handed over by Judge Vail have been released under suspended sentence for breaking and entering, 4; embezzlement, 1; assault and battery, 3; larceny, 7. These have been five from Plainfield; Rahway, 1; New Brunswick, 1; Hartford, Conn., 1; Elizabeth, 5; West Orange, 1.

Those thirty-six discharged probationers have served probationary terms from 1902 to 1904 in nearly all cases. Three served from 1902 to 1903. All depended on good behavior.

All probationers discharged are now doing well, and Mrs. Williamson and Captain Irwin frequently receive voluntary letters from them. One of the former probationers is clerk in the Allen House in Hartford, Conn. Another secured a position as clerk on one of the Standard Oil Company's sailing vessels, and has cruised about the world for a year and a half. Still another is a clerk in a St. Louis hotel and now a respectable citizen. There is no doubt that the system has done great good.

The recent juvenile court act, approved by the Legislature April 8, 1903, and labeled chapter 219, has increased the functions of the probation officer. This law provides that youthful prisoners under 16 years of age charged with any offense except murder, manslaughter, disorderly conduct, or habitual vagrancy and incorrigibility, shall be paroled in the charge of the probation officer and later tried by the county judge in a juvenile court, sessions of which shall be held once a month. Two sessions of this court have already been held in Elizabeth by Judge Vail.

MR. HALL A STEEL EXPERT

JOHN HOWE HALL TO ENTER EMPLOY OF BETHLEHEM STEEL COMPANY.

John Howe Hall, of Madison avenue, who received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard University at the recent commencement, will shortly enter the employ of the Bethlehem Steel Company, at Bethlehem, Pa., as one of its experts.

Mr. Hall is an authority on steel, having made it an especial study, and the result of some of his researches will be published shortly. He stood at the head of his class this year and was awarded its Townsend scholarship, making the third he has won in three successive years.

Mr. Hall is a son of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hall, of Madison avenue.

Co. K Home Again.

The Plainfield members of Co. K reached home Saturday night at 9 o'clock in a special train. All were in good condition and report having had a fine week in camp. As the company marched through town great applause was given.

Miss Beerbower, of Chatham, who has been visiting relatives here, has returned home.

PYTHIAN KNIGHTS HAD A JOLLY TIME

Friendship Lodge, of New Brunswick, the Guest of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74.

GAVE MINSTRELSY

CHANCELLOR COMMANDER PHILIP JAHN WAS MASTER OF CEREMONIES.

Alex. Muir Acted as Interlocutor and City Judge Runyon Was Accompanist — Committee in Charge.

In honor of a visitation of Friendship Lodge, No. 30, of New Brunswick, Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, turned out en masse last Friday, and accorded their brethren from the "banks of the Raritan" a royal welcome. The visitors came by special trolley and after they had received greetings in the lodge room from Chancellor Commander Philip Jahn all other matters were dispensed with to make way for the entertainment.

The latter comprised a complete first part minstrel show with the participants in costume. The troupe made a big "hit" as it was primed with jokes and songs adapted to thy occasion and for an hour the large audience was kept laughing. Otis Judge Runyon looked after the "orchestra" accompaniment and Alex. Muir acted as interlocutor. The end men and chorus consisted of M. D. Sweeney, William L. Halbert, John H. Coee, Elmer D. Cutting, George H. Coee, William Feiring, Thomas M. Muir and H. C. Firstbrook.

Soon after the finale refreshments were served and during their disposal addresses were made by leading members of Perseverance and Friendship and Judge Runyon gave several vocal selections that were enthusiastically applauded. The New Brunswickers started for home shortly before midnight.

The affair was arranged and in charge of a committee comprised of Chancellor Commander Philip Jahn, Asa D. Pope, R. C. Firstbrook and Elmer D. Cutting.

Mr. Murray Merited Honor.

John W. Murray, Jr., of Plainfield, has been reappointed by Governor Murphy as one of the Republican members of the County Board of Elections and Registry. He was recommended by Hamilton F. Kean, and the County Republican Committee, with the further endorsement of ex-Senator Stokes. The honor was well merited by Mr. Murray, who has proved himself a most competent and faithful member of this important department of public service. The intelligence and accuracy with which he has performed his services has given him a reputation among those who have charge of the machinery and conduct of elections that extends beyond the county.—Elizabeth Daily Journal.

Mrs. Havens a Guest.

At a luncheon given Saturday by Mrs. Edwin A. Bedell, of Albany, in honor of Mrs. Odell, wife of Governor Odell, among the invited guests was Mrs. Havens, of Plainfield. The luncheon was given at Mrs. Bedell's country home, Cozy Corner, Kinderhook, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thom, of Summit avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jennie May Davenport to Charles Hollberge, of Inwood, L. I. The wedding will take place in the fall.

George L. Howard and family, of Mercer avenue, are sojourning at Southfield, Mass.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT BEGINS ON AUG. 15

Winfield Scott Post to be Represented at Great Gathering of Civil War Veterans.

PROGRAMME IN DETAIL

PARADE OF 25,000 OLD SOLDIERS TO BE A FEATURE.

Camp Fire and Trooping of Colors—River Carnival as An Attraction—Battleships and Historic Places to be Visited.

The programme of the week of August 15 next, as laid out for the entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic at the National encampment to be held in Boston, Mass., has been announced. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, of this city, will probably appoint a delegation at its next meeting.

The usual parade of the ex-prisoners of war, naval brigade, naval jackies and marines will take place on Monday. On Monday evening the Women's Relief Corps will given a grand reception at the Hotel Vendome to the commander-in-chief. Tuesday it is expected to have in line 25,000 to 30,000 veterans of the Civil War.

On Tuesday evening there will be held, in Mechanics' Building, a monster campfire, a unique feature of which will be the trooping of the colors, a spectacle which, in the language of the lamented Commander-in-Chief Shaw, of New York, was the grandest sight his eyes had rested upon since the war. Wednesday the convention opens, at the close of which the entire delegation from all parts of the United States, together with invited guests, will be invited to go to Waltham and witness one of the handsomest spectacles ever seen upon the water, which is called a "river carnival," gotten up with much splendor as to design of floats and individual exhibits, all surrounded by an electrical display. Thursday, August 18, the convention will continue its sessions.

Thursday evening, August 18, will be presented a most unique electrical parade. It will be a parade of illuminated floats proceedings over the surface railroads, representing sixteen important and principal events of the country. Friday, August 19, the entertainment committee offers a fish dinner on the North Shore, Swan Point. On Thursday, the 18th, from 10 a. m. to 7 p. m., the Daughters of Veterans will keep open house at the Royal House at Medford, an old colonial mansion built in 1690, with its colonial furniture still intact. This place was occupied by General Stark as headquarters in 1775, and is one of the finest colonial houses in Massachusetts.

Saturday, August 20, steamers will be provided to take visiting delegations to view the battleships on the bay and for a beautiful sail along the South Shore.

Why Connections Are Ordered.

Some complaints have been made about the notices received by property owners from the Board of Health to make sewer connections, but it is explained that the ordinance requires such connections to be made and notices are sent out by the Board from time to time, so that eventually all buildings fronting on streets in which sewers are provided will be connected, and all vaults and cesspools will be abolished. The Board is now giving its attention to East Third street.

Suit on a Beer Bill.

Summons have been issued from Justice Hand's court in the contract case of The Rising Sun Brewing Co. against Morris Furhman. A hearing will be given Monday morning.

GORMAN CHAIRMAN.

Marylander Asked to Manage Democratic Campaign.

TO VISIT ROSEMOUNT WITH DAVIS

Latest Doings at Esopus—Joint Notification Now Thought Unlikely. Iowa Democrats Send Congratulations.

ESOPUS, N. Y., July 20.—United States Senator Arthur Pue Gorman of Maryland has been asked to become chairman of the Democratic national committee and has been invited by Judge Parker to come to Rosemount today with former Senator Davis, the vice presidential candidate, and until late it was taken for granted that he would come. The following telegram from him at New York has been given out here: "Regret that it will be impossible for me to accompany Senator Davis today. Will afford me pleasure later on."

The heat here was intense again and affected everybody and everything. Judge Parker had his morning swim, but did not take his usual horseback ride. His only absence from the house was during a walk in the field across the road from the gate where the haymakers were forking up a load behind the ox team.

The steam yacht Queen City brought up a party of the judge's Democratic admirers from Poughkeepsie. He showed them about the place, but the visit was entirely informal. The party included former Mayor Ellsworth and Edward L. Perkins, chairman of the Democratic county committee.

Mr. Sheehan has not returned home yet, but is expected today, very likely with Senator Davis. It was understood here that more conferences were to be held in New York.

The expected coming of Senator Davis brings up again the talk of a joint notification, but there is really very little reason to suppose any such thing likely. Judge Parker has at no time expressed any but a casual interest in the proposition and naturally would *not feel that the initiative could prop*erly come from him in any case.

It was said here that National Committeeman Taggart was expected in New York, but nothing definite could be learned here, and apparently there is no present expectation of his coming to Rosemount.

The following telegram was received from the Iowa Democratic state convention at Iowa City and signed H. J. Stiger as chairman:

"Iowa Democrats in state convention assembled congratulate you and the nation on your nomination and the prospects of your election. We wish you godspeed."

Judge Parker sent the following reply:

"I beg you to assure the convention over which you preside that its message of congratulations and good wishes is very greatly appreciated."

Armor Makers Meet.

LONDON, July 20.—Representatives of all the leading armor making firms of the world have met in conference here. The Krupp company, the Bethlehem (Pa.) Steel company, the Carnegie Steel company, Charles Cammell & Co. of Birmingham and many European inventors were represented. Charles M. Schwab was among those present. The question under discussion was the rearrangement of royalties, etc., rendered necessary by the Krupp company's latest improvement upon a patent armor process for which the Krupps under an agreement with various firms are already securing royalties. No new scale was determined upon, but that a friendly interchange of views led to the belief that an arrangement would be concluded within a few weeks. Mr. Schwab will proceed to the Krupp works at Essen, Prussia, to continue the discussion in behalf of his American interests.

Roosevelt Gets a Kamesake.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., July 20.—Mr. and Mrs. I. J. White of this city are in receipt of a letter from President Roosevelt through Secretary Loeb on the birth of their twelfth child, a son, on the 6th inst. All the children are alive and in good health. President Roosevelt's letter was in reply to a letter apprising him of the birth of a twelfth child to the couple. The president's letter reads as follows: "Your letter of the 7th inst. has been received, and I beg to thank you in the president's behalf for writing. May I ask you to be good enough to extend to Mr. and Mrs. White the president's congratulations and best wishes for themselves and the members of their family." The boy probably will be named Thomas Theodore White.

A New Pacific Cable.

COLOGNE, July 20.—A company has been formed here with a capital of $1,750,000, subsidized by the German and Dutch governments, to lay a cable to connect with the Dutch settlement on the island of Celebes, through the island of Yap, in the Pelews group, and from Shanghai to Cavite, where it will link the Commercial Cable company's Pacific cable.

Racing at Monongahela.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., July 20.—Over 3,000 people attended the opening day of the Monongahela Driving park races. In the 2:35 pace Dynamite won by taking the third, fourth and fifth heats. Best time, 2:19¼. Elethia took the first and second heats. Best time, 2:19¾. Spinx R. and Sam Jones finished third and fourth respectively. Cora Direct won the 2:27 trot in straight heats. Best time, 2:26¾. Pat T. was second, Major Vance third and Kaolna fourth. Hakes Lee won the 2:20 pace in straight heats. Best time, 2:17¼. Alice Forsythe was second, Mount Joy Boy third and Iote fourth.

Otto Stiefel at World's Fair Track.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—Otto Stiefel, at 10 to 1, won the fair grounds' feature, covering the six furlongs in 1:14 flat and winning handily by five lengths from Rebo, who was two lengths in front of Folies Bergere. Otto Stiefel and Folies Bergere were over all but left when the barrier went up. The three ran up to and by their field shortly after turning for home, finishing in the order in which they got away from the post. Thane, after acting badly at the post in the 2d race, won after a hard drive with Byron Rose.

McGovern and Neil to Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—The six round bout between Hughey McGovern and Frankie Neil, the world's bantamweight champion, which had been arranged at the Broad Street Park, but which had to be conceied owing to Mayor Harrison's order that no boxing contests would hereafter be permitted in that city, will be held in Philadelphia next week. It was definitely closed here by Manager McGuigan of the National Athletic club for a six round bout at that clubhouse on Wednesday night, July 27.

The Mist at Hawthorne.

CHICAGO, July 20. — The feature event at Hawthorne, a five furlong dash for two-year-olds, was won in a hard drive by The Mist. Flaxman was second, two lengths in front of Janeta, a 100 to 1 shot. The Mist got off flying, but barely lasted and won only by a short head. Flaxman was gaining at every stride and would have taken the lead in a few more jumps. The weather was clear and hot and the track fast.

Sunshine Stakes For Pasadena.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The Sunshine stakes, the feature of the card at Brighton beach, was won by the 5 to 1 shot Pasadena. The fight for the place was very exciting, St. Bellane, Austin Allen and Martha Gorman finishing heads apart in the order named. Monte Carlo, in the first race, was played down from 20 to 10 to 1 and won easily.

Shot Man and Wife.

SPARTA, Ga., July 20.—Mr. John Kimbrough of Shoulder, which is about twelve miles east of this place, shot and perhaps fatally wounded Jere Lawrence and his wife. Kimbrough had serious trouble with Lawrence and was in the act of shooting him when Lawrence's wife ran between them and received the wounds which will cause death. Lawrence himself received a very severe wound in the body, but the wound is not regarded as fatal. Lawrence was the tenant of Kimbrough, and the shooting was the result of some difficulty between them.

Thirty Dwellings Destroyed.

RHINELANDER, Wis., July 20.—Fire here has destroyed thirty dwellings, several big lumber yards and one sawmill. The wind carried the fire beyond the control of the firemen, and the entire city was threatened, but the wind suddenly changed, and the town was saved. The fire department was helpless in the face of the heavy flames. The loss is estimated to be nearly $1,000,000.

Prostrated by Heat.

CLINTON, Mass., July 20.—Martin Nacey, a carpenter, aged fifty-two years, who has lived in Clinton nearly all his life, was prostrated by the heat. He had worked out of doors all day and consumed large quantities of ice water.

Grand Exalted Ruler Elected.

CINCINNATI, O., July 20.—W. J. O'Brien, Jr., of Baltimore, was elected grand exalted ruler of the Elks by a majority of 370 votes.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR CHURCH ENLARGEMENT

Committee of Congregational Church Ready to Approve Designs for Improvement.

MORE ACCOMMODATIONS

ARCHITECT KARR PREPARES TWO SETS OF PLANS.

When Approved by Committee, Design Will be Submitted to Congregation for Action—May Require Eighteen Months Work.

Arrangements have practically been completed by the building committee of the Congregational church to formally adopt plans for the alteration and enlargement of the present structure, previous to submitting them to the congregation. Acting under instruction, Architect Karr has prepared two sets of plans and these will be gone over next week. In the main they call for the same work only some portions are not as elaborate in one as the other and makes a difference in the cost.

The plans call for the enlargment of the seating capacity, the beautifying of the front with a tower and large, open vestibule and the changing about of the interior. At present the pulpit is on the east side of the building but it will be changed to the north side. On its left will be a large room to be used for classes and as a club room for younger members of the congregation. The seating capacity will be almost doubled and there will be many accommodations that are now lacking.

With the approval of the plans by the building committee, a church meeting will be called and the contract for the work will be awarded. It is possible the preliminaries and actual construction will require eighteen months.

TROLLEY CAR IN FLAMES

SEVERAL PASSENGERS INJURED IN ACCIDENT NEAR PICTON.

A load of passengers on a trolley car bound from Rahway to Westfield Saturday night, was thrown into a panic by an accident near Picton. Contact with a live wire which fell across it, enveloped the car in flames and the occupants jumped in every direction. Several received slight burns and many bruises, but none would not be learned were hurt by throwing themselves off.

The headlight of the car received a heavy charge which wrenched it from its fastenings and was thrown many feet into a field.

MISS ROBERTA THOM WEDDED

MARRIED TO GEORGE L. BIRD, OF WEST SECOND STREET, ON JUNE 5.

To the great surprise of their parents and many friends, Miss Roberta Thom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Thom, of Summit avenue, and George L. Bird, of West Second street, yesterday announced that they had been married. The ceremony was performed in the Epiphany Baptist church, Madison avenue and Sixty-fourth street, New York, June 5, by Rev. Howard L. Jones. There were no Plainfield witnesses and although the young people had previously told of their engagement, they decided to keep the fact of the marriage a secret. They first made it known to their relatives Sunday.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bird are very well known in the city, having been prominent in social affairs during the past two seasons. The former is an employe of the New Jersey Central in the civil engineering department. Mrs. Bird has been one of the operators at the local telephone exchange but resigned her position Saturday.

MRS. PITTENGER DEAD.

Passed Away at Her Home in the Borough After Long Illness.

Mrs. Sarah B. Pittenger, a well known resident of the borough, died at her home on Grandview avenue, Sunday. She was sixty-four years old and has been ill a long time. A son and daughter survive her.

Funeral services over the remains were held from her late home Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock and from the Stockton Baptist church, near Flemington, yesterday afternoon at 2:30. Interment was made in Rosemont cemetery, Hunterdon county.

Miss Mabel Gano, of Grove street, is spending two weeks at Asbury Park, and upon her return she will go to Annandale, Hunterdon county, for the rest of the summer.

SCHEME TO AVERAGE PHYSICAL MEASUREMENT

Director C. E. A. Heywood to Procure Statistics Here to be Used in Making Chart.

GUIDE FOR EXERCISE

ALL ASSOCIATIONS IN UNITED STATES AND CANADA WORKING ON SCHEME.

Report of Committee, of Which Mr. Heywood is a Member, to be Made in August—How Work is Being Done.

During the next two weeks, Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood, of the Y. M. C. A., expects to take the physical measurement of some thirty or forty members of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium classes for statistic purposes. This measuring will be done in accordance with a plan of the committee of physical directors in Y. M. C. A. gymnasiums all over the United States and in Canada to secure average statistics which shall be a guide to them in prescribing physical exercises in the gymnasiums.

In order to make accurate physical developments charts for average girths and lung capacity of a man for each year of life between the ages of sixteen and thirty-five years of age, this committee, of which Mr. Heywood has been appointed a member, wishes to receive the girth measurements of one thousand men at each age between sixteen and thirty-five. Accordingly, the Y. M. C. A. physical directors all over the country have been asked to contribute measurements of young men between those ages to be a guide to the committee in preparing the charts.

Physical Director George W. Ehler, M. E., of the Chicago Y. M. C. A., the chairman of this committee, will receive the measurements at the report of the committee at the St. Louis Exposition early in August. As soon as prepared, these charts will be distributed to all physical directors at Y. M. C. A. buildings throughout the country.

With the aid of this change, the taking of measurements will form a record more valuable and more accurate than under the old system. The development charts in use in recording physical measurements at the present time are prepared on the average scale of development between the ages of sixteen and sixty. Under the new system, when a boy of seventeen is to be examined, his measurements will be recorded on a special chart for seventeen year old boys. This chart will be prepared from the average measurements of a thousand seventeen year old boys in the United States and Canada. Under this arrangement of a separate chart of averages for each individual year measurements can be compared with a remarkable degree of exactness and far more valuable treatment can be prescribed.

RURAL CARRIERS' ORDERS

NEW REGULATIONS AS ISSUED BY THE POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The rural mail carriers of the Plainfield postoffice and the persons living along the routes are interested in the new regulations issued by the Postoffice Department at Washington.

The local rural mail carriers have received the following, effective July 1, from Postmaster General Payne:

After July 1 rural carriers are not permitted to solicit business or receive orders of any kind for any person, firm or corporation. No mailable matter may be handled by rural carriers while serving their routes, unless the proper postage has been prepaid, with the single exception of county newspapers, which, under the law, are permitted to be carried free throughout the county in which they are published to actual subscribers.

The hire for merchandise carried in request of the patron or rural free delivery must be paid by the patron. Carriers will not be permitted to receive any compensation from the seller of such merchandise. Articles or packages, which are not mailable, which are handed to the carrier or deposited in the postoffice or in a rural letter box or in a collection box located on a rural route, with request that the rural carrier deliver same, as subject to the rules regulating mail matter, including the payment of postage thereon.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

PASSENGER TRAFFIC SELDOM PROFITABLE

General Manager W. G. Besler's Statement Applies Not Alone to the N. J. Central.

HAULING FREIGHT PAYS

CENTRAL DOING BIGGEST BUSINESS IN ITS HISTORY.

Carrying Ice From Lake Hopatcong Brings in Good Money—Rolling Stock is Now in Good Condition.

In an address delivered in this city a few months ago, Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler, of the New Jersey Central, made the announcement that there is little profit for a railroad in carrying passengers and that it is often done at a loss. Railroad officials have facts to substantiate the statement. It is not in carrying passengers, but in freight traffic that a railroad makes its money.

Passenger trains, thoroughly equipped, represent many thousands of dollars and they would have to do an enormous business to make up this expenditure. As a matter of fact, the railroads do not oftentimes make enough money on passenger traffic to warrant the outlay, which in this day has become a necessity, owing to the demands of the travelling public.

The New Jersey Central today is handling more freight than at any other time in recent years. The number of freight cars handled in a single day runs up into the thousands and the work of keeping them moving is a small task. There are times when the company is hard pressed for cars and some clever work is necessary to meet the business that comes along.

Just now the traffic in ice is an extra consideration. The shipments from Lake Hopatcong represent a good sized business in itself, while the shipment of fruit, as well as milk, from the country districts is no small item in this department of the Central's work.

The annual statement of the New Jersey Central, soon to appear, will show a big increase in earnings over the preceding year in every department. This pleases the directors and especially the stockholders, for the latter do not always care so much how the business is done so long as they receive their dividends. When these fail to appear there is general complaint and officers and directors "get busy" in an effort to remedy the existing difficulty.

While the operation of passenger trains has long been considered a sort of science, the same may be said of the freight and coal business. The same care has to be exercised and it is the duty of those in charge of this work to know exactly every day the amount of business done. At 10 o'clock each day it is possible to tell to a penny the amount of revenue for the past twenty-four hours up to 7 o'clock each morning.

An important factor in the increasing business of the New Jersey Central is that the rolling stock is now in first-class condition.

CLOCK GOLF POPULAR.

Ladies Women Prefer it to the Usual Game on the Links.

The clock golf competitions at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club this season have become very popular among the women. They prefer to engage in this sort of competition rather than take the rounds of the course. A competition of this kind will be held at the club on Saturday, Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers offering two cups as prizes. On the following Saturday there will be competition for two cups offered by Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell. Other prizes for these competitions have been given this year by Mrs. Charles Freeman, of Colonia, and Mrs. Walter Gaston, of this city.

All Aboard for the Shore.

The next best thing to a vacation is a day at the sea shore. It refreshes, invigorates and makes one feel satisfied with the world in general. The annual excursion of the First, Grace and Menoes Avenue M. E. churches takes place tomorrow and it affords just the opportunity for such an outing. The train leaves the North Avenue Station at 8 o'clock and does not start on the return trip until 7:10 in the evening.

Off for Europe.

Harry Pedifons, of Washingtonville, left yesterday on the "Kaiser Wilhelm" for Europe. He will be gone the remainder of the summer.

TWO INJURED IN COLLISON

BICYCLE RIDERS COLLIDE, CHAS. B. MORSE RECEIVING SOME BAD CUTS.

Charles B. Morse, of Franklin place, and Charles Gulick, of South Second street, riding wheels, collided with great force at Plainfield avenue and Third street, last evening, receiving severe injuries. Both were thrown to the ground and scraped along the hard macadam, getting cut and bruised in a dozen places.

Morse was probably the worst hurt of the two. He was badly stunned for several minutes and it was with difficulty that he regained his feet. He was taken to the office of Dr. Norman Probasco in a carriage, and the physician had to insert stitches in a gash in the back of his head and dress cuts on his hands and knees. Gulick was also badly stunned and lost a great deal of cuticle from his face and hands. He was assisted to his home.

The accident was due to Gulick's carelessness in racing with another bicyclist, both being without lights. His wheel and Morse's were wrecked.

SEEING JERSEY BY TROLLEY

PARTY OF YOUNG WOMEN OFF FOR PLEASANT VACATION OUTING.

Instead of going to sea shore or mountains to spend their vacations, a party of local young women composed of the Misses Frances Wetsman, Marguerite Kennedy, Marie Nelson, Stella Krisey and Josephine Murphy, started yesterday on a novel trip planned by themselves. They will spend their allotted two weeks' leave of absence from Boehm's store, where they are employed, by trolley in the southern part of the State. They left yesterday for Philadelphia and after viewing the points of interest within its limits will go to Atlantic City. Afterward Cape May, Sea Isle City and many other places will be visited, principally the important cities in Cumberland, Cape May and Camden counties.

The young women claim that they will get more fresh air and recreation in this way than in any other they might devise, besides having an opportunity to visit many places at little expense. Similar trips on a smaller scale have been taken by Plainfield parties before but this is the first time where a party has made it a vacation affair.

SUMMIT OUT IN THE COLD

NEWARK NEWS THINKS IT WILL GET NOTHING POLITICALLY THIS YEAR.

The city of Summit seems to have made up its mind to become a prominent factor in Union County politics during the coming campaign. It has already assumed the role of "the Republican stronghold in the upper part of the county, that has never had any county office whatever." But it is very doubtful if Summit will be given anything this year, faithful though it has been for many years. Elizabeth, though Democratic, has the county prosecutor, the county collector, the State Senator, the member of Con*gress, the United States Senator, the* chancellor, the surrogate and a number of the Assembly. Rahway, also Democratic, has the county judge, the freeholders' clerk and the county clerk, the latter by far the best office in the county. Plainfield, which is the banner Republican city and the seat of almost all the dissensions in the county, has the sheriff, the county attorney, a member of the Assembly and the director of the Board of Freeholders, and now it wants and is likely to get the newly-created office of registrar of deeds. Summit is making a demand for the latter, but Plainfield has the grip on it. It is barely possible that Summit may be given a kind of complimentary vote on some citizen who is "also mentioned" as a candidate for the Assembly nomination, but need hardly look for anything of more importance.—Newark Evening News.

Rev. Mr. Shett to Speak.

Rev. Gideon M. Shott, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, will address the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon. Horace J. Martin will sing, and there will be violin selections by George H. Spier. The meeting will commence at 4 o'clock.

"Rex" Won First; Money.

"Handsome" McDonough won first money at Bethlehem, Pa., in the trotting races with A. C. Blair's trotter "Rex." The horse ran in 1:19¼. McDonough will drive "Rex" again at Trenton tomorrow in the Eastern circuit races.

TRANSFER OF 'PLAINS NINE TO SOMERVILLE

Plainfield and Scotch Plains Men Compose Reorganized Team at the County Seat.

FIRST GAME SATURDAY

"SMILING JIMMY" MONTROSS SIGNS AS PITCHER.

Allen to be Behind the Bat and Enright on Second Base—Cranius to Play at Short—The Lineup.

The newly-organized baseball team that will represent Somerville on the diamond for the balance of the season, will play its first game on Saturday with the Celluloid A. C., of Newark. The contest will take place on Altamont field which is now undergoing extensive repairs preparatory to the opening. This team is composed chiefly of Plainfield and Scotch Plains players, the organization in the early part of the season playing as Scotch Plains.

The Celluloid's are rated as one of the best semi-professional teams in the State and the Somerville fans are looking forward to a fine contest. Montross and Allen will be the battery for the home team and no doubt there will be a large crowd present to see how the new players deport themselves.

Altamont field, when put in condition, will be one of the best ball grounds in the State and Manager Ubester A. Cawley is making arrangements to accommodate the big crowd expected.

This will be the lineup for Somerville in Saturday's contest:

Montross, p; Allen, c; Baldwin, 1b; Enright, 2b; Cranius, ss; Devans, 3b; Taylor, lf; Flannery, cf; Daly, rf.

Manager Cawley is now anxious to arrange a series of games with the Alis Club, and no doubt the teams will get together in the near future.

New School for Boys.

The Sebring Homestead property at Sebring's Mills, owned by Charles Sebring, of this city, has been leased to Major E. H. Baker, of Maine, who will establish in it a school for boys. The lessee has entered extensive alterations to be made to the buildings and will take possession in September. He formerly conducted a school in Maine and has many applications for the new place.

Arrested for Disorderly Conduct.

George Buss, who lives on South Second street, has brought complaint at Justice Mosher's court against Jacob Herman, a neighbor, on grounds of using violent and profane language to him and his assembled family at his home Saturday night. Justice Mosher has set the hearing at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. W. G. DeMess, Esq., represents Mr. Buss.

Democratic Outing.

Local Democrats will be well represented at the annual outing of the party to be held at Point View Grove on Long Island Sound on Thursday, August 25, under the auspices of the Democratic City Committee, of Elizabeth. The committee has chartered the steamer Cygnus and every arrangement has been completed for a fine time.

May Meet at New Market.

New Market may be the scene of the annual reunion of the Twenty-eighth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, this year. The suggestion was made at a committee meeting in Perth Amboy last week and it was received favorably. A further meeting is to be held August 5, when the place and date will be definitely decided upon.

To Erect a Dwelling.

Mrs. A. H. Dupuy, of Woodland avenue, has secured a permit for the erection of a house at the corner of Park lane and Woodland avenue. Work has already been commenced on the foundation excavations. Mrs. Dupuy will occupy the house on its completion. Fred L. Lancaster, the architect drew up the plans.

Form Law Partnership.

Former Assemblyman Wm. Newcorn and Frederick J. Huff, Esq., have formed a law partnership firm and will have two offices, one on West Front street and the other at 187-189 Market street, Newark. Mr. Newcorn will attend to the office here and Mr. Huff will look after the Newark office.

—The finest Jersey corn and Jersey tomatoes, just the thing for dinner, at Neuman Brothers tomorrow. A new lot will be in the large vegetable display.

F. W. YATES BOOMED FOR THE MAYORALTY

Strong Element Wants to See Popular Man Named by the Democratic Party.

GOOD BUSINESS MAN

VINCENT L. FRAZEE ALSO MENTIONED IN CONNECTION WITH NOMINATION.

Yates Not An Active Worker in the Party, But Would Draw Votes—Mr. Buckle the Only One Considered by Republicans.

While Former Councilman Vincent L. Frazee has all along been mentioned by the local Democrats as their choice for the coming mayoralty nomination, Fred W. Yates has now been named by members of the party as the likely selection. The announcement was made by one of the Anti-Hearst Club members today who stated that if Mr. Yates would accept it, their chances of electing him would be excellent. When his name was broached at a short time ago, he said, the suggestion was received with enthusiasm.

Although Mr. Yates has not been prominently identified in local politics he is a staunch supporter of the Democratic party and has always been interested in its welfare. He is a close watcher of city affairs and being possessed of unusual executive ability would make a capable man for the position. He is popular with the Democrats and the city at large and would no doubt receive the entire support of the former and many others.

In Republican circles no other name is mentioned beyond James F. Buckle and it is a certainty that he will head the city ticket.

LACK OF EXEMPTION COSTLY

FAILURE OF REPUBLICAN PARTY TO PASS AN ACT MAY TELL AT ELECTION.

What effect will the recent action of the court in taking away the $500 exemption from militiamen, veterans and firemen have on the coming Presidential election is a question that is agitating the minds of many. That it will result in the loss of votes to the Republican party seems to be the opinion of those affected by the new order. A member of Co. K, who is affected to the extent of $30, that being his tax minus the exemption, said today, that he felt sure that the militiamen would take advantage of their right to vote and resent the action of the Republican Legislators in refusing them exemption.

It is argued that inasmuch as the militiamen give considerable of their time to the State and stand ready at any time to be called out for one purpose or another, they should be allowed something for such services. Another thing that tends to make the militia aggrieved at the Republican party is that the Democrats attempted to secure legislation that would continue this exemption and the purpose was defeated by Republicans.

There are a number of members of Co. K who are affected by the new law and they all feel the same toward those who took their exemption away. They declare that they will not support the Republican ticket.

It seems to be the general wish of the State militia that the Dick bill become a law for is this measure the soldiers see many things that they believe would be to their advantage and would give them such rights and privileges and they think they are entitled to. It is said that the firemen, as well as veterans sympathize with the militia and will vote with them.

—D. N. Force has about completed his two new houses which he has been building on Front street, west of Grant avenue.

—Thomas H. Pinney, the expressman, has entered the employ of the United States Express Company. He commenced his new duties this morning.

—Joseph Pinm, of Division street, who was recently operated upon at Muhlenberg Hospital for appendicitis, expects to leave the institution on Saturday.

—Fourteen carloads of Sunday-school excursionists from Somerville and Raritan passed through this city this morning on the way to Asbury Park. The excursionists are from the combined schools of the vicinity which make the excursion together every season.

ALIS CLUB DECIDES TO RETAIN JOHNSTON

Decision at Meeting Last Night That Manager is Not Responsible for Defeats.

LOYALLY SUPPORT HIM

DISAPPOINTED IN GETTING GOOD PITCHER FOR SATURDAY'S GAME.

Badgley Could Not be Kept—Wolfe Went Back on His Word—To Strengthen the Team.

Following an informal conference of those interested in the management of the Alis Club baseball team, last night, it was unanimously agreed that George Johnston should continue as manager for the rest of the season and he has consented to do so. That Mr. Johnston was caught without a stronger pitcher than Davis, does not appear to be his fault. He depended entirely on the word of Wolfe, now of the Washington Americans, to pitch for him and knew no change until 11 o'clock Saturday morning, when he learned that Wolfe was called to Washington, where he pitched that day.

The other members of the baseball committee have declared their loyalty to Manager Johnston and say that they will stand by him in his efforts to put the team in a leading position. The management assures the baseball public that everything will be straightened out for Saturday's contest at Westfield.

As for retaining Badgley, the Lehigh twirler, the committee states that it was impossible to keep him here for the reason that he would not agree to the proposition made to him and an extra pitcher could not be carried under conditions set forth by Badgley. For this reason the Lehigh man went to Washington, D. C.

Prominent Mason Dead.

Edward S. Kline, forty-six years old, one of the most familiar figures in Somerville railroad circles, passed away at Somerville yesterday, from a complication of diseases. For some time he was a railroader at Phillipsburg and after he came here, for a score of years, he was the conductor on the South Branch Railroad. He was in high standing in Masonic circles. A widow and daughter, Mrs. H. V. Wyckoff, of Elizabeth, survive. The funeral will be held Friday at Phillipsburg.

Baby Show Prizes.

The value of the prizes for the baby parade at Asbury Park this year will exceed $1,000. There will be more silverware, consisting of loving cups, tea sets and similar articles than ever before, and very little of the dry goods nature. The Carnival association has consistently urged silverware, because the prize winners always prefer this; it is permanent in its character and becomes a memento that can be kept and prized for a number of years.

Investing in Oil Wells.

Former State Senator Charles A. Reed returned last night from Pennsylvania, where he is interested in several oil wells. While away he witnessed the opening of one well. Elston M. French, who is also interested in the same business, accompanied Mr. Reed on the trip. Mr. French will return home today.

Matinee Meet at Somerville.

The Somerville Horse Show and Driving Association will hold its first matinee meet since the new speedway was opened, next Saturday afternoon at Island Somerville. There will be four class events open to Somerville, Plainfield, Round Brook, Three Bridges and Flemington horses. Admission free.

One More Physician.

Gustav Geismer, formerly of Hamilton, O., a new official at the Manganese Steel Safe Company's plant, has rented the Walter Moore house at 234 East Fifth street, through Charles Hand's agency. He will occupy it with his son, Dr. C. A. Geismer, who will establish a local practice.

Kelly Boy Doing Well.

Nicholas Kelly, the small boy shot in the eye by a playmate, Sunday afternoon, is doing nicely at Muhlenberg Hospital. The physicians have removed a great deal of the powder grains but as yet are unable to state whether the sight has been destroyed permanently or not.

Going Abroad.

Former Mayor and Mrs. Wm. L. Saunders, of Rockview avenue, will sail tomorrow for Europe.

ROUND UP OF YOUNG TRAMPS

FOUR ELIZABETH BOYS CAUGHT ON FREIGHT TRAIN.

In a raid on a Jersey Central coal train near Park avenue, yesterday afternoon, Patrolman Overbaugh and Driver O'Gorman, of the police patrol, captured James Delaney, aged 14; Joseph Hack, 21; Robert Cameron, 17; and John O'Donnell, 20, all of Elizabeth. They were locked up at headquarters and will be given a hearing this afternoon as City Judge Runyon was unable to hold court this morning.

The local police received word from Dunellen by telegraph that a gang of hoboes was on a passing train, acting disorderly and throwing coal from cars at houses along the track. Patrolmen Overbaugh and O'Gorman stationed themselves at Park avenue and when the train reached that point the engineer slowed up. There were seven in the crowd on the cars and when they beheld the bluecoats, all fled. After a chase over the tracks the four mentioned were overtaken.

COLORED PEOPLE'S OUTING

SALT WATER DAY AT SOUTH BEACH DRAWS 500 FROM HERE.

Members of the Calvary Baptist and Mt. Zion A. M. E. churches, to the number of five hundred, left the North Avenue Station this morning for South Beach. Nine coaches were engaged to carry the excursionists to their destination. The affair was in charge of Rev. Scott Wallace and Rev. Mr. Ashley, pastors of the two churches.

Accompanying the crowd was the Plainfield Colored Cadets, an organization two weeks old, in charge of Captain James Boylan, of Madison avenue. The cadets were in uniform and carried wooden guns. When they reached the station they gave a short drill, and won the applause of the crowd. Captain Boylan was formerly color sergeant of the Fifty-fifth New Jersey Infantry, colored, and after he came North the regiment was drafted for service in the Spanish-American War. Captain Boylan did not go to war. The local organization now has a membership of fifteen.

Conductor Thomas Flanagan was in charge of the train. The trip was made by the way of Cranford Junction. The excursionists will return late tonight.

LOCAL FIREMEN AT AMBOY

CHIEF DOANE AND OTHERS WITNESS TEST OF FIRE ENGINES THERE.

Chief T. O. Doane, Captain Fairing, Driver William Ross and Engineer Charles Smith, of the local fire department, formed a party which witnessed the testing of two new American fire engines at Perth Amboy, yesterday. That city is considering their purchase and the Plainfielders and other firemen were invited to assist the local experts in watching the steamers work. Both Chief Doane and Engineer Smith gave valuable pointers that were gratefully received by the Perth Amboy officials.

The Plainfielders were greatly struck with the poor condition of the water supply, and in towing from the hydrants for two minutes, and they did not neglect to speak of the clear aqua pura that this city enjoys. Many of the Amboyites were surprised when told that mud is an unknown quantity in Plainfield water.

Sold Her Out.

James Wilkinson, of West Third street, who was arrested Monday and taken to Newark on a charge of petit larceny, was arraigned in court at the latter place yesterday and held in $250 bail for appearance before the Grand Jury. The complaint against him was made by Mary Taylor, of High street, who asserts that while she was visiting in Morristown, Wilkinson and a woman named Margaret Komisky, sold a quantity of her furniture to a second-hand dealer. The articles disposed of in this way, she says, are an iron bed, some chairs, a washtub and a razor, the whole valued at $18.

Hashing Work on Nurses' Home.

Work on the nurses' home adjoining Muhlenberg Hospital has been pushed forward with great rapidity during the spring months and the roof is now finished. This completes work on the exterior of the building but there is as yet considerable work to be done within. If the workmen continue to make good progress, the building will easily be ready for occupancy by winter.

MEAT PRICES HERE STILL REMAIN HIGH

Local Wholesalers Expect No Change, While Situation in the West Remains the Same.

LITTLE BEEF COMING

DECREASED DEMAND IN PLAINFIELD USUAL DURING JULY AND AUGUST.

Condition at Chicago—Colored Men Being Imported to Take the Strikers' Places—One Man Killed.

Despite the importation of colored strike-breakers and every effort made to start shipments of beef from the Chicago yards, there is no prospect of immediate change in the local meat situation. Last week's prices still prevail and are likely to for weeks to come. The fact that less meat is consumed during July and August than at any other time in the year is one reason why Plainfield's supply is holding out.

At the Union Beef Company's office this morning, it was said by Manager Tolles that his house is receiving a small amount of dressed beef and that in all probability it would keep coming for some time. No big shipments have come East in two weeks, he said, but the small lots dealt out would meet the greatly decreased demand. Speaking relatively of prices he expressed the opinion that no change would be made while the trouble continued in the West.

The strike is now centering in Chicago and from an orderly band of Union men, the butchers have become furious by the tactics pursued by the packers. Thousands of colored men are being brought into the city and placed at work in the various yards and meetings between the two sides have resulted in rioting and bloodshed. Yesterday one striker was killed and several others badly hurt in a clash which occurred before a packing yard gate. The disturbances are still being looked after by the police but if bloodshed continues Mayor Harrison will call for troops.

Michael J. Donnelly, leader of the strike, said yesterday, that he looked for no immediate settlement, and as the fight was on, all that he and his men could do was to stick it out. There is some talk of the teamsters joining the butchers and rumor has it that if the railroad employes are called upon to refrain from handling meat cars they will do so at once. This would lead to trouble extending to the Eastern railroads.

WALTER FISHER WEDS.

Miss Anna Donovan, of This City, Become His Bride Two Weeks Ago.

Considerable surprise is occasioned by the announcement of the wedding of Miss Anna Donovan, of Liberty street, and Walter Fisher, formerly of Watchung avenue, but now of Dover, Morris county. The couple was married Saturday night, July 16, in the Presbyterian parsonage, Succasunna, near Dover, by the pastor, Rev. E. H. Stoddard, and they are now living at Dover, where the groom is employed.

The bride was for several years employed at the Crescent Embossing Works, and the groom was engaged as head cutter at Hornig & Kapp's skirt factory on Watchung avenue. Mr. Fisher left this city several months ago to accept a position at Dover. Two weeks before the time appointed for the wedding, Miss Donovan went to Dover to visit friends.

Fresh From Newark's Hostmery.

In Plainfield, where the newspapers sometimes reflect political views of Oberlee Arthur Reed, comes the editorial announcement that "Mr. Clark is what is termed a strong card politically and would keep Edward C Stokes on a bustle if he desires to succeed Governor Murphy." In this connection it may be noted that while Mr. Reed is a dead Republican he is still the sun-in-law of Mr. Clark.—Newark Evening News.

To Tell of St. Louis Fair.

Harvey Thorn will speak on the sights of the St. Louis fair tomorrow evening at the regular meeting of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W. His talk will more especially deal with the sights at the fraternal congress building where the A. O. U. W. has a handsome exhibit. Ice cream and cake will be served at the conclusion of the talk and a lodge smoker will be enjoyed. Two propositions are to be received at the business meeting.

CURIOUS BODY OF WATER.

Lake in Abyssinia That Is Supplied by Streams Flowing Inland from the Sea.

In Consul Skinner's recent report on his visit to Abyssinia he mentions one of the most curious bodies of water in the world, though we rarely hear of it. He says, quotes a Washington report, that Lake Assal has an immense supply of good salt and holds out very exceptional prospects to capitalists. A concession has already been granted for the exploitation of the salt.

Lake Assal is a small body of very salt water lying seven or eight miles inland from the bay of Tadjoura, one of the French possessions in East Africa. It comprises only about 16 square miles.

It is surrounded by a wonderful collection of jagged mountains, descending to the water's edge so that it is almost impossible to travel around it. Its waters are salt to the point of saturation, and at its lowest level there is seen upon its bank a layer of nearly pure salt over a foot thick.

For years nobody knew whence it derived its water. The few men who visited it could not ascertain that any stream flows into it. It was thought that the lake probably had subterranean affluents, but this theory was not demonstrated.

The mystery of Lake Assal was solved in 1885 by the French explorer, Henry Audon. He carefully examined the shores, though he found it very difficult. His hard work was at last rewarded by the murmur of a waterfall.

Guided by the sound he approached the spot, and the solution of the enigma was before him. He found a large brook of crystalline water foaming over the stones and throwing itself impetuously into the lake. He tasted the water, and found it as salt as the ocean, of which indeed it had been a part.

Lake Assal lies considerably below the surface of the sea. It has been ascertained that the water that pours into it comes from three brooks which flow from the Gubbet el Karab, a little bay at the extreme western end of the bay of Tadjoura.

The waters of the Indian ocean are carried inland to fill this depression in the interior, and when they reach Lake Assal they are about 400 feet below the level of the sea. From time to time the salt has been carried by caravans as far inland as Menelik's capital.

Perhaps there are only two other instances known of water flowing inland through brooks from the sea. Both these brooks are in the island of Cephalonia, in the Ionian sea, west of Greece.

They are on the southwest side of the island, near the small town and port of Argostoli. For a little way they flow near one another straight from the sea, and then follow different courses. Both streams finally disappear in the ground, probably reaching some subterranean reservoir whose waters perhaps again reach the sea through fissures in the rocks.

There is no tide in the sea here, and the flow of the salt water streams is perfectly steady and continuous.

"STATUMANIA" IN FRANCE.

Mania Possesses the People to Erect Memorials to Persons of Little Note.

From time to time one sees a feeble protest in the Paris press against what is known as statumania, i. e., the mania for erecting statues, says a Paris correspondent of the London Globe. I once asked a Frenchman why his countrymen were so fond of putting up statues to indifferentes. His reply was in these terms: "There are so many sculptors in France that it is difficult to find employment for them all. Besides, we like statues, and the mayor who organizes a committee for a statue to one of his friends is certain to be allowed an opportunity of making a speech—an oration he would call it—when the day comes for the unveiling. Perhaps he may be fortunate enough to obtain a decoration. And when he dies he hopes somebody else will do as much for him." I think the answer was a genuine one, for I remember on one occasion when I went to the ministry of the interior to see a functionary there, he told me the following story in illustration of the weakness of his countrymen for decorations: "When anyone comes here," he said, "in search of a missing friend or relative this is the sort of dialogue which ensues:

"'What name?'

"'Jacques Delarue.'

"'What age?'

"'Thirty-five.'

"'What profession?'

"'Retired officer.'

"'Was he decorated?'

"'Yes.'

"Then there is no hope of finding him.'"

Which means that there are so many men with decorations in France that the man without one is more easily identified.

Time on the Ceiling.

An ingeniously constructed shadow clock has just been invented by Prof. Herth, of Lynn, Mass. The essential feature of the invention consists of a lamp, which throws upon the ceiling an optical representation of a small watch.—Jewelers' Circular Weekly.

SLOW CLOCK HELPS TRADE.

Fallsophical Customer Shows Cigar Clerk How to Increase His Business.

"Quite a crowd passes here in the morning," said the new customer in a State street cigar store, relates the Chicago Journal.

"Yes, they all stop to look at the clock in the window when they pass," replied the clerk. "You see, they all count upon reaching business in time to be at work promptly at eight."

"Then a clock sets you quite a little business!" questioned the customer. "They know your place and drop in occasionally."

"No, sir, not one of them. That's the the strangest part of it. They come along here and use our clock every morning, but when it comes to buying cigars and tobacco they go somewhere else. Just like people in general."

"Why don't you make them spend their money here?"

The clerk laughed and looked askance at his questioner.

"That's right," he said, "make them trade with you. Wherever there is a will there is a way."

"Well, I am looking for business," said the clerk as a suggestion. "What shall I do?"

The customer looked at the clock. The hands pointed at 7:48. Then he went behind the counter, climbed up to the clock and turned the hands around until they reached 8:02. Then he stepped back to watch the effect. A moment later a well-groomed clerk walked leisurely up to the window. He glanced at the clock. The effect was magical.

The man started to run. He dodged an electric car and sped down the street. The next man who looked at the clock turned over a fruit stand in his haste to get away. The next fell over a newsboy and broke his umbrella.

This it continued for ten minutes. Every man who saw the clock hurried away. Finally, when it was really eight o'clock, the customer turned back the hands and set the clock at the right time.

"Now," said the customer, "watch the trade come."

At noon the clerk and his assistant beat a tattoo on the cash register. Sales during the lunch hour were nearly as large as those of the rest of the day. Nearly every new purchaser came in and spent a nickel or dime. Then he said: "Your clock is too fast."

The clerk told all of them the joke. The customers enjoyed the laugh. And now the morning sales of that store are so heavy that it requires two clerks to handle the rush.

And the man who turned the hands of the clock around declares he ought to be in on the morning dividends. He says that his taking advantage of human nature and giving the passerby something to bring him into the store, if only to complain, brought the additional trade.

ENTERTAINING IN JAPAN.

The Comfort of the Guest Is Assiduously But Very Quietly Looked After.

If you are ever in Japan and happen to be invited to a dinner, do not forget to leave your shoes outside; otherwise you will be guilty of an unpardonable breach of etiquette. After your host has greeted you, says the Chicago Journal, it is proper to coil yourself upon a thin cushion as best you can, for a smoke with your host.

Presently in trips a maiden, with soft, gliding, noiseless steps. She carries a small lacquered box with a tray on the top about the height of a camp stool. She kneels down, sitting on her white stippered heels, and places the tray before you, always silent, graceful and unconscious. On the tray are a paper napkin, chopsticks and various kinds of food, such as raw fish, chouchou of the bamboo, and stewed meats.

A little later two or three other maidens glide in and draw near to yourself and host, and as they change their kimonos, apparently, between each course they convey the impression of a bewildering number, although in features they are much alike to the unaccustomed western eye.

Between the courses you are treated to geisha dances, accompanied by quietly dressed musicians, who make an admirable foil for the beautiful evolutions of four or more dancers, every motion having a symbolic meaning. Then comes another course, cigarettes, more dancers, jugglers, another course, and so on till a late hour in the night, when you feel that although you are not hungry you have been tricked somehow out of your dinner. But you have gained a new experience by way of compensation.

Giving Wine Away.

So plentiful was the vintage in Greece last year that a considerable portion of the wine was given away for lack of proper receptacles to put it in. In certain districts, says the British consul for the Morea, the 50 oke (13 gallons) measure was offered for 1s. 3d. Growers having filled all their casks and other receptacles sent public criers about informing the community that anyone was at liberty to continue the harvesting of their vineyards without payment.

Resourceful Widow.

Mrs. Bangs—So that pretty widow is really married so soon again, eh?

Old Bangs—Yes.

Mrs. Bangs—But her late husband's will expressly stipulated that if she took a second husband her legacy was to revert to his most distant relative.

Old Bangs—That's where she was foxy. She hunted up the relative and married him.—Chicago Journal.

BALL HITS A THIEF.

CHICAGO AMATEUR PITCHER'S AIM PROVES EFFECTIVE.

Fugitive Dropped in His Tracks When Hit by Anderson's Unique Missile and Is Safely Lodged in Police Lockup.

A ball pitched by the captain of a prairie "nine" brought a burglar to earth near Addison street and Racine avenue, Chicago, Tuesday morning and enabled the police to capture the man who had surrounded him, but Lieut. McCarthy, of the town hall station, was so struck by the novel means of halting the fugitive that he is considering making a requisition upon the department and arming his men with the new weapon.

The struggle followed a raid by a well-dressed man upon the house of Mrs. Norman Staat, in which $500 worth of jewelry was taken, and interrupted a lively game of baseball which was in progress in a vacant lot at the rear of Mrs. Staat's home.

While excitement over the contest was at its height, Mrs. Staat left her house by the rear door and went to a market two blocks away. As she crossed the lot and turned the corner, a young man, who had been an interested spectator at the game, strolled away.

A few minutes later he was seen going up the front steps of the Staat house. He forced an entrance by using a case knife, but a real estate dealer saw him, and, running to the vacant lot, gave the alarm.

The game was adjourned in the middle of an inning, and John Anderson, pitcher and captain of the team in the field, led the other 17 players and a crowd of substitutes and spectators in a charge upon the house.

"Surround the house," shouted Anderson. "We'll keep him here until the police come." The players waited until the burglar showed himself at an upper window in the rear, and then set up a shout.

"Come on out! We dare you to! We'll fix you!" were the greetings that reached him. Apparently the array of sturdy young men, armed with bats and clubs, dismayed the marauder, for, after gazing at the crowd a moment, he vanished from the rear window.

By this time Mrs. Staat had returned from the market. She wondered that the boys should be so thick about the house, and thought she would have to complain to the police, but went up the front steps with apparent unconcern. As she reached the top step the burglar opened the door and rushed out, knocking Mrs. Staat down as he came.

With a yell, the players ran toward him, but he dodged the blows aimed at him, and passed his besiegers one by one. Just as he was clear and started to run down the street, Anderson, who had been watching in front of the house, drew himself back and pitched the heaviest ball he had thrown during the afternoon. His aim was true, and the leather sphere struck the burglar squarely in the back of the ear.

The fugitive staggered and sunk to his knees with his hands to his head, and before he could rise again several men had seized him.

"Now we've got you," they shouted, pulling him to his feet.

The man gazed at them for a moment, still holding his head. Then his gaze became fixed, he tossed his hands above his head and fell back on to the sod between the walk and the curb.

"He's fainted; get some water," cried Peterson. All three started, and then remembered that the prisoner should be guarded. They had barely left his side, when the terror of their departure had revived the "sick" man, and he fled, to be seen no more.

He took with him jewelry of Mrs. Staat valued at $500.

Physical Exercise in Japan.

From an early age the males and females of Japan are inducted in physical exercise, with the result that at maturity the women are almost as strong as the men. It is not an unusual sight to see a company of girls, who are strolling along a country road, step back a few yards for a breather and then, following a leader, all nimbly clear a five-foot fence by leaping over it.

Sharks Killed by Explosion.

The engineers in the British navy have a very effective way of killing sharks. They seal up a dynamite cartridge in an empty can, and put the can inside a lump of pork. The pork is thrown overboard on a wire which has been connected with an electric battery. When the shark takes the bait, the engineer presses a button, which explodes the cartridge and kills the fish.

TWICE NEAR BURIAL.

GREWSOME EXPERIENCE OF A WOMAN IN ENGLAND.

She Now Has Death Certificate Issued When She Was in a Cataleptic Trance—Heard Doctor Call Her Dead.

It rarely falls to the lot of a human being to be twice placed in a coffin and made ready for interment. Yet there is a woman in England who has had that experience. She is a Mrs. Heigham, and recently related her adventure to a company of friends. She at present is enjoying the best of health at her home in Holland road, Kensington. She has been subject to cataleptic trances, and thrice has been in imminent danger of being buried alive.

The story of her first escape is best told in her own words. Its terrible realism only finds a parallel in the awe-inspiring imagination of Poe.

"My first trance," Mrs. Heigham said, "was brought about by shock. I was told that all my property had been lost. The news was quite unexpected, and it sent me into hysterics.

"Then I lapsed into insensibility and at the end of two hours my limbs began to assume the rigidity of death. My eyes were open, and I could see what was happening, but I was unable to move hand or foot, or to show that life had not yet left my body.

"Imagine my horror, then, when, after being left for 24 hours, I was taken from bed and rolled on the floor. Pins and needles were stuck in my body in order to see whether blood would flow. Fortunately I could feel bodily pain, but the strain on my mind was terrible.

"After this every one gave me up for dead. 'Poor lady, I am afraid she is now out of all earthly suffering,' I remember hearing the doctor say. Oh, the terror of that moment!

"Worse, however, was to come, for the order for my coffin was given.

SAVED BY DAUGHTER'S VIGIL.

When the undertaker's men came to measure me I tried to shriek aloud, but not a sound came from my bloodless lips. I could not have been more helpless had the angel of death in reality taken my soul. The final agony came when my coffin was brought into the room.

"At the sight of that grewsome object placed by my bedside I felt as if my brain—or what was left of it—would finally break under the futile efforts to assert itself.

"Then I lapsed into unconsciousness for the first time for 48 hours."

Mrs. Heigham then related how her daughter, who had never quite given up hope, arose from her bed in the middle of the night to visit her mother for the last time.

The girl was unable to sleep owing to an ever-recurring presentiment that her parent had not really passed away, and, fitly enough, it was this midnight visit that really saved Mrs. Heigham from her awful fate.

As she gazed with tearful eyes upon her mother's still form she thought she saw a movement of the eyelids. Hastily summoning the servants, she held a bottle of strong smelling salts to Mrs. Heigham's nostrils, and in her agitation spilled part of the contents over the unconscious woman's face.

"At this," concluded Mrs. Heigham, "I heaved a deep sigh and suddenly sat up in my bed, saved by my daughter's love and energy."

Few will envy Mrs. Heigham her remarkable experience. She now possesses the death certificate signed by the doctor who attended her, and, though the memories attached to it are fraught with such horror, she would not part with the document for a great deal.

Mrs. Heigham's subsequent attacks were not quite so serious, but in both cases she was at first thought to be dead—by all but her devoted daughter.

Curiously enough, Mrs. Heigham has herself taken degrees as a doctor of psychology, and in face of the foregoing facts it was startling to hear her announce that she had "no fear of death for many, many years to come."

Parrot Enjoyed Joke.

A parrot in Stockton, Cal., is so bright that it enjoys a blunder or a joke. Among other accomplishments, the bird can imitate the voice of its mistress to perfection. One day the lady of the house was seated at her writing table, when she suddenly remembered an order she had forgotten to give to the cook. The door of the room being open, she shouted "Elizabeth!" without rising from her chair. To the delight of the parrot, from the kitchen came the voice of the cook, exclaiming: "Shut up, you old fool!"

TALE OF TWO FLATS.

FEMALE SOLOMON BRINGS ORDER OUT OF CHAOS.

How She Readily Solved What Seemed to Be a Serious Problem for Two Bachelor Maids and Two Bachelor Men.

In a cozy little flat two bachelor girls were keeping house, and somehow things seemed to be going. Although each of the bachelor girls considered herself too far "advanced" to be bound down to a mere matter of housekeeping; nevertheless, each had her own ideas as to how things ought to be done. When one bachelor girl planned one thing the other was sure to plan something else, and there was a conflict of directions for the maid they employed.

In brief, says the Brooklyn Eagle, the cozy little flat suffered from too much supervision. So the two bachelor girls finally decided to alternate in assuming supreme charge of the household arrangements, but each invariably sniffed and criticised during the week that the other was in charge, and otherwise intimated disagreeably that her way was the better way. For, be it understood, neither of these emancipated girls could possibly avoid interfering in the management of a home to the support of which she contributed; in her home things had to be done her way, for no other way was the right way, and it just naturally distressed her to have a home managed in any but the right way.

However emancipated she might be this was something that was ever on her mind, which may account for the fact that boarding house keepers do not look with favor upon women boarders.

Now, a short distance away there was another cozy little flat, which also suffered, but in a different way. In this flat two young men were domiciled, and it suffered from a lack of supervision. Here, too, an attempt was made to work the problem out on an alternate basis, and here, too, it failed. Just at the time when one of the bachelor girls was upbraiding the other bachelor girl for presuming to give any directions during the week that the former was in charge, one of the young men would be "roasting" the other young man for neglecting to attend to his business and make proper provision for the care of the flat and the meals necessary to comfort, not to say health.

THE TWO BACHELOR MAIDS.

Thus, while two people, in spite of all rules, were constantly occupied with the details of the management of one flat, two other people, also in spite of all rules, were constantly occupied with efforts to escape the details of the management of the other flat.

"For heaven's sake!" one of the young men would say, "you'd better let me take charge here, for you're a good deal better at this sort of thing than I am."

"Goodness me!" one of the bachelor girls would exclaim, about the same time, "you'd better leave all of the housekeeping to me, for I simply can't stand careless management in the home."

But neither the other bachelor girl nor the other young man would agree to such propositions, and things grew steadily worse in the two flats that all four finally sought out a wise woman to learn wherein the trouble lay.

"Is it possible," asked the girls, "that two people cannot live harmoniously in one cozy little flat? In spite of our best resolves there is constant friction and we are ever striving to usurp the temporary authority and responsibility, each of the other."

"Can it be," demanded the young men, "that two people cannot live together peacefully in a home of their own? In spite of our best resolves there is constant friction and we are ever striving to escape the temporary authority and responsibility, each of the other."

Thereupon the wise woman smiled in a superior way.

"This," she said, "is one of the simplest problems that ever was brought to my notice. The explanation of your troubles is easy, and the solution quite as easy."

"Shall we give up the flats?" they asked.

"No," replied the wise woman. "Keep both flats, but get a clergyman and two marrying licenses. You are divided up wrong."

GERMANS RECEIVE SURPRISE

Supposed Weak Tribe of Belligerents in South Africa Gives Them Strong Battle.

Germany is beginning to discover that the natives of southwest Africa are not altogether a negligible quantity when it comes to fighting, and it would also seem, says a South African, that the German authorities have been considerably astonished to find that the Hereros are not a small tribe of a few hundreds, but a well-armed and warlike nation, who are quite capable of putting a good many thousands of warriors in the field.

In the interests of civilization in South Africa, it is necessary that the rebellion should be quelled without delay, and, therefore, it is satisfactory to learn that, in view of the tactics and the astonishing numbers of the Hereros, the military authorities at Berlin are considering the advisability of dispatching another body of 1,200 men and of placing Lieut. Gen. Von Trotha in command of the entire force in the colony. If this is done it will give Germany an army of 3,000 men and 12 guns in southwest Africa, but as the rising appears to have become general it is very doubtful whether such a force will prove sufficient.

The Hereros, whose actual number no man really knows, will not be reduced to their former condition of peaceful servitude by a mere handful of white troops, and their latest exploits indicate an intention to fight to the end. Some of the reasons which caused the rising are plainly enumerated in a letter which has been published in Berlin. It was sent by a native Herero, one Phineas Gertze, employed on the Rand, to a relative, Leopold Mbauvums. Seven hundred Hereros from southwest Africa are working in the mines on the Rand, and the correspondent of the Tagliche Rundschau fears that they will all make odious comparisons between British and German methods. The native letter writer says:

"Here in the Transvaal, the country of the Englishmen is truly a good country. There is no ill treatment. Whites and blacks are on an equal footing and there is much work and much money, and even if thy overseer is there he does not beat thee. But if he does beat thee and has overstepped the law he also is punished."

Everyone familiar with the subcontinent is well aware that for many years the natives of German Southwest Africa have been complaining—with, we fear, only too good reason—of the tyranny of their German masters, who, indeed, have only themselves to thank for the revolt.

But the white man must rule in South Africa, and, whatever provocation they may have received, the Hereros must be severely punished for their massacre with impunity or destroy whole townships in cold blood. When the struggle is over the Germans will probably adopt more just and conciliatory tactics in dealing with the natives under their control.

HARD ON HER HUSBAND.

Delightfully Delicious Diatribe of a Wrathful Wife Delivered in 1810.

This woman composed the following vocabulary to express the character of a husband, some of her own experience, and which proves how copious our language is on that article: He is, said she, an abhorred, abominable, acrimonious, angry, arrogant, austere, awkward, barbarous, bitter, blustering, boisterous, boorish, brawling, brutal, bullying, capricious, captious, careless, choleric, churlish, clamorous, contumelious, crabbed, cross, currish, detestable, disagreeable, discontented, disgusting, dismal, dreadful, drowsy, dry, dull, envious, execrable, fastidious, forward, fretful, froward, frumpish, furious, grating, gross, growling, gruff, grumbling, hardhearted, hasty, hateful, hectoring, horrid, hufish, humersome, illiberal, illnatured, implacable, impolite, incorrigible, indelible, injurious, insolent, intractable, irascible, ireful, jealous, keen, loathsome, magotty, malevolent, malicious, malignant, maundering, mischievous, morose, murmuring, nauseous, nefarious, negligent, noisy, obstinate, obstreperous, odious, offensive, opinionated, oppressive, outrageous, overbearing, passionate, peevish, pervicacious, perverse, perplexing, pettish, petulant, plaguy, quarrelsome, queasy, queer, raging, restless, rigid, rigorous, roaring, rough, rude, rugged, saucy, savage, severe, sharp, shocking, sluggish, snappish, snarling, sneaking, sour, spiteful, splenetic, squeamish, stern, stubborn, stupid, sulky, sullen, surly, suspicious, tantalising, tart, teasing, terrible, testy, tiresome, touchy, towardly, treacherous, troublesome, turbulent, tyrannical, uncomfortable, unpleasant, unsuitable, uppish, vexatious, violent, virulent, waspish, worrying, wrangling, wrathful, yelping dog is a manger, who neither eats himself nor will let others eat.

One Franc for a Duelist's Life.

It will be remembered that in November last a duel with swords, in which the principals were MM. Charles Ebelot and Henri Lautier, ended in the death of the latter. His antagonist, an advocate from Toulouse, was the other day charged before the Seine assizes with "having by blows and wounds caused death unintentionally." Judging from the wording of the indictment, the law does not take duelists seriously, or it would not admit the supposition that they do not enter into the encounter with any deadly intention. In this case proof was forthcoming that the affair had been carried out fairly, according to the recognized rules of the code, and the prisoner was acquitted. The family of the deceased took no part in the criminal prosecution, but obtained, in the civil action, one franc damages and costs.—Paris Messenger.

Or the Iron Between.

In this world a man must either be anvil or hammer.—Longfellow.

LIFE IN THE BARREN LANDS.

The Comforts of Camping in a Country Where the Warmth of a Dog Is Welcome.

The Barren Lands, called by the Indians "Land of Little Sticks," are absolutely devoid not only of trees but even of brush, except for some stunted bushes to be found in occasional spots near the water's edge. These lands lie in British Columbia near the Great Slave lake. Mr. Casper Whitney, in describing a hunting-trip through this region, in "Mush-On, Bison, Sheep and Dog," says that a venture into the north country, except in summer, means a struggle with both cold and famine. Yet the lack of food was not so hard to bear as the wind, and camping was a continual discomfort.

"One of the first lessons I learned," writes Mr. Whitney, "was to keep my face free from covering, and also as clean shaven as was possible under such circumstances. It makes me smile now to remember the elaborate hood arrangement which was knitted for me in Canada, and which then seemed to me one of the most important articles of my equipment. It covered the entire head, ears and neck, with openings only for eyes and mouth, and in town I had viewed it as a great find; but I threw it away at the first opportunity. After other experiments, I found the simplest and most comfortable headgear to be my own long hair, which hung even with my jaw, bound about just above the ears by a handkerchief, and the open hood of my caribou-skin capote drawn far forward over it.

"The most trying hour in the 24 was at the camping time in the afternoon. The fire furnished no warmth; it was not built for that purpose; it was simply to boil the tea, and perhaps an idea of its being to drive away the flies. But by the time the snow in the kettle had melted into water, and the water began to boil, the fire was exhausted.

"Having drunk the tea, we rolled up in our fur robes, lying side by side round the fires, with feet toward the fire and head resting on the pack, knees into the back of the man next you, and with your snow-shoes under your head, away from the dogs that would eat the lacing.

"Sleep never came until the dogs had finished fighting over us, for as soon as we were rolled in our robes the dogs poured into the tepee. There were 28 dogs, and the lodge was about seven feet in diameter at its base. No hour in the day or night was more miserable than this, when these half-starved brutes fought over and on top of us before they finally settled down upon us.

"In extremely cold weather a dog curled up at your feet or back is not unpleasant; but to have one lying on your head, another on your shoulders or hips, or perhaps a third on your feet, and you lying on your side on rocky, uneven ground, is not a happy experience."

SNOWBALLS AMID FLOWERS.

School Children of San Jose, California, Permitted to Enjoy Novel Sport.

Although California is the land of flowers to which snowballing, except in the mountains, generally is forbidden, exceptions to the rule may be compelled. Such an exception, says the Overland Magazine, during the past winter, or rainy season, was witnessed in San Jose. One of the stage drivers to and from Mount Hamilton brought from there a barrel carefully packed with snow, and presented it to the pupils of the grammar school in the Garden city. Then the fun began. Most of the children had not seen snow before except in the distant mountain summits. They wanted to snowball, but they didn't know how, and they approached the problem in relative ways, for there is the crowning absurdity of the situation—some of their teachers didn't know how to teach them; although they were adults, never before had they come in contact with snow.

Some of the little chaps, after cautious investigation, discovered that the strange white stuff burned their fingers; it was so, and others, who had read or been told about it, feared that their hands would be frozen by the first contact with it. The experimental stage soon was past, however, and then the fun was fast and furious. It was such ecstasy as eastern children know, with the zest of novelty added to it. For a brief time school traditions and the proprieties maintained between teachers and pupils were thrown to the winds, and there was none so high or so low that a snowball might not batter him when least expected. The white missiles whizzed through bushes laden with roses or clipped the stately calla lilies from their stems as a knife might have done.

It was a touch of winter introduced into a garden of bloom and beauty, and, ah, but the boys, big and little, enjoyed it. For all of which some sort of reverence might be done to the Mount Hamilton stage driver—he has not forgotten that he once was a boy.

New Japanese Incense.

A late freak of fashion is the use of the Japanese perfume known as waterlily incense. Whether it is really made out of water lilies is a question to be determined by investigation, and whether it smells like these beautiful flowers is a matter of the imagination; but it smells good, and doctors say that it is of some slight value as a disinfectant in the sickroom. The incense is done up in little cakes, which are burned in the room, like the Chinese joss stick. It already well known in this country. The smoke carries a very delicate aromatic fragrance.—Detroit Free Press.

The New Woman

Women Must Overcome the Talkee-Talkee Habit

ONE morning I went into several department stores. I went early "to avoid the crush." It was only a few minutes after the opening time. I hate to say it about women, but I found it almost impossible to get any woman clerk to attend to me. The girls were having their morning half hour of tittle tattle. Gabble, gabbie, gizzle, giggle! I went to the counter. I stood and waited, first in one department, then in another. Not a girl budged, though several undoubtedly saw me. Then I called to ask if anybody would wait on me. Those females glared at me for my presumption in interrupting their gossip. They had not seen one another since the evening before, and they were so burning wild and crazy to pour themselves out in gossip from their nose up that they were offended at being interrupted. They just had to empty out all they knew. When my pertinacity forced one to come to me, she waited on me in a snappish, impertinent way, plainly to punish me for chopping her off in the customary morning gossip. That gossip was of clothes and men. In two departments where I went there were men clerks. I hate to say it again, but here every man was in his place, ready for business. Not a word was spoken by one of these men to another. They came forward at once as I approached and actually appeared to take an interest in serving me. They were polite and even kind. Their minds were on their work; there was nothing they considered of more importance than doing their duty. Their silence and politeness and attention to business were very soothing to the customers. If they talked little, they evidently were thinking, and it is safe to say every one of them was thinking how he could advance himself in business or learn more. Now, women will never advance to higher places or receive large salaries till they cease chattering and telling all they know and buckle down to their tasks. Incessant gabble fritters away the intellect.

One has noted considerable mention of the "only" woman delegate to the Republican nominating convention. As a matter of fact, four women alternate delegates sat regularly in that convention. In the case of Mrs. Charles A. Eldredge of Colorado Springs the principal delegate was absent, and Mrs. Eldredge voted in his place for the nominations of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. Then for the first time in 1904, a woman voted on the nomination of a president of the United States. Let us not forget it.

They say that the romance is all dying out of Spain because now the Spanish maidens have to go to work. Good thing!

You would not believe it unless a reliable person like me told you, but I actually walked myself up out of sound sleep the other night saying (or was it something or somebody else saying to me? I cannot tell this), "Many men are less polished than their shoes." Is not that fine for a dream speech?

The will in most human beings is in a state of infantile feebleness. Women especially need to cultivate it. Its power to help us achieve is infinite. This is how to cultivate it: Before you say "Yes" or "No" concerning any matter think carefully, even if quickly; then make your answer and stick to it though the sky fall. Form a plan after thorough and intelligent consideration; then also stick to that as long as you live, if need be. Think what Helen Keller, A. B., blind, deaf and dumb, has achieved. There is something very like magic in persistently willing a thing to come to pass, especially if you don't talk about it too much. Gabbling concerning plans scatters our forces, often rouses opposing forces.

When women desire to imitate man's dress, why don't they begin at the only really useful section of his costume and make an adaptation of the garment that allows free use of the lower limbs?

Recently I had the pleasure of meeting Miss Ida Tarbell, the scientific writer of history and biography. She told me something of her preparation for her life work, and I discovered in her fifteen years of thought and study to fit this lady for doing the splendid work which has placed her at the head of American writers in her line. Thorough preparation—that is the secret of all achievement worth anything. Whatever we undertake we must learn all there is to be learned concerning it or we do not know our business.

When you send a newspaper to a busy person, desiring that person to read some special article, always mark that article conspicuously.

Here is another woman for her sex to be proud of. She is Mrs. Christine Ladd Franklin, LL. D., the eminent psychologist. Mrs. Franklin has been appointed lecturer on logic and vision at Johns Hopkins university. Higher honor than this can scarcely be attained in the scientific world.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

WILD FLOWERS.

It Is Time American Women Took Measures to Preserve Them.

Just now I wanted to get some information about the simplest wild flower that grows, the anemone. I looked in a standard botany. No such name as anemone. Next an immense dictionary was consulted. It revealed that the anemone belonged to the crowfoot family. Back again to the text book of botany. No mention of crowfoot. Back once more to the great dictionary, this time under "crowfoot." There I found the crowfoot family was of the genus "ranunculus." The third time the school botany, in search of ranunculus. Here it is: "Ranunculus, herbaceous plants, with usually palmately or ternately lobed leaves without stipules. Calyx of three to six, usually five, distinct sepals." What a glorious science is botany, to be sure!

Who cares a rap whether the exquisite, dainty anemone's leaves have "stipules," or anything about the "sepals" of its calyx? Botany, as taught in ordinary works on this subject, makes the student a mere ruthless dissector of flowers, nothing more.

If there had been anything in scientific botany to make people admire and cherish flowers, the exquisite wild blossoms scattered like gems over our whole country would not be, as they now are, in danger of total extinction. The trailing arbutus, glory of spring and shedder of fragrance throughout all the eastern portion of this Union, is vanishing so fast that unless we begin to cultivate it extensively it will be known only to the memory of old people. Ruthless hands have grabbed it out of the ground, roots and all, in order to sell it, without a thought that it could not grow again.

The queenly, nodding red and yellow columbine that used to make glorious the shaded rocks on hillsides—where is it now? The bright green, cheery jack-in-the-pulpit, which tells us when the first breath of spring is here; the anemone, the gentian, the wild lady's slipper, the Dutchman's breeches, the purple flags, the marshmallow, the buttercup, the wild asales and scores of others—have at them with the rage of destruction! Push every blossom off their helpless stems. Leave not one to reseed the ground. Carry these tender flowers home, withering in your hot, unwholesome hand as you go, and then cast them into the ash barrel! Actually the bandits would tear up even the young dogwood tree by the roots and carry it away if they could only dig it out. As it is, the dogwoods in the vicinity of towns and cities will all be destroyed in a few years because of the annual murderous mutilation to which they are subjected.

It is sure if the present wholesale destruction of our American native wild flowers continues the slaughter must soon cease for want of victims, particularly in case of certain varieties. And the loss of them can never be made up to us by all the florist's art.

1. ANEMONE. 2. COLUMBINE 3 FRINGED GENTIAN.

Made known to all, therefore, should be the existence of the Wild Flower Preservation Society of America. At the instigation of woman it was started, and women as mothers, and especially as teachers, can best conduct its good work. Two wealthy ladies, sisters, Misses Caroline and Olivia Phelps-Stokes, donated a considerable fund for the culture of wild flowers in the vicinity of New York. The interest of the fund is to be spent by Professor Britton, director in chief of the New York Botanical garden. The money will be used in collecting and propagating wild flowers in the grounds of the Botanical garden. Professor Britton's chief assistant is his wife, who is devoted to her task.

Local chapters or societies will be formed in various parts of the country among public spirited persons who are awakened in this matter. No doubt Professor or Mrs. Britton, at the Botanical garden, borough of the Bronx, New York city, will give information on how to start a wild flower society, also what measures to take for their preservation.

Wherever in this land a botanical garden exists, one of its chief aims should be to hold fast to the wild flowers thereabout. Wealthy, private citizens can also have wild flower gardens in their grounds. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont already has one at her place near Hempstead, L. I.

All our garden flowers, of course, were originally wild ones. By culture, crossing and fertile soil the exquisite creations we know have been developed. It will be easy for women in the country to take at their leisure a collection of the growing wild flowers in their neighborhood and plant them in the home garden. It will be work that will delight the children too. A wild flower society in every farm neighborhood would have a refining, educative influence.

Long Gloves For Street Wear—Collarless Gowns For Warm Weather.

The fashion in gloves is changing—that is to say, long gloves are once more being worn on the streets on account of the many elbow sleeves. Softest lavender, white, pale yellow and mouse colored suede with pearl buttons are much worn in Paris. For morning wear with the tailor made dress the heavy white silk glove or the kid glove is the thing.

In Paris they are using wash lace veils with the Breton sailor hat. The well groomed woman who dresses neatly is a type we do not get tired of. Her opposite is the woman who invests in a lot of ready made frippery, including beads and chains of doubtful value and little pins of all kinds. Simplicity is one of the secrets of good dressing.

The collarless gown will be seen again as the season advances. It requires, however, some smart finish in the way of applique or embroidery, and it should never be seen on gowns of the "slimpsy" variety. A little piece of transparent lace made into a shallow yoke and collar is the best for the woman who is in doubt whether the collarless style is becoming to her or not.

Parasols this season are charming. The simple ones have long handles fitted with a ball of enamel or crystal. The more elaborate handles are often beautifully carved to represent grotesque animals' heads, birds, etc.

The picture shows a walking costume of mole colored cloth, having a cross over stole of velvet, embroidered in cream, gold and black.

ELABORATE TRIMMINGS.

English Embroidery In Dainty Shades—Pale Tints Fashionable.

The old fashioned drawn embroidery known as English embroidery makes lovely flounces in early Victorian fashions, and almost entire dresses are made of it and eked out with bands of fine lawn. Crude colors are not used in this cut work, but it is seen in artistic and uncommon tones, such as tomato red, begonia pink, pastel blue and orchid mauve.

There is a fancy just now in Paris for fancy leather trimmings. A gown on which this was seen recently was of dark blue voile. The skirt was trimmed with two flounces worked in an openwork design showing medallions of brown leather of a very fine lightweight description. Another dress which showed the same fad was of gray voile with a side and bodice trimmings of white leather and a deep girdle of the same composed of strips passed in and out of one another, while a white linen trimmed with bands of orange leather was one of the most effective toilets seen recently at Trouville.

The sash is being revived this season, and a favorite with silk gowns is one composed of the same silk with fringed ends and one or two knots.

PARIS FASHIONS.

Dainty Linen Walking Costumes—Orange a Smart Color For Telescopes.

In Paris the little morning costume of linen is very popular. It is made walking length, of course, and a very favorite method is to treat it with strappings of a darker shade, the smartest color at present being a tawny orange of an oriental richness and depth. Many tan skirts of linen are trimmed with graduated bands of this, and touches of orange are seen on many gray gowns.

A good deal of blue is also worn, particularly an old fashioned shade known as watchet and an indescribable blue known as porcelain.

A smart hat seen recently was of manila straw rolled up on one side and trimmed with folds of orange and brown velvet, while under the brim either side was a huge shaded orange rose, with a sheaf of brown wheat. This was worn with a gown of ecru embroidered muslin having a belt of Paisley silk—that is, silk figured in the Paisley shawl patterning.

A pretty gown of india mull seen recently had its skirt made in three tiers or flounces, the upper one headed by tiny gathered tucks. Each flounce was edged with tiny accordion plaited frills of white mull, with pink stitching. The bodice was treated in much the same fashion, and where flimsy material is concerned the three tiered skirt is always the most advisable model.

Sampler trimmings are very smart, and some of these worked on canvas wash beautifully, so that they can be used for linen dresses.

The picture shows a dotted muslin dress having a cape effect of English embroidery edged with ruching. The skirt has a double flounce.

SUMMER FASHIONS.

Fullness a Necessary Feature of Dress—New Evening Chemises.

A good many blouses are pouched both back and front, and they have a good deal of fullness. In fact, anything skimped is quite out of date as far as dress is concerned. The idea in some cases seems to be to get as much material as possible into the waist and skirt. The belts worn with these full waists are quite narrow in front, while they are wide in the back. Those who have slender figures can wear the belt of one width all the way around, and this is generally seen with the waist bloused both back and front. Suede and enamel leather belts are very popular, and they come in all the up to date tints.

The most up to date evening chemises are made without armholes, but simply two buttonholes, one back and the other front, through which a ribbon is run and tied in a bow. These chemises are also made with one or two flounces, to form an underskirt, thus reducing the number of garments which have to be worn. Sometimes these ribbon shoulder straps are removed when the toilet is complete, and thus there are no falling shoulder straps or turned down ones to spoil the costume.

The picture shows a white voile ball dress trimmed with tantalizing and heavy lace. A band of scarlet silk holds the coat together in front and gives a smart touch.

FASHION HINTS.

Elaborate Styles In Muslins—Net Waists For Evening Wear.

Bands of little tight roses are very smart worn around the wide crowns of some of the new sailor shapes.

Never before has so much muslin been worn. This is perhaps because the elaborate styles encourage dressmakers to make pretty gowns out of this perishable material. Muslin is a material which demands a great deal of fussiness, and for that reason the styles this year are particularly suited to it. The deep gathered flounce skirt with an upright heading is particularly adapted to muslin at the foot of this flounce. There may be two or three frills lace edged or else clusters of graduated tucks. The waists are made up elaborately with much lace and chiffon.

The elbow sleeve is being revived and in a glorified form finds its way into nearly every pretty summer dress. The wide folded belt is another feature of nearly every smart summer dress. It is not usually made of ribbon, but rather of some fancy silk cut on the bias. A great deal of flowered silk is used, and this is very smart, especially if the groundwork matches the dress material.

The net waist trimmed with medallions and patternings of lace is still about the smartest thing in evening blouses. Whole dresses are also made of this net either plain or ring spotted, and they are very dainty.

The picture shows a blouse of plaid silk made in simple tailor fashion. The model shows a long strapped shoulder seam and a box plaited front.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

COLORS AND MATERIALS.

Linen Costumes of the Latest Cut. Cotton Voile Dresses.

Pink is a favorite color in muslins this year, and it is shown in linen, linen and batiste. The fancy muslins with pink designs are very pretty, while silk muslins are charming with pink or mauve designs on a black ground.

A good many of the linen costumes are made with the loose bolero coat, which is worn over a soft blouse, and the little fitted coatee is worn over a fitted vest front. Pelerine collars are very effective on linen coats, and some are beautifully embroidered, while others are inlet with heavy lace motifs.

Flounces are very popular, and muslin skirts have many gathered frills of different width, but linen skirts are usually shown plaited or with flounces of the gored order. The newest flounce has a wide gathered heading at the top, and it often starts at the knees, a fashion which is very trying to small women.

The black hat is not worn so much as formerly. The tendency now seems to be to match the hat to the gown.

Cotton voile a species of canvas, is very effective when inlet with lace and lined with a color, but it is only pretty in light tones, as the darker ones make it look like cheap woolen material.

The picture shows a dress of dotted net. The waist has a coat effect of white and green striped silk trimmed with taffeta rochings.

CHILDISH DEFORMITIES.

Things Which, If Neglected, Mean Large Expenditure Later On.

No one used to mind when the baby sucked its thumb, except perhaps an admiring relative, who would exclaim dotingly, "How cunning!" as she watched the baby sleeping, with its little pink digit stoppered in its rosy mouth. But as the child grew up it was a difficult matter to break it of the habit. The little one would creep, hide in corners to indulge in prolonged sucks, only to be ferreted out with the stern reproof, "Sucking that thumb again!" But the reproof came rather late. As a result, the child, now grown up, has two of the homeliest thumbs any one would care to see and a badly shaped upper arch of teeth, which dentists say was caused primarily by that infantile sucking habit and which it has taken a small fortune to straighten out very imperfectly.

Little Jessie was pushed forward in school like a small hothouse vegetable.

"SUCKING THAT THUMB AGAIN!"

The poor child studied when she should have been playing in the open air. In her nervousness she bit her nails to the quick. But that wasn't so bad as another nervous habit she formed, that of biting unmercifully her under lip. She gnawed it and chewed it and tucked portions of it away in the corners of her mouth while she was puzzling over difficult mathematical problems, until, in a year or so, the lip became as coarse and thick as anything continually irritated and massaged will become. When she had grown into young ladyhood and was old enough to care, Jessie was told it would take a small fortune to remove this one unsightly spot in her otherwise attractive face.

In very much the same manner little Mary used to press her tongue against her upper teeth, with the result that she pushed them outward. This gave her what the dentists call "squirrel mouth."

Small John, who was allowed to be a mouth breather, also had a dentist's bill to face as he grew older. In his case the upper jaw had been so narrowed so that the lower teeth stuck beyond it. Also, thanks to this wrong habit of breathing, due to enlarged tonsils, he caught every disease going, including periodical attacks of tonsilitis.

In every case cited the expense incurred and the pain suffered by these children as they grew up were due to their parents' lack of vigilance and foresight.

THE CHINA COLLECTOR.

How She May Arrange to Advantage Her Cherished Pieces.

Very often women collectors have many dozens of beautiful plates, but do not know how to arrange them artistically so that they will show to the best advantage.

The picture shows one scheme which was adopted by a woman who had been collecting for some time blue and white antique pottery and china.

The overmantel on which they are placed is of whitewood and consists of four shelves supported by brackets at the sides. The top shelves are narrower than the bottom ones. Between the lowest shelf and the mantel there is a mirror which reflects the daintier pieces of china placed upon it. The walls are of a buff shade, which goes beautifully with deep blue, and the furniture in the room is of the antique colonial type, to harmonize with the quaint china.

Warm Weather

How the Wise and the Foolish Women Stand It

"GOODNESS me, what a warm day! I feel as if I should die!" Mrs. Foolish exclaims that she fans herself vigorously.

Mrs. Commonsense rocks to and fro comfortably. She doesn't seem to mind the heat at all, but perhaps there is a reason for that. Per se—thing she wears no collar. Any woman can tell you what a difference that makes. The neck of her thin dimity gown is cut away a trifle and edged with a dainty bit of appliqué. The dress itself, as I said, is of dimity, made rather simply, but with openwork insertions to let in the air. Mrs. Foolish, on the other hand, wears one of the stiffly starched linen so called "ladies made" shirt waist dresses, and her long suffering heck is incased in the most towelly and thick of four-in-hands. Her pedal extremities likewise boast the heaviest thing in patent leathers, while Mrs. Commonsense has on a comfortable pair of slippers—not of patent leather.

"I'm sure I don't know why I mind the heat so!" waits little Mrs. Soakley as she absorbs her fifth (or is it tenth?) "cooling" beverage in the roof garden of the Hotel Up-and-Going. And she doesn't realise that all these fizzy (some of them alcoholic) compounds are only aggravating her misery after their first delusive effect has worn off.

And Miss Oldfashioned—the heat simply kills her! She wakes up more than half dead in the morning. Why on earth does Miss Oldfashioned sleep on a soft mattress when a hard one is what she wants in hot weather, so that she won't sink into it? And why doesn't she move her bed right next to the window, even at the risk of mussing somewhat the prim orderliness of her room? And why doesn't she leave her transom open so as to make a current of air? You can't have too much air in your sleeping room.

Then here is another thing. Little Miss Jones, the stenographer down at the office, simply has her nerves worn to a frazzle. She thumps away at the keys with an excitable air distressing to behold, while at the same time she wilts under the heat. What is the trouble with Miss Jones, and what will cause her nervous breakdown she will soon have? Simply a case of mistaken diet. Miss Jones believes in the strengthening powers of meat regardless of the thermometer; also coffee is her favorite beverage. Consequently she eats meat about three times a day with coffee, iced or otherwise, on the side. If Miss Jones would try a vegetarian diet during the dog days her temper, her complexion and, most of all, her health would strangely and wonderfully improve.

Perhaps Miss Star, the actress, is the most sensible of all. She gets enough gayety and fine dressing during the season to appreciate the absence of it, so she goes to a farm where she saves money and acquires rosy cheeks and health for the vicissitudes of the coming winter. The heat has no terrors for her as she lies on the grassy bank by the river, taking a real rest, for the ground is always cool when a washable gingham frock permits you to lie close to it, and there is almost always a breeze in the trees overhead.

Also Mrs. Wisdom, who stays in town, doesn't manage so badly either. She takes her experience of life with evenings and shakes, she lies around in muslin negligee reading the most airy and interesting of literature, she takes baths with sea salt in her commodious bathtub, and in the evening she goes to some roof garden or to an informal gathering at a friend's house, where lemonade and small talk help to pass away the hours. She keeps hubby by her side, if she has a hubby, and if Mrs. Wisdom is a widow she doesn't lack for escorts, I can assure you!

Above all, neither Mrs. Wisdom nor Miss Star allows herself to prink or worry during the hot days, and perhaps that is the main reason why both feel the heat so little.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,
ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,
HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Theodore Roosevelt has gained much reputation from his literary efforts and his works comprise a collection of rare value, but nevertheless the Republican campaign managers may find that it does not always do to have a Presidential candidate who has freely expressed his opinions in black and white. The Democratic newspapers are already quoting his book for political effect, among them being The Philadelphia Record, which by the way is owned by John Wanamaker, a Republican of the most pronounced type. This journal gives the following citations from Mr. Roosevelt's books, all of which it vouches for as authentic:

Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of Independence and of the Virginia resolutions establishing religious toleration, and the maker of the Louisiana Purchase: He was "vacillating," "timid," a "shifty doctrinaire," "incompetent," "ungrateful," "intriguing against Washington," "constitutionally unable to put the proper value on truthfulness," and "the most incapable Executive that ever filled the Presidential chair." James Madison, the Father of the Constitution and the President who brought the war of 1812 to an honorable close: He was "timid, "incapable," "a ridiculously incompetent leader for a war with Great Britain," a man "of imbecile capacity" who brought "shame and disgrace to America." James Monroe, the courageous, wise and moderate President who hurled the great "Doctrine" in behalf of political freedom in this hemisphere in the face of the Holy Alliance, and whose eight years term is known in American history as the "Era of Good Feeling:" He was a mere "figurehead," and his administration as Secretary of War under Madison was a triumph of imbecility to the last." Andrew Jackson, the hero of New Orleans and the President who throttled the United States monster: He was also a "figurehead," besides being "ignorant," "managed by politicians," and conducting an Administration that "corrupted the public service in every way."

Right here in Union county where people boast of the fact that the population is law abiding, an amusement resort is being run wide open on Sunday. Dancing is one of the attractions, while catch-penny devices are other allurements which draw the crowd of entertainment seekers to Galvin's Park, which is located on the trolley line between Scotch Plains and Westfield. The patrons of the resort do not seem to have any more regard for the day than does the management. The Sabbath is desecrated wantonly by those who are not satisfied to confine their pleasure hunting to the six days of the week in a way that shocks the better element. There is no just reason why dancing should be tolerated at Galvin's Park any more than it would be in this city. The fact that such amusement is allowed at Coney Island or any other resort of that type has no bearing. Simply because the law is violated elsewhere furnishes no excuse for it being done in Union county, New Jersey. True it may be said that Plainfield does not directly suffer, except by the boisterousness of the crowd returning by trolley late at night, but that does not alter the case. Plainfielders are proud of Union county and are zealous of maintaining its good reputation. That nuisance should be abated at once and it is to be hoped that if the neighboring residents do not take action that the county prosecutor will.

Musical Service.

There will be a special musical service at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday night under the direction of Clifford Ehrhart, organist. There will be extra volume in the choir and Rev. Charles E. Herring will give a talk on music. This will be the pastor's last service before starting on his summer vacation.

Purchases Arabian Steed.

While abroad, Charles W. McCutchen, of the borough, purchased a valuable Arabian saddle horse and arrangements were made to have the animal brought to this country by two Arabs.

AMUSEMENTS.

It is interesting to watch the high crowds and notice the satisfied expressions of delight all over the patrons' faces as they leave the Music Pelee building at Coney Island, and there is no room for doubt but that they have been pleased, thrilled, startled and surprised at the showing of the most elaborate and costly electric scenic production ever introduced in this country, or, as a matter of fact, the world. In recent years nothing has proven more startling than the eruption of Mount Pelee on the Island of Martiniques, which wiped out of existence the beautiful, picturesque old city of St. Pierre. Today you can witness this mountain pouring forth its burning destruction without fear or injury. It is indeed a magnificent electrical and scenic display without an equal. It is enough to say that this grand educational institution is under the same management as the great Johnstown Flood, which is a sufficient guarantee of its worth and merit.

"Paris by Night," the new and elaborate musical production of Messrs. Weber and Rush, had its initial performance in New York atop the famous Madison Square Garden Saturday night, July 2, and scored one of the most emphatic successes in the records of metropolitan amusements. The roof was crowded with a critical audience which included all the well known first nighters of the metropolis, and during the evening each prominent players in Law M. Field, Lillian Russell, Fay Templeton, William Collier, Alice Fisher, Marie Cahill, Nella Bergen, DeWolf Hopper, Isadore Rush, Corinne, Eddie Foy, Peter F. Dailey, Raymond Hitchcock, Joseph Miron and scores of others dropped in to witness the new spectacle. Although the performance lasted until midnight, not a handful of the two thousand persons comprising the audience left until the entertainment was concluded—the best test, it is generally admitted, as to the merits of a production. "Paris by Night" is a musical fetjollity in two acts, by Harry B. Marshall, music by Robert W. Edwards, the scenes of which are laid in Paris, and concern the adventures of a standard American theatrical troupe in the French capital. There are over sixty persons in the cast, most of whom are girls of exceptional beauty, and there is an atmosphere of Bohemianism about the entire performance that is inexpressibly pleasing.

Not since the remarkable engagement of Miss Viola Allen in "The Eternal City" began at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, November 17, 1902, in the Hall Caine latest play been seen in Manhattan. Hence the coming engagement at the Academy of Music, New York city, which is to have its opening Thursday, August 4, is likely to attract unusual interest. There are several excellent reasons to anticipate such results, for it is rarely indeed that the theatregoers of New York and vicinity are given an opportunity to see a stupendous production like that of "The Eternal City" and in the very heyday of its popularity, at a Academy of Music prices. But this production is really of a more elaborate character than ever, having been built especially for the Academy of Music stage, and its opportunities.

"Piff, Paff, Pouf" has stirred things up in lively fashion on Broadway. It is playing to record-breaking business at the famous Casino. Polite society is very much in evidence there at every performance. For instance, at one performance last week the fourteen boxes of the pretty theatre were filled with parties including those of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Governor Odell, Col. Reuben Fax, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. Manager F. C. Whitney has certainly provided "Piff, Paff, Pouf" with the best company ever seen or heard in a musical comedy. The funny contingent, led Eddie Foy, includes Miss Alice Fischer, Joseph Miron, John Hyams, Grace Cameron, Abbie Stange and George Wiseman, gets capital laughs from the rise to the fall of the curtain. When it comes to voicing the melodies of Jean Schwartz it would be difficult to find a more competent band of singers than Amelia Stone, Mabel and Hilda Hollins, Joseph Miron, Templar Saxe and Maurice Darcy.

Entertained Children.

Miss Zaidee M. VanBoskerck, assisted by Miss Emily Tracy, Miss Marion Bowen and Miss Edith Cairns, entertained a large number of children at a lawn party at the home of Miss VanBoskerck, Saturday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in playing games, several prizes being given to the winners.

Firemen's Baseball Game.

The local firemen's baseball team has decided to play a return game with the Brooklyn firemen on Monday, August 8. The contest will take place in Prospect Park Brooklyn, and a large delegation of rooters will accompany the fire laddies to the City of Churches and help them win.

DANCING ON SUNDAY AT GALVIN'S RESORT

Floor Manager of Nearby Trolley Park Dance Hall Seems to Feel Protected.

NO ACTION IS TAKEN

"DON'T BE AFRAID ANYONE WILL BE ARRESTED," SAYS ANNOUNCER.

Crowd Spends Evening at the Resort—Puzzle to Know Where Manager Got His Assurance.

"Sunday afternoon there will be a musical programme in the hall. If you start to dance—well, we won't stop you. Don't be afraid that anyone will be arrested for they will not."

Such was the announcement made by the floor manager of Galvin's Park dancing pavilion, Saturday night. He spoke with perfect assurance and in an inviting way that was not misconstrued by the assemblage of young men and women. Relying on his word there was a good-sized gathering in the place at an early hour last night and the dance was on just the same as it is six other nights in the week.

This announcement of the floor manager's and the subsequent dancing, practically defies those who have disapproved of the practice and who have taken steps to stop it. It has also led to a discussion in Scotch Plains in the confines of which the Park is located, as to where the manager derived his information that the dancers would not be molested. During the past week word supposed to have come from the authorities as much as declared that the practice would be stopped and many of the residents were looking forward to it. Accordingly, the invitation to be at the place and enjoy the waltz and two step in the face of the adverse feeling occasioned much surprise.

IMPROVING 'PHONE EXCHANGE

ENLARGING SWITCHBOARD TO PROVIDE CONNECTION FOR NEW 'PHONES.

Extensive alterations have been commenced at the local telephone exchange which will provide better service for the subscribers and give more convenience for the employes. Three more sections are to be added to the switchboard, making a total of nine, that will provide for many more connections as is required by the new 'phones now being installed.

In the business department, the manager's office is undergoing improvements and a separate compartment is being built for the chief operator and check clerks. When concluded the plans will make the exchange one of the most complete and best equipped in the State.

Bicyclist Meets With Mishap.

Frank O. Fisher, of West Third street, is confined to his home with a broken arm and other injuries received in a bicycle accident, Saturday. He was riding along at a rapid pace when the front forks of his machine broke throwing him to the ground with great force. He was taken home by friends and Dr. Cregar was called to attend him.

Sprained His Foot.

George Taylor, of East Second street, is obliged to go about with the aid of crutches, having recently sprained his foot. He was walking up a pair of slippery stairs leading to his shop when he fell. The sprain is a bad one and it will probably be some time before Mr. Taylor will have the use of the foot again.

Sails to Wed in South Africa.

Miss Maud Isabel A. Law, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Law, of Dunellen, sailed on the Steamship Finland on Saturday for Johannesburg, South Africa, where she will wed H. M. Delany, a former resident of Philadelphia. Mr. Delany has been living in South Africa two years. The couple will make their home at Johannesburg.

Pulpit Supplies.

While Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, is away on his vacation the pulpit will be occupied by these supplies; Rev. G. M. Shotz, of Scotch Plains; Rev. J. W. Muncie, of Faith chapel; Rev. George Mooney, of Monroe Avenue church; Rev. J. A. Cubberly, of South Plainfield, and Rev. L. T. Lindholm, of the Swedish Pilgrim church.

Co. K Rifle Practice.

Arrangements are being made by the officers of Co. K to take a large delegation to Sea Girt on Tuesday, August 9, for rifle practice. It is expected that sixty men will make the trip and judging by past performances a larger per centage should qualify.

TWO ITALIANS HURT IN STABBING AFFRAY

DeBlairo, Accusing Novarro, a Cousin of Lango, of Being a Stool Pigeon, Causes Trouble.

POLICE MAKE ARRESTS

BRAWL AT THE LAKE STREET COLONY ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

Both Men Are Fined in the City Court—Italians Bitter Against Novarro, Who is Said to Have Helped Police.

Believing that Dominick Novarro was the man who furnished information to the police that led to the arrest of Flaviono Longo, the accused burglar, Pellegrino DeBlairo and other Italians in the Lake street colony, set upon the first named Sunday afternoon and started a stabbing affray that bade fair to rival last Sunday's brawl in the borough. Novarro had been stabbed in the face several times and DeBlairo was bleeding from two bad cuts when the police arrived. These two were arrested and were placed on cots after having their hurts attended. This morning DeBlairo was fined $10 and Novarro $5 after they had been arraigned in the city court.

Longo, the man who is supposed to have entered the homes of F. A. Clark and Stephen Caboone, is a cousin to DeBlairo and he also has other relatives in the colony. Novarro has been frequently accused of "tipping" the police and when Longo was arrested his people at once blamed Novarro for it, although they knew that he had been caught trying to dispose of stolen jewelry. Bad feeling has existed since and Sunday matters came to a climax when DeBlairo accused Novarro openly of being a "stool pigeon" and helping to send his friends to prison. The latter resented the accusation and the fight followed.

The noise of the affray attracted the attention of neighbors and the police were summoned. Driver O'Gorman and Patrolman Myers responded quickly and captured the two ring leaders, the others fleeing before their approach. Novarro is one of the pioneer Italian residents of the city and is very well known.

LITERARY.

Alan Dale contributes a remarkably interesting article to the August number of Ainslee's Magazine on the modern Paris theatres. His description of the places of amusement visited by him while on a recent trip to Paris for Ainslee's Magazine reads like a romance. The condition of even the best of the Parisian theatres, as compared with our own luxurious playhouses, seems almost inconceivable. And yet France is the home of the drama!

For many years the August number of Scribner's Magazine has been the fiction number of the year, noted for its selection of the best short stories obtainable, with the most beautiful and elaborate illustration in color, and in black and white. The issue of this year is a remarkable one. It contains short stories by Rudyard Kipling, Edith Wharton, Thomas Nelson Page, Josephine Dastam Bacon, and others; serials by Robert Grant and Nelson Lloyd; and poems by Henry vanDyke, Bliss Carman and E. S. Martin. Certainly no more distinguished list of writers has appeared together in a single number of a magazine.

Contents of the August "Success"—"Diplomatic Mysteries" (III—The Great Austrian Conspiracy), Vance Thompson; "Poems of Inspiration," (1) "The Other Fellow's Job," Strickland W. Gillilan; (2) "Those Who Do Their Best," Roy Farrell Greene; "Bara-No-Hana" (a story), L. Du Pont Syle; "People We Read About," (containing half-tone reproductions of photographs and short sketches of Major-General Henry G. Corbin, U. S. A., Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, W. S. Rogers, Jr., 99, 12—87; H. M. Wilcox, 119, 28—94.

Next Saturday the team will play a return match with the Arsdale Golf Club at East Orange.

Sunday Excursion to Mauch Chunk.

There is no more popular resort for a Sunday than Mauch Chunk, and to reach it entails a delightful rail journey, and as Mauch Chunk there is a diversity of amusements, the chief of which is a ride over the Switchback. This journey occupies more than one hour, and leads over and around the mountains with widely changing scenes as every turn. The Switchback is a gravity road, and the speed attained is close to a mile per minute. A pleasure feature in Plainfield, the summit of which is reached by trolley and from its pinnacle point there is a view extending over miles and miles of beautiful country. An interesting spot close at hand is Glen Onoko, a short distance above Mauch Chunk, and, as its name implies, is a beautiful glen, with falls, cataracts, mountain paths leading to cool and delightful places. On July 31 the New Jersey Central is to run a popular excursion to Mauch Chunk from Plainfield by special train leaving at 9:20 a. m., returning train will leave Mauch Chunk at 5:40, and the round trip will cost but $1.50. Frequent train service will be in effect between Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko, and trains on the Switchback run every few minutes.

Children's Home Building Moved.

The Children's Home building has been moved from its former location on Jackson avenue to the new one on Westervelt avenue. It is located seventy feet from the side sidewalk line and is in a position to secure the full benefit of the sun at all hours during the day. At the former site it was surrounded by trees which excluded light and air.

CHANGE IN TROLLEY SYSTEM

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATION REARRANGES TRANS-STATE SERVICE.

The Public Service Corporation is advertising for motormen and conductors in this section, with a view to changing the system under which the trans-State service from New York to Trenton is operated. A single car now takes the entire distance each way, and the result is a number of complications in the matter of meal hours and returning men to their homes at convenient hours. It is planned to let each division handle a through car, putting a new crew on for each division.

A scarcity of competent motormen and conductors prevents the immediate installation of the system. The trans-State trip is popular, and not a car goes through this city without a crowd.

AMUSEMENTS.

Pretty girls in pretty costumes were the all pervading feature of the entertainment presented at the New York Theatre Monday night for the first time in New York. It was called "The Maid and the Mummy," and was described as "a musical melange." Richard Carle wrote the book and Robert Hood Bowers the music. Mr. Bowers has considerable cause for self-congratulation. Of tinkling music there is no end. One song in particular, "Julia," was sung over and over again. The audience could not seem to get enough of it, which was mainly due to the excellent work of the chorus and Edward Garvie, who gave the verses with an unction that was highly entertaining. There was no plot, but the comedy contained a number of well known and competent players. Mrs. Annie Yeamans got a rousing reception when she tripped on with the agility of a young soubrette. Richard F. Carroll and Louis Wesley were amusing, and Miss Adele Rowland made a pronounced hit. The theatre was packed.

PLAINFIELD ARTIST'S PORTRAIT OF BISHOP

Mr. Griffin at Work on Painting of Rt. Rev. Dr. Croes, the First Episcopal Bishop of N. J.

FOR GREATGRANDSON

FINISHED A CANVAS OF GOV. BLOOMFIELD SOMETIME AGO.

Charles Bloomfield, of Metuchen, Orders the Pictures—He is a Descendent of Both the Bishop and the Governor.

W. H. Griffin, of Putnam avenue, the artist who painted the portrait of Governor Bloomfield, New Jersey's first Democratic Governor, which now hangs in the State House at Trenton, is at work painting one of New Jersey's first Episcopal Bishop, Rt. Rev. Dr. Croes. Both portraits were ordered by the great grandson of both these distinguished Jerseymen, Charles Bloomfield, of Metuchen.

Bishop Croes was ordained as Bishop in 1815. Up to the time of the Revolution the Episcopal church in the United States was under the Bishop of London. Bishop Croes lived in New Brunswick and died in 1882. He was succeeded by Bishop Doane, father of Bishop Doane, of Albany, and of Monsignor Doane, of Newark, who was succeded by Bishop Odenheimer, the predecessor of Bishop Scarborough, the present incumbent.

It is a coincidence that the artist, Mr. Griffin, was a companion in youth, of John Croes, the great-grandson of the Bishop whose portrait he is now painting.

ALIS TO GET A PITCHER

REPORT THAT ANOTHER TEAM MAY REPRESENT PLAINFIELD.

There will be a change in the Alis ball team and that very soon. This announcement was made this morning by Arthur Boone, a member of the baseball committee. Mr. Boone said that outside of the pitching department the committee believes it has a strong team and steps will be taken at once to secure a strong twirler. Every effort will be made to have a first-class team before Saturday's contest.

It was learned today that subscriptions were received last week for the purpose of getting a first-class pitcher and why such a man was not secured is puzzling those who helped in the movement. The supporters of the team claim that Manager Johnston's failure to have a strong man in the box on Saturday is not excusable, even though he was unable to get Wolfe, now of the Washington American team. They contend that he had the whole week to get a man and if there were any doubts as to Wolfe coming here, he should have arranged for another pitcher to go in the game.

There are rumors in town today that unless the Alis Club makes a decided change at once, steps will be taken by others to place a representative team in the field here. Those behind this movement, it is said, are well-known baseball men who have had experience and who are desirous that Plainfield have a team that will prove a worthy foe for Westfield. The action of the Alis Club this week will govern the movement to get another team for the town.

It was learned this morning that the money collected by private subscription for the purpose of getting a pitcher on Saturday, has been returned to the subscribers.

BABY PARADE.

Arrangements Made for Annual Show at Asbury Park.

Baby parade day at Asbury Park has definitely been set for Wednesday, August 31. The coronation ceremonies, which begin this greatest of Asbury Park's celebrations, will be held in the Casino the Monday evening preceding. A stage director has been engaged from New York, and the Children's Carnival Association directors promise something more elaborate and beautiful this year than ever before. Besides the Queen, who has not yet been selected, there will be a Princess Cinderella, a Prince Charming and the same number of maids as before. The firemen's parade will be Tuesday afternoon, and that evening the masque carnival will give every one an opportunity for fun.

More than $200 worth of loving cups have so far been given by hotel keepers as prizes for the baby parade, and it is expected that every representative house here will present its award in the shape of a cup.

Many Afflicted With Poisoning.

Fifty families in Passaic are ill with ptomaine poisoning, the result of using bad milk.

THROWN FROM AUTO; ONE SERIOUSLY INJURED

Miss Emily Mehr Hurt Internally by Being Pitched From "Mayor" Smith's Machine.

DASHED INTO CURB

REAR END OF AUTO SWINGS AROUND AND STRIKES TREE.

Accident on West Front Street—Three Members of the Party Only Slightly Hurt—Machine Wrecked.

Seeking to avoid a trolley car coming toward him, "Mayor" William B. Smith, of New Market, turned his handsome new automobile too quickly on West Front street, last Monday, and ran it into the curbing. The rear part swung into a tree, smashing it badly, and throwing the owner and three relatives in all directions. Miss Emily Mehr, of New York, a niece of Smith's, collided violently with a tree and received severe internal injuries and bruises on every part of her body. The "Mayor" and the other two occupants of the vehicle, whose names he refused to give, were bruised and scratched but otherwise unhurt.

The accident occurred just west of Albert street, as the party was on the way home from this city. Smith was handling the machine which is the one he had built especially for him and brought it back with him from his recent Western trip. He shared the front seat with a young man, while Miss Mehr and another young woman occupied the rear part. The four were laughing and chatting as the auto was speeding along, partly over the tracks, when Smith noticed the car was almost upon them. He gave a quick turn and reversed the driving gear, but as the street was wet, the rear part of the machine swung over and struck the tree.

The collision ripped off part of one side and stove in the rear. The mechanism was also thrown out of order and in other ways the auto was rendered useless. All but Miss Mehr quickly sprang to their feet after being thrown out, but she lay stunned and helpless. She was carried to the home of Thomas King, directly opposite the scene of the accident, and Dr. H. W. Currie was summoned. He made the young woman as comfortable as possible and as soon as convenient she was removed to Smith's home. Today she was resting easily and while in no immediate danger, it will be many weeks before she recovers fully.

CLINTON AVE. TEAM WON

DUNELLEN TEAM DEFEATED BY A SCORE OF 18 TO 3.

The reorganized Dunellen team went down to defeat on Saturday at the hands of the Clinton Avenue nine, the score being 18 to 3. This was the first defeat for Dunellen's new aggregation. Whitley, the former Y. M. C. A. twirler, was knocked out of the box by the Clinton Avenue boys, the visitors making twenty hits for a total of twenty-seven bases. Giles relieved Whitley in the seventh, and stopped the heavy hitting. Brit. Martin's batting was a feature for the visitors.

This was the lineup and score by innings:

Clinton Avenue—Barnes, 1b; Beckman, 2b; Martin, 3b; Scott, rf; O'Loughlin, c; Smith, cf; VanArsdale, p; J. Martin, ss; Magee, lf.

Dunellen—Giles, ss-p; Craig, 3b; Mathews, 1b; Hill, rf; Garvey, 2b; Whitley, p-ss; Alberts, cf; Emery, lf; Davis, c.

Dunellen..... 0 0 1 0 0 1 0 1 0— 3

Two-base hits—B. Martin, 2; Magee, Mathews, 2; Garvey. Struck out—By VanArsdale, 7; by Whitley, 5. Base on balls—Off VanArsdale, 3; off Whitley, 5. Hit by pitcher—O'Loughlin, Magee. Wild pitches—Whitley, 2. Umpires—Mr. Craig, of Dunellen, and Mr. Fiazz, of Westfield. Scorer—Mr. Darlington. Time of game—Two hours. Attendance—400.

Outing for Parish's Children.

At a meeting of the Sunday-school teachers of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, Saturday evening, plans were discussed for an outing to be given to the Sunday-school children in place of the regular excursion which will not be held this summer. After consideration it was decided that the children be given an outing at the grounds of the Hotel Netherwood next Saturday afternoon. It is planned to have the members of the Sunday-school assemble at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the grounds where the afternoon will be passed with an entertainment and games. A supper is to be served by the women of the parish, later in the afternoon.

REJECT ALL BIDS FOR SCHOOL BUILDING

North Plainfield Board of Education Postpones Contracting for Structure's Erection.

BIDS ARE EXCESSIVE

FIGURES MADE BY VARIOUS CONTRACTORS FOR THE WORK.

Original Appropriation $36,000—$5,500 Spent for Site—Architect Marsh Assists the Board.

Exceeding the available funds on hand by $3,360, the borough Board of Education at a special meeting, last Monday, was compelled to reject all bids for the erection of the new Somerset street school. The lowest total reached $39,760, while the original appropriation was $36,000, from which $5,500 has already been deducted for the purchase of the site. Architect A. L. C. Marsh, who was in attendance, was at once instructed to alter the plans to come within the necessary amount and they will be gone over by the building committee this evening. In all probability new bids will be asked for within a week.

The bids as submitted were as follows: Mason work, B. F. Tallamy & Brother, $18,979; W. C. Smith, $17,975; W. H. Pangborn, $16,990; carpentering, John Abbott, $12,600; Wyman & Haberle, $11,963; Herman Hansen, $11,265; George Hummer, $11,029; painting, James C. Hansen, $1,975; Woolston & Buckle, $1,175; Harold Hansen, $997; plumbing, D. J. Galbraith, $545; electrical work, Allen B. Laing, $940; Craig & Agnar, $749; heating, American Heating Company, $5,200; Fuller & Warren, $3,365. All but the bidders for the heating are from this city. Each bid was accompanied by a certified check and these were ordered returned.

In discussing the plans afterward Architect Marsh informed the Board that the only way the cost could be made to come within the appropriation would be to cheapen the materials, as has been done with the city High School plans. He explained where this could be done and suggested members of the Board made various suggestions that will enable him to work with a better understanding as to their wants. The principal changes will be in the brick and trimmings.

Several other business matters were transacted by the Board but none of them were of any importance. It was motioned that the ceilings in the Watchung school be painted at a cost not to exceed $50 and Mr. Valiant reported that initial steps had been taken toward selling the new school bonds. Many inquiries have been received by prospective bidders and they are being answered with the printed circulars prepared.

On motion, the Board adjourned until August 8, at which time the new bids will be received and the contract for the school awarded if they are acceptable.

WORKMEN'S GRUESOME FIND

REMAINS OF A SUPPOSEDLY MURDERED INFANT ARE UNEARTHED.

Workmen engaged in straightening a road between Oak Tree and Leslie, last week, unearthed the remains of what had once been the form of an infant, together with a nursing bottle, that practically clears up a mystery which has puzzled that section for many years.

When the find was reported, an old colored resident declared that not a great while ago a family living near Oak Tree suddenly disappeared, not leaving the first hint as to why or where they had gone. Later a rumor was prevalent that some unlawful transaction had led to the flight and it became coupled with a story that the family's infant had been murdered.

This has been believed by the old residents all along and when the bottle and remains were taken up last week they immediately recalled the circumstances. The bottle had evidently contained an acid which had been given the child to kill it and when this was accomplished, earth was hastily piled over it as the remains were less than a foot below ground. The neighborhood is generally convinced over the find but as all trace of the family has long since been lost the matter will not be taken up by the authorities.

A. I. Littell Improving.

The condition of Albert I. Littell, who is at the hospital with a fractured leg, is much improved. The broken bones are knitting favorably and the physician in charge is much encouraged. Mr. Littell now experiences less pain than at any time since the accident.

CO. K'S CLUB IS ORGANIZED

SERGEANT SEIDERS IS CHOSEN CHAIRMAN OF THE ASSOCIATION.

Further steps were taken by the members of Company K to form a social organization, last Monday, by electing the following officers: Chairman, Sergeant Augustus Seiders; treasurer, Corporal Alfred Trancheard; secretary, Private Arthur Morrison. A committee consisting of Corporal Trancheard, Private William Bond and James Miles was appointed to secure reading matter and arrange for the social affairs during the winter.

It was decided to have the armory open every evening in the week and make provision for the members and visiting militiamen. Games are to be installed and periodicals and papers added until the armory will eventually become a very interesting place. Captain Martin has taken great interest in the preparations and has given his support in several ways.

SOLD FORMER HOSE HOUSE

HERMAN KLINSMAN BUYS IT FROM THE BOROUGH FOR $700.

At a special meeting of the borough Council, last Monday, the former West End hose house on Harrison street, was sold to Herman Klinsman for $700, his being the highest bid received. In voting to accept his offer the Councilmen were evenly divided and the deciding ballot was cast by Mayor Smalley. The building was erected seven years ago and with the ground originally cost the borough $1,500.

What to do with the building was a problem which agitated the Councilmen from the time the volunteer department was disbanded and several of them were opposed to selling it. Councilman VanWinkle, in particular, wanted the building donated to the Board of Education to be used as a kindergarten and last evening when the subject was brought up he still urged that it be kept to be used for some public purpose. He was upheld by others but Mayor Smalley expressed the opinion that the present fire department system had proven a success, would be maintained and there would be no need of it in that direction; furthermore, the borough would gain by accepting a reasonable offer.

The only other item of business transacted during the meeting was the reading of a communication by Clark Bowlby, from Corporation Counsel Reed, in which he notified the Council that the new tax law required the members to examine the assessor's books on the second Tuesday in August. Accordingly, adjournment was taken until that date.

POOR CHILDREN MADE HAPPY

CHURCH PEOPLE ENTERTAINED FRESH AIR HOME OCCUPANTS.

Delegations from the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society visited the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home Saturday afternoon and provided special entertainment for the 125 little New Yorkers now at the camp. To the children the features of the afternoon was perhaps the performance of the magician and sleight of hand artist secured from New York through the kindness of G. E. Hall.

Following this performance the children themselves took part in all sorts of games about the house and grounds. A peanut hunt, arranged by Miss Alice Brown, of the Park Avenue C. E. Society, proved especially popular. In place of a regular supper, the children were served with sandwiches and cake, furnished by the women of the Park Avenue Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Societies.

G. E. Hall provided fifty quarts of ice cream. The following served as waitresses for the children: Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin and George V. Taylor, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hall, Joseph Hawkins, Mrs. D. M. Runyon and the Misses Mary Giles, Grace Chamberlain, Lulu Surykar, Cora B. Brokaw, Florence G. Hawkins, Julia Wyant, Alice Brown, Arline Brown, Marjorie Brown, Edith Lyons and Isabelle VanBrakle. A large number of friends were present from the Park Avenue Baptist church and an enjoyable afternoon was passed.

Central's Team Won.

The baseball team representing the Central Railroad of New Jersey and composed of its employes at the Jersey City office, last week defeated a similar aggregation, representing the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Bayview Park, Communipaw, on Saturday. The score was 11 to 3. The Central's battery consisted of Monahan and Hopkins and players from this city were A. F. McKeon, Arthur Smith, Percy Hand and Harry Wetherwax. Arrangements are being completed for a second game between the teams.

MR. HEYWOOD RESIGNS AS PHYSICAL DIRECTOR

F. A. Henckel is Chosen As Head of Y. M. C. A.'s Department of Physical Culture.

CHANGE ON SEPT. 1

NEW DIRECTOR A GRADUATE OF THE SPRINGFIELD SCHOOL.

Mr. Heywood Came Here Seven Years Ago, and Has Since Been Prominent in Sports—Mr. Henckel Lives in Albany.

C. E. A. Heywood has tendered his resignation as physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., and it has been accepted by the board of directors. F. A. Henckel, of Albany, N. Y., has been chosen to succeed him. The change will be made September 1.

The new physical director completed a regular course of study at the Springfield Training School in June. Kenneth Bobbie, the junior secretary of the local institution, is a graduate of this same school and Mr. Heywood was also there for a short time. The retiring director came here seven years ago and has worked hard in the interest of the association. He has been a prominent figure in local sports and in Y. M. C. A. State athletics.

Mr. Heywood is now taking a special summer course at Columbia. On Monday he starts on his annual vacation for one month, and upon his return will sever connections with the local association. He has not announced his plans for the future.

Mr. Henckel is twenty-five years of age and is unmarried. He was instructed to a number of members of the local Y. M. C. A. at the camp this summer, and made a very favorable impression.

IS STRONG TO MANAGE ALIS?

REPORT THAT MURRAY HILL MAN IS TO COME HERE.

During the past week there have been rumors to the effect that "Nat" Strong, manager of the Murray Hills, is to be secured as manager for the local baseball team, and it is understood that he is willing to accept the position if the proper arrangements are made by those representing the Alis Club. It would make an ideal person for the job, as that is his business and he has the time to attend to it. Besides he has a faculty of getting the best players when other managers find it difficult to do so.

It is said that had he had the proper authority he could have brought a first-class pitcher here on Saturday, possibly Conroy, who twirled so effectively against Alis for Murray Hill. These rumors about Strong are not circulated for the purpose of doing an injury to Manager Johnston or the baseball committee of the Alis Club, but it is the belief that Strong is better able to give the town first-class contests. He is in touch with ball players and is thoroughly posted. After Saturday's exhibition at Crescent Oval, the need of a decided change somewhere is apparent and the fans say that if Strong can be secured, it would be to the best interest of the game to get him, even though it is late in the season. It is believed that he could get a team together that would defeat Westfield in the remaining contests of the series.

Mr. Strong had an opportunity to bring the New York Americans to Plainfield on Wednesday for a game, but the Alis management was afraid to run the risk, believing that the venture would not pay. There is no doubt but what a record-breaking crowd would turn out to see such a contest and it is regretted that arrangements were not made for the exhibition as few persons have a chance to see the Americans play in New York.

Charles H. Denman announces that this will be his last season as manager for the Westfield team, and his wife confirms the statement. It is understood that he is willing to retire and let some one else take the reins.

Pulpit Supplies.

During the absence of Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zeltz, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, the pulpit at this church will be supplied as follows: July 31, Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, president of Union College; August 7 and 14, Rev. Dr. H. C. Minton, of Trenton; August 21 and 28, Rev. Dr. Henry Elliot Mott, of Elizabeth; September 4, Rev. S. T. Livingston, of Hartford Theological Seminary. While the pastor is away his address may be obtained of the clerk of the Session, Dr. Hodges, or at A. J. Gavett. The mid-week service will be continued on Wednesday evenings, at 8 o'clock, throughout the summer.

REFUSES TO VACATE PROPERTY OF BOROUGH

Samuel Moore Holding the Fort on Land Purchased for a School Site.

BOARD MAKES OFFER

PROMISES TENANT $25 IF HE GETS OUT IN THIRTY DAYS.

Legal Action to be Taken if Moore Insists on Remaining—The Property is Needed at Once.

Legal proceedings may have to be taken by the borough Board of Education in order to secure possession of a house encumbering the property at Somerset street and Park place, which it purchased as a site for the new school. The members have practically been defied by Samuel Moore, the tenant in the building, who refuses to get out, claiming that his agreement with the former owner gives him the right to remain a year. As the Board wants the ground cleared as soon as possible, the matter was brought up at last Monday's meeting and a plan of action was agreed upon.

On motion of Mr. Cooley, it was decided to serve notice upon Moore to move within thirty days and if he complied he would be remitted the rent, amounting to $35, which rightfully belonged to the Board. This, Mr. Cooley explained, was his idea to keep him from losing money by getting out as moving at the present time would entail considerable expense. Some objection was taken by Mr. Valiant to refunding the rent money on the ground that Moore had no agreement with the present owners and there was no reason why he should receive it. In the event of Moore still maintaining that he had a right to the place as tenant, it was declared that the necessary legal proceedings would be taken to oust him.

The Board members were considerably exercised over the stand Moore has taken as they are particularly anxious that there be no further delay in starting the erection of the new school. It was hoped to have moved the house or sold it before this time but as one of the members expressed they could do neither until they had secured possession of it. Moore insists that he is a yearly tenant and though he has no lease, he is protected from change of ownership.

MATERIAL FOR THE ELECTION

SECRETARY OF STATE AND HIS ASSISTANTS GETTING BLANKS READY.

Pursuant to the provisions of the State election law, Secretary of State Dickinson and his assistants are preparing to send out the election books and blanks for use at the election in November.

The law provides that this shall be done on or before August 5. The material has been printed and delivered to the State House and the clerks are preparing the bundles for distribution. Canvassing books, poll books, register books, copies of the election law, a pamphlet of instructions for election officers and voters, and blanks for the official ballots and for the election returns are included. These must be furnished in sufficient quantities to the county clerks of the State, and they in turn distribute them to the different boards of registry and election.

The first day for registering voters for the coming election will be Tuesday, September 6. This registry day will be only for districts outside of cities having over 20,000 inhabitants, which includes Plainfield. The other registry days for these districts will be Tuesday, September 27, and Tuesday, November 1.

Famous quick deliveries from Wirth's West Front street baking establishment. Bread, cake, pies and confectionary delivered in city or borough.

INTELLIGENT HORSES IN FIRE DEPARTMENT

Interesting Sketch of the Well-Trained Equines That Respond to Fire Alarms.

VERY FEW ACCIDENTS

ACUTE HEARING OF CHIEF DOANE'S PET HORSE "BILL."

City Owns Ten Horses to Draw Its Apparatus to Fires—Best of Care and Treatment Given Them by Firemen and Dr. Pocock.

Visitors at fire headquarters, and even pedestrians who chance to see the Plainfield apparatus dashing through the streets on the way to a fire, invariably pass some comment of praise or admiration for the fire horses. Aside from appreciation of the work of these animals for speeding with the apparatus, their well-groomed appearance elicits as many exclamations of approval.

Firemen at headquarters take especial pride in just this one point of appearance of the horses, and visitors at the various fire houses of the city are impressed with the fact that the men seem always busy grooming or brushing the animals. The twelve horses used by the city are under the special care of Dr. Pocock, a veterinary engaged by the city for the sole purpose of looking after the health of these animals, and any accident or illness, no matter how slight, is at once reported for treatment. The men at the engine houses have often jokingly remarked that the fire horses receive better and more careful treatment than most children, and in this one case of skilled medical attendance within instant call and summons, the metaphor is certainly an apt one. Despite the wild haste and the seeming recklessness on the part of both men and horses in making runs to fires, it is interesting to note that such is the care of the drivers, that within the past two years but one serious accident has happened to a fire horse. This occurred almost exactly a year ago when "Jim," one of the big pair which draws the hook and ladder, sustained a severe injury through the skittishness of his mate, a "green" horse. "Jim's" left thigh was severely torn by the swingle tree hook and for some time it was thought that his days of usefulness were ended. Twenty-seven stitches were taken in the wound, and such careful attention given by Dr. Pocock that "Jim" still answers to calls in his old place on the truck, and only a slight scar remains as a result of the injury.

"Bill," the veteran white horse which speeds Chief Doane's rig on fires, is perhaps the most highly valued animal at headquarters today. Purchased by the department almost nine years ago, "Bill," then a young horse, soon forgot his youthful training as a cab horse, earning his daily feed in the employ of the Roberts' Livery Company, and redeemed himself in the duties before the Chief's gig, where he was installed. Though the only Plainfield fire horse which has never drawn apparatus, "Bill" is worthy of all the honors heaped upon him by Chief Doane. The Chief tells many a story of the animal's sagacity and is especially impressed by his wonderful faculty for hearing's he fire gong. He cites as an example of this a special instance last year when he and Captain Townley were driving through Netherwood; though neither of them could hear any sound of the gong, "Bill" displayed the mettle and uneasiness he customarily does at calls. Trusting to the animal's sagacity, the Chief stopped his drive and telephoning to headquarters, found that an alarm was being sounded from box 34. "Bill," a true fireman, had detected the sound unheard by the men in the gig.

The horses which do service on the trucks are ten in number. Of these, six are stabled at headquarters. These are "Ted" and "Tom," the pair of blooded browns which draw the chemical; "Major" and "General," the horse-cart greys, and "Jim" and "Bob," heavy animals who hitch up to the 9,000 pound hook and ladder truck. At Hose Co. No. 1, there is a grey pair which draw the steamer. These animals are owned by the department, but are stabled at the engine house and are on duty for certain calls. A pair of dapple greys draw the combination chemical engine and hose-cart, quartered at Engine Co. No. 3 on West Fourth street.

Aside from these horses, Chief Doane has a second horse to alternate on the gig with "Bill." This horse is old "Jerry," the oldest horse in the department.

All the truck horses in the service of the department average more than 1,300 pounds apiece, and are heavily built fellows entirely fitted for the arduous work. They are well fed, well cared-for, and the idols of the firemen. Every day at the stroke of the gong at 12 and 5 o'clock, the horses dash out in drill, and their speed and reliance when on the way to fires has established speed records with apparatus which defy demolishment.

TRINITY HAD A FINE DAY

ANNUAL EXCURSION TO ASBURY PARK A GREAT SUCCESS.

The annual excursion of Trinity Reformed church and Marcomsier chapel Sunday-schools to Asbury Park, Thursday, was most successful. There were in all about one thousand persons, including children, on the train of sixteen cars. When the train left this city it was made up of thirteen cars, but Charles H. English, passenger train master, who was on hand, at once made arrangements for extra cars at Roselle to accommodate the large crowd.

When Roselle was reached there was a regular train standing in the yard, made up and ready to make its usual run. Mr. English gave orders for the engine to back up and attach three cars to the excursion train. In doing this the excursionists were not obliged to wait long, and Mr. English's attention and courtesy were greatly appreciated.

The trip consumed about two hours each way and all thoroughly enjoyed the delightful sea breeze. William Dunham, of Dunellen, was the engineer, running engine No. 622, and Thomas Flanagan was the conductor. Not an incident occurred all day to mar the pleasure of the excursionists. Exclusive of the tickets for the children, who were carried free, there were 722 tickets sold, and instead of their being the usual deficit, it is believed that expenses will be cleared.

Landed Big Trout.

Dr. J. C. Bliss, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, who is summering at Camp Mohawk in the Adirondacks, captured in Lake Moss, last Wednesday, one of the largest trout ever landed in that section. It weighed seven pounds and was twenty-seven inches in length, the size being depicted in a drawing sent by Dr. Bliss to H. O. Newman, of this city. Henry C. Squires, of Watchung avenue, was in the boat with the lucky angler when the capture was made.

Candidate for Assembly.

John Cosgrove, walking delegate for the Carpenters' Union in Elizabeth, announces himself as a candidate for the Assembly nomination this fall on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Cosgrove was not seeking the honor, but is being boomed for it by the Union County Federation of Trade, in which for many years he has been one of the most active members. His boom was fairly launched at a meeting held Thursday night.

Miss Daisy Snyder, of West Front street, is spending her vacation at her former home in Easton, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, have returned from their sojourn at Asbury Park.

Ernest S. Higgins, of Liberty street, is spending his vacation with his grandfather, C. B. Stout, of Centerville.

Group of Girls Carrying Weights Each Full of Grapes to the Winery, Where They are Made into Wine.

The Speer Wine Company, Passaic N. J.,

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

ZELAYA IS PLEASED.

CENTRAL AMERICAN STATESMAN LIKES UNITED STATES.

People of Nicaragua Do Not Feel Bad About Panama Canal, But Will Build New Interoceanic Railroad.

St. Louis (Mo.) Special.

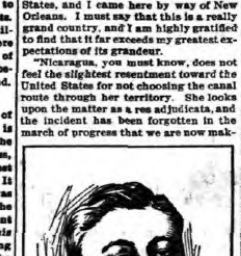
It is generally believed in the United States that the republic of Nicaragua must naturally feel somewhat "sore" at having had to take a back seat in interoceanic canal matters through the selection of the Panama-Colon route. But such is far from being the case, as our neighboring republic has evinced the liveliest interest in all matters appertaining to her relations with the United States. The fine pavilion of Nicaragua at the world's fair is another evidence of Nicaragua's friendliness toward this country, and the great esteem in which the world's fair is held by that Central American republic is further shown by the selection of some of her most prominent citizens to form her world's fair commission.

This commission is composed of the following gentlemen: Senor Don Felix Pedro Zelaya R., the actual secretary of the treasury, or finance minister of the republic as well for the past eight years; Senor Ingeniero Don Alejandro Bermudez, engineer-in-chief of the republic, and Dr. Don F. Garcia Ortono.

Senor Zelaya was seen by a representative of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, through the courtesy of an introduction by Senor Bermudez, who is in charge of Nicaragua's exhibit, and in response to several inquiries made of him, the secretary of the treasury said:

"Yes, this is my first visit to the United States, and I came here by way of New Orleans. I must say that this is a really grand country, and I am highly gratified to find that it far exceeds my greatest expectations of its grandeur.

"Nicaragua, you must know, does not feel the slightest resentment toward the United States for not choosing the canal route through her territory. She looks upon the matter as a res adjudicata, and the incident has been forgotten in the march of progress that we are now making. While those in favor of a canal thought that our country would be greatly benefited thereby, there were still very many who believed that the republic would be divided and a portion of her territory wrested from her; that her sovereignty would be impaired and that a dividing line would be formed tending to sever the harmonious and peaceful 'union' relations among the five Central American republics of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua. How near the fears of the anti-canal party of Nicaragua were to being correct can be judged from the events anent the division of the republic of Colombia and the cession of a large tract of Panama's territory to the United States.



FELIX PEDRO ZELAYA.
(Acting Secretary of the Treasury of the Republic of Nicaragua.)

"During my incumbency as Nicaragua's secretary of the treasury under President Gen. Jose Santos Zelaya, the president of the republic (who, though bearing the same name as myself, is no relative to me), with a view toward progress and by strict economy we have been able to reduce our external debt considerably; and through good management we have paid off, during the last six years, nearly all of our debt of $5,000,000, owing to England, so that there only remains a little less than million now to be paid to the creditors in that country.

"Well," continued Senor Zelaya, "even if we have not got the canal, we have a project, now well under way, which is of just as great importance as was the canal. This project is the completion of the inter-oceanic railway running from San Miguelito, on Lake Managua, to Monkey Point, on the Atlantic coast, a short distance to the southward of Bluefields and the Mosquito Indian reservation, a distance of a little over 200 miles.

"This road, for which the surveys are now being made, is to be built for and on account of the government of Nicaragua, under a contract made with a German gentleman by the name of Don Julio Wrest. By this contract Mr. Wiest is to receive the sum of $4,000 United States gold per mile for the labor performed in each mile constructed, the tools and other material necessary to build and equip the road.

"The project for the railroad, together with the contract with Senor Wiest, was hailed with delight by the people and the Nicaraguan congress in joint session, under the presidency of Dr. Don Jose Dolores Gomes, vice president of the republic, unanimously ratified the concession, which was immediately afterwards signed by the president. Congress also approved of and gave its consent to the raising of the sum of $8,000,000, necessary to complete the road, as well as to arrange for a rehabilitation of the national debt of the country."

ELMER J. BURKETT, NEBRASKA'S REPUBLICAN LEADER.

Nominated by State Convention as Candidate for United States Senate—Some Good Stories Told of Him.

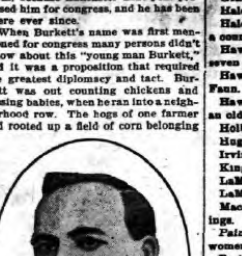
Omaha (Neb.) Special.

Elmer J. Burkett has just received from the republican state convention indorsement as a candidate for the United States senate, as the result of a "boom" started without his knowledge or sanction. It is a repetition of the way his political career began eight years ago.

Back in 1896, after Burkett had struggled along for three years as a member of the bar and general worker for the republicans of his ward, the local machine had decided upon its candidates for the legislature, but needed to lead off a man in Burkett's ward to make its delegation sure. Very softly a machine man whispered to Burkett the advisability of his becoming a candidate. Burkett did, and never before had his ward seen such a campaign. He won his delegation, and that was all he expected to do. The night before the convention a caucus was held, and so little interested was Burkett about the nomination that he was asleep long before the caucus started. One of the machine's candidates showed symptoms of being sold. Some one mentioned Burkett's name, woke up in a minute, and Burkett was named.

Then came the campaign. He proved effective on the stump, and in the legislature he was recognized as one of its foremost debaters. He served only one term, because Lancaster next year proposed him for congress, and he has been there ever since.

When Burkett's name was first mentioned for congress many persons didn't know about this "young man Burkett," and it was a proposition that required the greatest diplomacy and tact. Burkett was out counting chickens and kissing babies, when he ran into a neighborhood row. The hogs of one farmer had rooted up a field of corn belonging to a neighbor. The hogs had crawled through a division fence.



HON. ELMER J. BURKETT.
(Indorsed for United States Senate by Nebraska Republicans.)

The man with the corn told his grievance to Burkett just about the time Burkett began his heart-to-heart talk. Around the corn man were half a dozen men waiting for him to side one way or the other. How he did it no one knows, but in less than an hour the farmers who had threatened to go to law for the cost of their days were out fixing that fence, and Burkett got the solid delegation from that precinct.

According to the reporters who interviewed him, Burkett has always been a "good Indian" and always full of a story, next to his senatorial candidacy, and even in that he is so sincere about saying "I've just got back here, and really I don't know much about the situation. I am a candidate for congress, though, by the way. We had an interesting session this winter. Speaker Cannon said—"

But the newspaper men and the farmers are not the only persons that Burkett impresses. It was Joseph G. Cannon, then head of the appropriation committee, who asked that the young Nebraskan be made a member of that committee.

In his short career Burkett has been the hero of many stories. He has a knack of remembering faces as well as any man in public life, but on one occasion, so his friends are telling now, he lost a vote and made perhaps a lifelong enemy by forgetting one. He was in the southeastern part of the state. Riding along the road, he stopped to jolly a boy who looked as if he was going to cast his first ballot.

"How are you, old fellow," said the representative, in his best way, "suppose you will come out and help the party next week? By the way, how's the old man?"

"The old man is dead," was the reply.

The next day, coming along a different road, Burkett met a young man. He began on him about the same way he did on the one the day before, winding up with, "Well, how's the old man? Haven't seen him lately."

"He's still dead," was the answer. "Get up!"

With his four terms in congress, a nomination for a fifth and an indorsement for the senate to his credit, Mr. Burkett is only 37 years old, and he doesn't look a bit older. He began life in Iowa. When he was in Tabor college he was general bell ringer, and that is how he made the money to pay his way. He was graduated from that institution in 1890 and at once entered the University of Nebraska, where in 1893 he was graduated from the law department. He began the practice of law in Lincoln in 1895 and is now a member of the firm of Burkett & Grenlee.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

POTATO CROP UNUSUALLY BIG

WILLIAM H. ROGERS SPEAKS GLOWINGLY OF AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS.

While the meat strike is engaging the attention of the public, the farmers are enjoying the prospects of fine crops which may in a large measure offset the abnormal prices of meat. W. H. Rogers, of Highland Farm, is speaking about the season's crops, said today that there will be an abundance of hay, corn, oats, rye and apples. He predicts that the crop in each instance will be fully 100 per cent. while the wheat crop will probably reach 60 per cent. and the hay crop 75 per cent.

Mr. Rogers does not look for any reduction in prices, claiming the present prices are low enough considering quality. As for peaches, he is authority for the statement that the crop will be light. He does not believe that Hunterdon county will have 10 per cent. of its normal crop. He speaks in glowing terms of the potato crop, believing it will be the largest of any during the past five or six years, while the quality cannot be surpassed.

MYSTERIOUS VISIT PUZZLES THE 'PLAINS

Residents Believe There Is "Something Doing" in the Way of Railroad Building.

CONTRACTORS IN TOWN

WANTED BIDS FOR THE ERECTION OF COOK AND TOOL HOUSE.

Admitted They Had Large Contract, But Refused Particulars—Said Work Would Require 600 Men.

All Scotch Plains is wondering and guessing as to what will be the outcome of a visit to the village Wednesday afternoon of two "mysterious" strangers. Their appearance and subsequent actions has led to the belief that one of the big railroads contemplates an extension or improvements of some sort and everybody is anticipating a period of activity.

Claimed to be large contractors from New York, the two men called on Edward Verity, the carpenter, and asked him what he would charge to erect a one-story building 18x30 on the Green place, Terrill road, to be used, they said, as a bake and cook house for 600 men, they expected to bring into town shortly to work upon a large contract they had secured. Mr. Verity's continued questioning had but little effect, as they were not very communicative upon the subject. They finally admitted that the contract was railroad work but they were not at liberty to state what company or what was the proposed route of the road. Their contract began at Scotch Plains and they believed the proposed route from there was Mountainside, Springfield and out through the Oranges. The men claimed that the lumber was on the ground and that the erection of the building must begin at once. After conferring together, Verity refused to take the contract on account of disagreement over the price. The men left saying they would see some of the Plainfield contractors and get their prices.

The visit and the information given, while vague, has aroused considerable speculation in town as to what road can be planning the "scoop," but Scotch Plains does not care what road does it so long as it gets the improvement it has waited for for over thirty years, when the residents allowed the General Railroad of New Jersey to go over half a mile farther away from the town instead of coming into it as they wanted to when they straightened the road through this section. At that time property took a jump and when the company wanted to purchase a rghs of way they found that property could be bought much cheaper, so put the road where it is now. This practically set Scotch Plains back twenty-five years and there are but few in town but what will admit now that a mistake was made, for this reason any road would be gladly welcomed as it would mean the building of the place.

No one knows of any new surveys being made recently, but during the past twenty years the Baltimore and Ohio, Lehigh Valley and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western companies have all surveyed through town for proposed routes but they failed to materialise and hopes of the property owners have been dashed to the ground and the incidents forgotten. Some think that it is possibly a branch line of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company from Whitehead to Milburn, while others say the Lehigh Valley Company has been arying for a number of years to secure a right of way from South Plainfield through Plainfield, Scotch Plains, and so on to their line near New Orange. Others claim their hopes have been dashed to the ground so many times that they want to see the road before they will believe it, but Mr. Verity says from the appearance of the men and their talk he believes that they are all right and mean business. Their refusal to give full details, they claimed, was for the purpose of protecting the company until they were ready to inform the public themselves.

Pulpit Supplies for August.

The pulpit supplies at the First Presbyterian church during the month of August will be as follows: August 7, Rev. Dr. William D. Roberts, of Philadelphia; 14, Rev. William Allen, Jr., of Pennington; 21, Rev. F. B. Kennedy, of Easton, Pa. The church will be closed the last Sunday in August and the first Sunday in September for cleaning and repairs.

Congratulations.

The Dunellen Call observed the twelfth anniversary of its birth on Thursday and congratulations are now in order. Dunellen has reason to feel proud of the paper published by George Day.

KINSMAN'S INVENTION INSTALLED IN SUBWAY

Plainfielder's Block Signal Accepted by New York Rapid Transit Company.

PATENT'S DESCRIPTION

RAILWAY AGE GIVES ACCURATE ACCOUNT OF ITS WORKINGS.

Scores of Similar Devices Rejected—Mr. Kinsman's Invention Being Considered Preferable—Affords Greatest Safety.

The New York Rapid Transit subway, probably the largest in the world, which is to be opened for traffic in September, is equipped throughout with the Kinsman block signal, designed and built by F. E. Kinsman, of this city. It was selected after scores of similar devices had been tried and rejected and in preliminary tests has proved everything claimed for it by the inventor. Speaking of the subway and its many devices, the Railway Age has the following remarks and description of the Kinsman safeguard:

"Fulfilling the preconception on which the whole scheme of signalling is based, that nothing shall be omitted that shall contribute measurably to the safe operation of the subway, an automatic train-stop of a new form was designed and is installed under an agreement with the Kinsman Block System Company of New York. This, like every other moving part in the system of signals, is controlled by an electric valve, the position of which is as the bottom of the post that supports the block signal instruments, whence an inch pipe extends to the cylinder, about opposite the signal post, situate in a box in the middle of the track, which box also contains a counterweight, acting against the piston rod, maintaining the stop-arm in an upright position above the top of the rail when its signal one block in *advance stands at danger. The stop-*arm is placed outside of the rail and is connected with its operating cylinder by a square shaft; the cylinder valve is controlled by a circuit breaker worked by the home signal arm which is in the circuit operating the safety-stop cylinder magnet. In the present arrangement a danger signal breaks this circuit, which cuts off pressure from the cylinder and permits the stop-arm to assume an upright position.

"On opposite sides, at each end of every motor car (two to each car) in the sub-way, an arm will project downward and connect with the air-brake train pipe, so that when a signal is in the danger position its stop-arm stands above the rail and will be struck by the downward arm of any car which attempts to pass, with the result of applying the air-brakes to the train. But in order that trains may not be delayed because of some derangement in the mechanism it is possible for one of the train crew to alight and lower the stop-arm until the train has passed it. This is a necessary provision, since the facilitation of traffic under proper safeguards is of the first importance in places of this sort. It is accomplished by means of a socket-key which fits the shaft in the automatic stop valve, the end of which is exposed; then, by turning this key, the automatic stop valve is *mechanically opened, admitting pres*sure to the cylinder and so lowering the stop. The arrangement requires that the members of the crew who have cleared the stop shall hold the key until the train has passed, since upon releasing the key the pressure immediately escapes from the cylinder and the stop resumes the danger position."

Plenty of Peaches.

Present indications point to a big crop of peaches this year. Dealers say that they have never had such fine peaches so early in the season. There is plenty of almost all kinds of fruit in the market at present. Strawberries have been replaced by red and black raspberries and in addition to these there are lots of blackberries and huckleberries. Watermelons and cantalopes have appeared, but not in very large quantities yet. Pineapples are plentiful and fine in flavor. The first apples of the season have made their appearance. The markets also show a fine assortment of vegetables. Green Jersey corn the first of the season, is to be had, as well as green peas, string beans, beets, radishes, lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, celery, etc. Even if the price of meat is high the housewife need not be at a loss to supply her table with good things.

Miss Nellie Meade, of Plainfield, is spending her vacation at her former home in High Bridge.

Mrs. John Cornell, of Staten Island, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. George Laird, of North avenue.

DISTRICT COURT AGITATION RENEWED

Plainfield Lawyers Declare Time Has Arrived for the Establishment of a Court Here.

NEEDED FOR YEARS

SOME BARRISTERS CONDEMN LOCAL JUSTICES.

Admitted That New Court Would be An Item of Expense—Lawyers May Appeal to Common Council.

As a direct result of the recent fracas between a local justice of the peace and a lawyer, agitation is again rife for the establishment of a district court in this city. Several leading lawyers are outspoken in their denunciation of the way in which cases are decided in Plainfield and accompanying transactions and their feelings may lead to a demand for a change of affairs.

For the past seven years this question of a district court has been spasmodically discussed by local members of the bar and at times these men have been almost on the verge of united action in the matter. The Daily Press originally pointed out the public benefits of the installation of such a court in the city but at the time the matter was thus brought before the public, the interest in consolidation was at its height and the matter was set aside. The failure of the borough consolidation has been a check on the establishment of such a court which would doubtless have immediately resulted. Perhaps this failure, the fact that at Elizabeth there is a district court, and the necessary expense of such a court to the city have been drawbacks to any action heretofore.

Though these points are of course not without their weight and though the expense of a court-room, a judge, sergeant-at-arms, clerk and other officials would be an item, all Plainfield lawyers agree that the time has come for the establishment of a district court in this city. Being, as it is, a municipality of less than 20,000 in its limits proper, such a court could not be established here under the general law, but the end could be effected by the combined action of the lawyers in an appeal to the Common Council. Such an appeal, if granted, would practically guarantee the establishment of the court.

A Daily Press reporter who interviewed several prominent lawyers in the city found all in favor of such a court here. Some of these men were vehement in their attacks on local justice as meted by city justices of the peace and all agree that, considering the opportunities offered for appeal at Elizabeth in cases of unsatisfactory decisions, a district court in the city of Plainfield would secure prompt and impartial justice to all.

GOOD ENTERTAINMENT AT HOPE

PROGRAMME PLEASED FAIR-SIZED AUDIENCE AT THE CHAPEL.

Despite the threatening weather last Friday, a good sized audience turned out at the Boys' Club entertainment at Hope chapel. The programme was a varied one consisting of recitations, piano solos and a sleight of hand performance by Leonard Gavett. Every number on the programme was well received and encores were frequent. Recitations were given by the Misses Mildred Spicer, Blanche Heidelof and Hazel Grant and Mrs. G. H. Condict rendered several selections at the piano. The performance in legerdemain by Leonard Gavett was the crowning interest of the evening. The young man performed the various card and handkerchief tricks with great nicety and was roundly applauded.

It is estimated that nearly $20 was cleared and this money will be added to the fund being raised to secure the proposed addition to the chapel. In this new addition a special room is to be built for the use of the Boys' Club. The committee in charge of last evening's entertainment consisted of G. H. Condict, the superintendent of the club, Frank Simmer, the president, and the other officers of the organization

Rode House in Engine Cab.

H. C. VanEmburgh, of Richmond street, who accompanied the Trinity excursion to Asbury Park Thursday made the return trip in the engine cab of the train. While he enjoyed the novelty he declares it is not to be compared with a comfortable seat in one of the coaches. The engineer was William Dunham, of Dunellen, considered one of the most expert on this division of the Central.

MR. HARRIS' TWENTY-FIRST

POPULAR YOUNG MT. PLEASANT MAN CELEBRATES HIS BIRTHDAY.

Stanley C. Harris, of Mount Pleasant, gave a delightful party at his home Wednesday, July 20, at which time he celebrated the twenty-first anniversary of his birth.

The floor of the Harris barn was well waxed and made an excellent place for dancing. Professor Roco, of Metuchen, furnished the music. The lawn was illuminated with Japanese lanterns and decorated with flags. After dancing supper was served, a feature of which was a birthday cake containing a beautiful ring. Miss Maude Holcombe, of New Dover, was lucky enough to get the piece containing the ring.

Included in the large attendance were many Plainfielders.

MRS. FAWCETT DEAD.

Well-Known Resident of the Borough Succumbs to Long Illness.

Mrs. Sarah Fawcett, of Mercer avenue, for many years a resident of this city, died at her home Thursday night after a long illness. Mrs. Fawcett, who was eighty years of age, was born at Largan, Ireland, and was for many years a resident of Belfast. Her husband, Thomas Fawcett, died several years ago. Mrs. Fawcett was the mother of thirteen children, eleven of whom are now living. Of these there are three brothers, Benjamin Fawcett, a resident of Grove street; Hughes Fawcett, of Rockview avenue, and Alfred Fawcett, who lived with his mother. Miss May Fawcett, of Mercer avenue, and Mrs. Sarah Gribbon are daughters.

Funeral services were conducted at the Mercer avenue home on Sunday afternoon. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

VAN AUKEN ON A CRUISE

YOUNG PLAINFIELDER NOW AS MIDSHIPMAN AT ANNAPOLIS.

Word has been received from Midshipman Fred T. VanAuken, U. S. N., which shows him to be just starting on the naval summer cruise, embarked on the cruising ship "Nevada" from New London. VanAuken was a candidate for this city up for a year ago and while here was well-known among the baseball players. His pitching on the city High School varsity was a factor important in determining the successful season of 1903. At the Naval Academy, this season, VanAuken continued his work in baseball and was taken on the varsity squad of three pitchers at the beginning of the season. He now has a record of pitching five of the Navy games in the 1904 schedule and his work has been such that he has received high words of praise from the coach of the Academy baseball team. This work in twirling will guarantee Van a job on the varsity squad of pitchers next season when his advancement in the course and the benefits of careful coaching will doubtless cause him to be used in the box for even more 'varsity games. In class baseball Van had the job in the box and in the inter-crew series of games between two of the training ships, the "Chesapeake" crew, with VanAuken in the box carried off the honors.

The young man's furlough from his naval work will begin the first week in September, and he will be in town for about a week on September 13.

Wetumpkah's Officers Installed.

The district deputy from Westfield visited Wetumpkah Council, I. O. R. M., last Thursday, and installed the newly-elected officers. John Clark was duly installed as prophet, and Thomas Kelb as sachem. The senior and junior sagamores for the next term will be John Neal and Richard Scott. R. E. Humphrey now holds office as first sannap and Lee Slonim is second sannap. One paleface was received for the adoption degree. After the meeting, the warriors feasted on venison, green corn and ice cream.

Harvey L. Schmeyer High Priest.

District Deputy Grand Patriarch Schlief and his officers held an installation of officers at Noah Dove Encampment Thursday. Harvey L. Schmeyer was installed as High Priest of the lodge, Henry Nischwitz became chief patriarch and John Becker, Jr., and John Krimer were chosen to the offices of senior and junior warden respectively. S. H. Schlief was chosen reporting scribe and John A. Williams financial scribe.

Mrs. Robert Lowry, of East Seventh street, is at lake Minnewaska for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Stillman, of West Seventh street, are registered at the Mansion House, Fishers Island, N. Y.

Charles Angleman, Esq., of Rahway, has been visiting his father, Abram Angleman, of West Front street.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 31.

Topic.—An evening with Burma and Siam.—Isa. xxxv, 1-10.

China and India are two empires well known throughout the world. But between them, in the extreme southeast corner of Asia, is Indo-China, which is far less widely known. Siam occupies the central and larger part of this region, with Burma on the west and Cochin China on the east, including also the peninsula of Malay.

The people belong to the same family as the Chinese, having also some features of likeness to the natives of India. They are a gentle, passive, rather weak race, given to dissimulation and very conceited, but they are reverential to the aged, especially to parents, are kind to their children, illiberal in almsgiving, orderly and peaceable. They have quick but not very strong minds, and are said to be more receptive than the Chinese." The women have no limitations placed about them, as in most oriental countries. They may go about as they please, but they are considered much inferior to men that they are not educated. Polygamy exists, and divorces are easily obtained.

The climate is very genial and equable. The average temperature is 81 degrees. There are a rainy season and a dry season. Vegetable and animal life are abundant. "It claims to be the garden land of the world—the land of fruits and flowers and of never ending summer, with grand old trees overshadowing every hamlet, and plant life in fullest luxuriance, springing on every side from the fertile soil. The waters swarms with fish, and the air with insects, while all manner of tropical birds and beasts exist in teeming multitudes. Especially is Siam the land of elephants."

Siam is the stronghold of Buddhism. Though called a religion, yet it is not so, for it is atheistical, as it recognizes no God, in our sense of the word, and no soul. It teaches the doctrine of transmigration—the passage of life from one form to another until it at last reaches a state of unconscious existence, which is the Buddhist's heaven, Nirvana. The life produced by the Buddhist system is one of gross immorality and of spiritual darkness and despair.

Protestant missions were commenced in Siam by Ann Hazeltine Judson. She became interested in some Siamese at Rangun, where she then resided. She prepared, with the help of a native language, translated the Burman catechism, a tract on Christianity and the gospel of Matthew into Siamese. But Siam even long after this was regarded simply as an avenue of approach into China. In 1828 direct Siamese work was begun by Dr. Carl Gutslaff, then of the Netherland Missionary society. Others later entered the field, but today the Presbyterian church alone has missionaries in Siam. The darkness of Buddhism makes the light of Christianity imperative both to Siam and Burma. Let us "send the light" that they, too, may be won for Christ.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. iii, 15; Isa. ii, 1-4; iii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Ps. cxxxv, 15-21; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Acts xiii, 46-52; Rom. i, 18-25; x, 14, 15; Rev. xxii, 17.

From Faraway China.

Rev. George Warren Hinman, M. A., is making an enviable record as general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor for China. His home and headquarters are at Shanghai, and from this point he makes journeys into all quarters of the vast empire. A multitude of new societies attest his skill as an organizer. He has recently written and published a Christian Endeavor handbook in the Chinese tongue. To his indefatigable labors is due much of the foothold which Christian Endeavor is gaining in China.

REV. G. W. HINMAN.

With Foreign Flavor.

Germany is still the leading country of continental Europe in Christian Endeavor. The society has recently received legal standing there and is constantly reaching out into new territory. France has made decided and substantial progress, and Christian Endeavor is commended to French Protestantism.

The great impetus to the Christian Endeavor cause in South Africa has come from the return of the thousands of Boer prisoners of war from the prison camps in St. Helena, Ceylon, Bermuda and Portugal. He had formerly been a Christian Endeavor leader in those camps.

Raise the Standard.

Let Christian Endeavor raise the standard of loyalty to Christ and the church hold to its ideals of definite personal service and confession, welcome every expression of originality and enterprise in the application of the spirit of our movement in new plans and methods and stand for our inspiring interdenominational and international fellowship that in the past has been such a blessing to the young people of the world and that in the future mean so much to the universal church of God.—William Shaw, Treasurer United Society.

Christian Endeavor.

To strive in strength which Christ doth give,
And glorify Him ever;
To read His word with faith and prayer—
The heart, this, of Endeavor.
—John R. Clements.

SANATORIUM IN LAPLAND.

Institution for the Treatment of Pulmonary Affections in the Arctic Zone.

The advantages offered by the three months of arctic summer are so numerous that there have appeared recently several announcements of floating and permanent hospitals for patients suffering from incipient pulmonary affections and neurasthenic states. According to the British Medical Journal, it is proposed to erect a sanatorium on the shores of Lake Torne, in Lapland, a long and beautiful sheet of water at Wasijaure, near the end of the Ofoten railroad. That railroad, it may be mentioned, has only one station in a distance of 171 miles. There is no human dwelling near that station, which is on the line between Sweden and Norway, and was erected solely for the requirements of the customs office. Except for a small settlement at Wasijaure, the only sign of human existence in the district is the occasional passage of a few Laplanders with their herds of reindeer. Already there has been installed at this spot a scientific station in a solidly built blockhouse containing seven rooms, and it is proposed to build the sanatorium in the same way.

An American medicine Dr. Frederick Sohon, has called attention to the great advantages of the arctic climate. We learn that Dr. Sohon has decided to organize a cruise to the fjords of Greenland, returning before the hardships of the early winter begin. These regions of perpetual sunshine may be reached within ten days from Nova Scotia, and the trip may be made with safety and comfort in a suitable vessel altered and appointed for this purpose.

POPULAR SUMMER SONGS.

Those That Tell of Trolley Rides and Outings Please the Public Most.

"There was a time, not so long ago, when the heated term was considered a very dull season in our line," said a music publisher to a New York Sun man. "Now it is as important as the other seasons, all on account of the public's taste for so-called summer songs. These songs extol the virtues of local seaside resorts, trolley rides, etc.

"The fashion was set about three years ago, when 'On a Sunday Afternoon' and 'In the Good Old Summer Time' appeared. Formerly publishers and song writers did not dare to have their wares introduced in time for a summer hearing, fearing that by the arrival of the regular theatrical season their songs would be looked upon as stale and out of date. Now, however, a summer indorsement is considered essential to its future popularity.

"The change in the public taste is no doubt due to the fact that vaudeville is enjoying great prosperity just now. Folks who go out of town to spend their vacations during the summer like to be entertained by hearing all the songs on the popular order.

"Booming songs is a harder task now because all the old and tried methods, such as moving pictures, stereopticon views and boy in the gallery have lost their efficacy. Publishers must, therefore, depend now on the individual ability of the singers."

BRUTES BETTER THAN MEN

In the Respect of Appetite Some Lower Animals Display Much Better Sense.

Lower forms of animal life we call brutes. There are some things in which the brutes are above men, says Medical Talk.

For instance, the brutes are guided by instinct alone in the selection of food. Brutes left to themselves would never learn to chew tobacco, to eat pickles, or to drink cocktails. Not even the omniverous pig would eat much of the stuff named on the menu of a first-class hotel. The dog does not like coffee. A cat does not eat ice cream nor will a rat even nibble at a box of choice cigars.

Man alone is capable of doing such unphysiological, health-destroying things. The brutes could teach us, by example, many useful lessons if we would but observe and heed them.

Instead of allowing the lower animals to teach us, we make pets or servants of them. We kill them for pleasure. We cut them up alive to study the anatomy of their bodies. But we never once stop to consider the lessons which their obedience to nature's laws places before us.

One of the "Why, Ma" Boys.

A small boy with an insatiable thirst for knowledge came over from Baltimore in the same car with me day before yesterday. He talked all the way over, and everything he said had a "why, ma," in it. Ma was worn to a frizzle when the train reached Washington.

"Come on," said she. "Thank goodness we're home. No, don't go that way. Come this way."

"I want to go out that end of the car," said the boy.

"You can't," snapped ma. "This is the end to get out of."

"Why, ma?" asked the boy. "Why, ma? Don't the car stop at both ends?"—Washington Post.

How Tea Is Named.

In the Canton dialect "Pekoe" means "white hair," and for this kind of tea the very youngest leaves of all are gathered, so young that the white down of babyhood is still upon them—whence their name. Considerable trouble and labor being taken in its preparation at Amoy, these are perpetuated in its name. "Bohea" is called after a range of hills in Fokien. "Soo-chong" expresses no sentiment, but a bald fact, being Cantonese for "the small kind." "Hyson" signifies "flourishing spring."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

July 31: "Missions in Latin Countries."—Ps. lxxxii, 16-17.—The Work in Italy.

"All nations shall call Him blessed."

The so called Latin countries are nominally Christian. The Roman Catholic church has for centuries been a dominating force in them. In many of them the moral condition of the people is indescribably low. Question. Whether this is the result of the presence of that form of religion or exists in spite of it is a question which it is useless for us now to debate. The fact remains that these lands are as truly missionary ground as any under the sun.

Italy in Europe, Mexico, Ecuador, Peru, Chile, Buenos Ayres, Uruguay, Paraguay, Brasil and Porto Rico in America are the principal countries we have entered since the Latin races have settled. Nearly all of those in America were settled by the Spanish and still speak that language or some modification of it. The Philippines were also Spanish settled.

The work in Italy, after years of struggle, has been placed on a firm basis. Dr. Leroy M. Vernon was the founder of the mission. He labored under many disadvantages and discouragements both by reason of the difficulties natural to the work and because of indecision on the part of the home church and division in sentiment as to the plans to be pursued by those in authority.

Bishop Gilbert Haven was always a strong advocate of progressive measures in this field and did much to secure thorough foundation for it. Dr. William E. Burt, the present head of the work, has been conspicuously successful, and his efforts in the line of buildings has been secured in Rome in a most advantageous location. The principal one is an ornament architecturally as well as completely fitted for our work. The favorable notice of the royal family has more than once been shown to our institutions. In many other important centers of influence the church has been established and has gathered members and opened schools.

Those who know this work most thoroughly recognize it as one of the most truly needed missions under the management of our church.

The work in Buenos Ayres is one of the older missions of our church, which was prosecuted with varying degrees of success for a term of years, but recently has entered upon broader and more vigorous growth. Dr. Reid's history of our missions will give all needful facts for the use of our leagues in preparing papers and addresses on this field.

The missions in Chile and other parts of the west coast owe their origin to the labors of Bishop William Taylor. They have had from the idea of self support on the part of the missionaries, who were to teach school as well as preach. Many excellencies belonged to this plan, but its working revealed many serious and fatal defects. After years of heroic work on the part of the missionaries and generous benefactions by the people at home, all this work has now been organized under the missionary board and is making good progress.

Mexico should have an evening for its presentation. The story is thrilling from the days of the founder, Dr. William Butler, to the last adventure of his son, Dr. John W. Butler, in a railroad wreck on his way to general conference.

Porto Rico and Dr. Charles W. Drees should have careful attention. He is the man for the place. Experience in Mexico and South America had fitted him the best of any man in the church to be founder of this mission.

The new book by Dr. Stunts on our Philippine missions should be read in every league chapter.

The Chance of Pain.

There are no times in life when opportunity, the chance to be and to do, gathers so richly about the soul as when it has to suffer. The man whose horse will not eat ice cream nor will a rat even nibble at a box of choice cigars.

Man alone is capable of doing such unphysiological, health-destroying things. The brutes could teach us, by example, many useful lessons if we would but observe and heed them.

Instead of allowing the lower animals to teach us, we make pets or servants of them. We kill them for pleasure. We cut them up alive to study the anatomy of their bodies. But we never once stop to consider the lessons which their obedience to nature's laws places before us.

Unsaved.

I am not saved; spring's warmthful ray
Quickened the grain in fertile soil;
The harvest's long and generous day
Bloomed bounteously, the reaper's toil;
My thirstless hands have called no water,
My empty garner none receives—
I am not saved.

I am not saved; at vernal dawn
Many with precious seed went out;
Beneath the hours, grim, unfeeling sun,
More sleep my languid eyes besought,
And now with joy the faithful reap,
While harvest I sit and weep—
I am not saved.

Strange that the birds should sing in vain,
The early flowers in sweetness bloom,
The mellow clouds send genial rain,
And to my heart no teaching come;
While nature spurns my love reserved,
I languished on in life mood—
I am not saved.

Why have I suffered thus to pass
My golden opportune?
Why indolent when swift, alas,
Life's fruitful summer season flies?
Through many voices come to me,
And say, "The Master calleth thee!"
I am not saved.

Soon will the harvest time be gone,
The last shall gleam the triumph home,
And I, unhoused, afraid, alone,
Shall to the Lord of harvest come,
If yet my feet of error keep,
And so not forth to sow and reap—
I am not saved.

Oh, shall I not begin today
And in the vineyard of the Lord
Toil till at evening He shall say,
"It is enough." At that sweet word
I'll with my harvest homeward haste
And enter into peaceful rest—
Jeweled and saved.

SUPREME COURT'S NEW HOME

HANDSOME ROOM ON SENATE WING, 2D FLOOR READY FOR OCCUPANCY.

In future the main branch of the State Supreme Court at Trenton will sit in the handsome new courtroom on the second floor of the recently constructed Senate wing of the Capitol. The room is completed and furnished and is a splendid apartment. Its measures over fifty feet in length by thirty five feet wide, is lighted by five large windows and a stained glass skylight, and has a classic finish that gives it a decided air of stateliness.

The ceiling tops a deep frieze and is vaulted to the skylight, which is set in ornamental panels. The glass in the ceiling is tinted in quiet colors, harmonizing with the general color scheme of the room. The walling is richly ornamented and finished in light buff, and the ceiling colors are light buff, and the ceiling colors are light cream and buff. The side walls are painted in a pretty shade of green and leads to a base of veined white marble.

The frieze is supported by fluted pilasters placed at regular intervals around the walls, colored in yellow and topped with Ionic capitals. The wood is of heavy antique oak. A rich velvet carpet of a pretty red design covers the floor.

The judges' dais is raised two steps above the floor and is finished in solid antique oak. The desk is oaken, richly carved, the design including the torch of liberty. The gavel with which the judges will rap for order is made of ebony, and the gavel block is marble. Two silver electric light brackets in the room are of antique brass.

Three heavy oaken doors with brass trimmings give access to the apartment, the centre door being double. These open on the marble passage leading to the gallery of the Senate chambers. Access to the new court-room is obtained either by the marble stairs in the Senate wing or by a passage leading from the main corridor on the second floor of the Capitol.

In the rear of the courtroom and connected with it by doors on either side of the dais is the judges' private room. This is finished in the main apartment, and is similarly furnished, including a handsome leather couch and a wardrobe with a plate-glass front. It also has a brick fireplace, surrounded by a carved oaken mantel.

RUMORS OF BANK MERGER

IT IS SAID THE UNION CO. TRUST CO. WILL ABSORB AN ELIZABETH BANK.

It is reported in financial circles that the Union County Trust Company is about to absorb the Citizens' Bank, of Elizabeth. Officials of both institutions are reticent about the matter, but from reliable sources it is learned that negotiations have been in progress during the past month and that the deal is ready for consummation.

Shares of stock in the Citizens' Bank are $50 each. The trust company is paying, it is said, at the rate of $175 for shares, and has purchased a number at this figure. It is also alleged that some shareholders who refused to part with their holdings at this price and demanded more have been paid as high as $285.

The absorption of the Citizens' Bank will leave the Union County Trust and the National State Bank as the two chief financial institutions in Elizabeth, and will cause a sharp rivalry, it is predicted.

The National State Bank is controlled by Senator John Kean and his brothers, Julius Kean, and Hamilton Fish Kean, chairman of the Union County Republican executive committee.

ELECTION BOARD APPOINTEES

STATE CHAIRMEN FILE LISTS WITH GOVERNOR MURPHY.

William E. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and E. C. Stokes, acting chairman of the Republican State Committee, filed at the State House Friday afternoon their respective lists of nominations for members of the county election boards in each county in the State, with recommendations to Governor Murphy that the men on the commissions Governor Murphy made their appointments and the commissions were issued at once. The appointees will serve for two years from August 1.

These appointments were made for Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties: Republicans—Union, John W. Murray, of Plainfield; Somerset, Joseph Fitzgerald, of Somerville; Middlesex, J. H. Saydam, of Jamesburg. Democrats—Union, John L. Crowell, of Rahway; Somerset, John H. Meelean, of Somerville; Middlesex, Hendrickson H. Brown, of Brownstown.

WILD WEST METHODS IN HOLDING PRISONER

The Wearrens Capture Dennis O'Loughlin and Bind Him to a Post.

HELD FOR POLICE

FIERCE STRUGGLE DURING WHICH REVOLVER IS DISCHARGED.

O'Loughlin's Persistency in Demanding Money Due Him Leads to Trouble—Fined $5 in City Court.

In true Wild Western style of the variety furnished by the Apaches when Geronimo reigned supreme, Dennis O'Loughlin, of West Second street, was captured in the wilds of Evona Thursday and tied to a clothes post. The "band" which made him prisoner consisted of Thomas Wearren, his brother and his two sons and the scene of the struggle was in Wearren's yard on Rock avenue. O'Loughlin was to blame for it in the first place and had the captors at bay with a pistol for a short time but he was in most helpless and humiliated prisoner when the police patrol dashed up with Driver O'Gorman and Patrolman Overbaugh. He was released only to be taken to police headquarters and spend the night in a cell. This morning he paid a $5 fine for carrying the weapon.

O'Loughlin is a mason and has been working for Wearren, who is a contracting builder. A short time ago O'Loughlin was laid off, he claims, without getting all the money due him. Early last evening he went to the Wearren home and demanded the money owed him. He emphasized his remarks with flourishes from an umbrella and Wearren says he was hit with it before he got the former employe to go away. It wasn't long before he was back again and there was another argument and another scuffle. O'Loughlin left again and at 10:45 he appeared for the third time, but on this occasion pickets detected his approach and the Wearren forces massed themselves behind the kitchen door.

As O'Loughlin ascended the porch he was suddenly pounced upon by the "band" and in a few seconds both sides were tearing up Wearren's back yard. O'Loughlin fought hard but was getting the worst of it when a pistol shot made his attackers jump away from him. One of the latter saw him make a motion as if to draw a weapon and shot at him and missed again. This time the lone mason gave up and in a jiffy he was trussed up like a spring chicken and tied hard and fast to the post.

These facts were brought out at the trial before Mayor Jenkins Friday morning and they were admitted by O'Loughlin, only he disclaimed carrying the revolver with the intention of pulling any or all of the Warrens "out of business." He bought the weapon last night, he said, for his son and it was only loaded with blank cartridges. The police found that it contained bullets and the concealed weapon charge was made against him. Although O'Loughlin claimed that the Wearrens "threw the shoe into him" while he was tied to the post, no action was taken against the Wearrens for their part in the affair.

Bible Students Hold a Social at Percy Cannon's Home.

The Young Men's Bible class of Monroe Avenue church, taught by Adam Neeman, proceeded in a body to the home of Percy Cannon on East Second street, last Thursday, to pay him a social call. They were provided with refreshments and the means for passing a pleasant evening and the affair was enjoyed by everyone. Mr. Cannon "read" to the gathering from his books and in many ways showed how wonderfully adept he has become though deprived of sight.

Before leaving, the class left a very substantial gift that brought gladness to Mr. Cannon and more than repaid the donors for their thoughtfulness.

Water Main in West End Avenue.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company is about to lay a main in West End avenue from West Front street to the brook. Heretofore a service pipe has been used to supply the residents with water.

Another Shower.

Alfred Seidel, the Park avenue tonsorial artist, is receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a baby boy, making the fourth son in the family.

Carl Kiersting, of Morristown, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leifke, of West Front street, has returned home.

Julius Williams and family, of Middlesex avenue, who have been staying at Warrenville with relatives have returned home.

VICTORY SNATCHED FROM PLAINFIELD NINE

Westfield's Colors Triumph in Keen Battle Before Big Crowd on Crescent Oval.

TO TUNE OF 8 TO 6

ALIS' PITCHER PROVES A GREAT DISAPPOINTMENT TO THE FANS.

Sixteen Hits Secured Off Davis—Rochford Made a Three Bagger —Enthusiasm Dampened—

The Detailed Scores.

Alis was defeated by Westfield on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon in the presence of nearly two thousand fans. The score was 8 to 6. Manager Denman's aggregation of players had a merry time with Davis. That the fans are tired of Davis is now evident and if the Alis Club wants to hold any of its patronage a change is considered necessary. It is said that Wolfe, of the American League, was to have pitched, but that he was called to Washington Saturday morning.

The Alis team touched Waller for a total of ten safeties, Dietrich, Smith and Davis each making a three bagger. Ousick was the only man failing to get a hit, while Oregan and Mc Goey each got two. A total of three singles in the ninth gave the visitors the game. Alis failed to get a run after the sixth inning. The visitors secured fifteen hits off of Davis, including a three-bagger by Rochford and two-baggers by Barry and Battam.

The detailed score:

ALIS.	R	1B	PO	A	E

Seventh inning—McManus flied to Dietrich, Mallon out, Davis to Smith; Hickman out, Davis to Smith; no runs. Dietrich out, Barry to Rochford; Davis flied to Barry, Farmer flied to Mallen; no runs. Eighth inning—Cotter out, Walton to Smith; Waller out, Ousick to Smith; Barry hit for two bases, Oregan misjudging a fly; Battam out, Ousick to Smith; no runs. McGoey singled, Smith struck out, Walton did the same, Mc Goey stole second, Ousick foul flied to Cotter; no runs.

Ninth inning—Oregan made a wonderful catch of Rochford's line fly, Supple struck out, McManus singled, Mallen singled, Hickman singled, scoring McManus and Mallen; Cotter out, Barry to Rochford; two runs. Oregan flied to Mallen, Courtney struck out, Dietrich out, Battam to Rochford; no runs.

Wealthy Woman Hurt.

Mrs. William H. Arkenburgh, a wealthy summer resident along the Raritan River, was the victim Saturday of a frightful runaway accident on Main street, Somerville. She had driven in front of a store and while alighting from her buggy her foot caught in the lines, throwing her against the curbing and starting her horse off on a mad run. The vehicle struck S. B. Kelso's wagon tied along the street and was overturned, the top being wrecked by coming in contact with trolley poles and tie posts. The horse soon broke from the buggy, but was caught. Mrs. Arkenburgh sustained severe injuries.

Mrs. Pickell Dead.

Mrs. Jane Pickell, seventy-one years old, widow of the late George Pickell and formerly a resident of Dunellen, passed away Saturday at her home near Pottersville, from dropsy. She was one of the oldest members of the Pottersville Reformed church and is survived by seven children, four sons and three daughters. The funeral was held this afternoon in that edifice. Rev. Wilmer Mac Nair, the pastor, officiated. Interment was at Pottersville.

J. K. Arnold Throws From Wagon.

While James K. Arnold, the Somerset street grocer, was driving along West Front street, on Monday, the breeches strap broke and frightened the animal. Mr. Arnold was dragged from his seat. The frightened steed took a straight path for home, reaching there long before his owner. Mr. Arnold received a few scratches and cuts.

BRYAN'S LETTER TO MARTINE

"BOY ORATOR OF THE PLATTE" TELLS HIM THAT PLATFORM IS A GOOD ONE.

"Farmer Orator" James E. Martine, a personal friend of William J. Bryan, today received a letter from the noted Democrat. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Martine have been warm personal friends since the visit of the Nebraskan to "Cedar Brook Farm" during his second candidacy for the Presidency. The two have corresponded and exchanged views along political lines continually. Mr. Martine has always had the utmost faith in the principles espoused by the exponent of free silver.

This year when the Democrats were at odds regarding a candidate and in doubt as to what would constitute the party's platform, Mr. Martine declared his faith in Mr. Bryan by saying that no matter what happened he did not believe that Mr. Bryan would bolt the party. This assertion has come true as this letter received by Mr. Martine today shows:

"Lincoln, Neb., July 19, 1904.

"J. E. Martine,

"My dear Friend:—I thank you for the many kind words contained in your letter. As to the convention, I feel that we have a good platform and one upon which all Democrats should unite and march to victory. Again thanking you, I am

"Yours,

"W. J. Bryan."

SELLS SEAT IN EXCHANGE.

John B. Dumont Retires After a Long Career as a Broker.

John B. Dumont, of Stelle avenue, has sold his seat in the New York Stock Exchange and will retire from business until next fall. It is understood that he received $65,000 for his membership privileges. Mr. Dumont will take a needed rest this summer, after which he may engage in other business in New York. He engaged in the stock brokerage business in 1879 and has been very active in it ever since.

During his residence here he has always taken a lively interest in municipal affairs, having served the city in the Council for many years. While in the Council his experience in matters of finance was of great benefit to the city.

NEW BOYS' CLUB.

Young Fellows in Netherwood Discuss Plans of Organization for Social Enjoyment.

At the invitation of Rev. Arthur S. Peck, curate in charge of St. Stephen's church at Netherwood, sixteen of the boys of the parish assembled at the church Saturday morning to arrange for the formation of a Boys' Club. Fred Crook was elected chairman of the meeting and after discussion, such a club was formed. The organization will be a means of bringing the boys together in the parish and will hold regular meetings conducted under parliamentary rules. At the next meeting, regular officers will be elected and a club room will be received for occupancy and for the installation of games and books.

Safe Arrival of "Tom" Say.

Postal cards have been received by several members of the Timbo Social Club announcing the safe arrival in England of Thomas Fay, of North avenue. He reports a fine voyage on the "Celtic" and reached Queenstown enjoying excellent health.

Bishop Vincent Returns.

Bishop J. H. Vincent, for some time a resident of this city, who has returned home after several years' official residence abroad, has chosen Indianapolis as his residence. He will spend the summer at Chautauqua.

Miss Helen Burroughs of Plainfield, is among the recent arrivals at the Pocono Pines Inn, Pa.

TAGGART CHAIRMAN

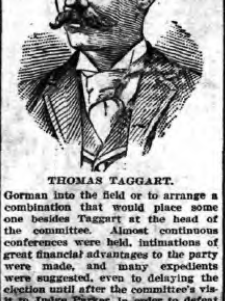
Campaign Executive Elected by Democrats.

MANY FAVORED SENATOR GORMAN

Headquarters Will Be Established In New York, and the Active Work Will Be Entered Upon at Once.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Thomas Taggart of Indiana has been elected chairman of the Democratic national committee, and expectations were fulfilled. Indorsed by nearly every member of the committee the day after the convention adjourned at St. Louis, it has been known ever since that only the decree of Judge Parker in favor of some other man, or the consent of Senator Gorman to accept the place, could prevent the selection of Mr. Taggart. Neither of these contingencies arose, and the Indiana man was unanimously chosen to a place for which he long has had aspirations.

Although the vote was unanimous, it was not until after it was actually in progress that opposition to Mr. Taggart's selection was withdrawn. Beginning with the return of Senator Gorman, former Senator Hill, former Senator Jones and other Democratic leaders last evening and lasting up to the moment when the committee was called to order, the strongest possible effort was made to bring Senator



THOMAS TAGGART.

Gorman into the field or to arrange a combination that would place some one besides Taggart at the head of the committee. Almost continuous conferences were held, intimations of great financial advantages to the party were made, and many expedients were suggested, even to delaying the election until after the committee's visit to Judge Parker, in order to defeat Taggart. But nothing could change the determination of his friends to force an election and, if the opposition had any reality, to compel a show of strength. Failing to secure either of the necessary conditions to defeat Taggart, the opposition acquiesced, and the proceedings of the committee were brief and harmonious.

The contest for the other officers created only a slight diversion and differences regarding them, which were somewhat spirited for a few days past, were easily adjusted.

The ticket elected was as follows: Thomas Taggart of Indiana, chairman; Urey Woodson of Kentucky, secretary; Edward Sefton of Washington, assistant secretary; John I. Martin of Missouri, sergeant at arms; Samuel Donelson of Tennessee, assistant sergeant at arms.

The most important action of the committee, aside from the selection of a chairman, was that of arranging for a committee, or committees, to manage the campaign. A proposition submitted by William F. Sheehan, slightly modified upon the suggestion of Senator Bailey, was adopted. As agreed to it is as follows:

"That the chair be authorized to appoint, not to exceed two, vice chairmen as his judgment may determine; that the chair be authorized to appoint an executive committee of not more than five nor more than seven members."

Under this resolution Chairman Taggart will select campaign managers. It is taken for granted that he will be the chairman of the executive committee, as this custom is always followed. Among those mentioned were William F. Sheehan of New York, Arthur P. Gorman of Maryland, August Belmont of New York, David B. Hill of New York, James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania, John T. McGraw of West Virginia, William H. Martin of Arkansas, John P. Hopkins or James H. Eckles of Illinois, Bradley B. Smalley of Vermont, George A. Gaston of Massachusetts, James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey, T. F. Ryan of Virginia, Governor Chamberlain of Oregon, Charles S. Thomas of Colorado and Fred T. Dubois of Idaho.

The plans of Chairman Taggart for the next few days include the trip to Esopus today, returning to New York in the evening. He expects to spend Thursday in the city consulting with a number of prominent Democrats regarding the composition of the committees he is authorized to appoint. Thursday evening or Friday he will leave for Indiana, but will return almost immediately, announce the committees, establish headquarters and enter upon active campaign work.

Military Rule Called Off.

DENVER, July 27.—Governor Peabody has issued a proclamation calling off military rule in Teller county and placing the Cripple Creek district in charge of the civil authorities. This action was taken by the governor in face of opposition from many influential citizens of Cripple Creek, who desire to prevent deported union miners from returning to the district.

NONUNIONISTS SHOOT

Chicago Has Big Riot at the Stockyards.

HUNDREDS OF SHOTS ARE FIRED

Police Corralled Three Wagon Loads of Prisoners—All Strike Breakers Searched For Weapons—Bread Wagons Are Attacked.

CHICAGO, July 27.—Springing from a street car on which they had been hurried to the stockyards a gang of negro nonunion men fired more than a score of shots point blank at strike sympathizers who had gathered about the main entrance of the yards.

Then the armed crowd of strike sympathizers ran toward the Swift plant, firing hundreds of shots in all directions. No one was struck by the flying bullets, however. The nonunion men were charged by the police in the yards. Fighting hand to hand with the bluecoats, three wagon loads of prisoners were hustled to the stockyards police station.

With the district in an uproar and a crowd of thousands charging the yard gates and demanding vengeance on the nonunion men, the police began the search of every one in the yards for concealed weapons. In one trip of the patrol wagon to the police station eight negroes were taken as prisoners, and on these eight men fourteen revolvers were found.

Five bread wagons of the Heissler & Junge Baking company were twice attacked by angry crowds of strikers. The drivers were attempting to take the wagons into the stockyards to deliver bread. The vehicles were damaged, but the drivers escaped injury in both attacks by whipping their teams into a gallop. Police were summoned by a riot call both times. A detachment in patrol wagons twice attempted to escort the bread wagons into the stockyards, but failed each time.

Chicago's great industry is practically at a standstill, and the general strike at the stockyards is an accomplished fact. Added to the number previously on strike, the total number idle in "Packingtown" is close to 30,000.

Rumors of renewed efforts to settle the difficulty by arbitration were thick, but upon investigation they were all found to be without foundation. When questioned regarding the situation Michael J. Donnelly, president of the Butchers' union, the organization which precipitated the original strike, said:

"I have no hope of an immediate settlement. The fight is on, and the only thing we can do now is to stick to the end."

Omaha Men Follow Chicago's Lead.

OMAHA, Neb., July 27.—Eleven hundred members of the allied machanical trades employed at the packing plants in South Omaha went on strike in sympathy with the striking butchers. This action was taken on an order from President Donnelly. Nine unions are affected.

Crook Took a Good Name.

MARSEILLES, France, July 27.—An American bearing a passport issued to Charles Kuhn has been arrested here on the charge of writing George Mevbatt at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago. The prisoner, who is forty-five years old, had $12,000 in his possession. He traveled in company with Mewbatt on the White Star line steamer Gothic from New Zealand under the name of Henry Van Dyck.

Thomas Morrison Replaces Schwab.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The directors of the United States Steel corporation at a meeting held here declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ percent and elected Thomas Morrison a director in place of Charles M. Schwab, resigned. No other business was transacted.

Wreck Near Jonesboro.

BRISTOL, Va., July 27.—Several persons are reported killed in a disastrous freight wreck on the Southern railway near Jonesboro, Tenn. The track is reported blocked many hours. One engine jumped through a house near the track and injured the occupants.

Honors For Taggart.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 27.—A public reception in Tomlinson hall Tuesday night, Aug. 2, Thomas Taggart will be congratulated upon his election to the office of national chairman of the Democratic party.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES OF A FANWOOD FAMILY

Mrs. C. A. Bettman Appeals to Authorities to Compel Her Husband to Provide for Her.

SHE DESERTED HIM

THEIR SEPARATION TWO YEARS CAUSED GREAT SURPRISE.

Husband Now Has Their Child—He Refuses to Live With Her, But Will Provide for Support.

Another chapter has been added to the domestic woes of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bettman, of Fanwood borough, by the latter asking the authorities to force her husband to contribute to her support. She alleges that circumstances compel her to take this action and unless something is done she will become a charge upon the borough. The matter is to be taken up by the poor officials at once.

Mr. and Mrs. Bettman were at one time prominent members of the Fanwood colony and were known as enthusiastic workers in the Scotch Plains Baptist church. Accordingly, when rumors of disagreements between them were noised about the borough it occasioned great surprise. Matters came to a climax when two years ago Mrs. Bettman suddenly left their home taking with her their infant son. She was finally located in New York just as she was preparing to go to her mother's home in Texas. She refused to return then and husband and wife agreed upon a separation.

Last winter Mrs. Bettman reappeared at Fanwood but she found herself barred from her former home. She made other trips to the place with the same result and then went to Perth Amboy, where Mr. Bettman is employed and demanded money from him for the support of herself and child. He complied until two months ago when at her request he took the son from her and ceased the money payments.

Since then she has returned to Fanwood on several occasions and Friday her request for borough aid was made. Mr. Bettman was seen at once and declared if the committee would name a reasonable amount he would pay it each week, but that he would not live with her and neither would he allow her to get possession of the child.

Mrs. Bettman was a school teacher in Texas previous to her marriage and is an accomplished woman.

CLARK FAVORED GOLD PLANK

NEWARK NEWS' MISREPRESENTATION OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN'S VIEWS.

The Newark Evening News said Friday: "Alvah A. Clark, who was New Jersey's representative on the committee on resolutions of the St. Louis convention, was thoroughly satisfied with the platform drawn up and adopted by the Democrats until he heard of the receipt of the Parker telegram. His elation over the fine 'compromise' knockout for both gold and silver was not simulated, but now he wishes that he had repressed his feelings for a few hours, in order that he might have participated in the claims of some of his fellow-delegates that they were largely responsible for the 'bold and manly' course pursued by the nominee."

A friend of former Congressman Clark said today: "Mr. Clark was not satisfied with the platform at St. Louis. After being out all night at a session of the resolutions committee endeavoring to have a sound money plank incorporated into the platform, in a conversation with Former Senator Smith after the committee's adjournment, agreed with Senator Smith that the only recourse left was for them to fight for the same on the floor of the convention, where they could easily win. Senator Smith was intensely earnest in this. When it became known that Senator Smith was to open the fight on the floor of the convention for the sound money plank he was besieged by most all the leaders and prevailed upon not to do so. He refrained from pursuing his original intentions to please friends and he regretted it before the contention finally adjourned."

Co. K's Signal Corps.

Nine member of Co. K have organized a signal corps and a thorough equipment has been secured. Corporal Traschand has been put in charge of the corps and from now on frequent practice will be arranged for. A complete set of signals has been purchased and it is hoped to have a heliograph in a short time. The work of the corps will be under the supervision of Captain Martin.

ALVAH A. CLARK FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Senator Reed's Father-in-Law Likely to be the Nominee of the Democratic Party.

SMITH FAVORS HIM

SWACKHAMER'S BOOM SAID TO BE ON THE WANE.

Charles C. Black Not a Favorite With Democratic Powers—Mr. Clark Formerly a Member of Congress.

Former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, father-in-law of former State Senator Charles A. Reed, of this city, is likely to be the Democratic candidate for Governor. Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer's boom seems to be on the wane. Charles C. Black was prominently mentioned for the honor, but it is said that former United States Senator James Smith, of Newark, the "boss" of the State Democracy, did not take kindly to him.

Senator Smith, it is reported, has been hunting about for a strong man for the place. He has, it is said, dangled the bait before State Senator Samuel S. Childs, but that the Somerset man has refused to bite, declaring that his business interests will not permit him to think of considering the subject. While the former Senator was up in that section of the State, the talk went on, he had come to an understanding with Mr. Clark and Somerset was to furnish the candidate, and not Hudson.

It is also said that Mr. Clark is not objectionable to Edward F. C. Young, the millionaire banker of Jersey City, who is the "real power behind the throne," as a Trenton wag expressed it the day Mayor Fagan so badly routed the Democratic hosts at the ballot-box. Mr. Young, so the talk goes, although he has not expressed himself publicly upon the subject yet, takes no more kindly to Mr. Black's candidacy than Mr. Smith does, that he is friendly to Mr. Clark and can be depended upon to call off Robert Davis from the support of Mr. Black at the proper time. This, it is also pointed out, would do much to restore the harmony, which is said to be sadly lacking between the big Hudson and Essex leader ever since the Hudson man succeeded in nominating Mayor Seymour for Governor three years ago against the wishes of the Essex man, but failed to elect him.

At one time Mr. Clark was very prominent in Democratic politics and was considered one of the State leaders. He represented the State in Congress from 1877 to 1881, but being known as a sound money Democrat, he has not taken a very active part in the politics of the State since the silver heresy crept into the party.

PERCY OHL IN ASYLUM

ONCE WELL-TO-DO PLAINFIELDER NOW CONFINED IN STATE HOSPITAL.

At one time a leading resident of the city, Percy Ohl, of Central avenue, was taken yesterday to the State hospital, his mind gone complete and suffering from various hallucinations. His mentality has been weakening gradually and his condition became so bad that last week he was examined by Drs. Zeglio and Lafburrow and pronounced insane. Papers were made out by Overseer of the Poor Ayers and the commitment followed.

Twenty-five years ago, Ohl was prominent in Plainfield affairs and was considered quite wealthy. Bad luck of various kinds suddenly came upon him and in recent years he has been almost penniless. He was always well known as the introducer of the telephone system in this city.

The published report that Ohl has been an inmate of the Industrial Home is not true as he has been with his family all along.

HOME FROM CINCINNATI.

Local Elks Report Having Good Time at the Western Convention.

City Judge William N. Runyon, Walter Freeman, John H. Cone and Fred Nelson returned home Sunday night, from Cincinnati after a week's attendance at the Elks' convention. They report an excellent time, having been members of the New Jersey delegation of 800 which was treated royally on all sides. Outside of lodge matters the Plainfielders enjoyed side trips to Covington, Newport and Bellevue, Ky. The start for home was made Saturday evening.

The convention next year will be held at Buffalo.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones, of West Fifth street, are spending their vacation at Newport, Me.

TELEPHONE COMPANY MAKING IMPROVEMENTS

Manager C. W. Runyon Plans for Better Service in Territory Including Westfield.

LATEST FACILITIES

COMMUNICATION TO BE HAD WITH HARLINGEN AND BELL MEAD.

Changes to be Made at the Local Office — Need for Another Switchboard at Central Here.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is constantly aiming to increase the efficiency of its service and the scope of its business. For several weeks past, Manager Charles W. Runyon has been engaged in supervising many improvements in the Westfield territory, where a new office has been established at the corner of Broad and Elm streets. Heretofore, the exchange has been in the store of Druggist Trenchard.

Besides a new office, there will be a new up-to-date switchboard, similar to the one in the Plainfield office, aerial cables, a new distributing board and the selective system of ringing telephone bells. It is the purpose of the company to make the Westfield exchange as modern as the one here, and to give as good service. Two operators are now employed there, one in the day time and one at night. A third operator will soon be engaged to assist in handling the increase in business.

Within the coming week telephone communication will be had with Harlingen and Bells Mead, those towns being in direct connection with the Somerville exchange. The local company heretofore covering this part of Somerset County has been taken over by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and there will be general improvement in the service and eventually other towns in that vicinity will be connected by telephone. Calls to that part of the State will be made through the Somerville office.

Manager Runyon is also preparing to care for the constantly increasing business here. A new section to the present switchboard will be added, making it possible to install a great many new 'phones in the city and at the same time not interfere with the present excellence in service. From time to time improvements are made at the local exchange with a view to keeping it up to the highest point of efficiency.

TAX BOARD INSTRUCTIONS

TAX LISTS TO BE EXAMINED AND REVISED SECOND TUESDAY IN AUGUST.

Thomas R. Usher, secretary of the State Board of Taxation, has sent out to the various tax boards of the State circulars calling attention to section 19 of the revised tax act of 1903.

The section provides that the governing bodies of all taxing districts or boards charged with the revision of taxes are requires to meet on the second Tuesday of August, for the purpose of examining, reviewing and correcting the assessor's tax list and duplicate, both of which the assessor is required to lay before them, properly made up and legibly written in ink, to be by them examined, revised and corrected, and they may adjourn from time to time to discharge their duties, and shall complete their work on or before the last day of August.

The tax list must remain on file with the clerk of the municipality to be open at all times to the inspection of taxpayers, except in towns and cities where there is a board of assessors with a fixed office; in such cases, the tax list must be kept in such office.

Perilous Work.

Seated on a small board held by a block and tackle, the employes of a New York contracting firm, began work today painting the four high smokestacks at the local electric light plant of the Public Service Corporation. The stacks are of iron and extend 125 feet in the air but the men go about the hazardous job as unconcerned as if it were a board fence. The block and tackle was hauled to the top by means of a small wire which has always been suspended inside the columns.

COPS ORGANIZE BALL TEAM

JOHN FLYNN IS CHOSEN CAPTAIN OF BLUECOATS' NINE.

In order to accept the challenge extended them by the Newark policemen's baseball team, the members of the local force met yesterday afternoon and reorganized their baseball club. Roundsman John Flynn was elected captain. Chief Kiely manager and treasurer and Patrolman Overbaugh secretary. The Newark challenge was formally accepted and while it was impossible to fix the exact date for the contest or the grounds, it will probably take place in Newark on or about August 27. Tuesdays and Fridays were named as the regular practice days and the applicants will be tried out at once.

The majority of the officers entered enthusiastically into the scheme and there are indications of a strong team being put out. Among those who will be included in the personal are Patrolmen Charles Flynn, John McKeon, Peter Hamilton, Morris Higgins, John Kelly, William McCarthy, Dennis O'Keefe, Martin Vanderweg, Andrew Saffroe and William Mesnier. Several of these are good players and their positions will be assigned them after Captain Flynn witnesses their practice work.

A TRIBUTE TO SWACKHAMER

HIS CHARACTER HAS WON HIM DISTINCTION SAYS NEWARK NEWS.

The Newark Evening News had this to say editorially in yesterday's issue:

"Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Somerset, has firmly and finally declined to be a candidate to succeed himself, and consequently the nomination must go to some other Democrat, probably to Nelson Y. Dungan, former prosecutor of pleas. Mr. Swackhamer, it is said, has his eye on some better position, and if so it is by no means to be discredited that there will be a great many in this State, both in the Democratic party and outside of it, who will candidly admit that Mr. Swackhamer is capable of filling a higher office.

"There was something spectacular about him in the debates in the House during the two terms he has served, and it cannot be said that all his legislative conduct was on the highest plane of statesmanship. He sometimes descended to take advantage of opportunities for retort and repartee that tickled the ears of the groundlings, but this was allowable in a minority Assemblyman, particularly when the majority members were in the habit of laying themselves open to such attacks. But aside from this he was a capable and excellent Assemblyman and a man of so much merit that Somerset County, normally Republican, elected him twice; the first time because of a party split, but the second time simply because he couldn't be beaten.

"Mr. Swackhamer appears to be one of those few men who are moved by conscientious convictions rather than by temporizing policies, and it was the man's high character quite as much as his ability that won him distinction as an Assemblyman. It is a pity that more such men do not find their way to the Legislature, and stay there."

JOHN DRISCOLL'S BIRTHDAY.

Celebration of His Ninth Anniversary Attended by Playmates.

In honor of the ninth anniversary of his birthday, John Driscoll, of Lee place, was tendered a pleasant surprise party by thirty of his little friends yesterday afternoon. The guests enjoyed themselves with games and were then served with refreshments.

The affair was arranged by Miss Bessie Parent and among those in attendance were Mary Donnolly, Bridget Hepner, Lizzie Keegan, Mary Smith, Nellie Smith, Katie McGauley, Bertha Bender, Cora Bender, Walter Wilson, John Wilson, Thomas Kilbride, Robert Harris, John Miles, Thomas Conley, Frank Donnolly, William Sullivan, John Winnenreid, Henry Bender, Willie Regan and Clarence Walters.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER JOS. W. YATES

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman Conducts the Service and Pays a Tribute to Dead Man.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

REMAINS ARE PLACED IN HILLSIDE RECEIVING VAULT.

Throng of Citizens at the Obsequies—List of Honorary Pallbearers — The Music.

The home of the late Joseph Washburn Yates, on East Seventh street, was thronged with relatives and friends, Tuesday afternoon, who attended the funeral services of the well-known citizen. Included among those present were men prominent in the business affairs in this city and New York; persons who had known Mr. Yates for many years and who learned to admire him for his many sterling qualities.

In the absence of Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and pastor of Mr. Yates, Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace Episcopal church, and an intimate friend and neighbor of the dead man, conducted the services.

There was a handsome display of floral tributes from relatives and friends, including wreaths and cut flowers, while banked around the bier were several ferns, palms and asparagus vines.

During the services William N. Runyon and Elmer R. Runyon sang Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," "The Morning Land" and "Saved by Grace."

In the course of his remarks concerning Mr. Yates, Rev. Mr. Rodman spoke in part as follows:

Rev. Mr. Rodman's text was: "Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ," I Cor. XV. 57.

He said in part:

"It may be said without hesitation that there never has been a funeral of any of the children of men, whether an infant of days, or a man of old age at which, amid many varying circumstances, some sustaining thoughts or some useful lesson could not be gleaned by one who had an eye for such things.

"The surroundings are infinitely various, but comfort pervades them all. If it is an infant, we think that it is taken from the evil to come, delivered from all the trials and temptations and sorrows of life. If an old man, we remember that rest is sweet after the labors of the day.

"This does not seem like a funeral, but rather like a victory, which our friend has gained. And we are here not to lament and mourn, but to render thanks to God who has given him the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. And the circumstances of it would not have been ordered in a way more to his liking. He loved this home and the surrounding grounds but he loved also that other summer home to which he has gone for some years, every summer, to celebrate and prepare himself for the work of the rest of the year. He loved the flowers and the trees of his lawn here. I have watched him as he was tenderly superintending the work, that he thought would tend to their nurture and well-being. But he loved also Minnewaska for the simplicity and naturalness of its scenery, and there in the quiet and peacefulness he had been spending the past weeks. He had a serious illness here not long ago which brought him very near to the grave, but his work was not done, and God brought him back to at least some degree of his former health. I believe that in that sickness he was taught lessons which he might have learned nowhere else. I am told that for some months past his reading and his thoughts have been not so much upon things of this life and this world, as upon the future life and that other world, towards which he felt his steps were treading. As I have seen him walking, very slowly to and from his home, it has seemed to me that he was holding communion with his God and Father and meditating upon the things of the eternal world. Thus he was seeking to get ready for his entrance upon that other and better life.

"The circumstances remind me of the death of that other saint of God, the venerable Bishop of Central New York, who fell asleep so recently at his summer home. In his pocket book was found a worn slip of paper on which were inscribed these words:

"'Life's race well run,
Life's work well done,
Life's crown well won;
Now comes rest.'"

The honorary pall-bearers were Dr. Ellis W. Hodges, Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, Stephen A. Gisse, John Leal, James E. Martine and J. Evarts Tracy. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery and will be interred later.

FREEHOLDERS ACCEPT GIRAUD AVE. BRIDGE

Joint Committee of Union and Somerset Boards Settle Contentions With Contractors

AFTER LONG DELAY

SERIES OF EXCUSES GIVEN FOR FAILURE TO COMPLETE IT.

Structure Cost $6,471—Work Commenced in June 1903—Temporary Bridge Used for a Time.

Following a meeting of the proper committees from the Union and Somerset County Boards of Freeholders, the Giraud avenue bridge over Green brook has been formally accepted, thus ending all contention between officials and contractors that has existed for many months. At the next regular meeting of the two boards the construction bills will be passed and payment for the structure will be made, amounting in all to $6,471.

Although but a small stone and iron affair, it is doubtful if any other bridge in this section has had more vicissitudes in its building than this one. The foundation was commenced in June, 1903 and the structure was to have been completed and turned over to the Freeholders by the following fall. Delays occurred one after another and the work dragged slowly along despite warnings from the officials that the contract would be taken from the Dover Iron Works and completed at its expense. Finally, in response to requests from residents in Washington and who use Giraud avenue a great deal, a temporary structure was thrown over the stream and the trouble was alleviated for the time being.

The work afterward ceased entirely and it remained dormant until the iron works officials were given a stated time to complete the bridge or forfeit the contract. They complied by getting material on the ground and finishing it up last week. Their contention all along has been that it was impossible to get the steel from the mills and that after it was shipped the cars were delayed.

This was part of a statement made to the Freeholders by Contractor Birch, of the Dover Company, just previous to the acceptance. The bridge is a very substantial affair and is greatly appreciated by both pedestrians and drivers.

Mail Route to Panama.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Mosher, of West Fifth street, have received a letter from their son, Stanley Mosher, who, with a number of other surveyors, are on their way to Panama to take Government positions. The letter was mailed at Wapling Island, 900 miles east, the point being one of mail exchange. According to the schedule the steamer was due to arrive at either Colon or Panama last Tuesday and the young man's parents anxiously await another letter.

Donations to Charity.

A friend of the City Union, King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain and the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home at Netherwood, called at The Daily Press office this morning, and left $2 for the camp on the mountains and $5 for the other institution. Those in charge of these institutions will appreciate similar gifts from those inclined to help them.

P. S. C. Officials on Inspection.

A special trolley car carrying officials of the Public Service Corporation, passed through here this morning going toward Trenton on a tour of inspection. The car, a new one, was handsomely furnished and provided with every convenience. A. H. Stanley, general superintendent, and Stanley, general superintendent, and Mr. Carey, the chief engineer of the road, were aboard.

Cranford Minister to Speak.

The Rev. A. L. Hough, pastor of the First M. E. church at Cranford, will lead the afternoon meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday at 4 o'clock. De-Witt Frasee will render selections on the cornet.

REPORT ON SANITARY INSPECTION OF HOUSES

Inspector Leonard Gavett Has Examined the Health Conditions of 361 Dwellings.

SERVES 215 NOTICES

WORK TO BE CONTINUED DURING PRESENT MONTH.

Section of the City Covered—Result of the Inspections in Detail—Ordinances Enforced.

The work of house to house inspection has been pushed with considerable energy by the Board of Health during the past month, and excellent results have been attained toward a general cleaning up of the city. At the August meeting of the Board, yesterday, facts and figures were presented showing the amount of work thus far accomplished. It was decided to continue the scheme of sanitary inspection during the coming month and every effort will be made by the Board to secure as many sewer connections as possible, thus abolishing cesspools.

Inspections have been made covering the following territory:

East Third street, between Watchung avenue and Richmond street; East Second street, between Park avenue and Richmond street; West Second street, between Park avenue and Plainfield avenue; South Second street, between Liberty street and Grant avenue; Grant avenue, between South Second street and West Third street; Spooner avenue, between South Second street and West Third street; Plainfield avenue, between West Second street and West Third street; West Second street, between Grand street and West Third street; Central avenue, between West Second street and West Third street; Madison avenue, between West Second street and West Third street; Muhlenberg place, between South Second street and West Third street; Cottage place, between Washington and Richmond streets.

The results of these inspections is as follows: Total number of houses inspected, 361; privy vaults which required cleaning, 94; cesspools, which required cleaning, 6; accumulation of ashes and garbage to be removed, 19; accumulation of garbage, to be removed, 6; accumulation of manure to be removed, 5; defective plumbing systems found, 13; abandoned privy vaults not properly filled, 16.

In enforcing the ordinances of the Board it was necessary to serve 215 notices. These were as follows:

Notices to abate nuisances, 58; notices to abolish vaults, 82; notices to abolish cesspools, 29; notices to connect with the sewer, 46, total, 215.

Co. K at Practice.

Members of Co. K turned out last night in large numbers to practice on the company range. Excellent scores were the rule and the boys feel confident that they will make a good showing at Sea Girt. The armory will be open for practice tomorrow night and Friday night and Captain Martin hopes the members will take this opportunity to improve their shooting to the highest possible point of efficiency. Those who have not yet received their checks can get them from First Sergeant Peterson.

Trolleymen's Outing.

A good-sized delegation of conductors, motormen and employes of the Middlesex Employes' Benevolent Association visited Riverside Park yesterday afternoon to attend the annual outing of the association. By an arrangement with the management, the Park was at the disposal of the trolleymen from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until late in the evening.

Death From Cholera Infantum.

Little Joseph McGauley, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard McGauley, of Prospect avenue, died suddenly yesterday afternoon from an attack of cholera infantum. Funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Hope Chapel Service.

In the absence of Rev. Laurence R. Howard, of Hope chapel, who is on his summer vacation, the pulpit will be occupied on Sunday by Robert Love in the morning and Kenneth Robbie in the evening.

—A baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hazzard, of Elmwood place, this morning.

NARROWLY ESCAPED DEATH

TWO BOYS FELL THIRTY FEET IN THE WEST END.

Edward Gunzleman, aged twelve years, of Kenyon place, narrowly escaped being killed on Monday, when he and a companion named Dorhman fell a distance of thirty feet out of a tree located on the McQuire property in the West End. Young Gunzleman struck on a picket fence, bruising and lacerating his arm and side. He just barely escaped being impaled.

His companion, who landed on the ground and was not injured in the least, hastened to the home of Rev. George Mooney nearby, and Dr. P. B. Cregar was summoned. Mr. Mooney and the doctor arrived about the same time and the injured lad, after temporary treatment, was removed to his home, where the doctor was obliged to take many stitches to close the laceration.

A remarkable fact was that not a bone was broken. It will be some time before the lad will be able to go out. Last Fourth of July he suffered the loss of three fingers through a premature explosion of gunpowder. His father accidentally dropped a piece of lighted punk into the powder while his son was arranging for a discharge of a cannon.

ALTERATIONS AT FIRST M. E.

ENTRANCE TO EDIFICE TO BE REMODELLED NOW.

Plans for the entrance alterations at the First Methodist church have been filed with Building Inspector Doane, and building permit was granted yesterday afternoon. The plans drawn by Oscar F. Teal, of New York, show that the exterior stone steps at the church are to be done away with and the entrance to the church is to be at street level in the building proper. Within, broad flights of stairs are to lead up to the church on either side of the present vestibule.

A glass foyer is to be built across the front of the church. New stairs are to be erected to the gallery in place of the present spiral stairs. There will be square staircases to conform with the building ordinance. A. M. Gatchell has the contract for the carpenter and Charles M. Rayner will have charge of the plumbing work. The changes in the approach will necessitate a change in the basement entrance and in the position of one of the furnaces.

"JIM" TO FIRE OPENING GUN

FARMER ORATOR TO SPEAK AT RATIFICATION MEETING.

Elizabeth Democrats are looking forward with great expectancy to a big meeting set for Friday evening when the party continents from all over the county will assemble. The main item of business to be transacted is the ratification of the national platform and Candidates Parker and Davis. Plainfield will be represented by a large delegation of the faithful and the issues will be gone over pro and con.

Several notable speakers have promised to be in attendance but the place of honor on the programme has been accorded the "Farmer Orator" James R. Martine, of this city, who is already primed with oratorical ammunition for the campaign.

Milk Supply of Good Quality.

The Board of Health reports that during July twenty-seven dairies were visited which included principally the dairies supplying milk to the Willswood Farms Dairy Company's creamery and Marchant Brothers' creamery. Forty-three samples of milk were analyzed during the month which included all but two of the bottled milks sold here. With a few exceptions the milk was of very good quality.

Walter Babcock's Party.

Walter Babcock, of Clinton avenue, entertained a party of friends at his home last evening at a musicale. The affair was greatly enjoyed and at its close refreshments were served. Among those who contributed selections were the Misses Julia Connolly and Mabel Reynolds, Anthony Callahan and William Crotty.

Infant Girl Dead.

Charlotte Winifred Terry, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Terry, of Garwood, died yesterday from cholera infantum. The little one was four-and-a-half months old. Funeral services will be held at the home of the parents tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

MISS ANNA O'KEEFE WEDS DANIEL COURAINE

Nuptial Ceremony Takes Place at St. Mary's Church in Presence of Many Friends.

RECEPTION FOLLOWS

REV. ANDREW M. EGAN OFFICIATES AT THE WEDDING.

Bride's Sister as Maid-of-Honor and Groom's Brother as Best Man—Mrs. Couraine a Member of St. Mary's Choir.

In St. Mary's church at 6:30 last Tuesday, Miss Anna O'Keefe, daughter of Mrs. Annie O'Keefe, of West Sixth street, was made the wife of Daniel Couraine, of Stebbins place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Egan in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

Miss Lizzie O'Keefe, a sister of the bride, was maid-of-honor and Edward Couraine, of Jersey City, the groom's brother, acted as best man. The bride was gowned in white silk mulle over white taffeta with pearl trimmings. She wore a veil caught up with lemon blossoms and carried a prayer book, the gift of the groom. The maid-of-honor wore white silk mulle and carried white asters. John O'Keefe and Michael O'Keefe, of this city; Oliver Knox and Michael Walsh, of Jersey City, were the ushers. While the bridal party was assembling before the altar Miss Mary J. Smith presided at the organ and rendered the Lohengrin wedding march.

Following the ceremony a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Couraine at the home of the bride's mother, which was attended by many guests. They left late in the evening for a wedding trip, at the conclusion of which they will make their home in Jersey City, where the groom formerly resided. He is employed in a Wall street banking house and his business associates presented him with a dinner set and a purse of gold. The bride was remembered with many gifts, among them being an oak chair from the choir of St. Mary's church, of which she has been a member.

PUBLIC HEALTH IN JULY

REPORTS FOR THE MONTH AS SUBMITTED AT BOARD MEETING.

Reports showing the work performed during July and the sanitary condition of the city generally were received at the August meeting of the Board of Health, yesterday. Few cases of contagious disease were reported and at present there are only two houses under quarantine.

There were reported the following number of cases of disease: Diphtheria, four; scarlet fever, two; typhoid fever, two; measles, twelve; tuberculosis, five. There was one death from diphtheria and four from tuberculosis. Sixteen marriages were reported, twenty-four births, one still-birth.

Of the sixteen marriages thirteen were white, twenty-two of the births were white and four colored; eighteen female and six male. The one still-birth was male and colored. Of the twenty-five deaths reported, fifteen were female, ten male; twenty were white and five colored.

The deaths at all ages are as follows:

Under one month, two; one month to one year, four; one year to five years, two; five years to twenty years, three; twenty years to forty years, three; forty years to sixty years, four; over sixty years, seven.

SEWER PIPE WORK.

Philadelphia Firm's Contract Here Half Completed.

Stone & Grossart, of Philadelphia, who have the contract for building the extension to the sanitary sewer system here, have secured a $15,000 contract to lay three miles of water pipe at East Orange. They will soon commence that work. Mr. Grossart will take charge of it and Mr. Stone will come to this city to superintend the work here.

The local sewer extension is about half completed. Mr. Grossart said today that with clear weather the job could be completed in five weeks. There has been some delay in receiving pipe, and this together with the wet weather and labor troubles have caused considerable delay.

THE ANGORA GOATS

RAISING THEM A GROWING INDUSTRY IN THIS COUNTRY.

Their Wool Is a Valuable Product and Is Used in Almost Countless Ways — Valuable for Other Things.

The Angora goat is not generally known throughout the world as a domestic animal; many who come upon its name in the natural histories and cyclopaedias pass it out of mind as a semi-wild beast. However, if all who are indebted to the Angora for some of their most beautiful clothing were familiar with the animal itself, it would have tens of thousands of friends. The most valuable feature of the Angora goat is its fleece, and when the ladies are told that this fleece is what is known in commerce as mohair, they will think they know all the rest; but it is hardly possible that they are aware of the fact that their brilliantine and sibeline dress goods, their imitation astrachan coats (though not often sold as imitation) and a score or more of such-like goods are made of mohair; they are not aware that their best furniture is upholstered with mohair, because this product has all the luster of silk, all the durability of the frame of the chair itself, and all the beauty of design that can be woven into any fabric; that their children have muffs and cape trimmings of the raw mohair; and that hundreds of floors have rugs made from the skins of Angoras, generally dyed a brilliant color, but often in the natural white. When men are informed that almost every upholstered car is done in mohair plush they are not really astonished until they are still further informed that mohair is not from the Angora goat hair. All this is true, and much more could be added. The world's annual production of mohair is truly immense.

The native habitat of this little friend of mankind is Asia Minor. At different times efforts have been made to acclimatise them in various countries, but generally without success, owing usually to an unsuitable climate. However, a few of were brought to the United States in 1849, where they have lived a precarious existence for many years. In the early fifties a considerable number were transported to Cape Colony, where they have thriven to such an extent as at this time to make that country the leading mohair-producing territory in the world.

During the last four years there has been a distinct revival of this industry in the United States, a condition which has been brought about largely through the efforts of the government in its behalf. Previous to this time most of the goats had been concentrated at places in a few of the western states, and not many people knew anything about them; but now they may be found in every state and territory, and at several points in Canada, and nothing but the best reports are heard of them from all these sections. They are doing well in the semi-arid southwest in the mountains of California and Montana, and on the sand-dunes of Lake Superior. In New England they give fair promise of being the forerunners of a rehabilitation of the abandoned farms there, where the extreme cold of winter does not injure them. The present expansion of this industry in the United States is based principally upon two features—the production of mohair and the destruction of brushwood by the goats. Incidentally, they produce very fine mutton, but not many good mohair producers are slaughtered for meat. The fleece is found to be superior to the South African product, and only slightly inferior to the Turkish hair. There are mills in New England that consume all of the domestic product, and, besides, they import over a million pounds. Although there will be a rapid increase in the amount of hair produced in the United States, there is no prospect of a surplus for many years to come.

GEORGE PAYETTE THOMPSON.

DINING-ROOM DRAPERIES.

Plain and Inexpensive Material That Serves Well for the Purpose.

The neighboring merchant, says Ada Sterling, in Harper's Bazar, may not keep the variety of denims so popularly adopted by city housekeepers, and so truly useful in the home of modest aspirations, but he is altogether likely to carry quantities of red-brown or old-blue "overhaulin's," and these, in a weave that is a kind of compromise between jeans and duck, and not unlike the denim, are admirable materials for this favorite mats rial. From the point of view of the artist, their tones are excellent. A whole sitting-room may be done in either, beginning with the chair cushions and those of the improved settle, the draperies, and even the floor covering. To give color to the dining-room of a farmhouse, generally whitewashed or kalsomined and plainly painted, such materials will prove excellent. They improve in softness and laundering becomes necessary, and will take needle ornamentation admirably. This, when done with rope-linen thread or mercerized cotton, is often highly effective. A room with blue duck cushions as a feature, with white walls, and soft, fresh muslin curtains, with a hooked or woven or merely plaited rag carpet, will be dainty, modern, and refined. Interiors so treated are no longer accounted plain and "countried," but are being devised again and again in the colonial cottage homes that distinguish the beautiful suburbs of New York, Philadelphia, and Washington.

Many calico designs seen upon the counters of country merchants are wholly unfit for wearing apparel, but they will often be of a pattern and coloring and body which will serve admirably for the making of trunk covers, closet curtains, for the dressing of beds, and for making box-plaited or gathered mantel lambrequins. They are fresh and pretty, and, by means of neat workmanship in making them up, may become things of real beauty. A room so treated should not contain, of course, more than one pattern or goods, the curtains and ruffled trunk covers and valanced bed being done in the same. Where variety is desired, colored linings may be given the bedspread or the curtains, such as plain rose or blue or green; or, where even this is not available, a soft yellowed or unbleached muslin will serve with good effect.

HELPS FOR THE HEALTH.

Some Simple Remedies Which Are Suggested for Common Ailments.

Oranges are said to be excellent for a sallow complexion. Of course, one at breakfast time cannot be depended on to make an appreciable difference in one's color, but four or five a day will be likely to.

Carry a cake of chocolate in your handbag when taking a long drive or a several hours' train ride. A nibble now and then of this will prevent a headache or be sufficiently nourishing to check the restless hunger apt to be noticed on such occasions.

If cold water fails to relieve tired and aching feet, try rubbing the feet and ankles with alcohol, then powdering with talcum. Nothing is more conducive to discomfort and inability to work with vigor than aching or uncomfortable feet.

Some one has drawn attention to the fact that music exercises an influence on the growth of the hair in a most curious manner. Constant playing for some years on metal instruments, the trombone in particular, will cause baldness, while constant playing of the piano, violin and violincello rather increases than otherwise the growth of the hair. Flute and clarinet players are not supposed to be influenced either way.

Persons who are sensitive to drafts should not sit in a strong breeze generated by an electric fan. One good way to derive comfort from these useful contrivances, without permitting the waves of air to beat directly against the body, is to turn the fan toward the wall, from which they will rebound. An agreeable change in the atmosphere of the room will be felt, without the strong wind continually blowing on one's back.

It takes a long time to cure enlarged pores, and the only certain remedy is by the use of the scrubbing brush and a pure hygienic soap. By this process the pores, which have become enlarged by the clogged secretions, are kept free, and gradually they will contract and become normal in size. Thousands of cures have been effected in this manner.

Apple Batter Pudding.

An apple batter pudding is made by slicing tart apples into a deep dish, adding sugar and a little water, and baking until nearly tender enough. Prepare the batter by sifting together a cupful of flour, three tablespoonfuls of baking powder, and a little salt. Beat an egg and mix it with a cupful of milk, half a cupful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Stir the flour into this mixture and pour the batter over the apples. Bake about 20 minutes and serve with whipped cream or a sweet sauce. This pudding may be made with berries, fresh or dried; peaches or other fruit. —N. Y. Post.

Baked Pears.

Peel, halve and core ripe pears, the harder the variety the better. Pack them into an earthenware jar or casserole with a little sugar and a cupful of cold water, and bake in a cool oven for several hours. They may be eaten hot, but are better if allowed to get very cold. Serve with whipped cream.—N. Y. Post.

MUCH TOO GOOD FOR HIM.

Chicago Woman Concludes That Police Station Is Too Luxurious for Boozy Husband.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says that the other day a well-dressed woman walked into an uptown station house and, after gazing curiously about her, glided up to the sergeant at the desk and said:

"So this is—a police station?"

"Yes, madam," replied the polite officer on duty. "What can I do for you?"

"Oh, I only wished to look around and ask a few questions that may be of benefit to me. You don't keep prisoners in this clean, well-lighted, pleasant apartment, do you?"

"No, madam," responded the sergeant, rising and leading the way to an inner room. "Here are the cells in which they are locked."

"How comfortable everything looks. Do you put iron chains and balls on their legs, handcuff and administer the cat-o'-nine-tails vigorously to unruly prisoners?"

"No; prisoners are only detained here temporarily while awaiting trial, and we never treat them as harshly as that."

"Well," said the visitor, with a disappointed expression, "I've a husband who occasionally comes home intoxicated, and when he begins to act like a maniac and abuse me I've often thought—"

"You ought to have him arrested."

"What! And locked up here?" she asked, almost scornfully.

"It might teach him a lesson."

"Never! You don't know John! Why, I often break a broomstick over his head, pull his whiskers and lock him in the coal bin over night, and a man that is used to such treatment at home would have too good a time here to suit me."

FAUCET WOULD NOT LIGHT.

Convivial Man's Better Half Informed Him That He Was Wasting Good Matches.

There is a man up in Capitol hill, says the Washington Times, who supe with a number of old college chums two or three times a year, and usually after one of these suppers he is fit to roost with boiled owls. The last gathering of the clan was about a fortnight ago, and before Mr.—we will call him Jenks—set out for it he promised Mrs. Jenks solemnly that no matter what the others did, he would drink nothing but charged water and lemonade. Mr. Jenks came home about two o'clock, walking very carefully and sedately. Mrs. Jenks was awake, and she turned up the gas as he came in.

MRS. JENKS WAS AWAKE.

"Are you sure you didn't drink too much?" she asked.

"You hurt me when you speak like that," said Mr. Jenks, somewhat indistinctly. "I had only two small drinks."

Mrs. Jenks lay back on her pillow, regarding him. Under her gaze he was most careful to bestow all his belongings in their proper places. His feelings were hurt and he was determined to show his wife how unjust her suspicions were. He was standing at the stationary washstand in the corner of the room when she spoke again, and it was not so much the matter as the manner of her words that cut.

"Charles," said she, "you might as well stop trying to light the hot-water faucet. That's the third match you've wasted."

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

To the man who can, in the short space of five years, capture five open golf championships the golfing world must take off its cap. Willie Anderson, of the Apawamis Golf club, of New York, is the player to accomplish the feat and to earn the deference due a man of great golfing pedigree. At the Glen View club of North Berwick

Willie Anderson.

Scotchman recently won with comparative ease the tenth national open championship. His score for the 72 holes was 303 strokes, the best record yet made in the big event, the lowest figures in previous tournaments being 307 by himself at Baltusrol in 1903, and by Lawrence Auchterlonie at Garden City in 1902. Anderson has now the unique record of having won the national event three times. On the two previous occasions he won first title with Alex Smith at Myopia Hunt and with David Brown last year at Baltusrol. This time he can read his title clear, as he had a clean margin of five strokes over Gilbert Nicholls, of St. Louis, his nearest opponent. As he entered the western open championship at Grand Rapids only a week before, registering the score of 304 strokes in the competition, he is now monarch of all he surveys. His previous win of the western title was at Cleveland in 1902, when he won with a score of 299, figures which have never been beaten in this country. Anderson's recent performances stamp him as the greatest golfer in the country. For a time it looked as if his title might pass from him, but when the pressure of the final round and the presence of galleries began to affect the play of the contenders he rose to the occasion and came home with the best figures of the two days' play, his 72 being equaled only by one other player.

Highball, champion two-year-old of the last last season, and winner of the Highball.

American derby, is no more. The famous colt fractured his left foreleg in two places during the running of the Sesgate stakes at Brighton Beach recently, and although veterinarians made an attempt to patch up the shattered limb and save the valuable colt for the stud, they failed, and the horse was shot two hours after the accident happened. Highball was the first eastern horse to win the American derby. But for the faith that "Bob" May, his trainer, had in his prowess he would not have been sent to Chicago for that prize, for only a few days before he had performed disappointingly in the Brooklyn derby and H. M. Schefel had decided to keep the horse in New York. May maintained at the time that Hildebrand's handling of the colt was responsible for his defeat, so Grover Fuller was engaged to ride him in the western classic, and the result spoke for May's judgment. Highball's first effort after his return from the west was in the Advance stakes, in which he finished fourth to Irish Lad, Ort Wells and Bryn Mawr. A few days later he won the Spindrift handicap at Sheepshead Bay, victory which netted his owners $4,115. His last start, previous to his fatal race, was in the record-breaking running of the Brighton handicap, in which he finished third to Broomstick and Irish Lad. That race was 1:49 flat, which is good, and it is regarded as singular that two of the three prominent contenders in that memorable contest should have so soon reached the end of their turf careers. Highball was a three-year-old colt by Ben Brush out of Strychnia. His sire was a son of Bend Or and through both sire and dam Highball's descent could be traced through many a famous strain of runners. Highball had one bad racing trick, a tendency to run out at the turns. Like all of his father's get, he was possessed of great speed, but he differed from many of them in that he also ran well over a distance of ground, and could, as turfmen say, "go the route."

Phillip Casey, who for 25 years held the title of champion handball player of the world, is dead.

Lawson M. Fuller, the first man to drive a six-horse team a mile in less than three minutes, and perhaps the only man ever to speed eight horses a mile, is dead.

The record in the hill-climbing automobile competition at Mount Washington, N. H., was broken recently. The contest was over a measured course of eight miles, with a grade varying from 5 to 20 degrees. The record for the distance, 48:59, was made by Otto Westman, and was cut by F. E. Stanley, of Newton, Mass., with a 40-horsepower gasoline machine to 31:15.

John Flanagan, of the Greater New York Irish Athletic association, the American champion in throwing the 56-pound weight, has made a new record for this hurtling missile with "unlimited run and follow." His distance was 40 feet 2 inches, or 21 inches better than the old record.

MADE HIM FEEL SAD.

TOUGH EXPERIENCE IN AN OLD GAMBLER'S CAREER.

Chicken-Hearted Drummer Made the "House" Give Up Every Dollar of Stake He Had Lost the Day Before.

"Yes," said a veteran of the sporting fraternity, to a Washington Star man, although I'm on the retired list now, I confess I have been in my time an accomplished devotee to the cloth of green and have invaded the lair of Lo, the tiger with varying degrees of success." The old gambler was in no way reticent in these admissions to a party of friends and companions who were talking about times in this city when, as everyone knew, the town was, so to speak, "wide open," so far as faro, roulette, rouge et noir et id omne genus, were concerned.

"I suppose you have had hosts of all sorts of experiences," said one of his listeners. "What was the toughest of the trials you met?" he suggested.

The old sport looked in an obliging way at the man who made the interrogation. He evidently didn't appreciate the word "trials," but he was not an excitable character, and was convinced in his own mind that nothing offensive was to be inferred from the language addressed to him.

"I can tell you the saddest experience I met in my career," he remarked. "It was such a sorrowful trial that I am almost inclined to shed tears even now at this late day, and it happened right here in this lovely burg. This was away back in the old reconstruction period, not very long after the close of the war. I was proprietor then of one of the most tony faro banks in this city, and there was a game on almost all the time. My clientele (if I may use that word) was a large and distinguished one. Of course I mention no names, but I tell you my place was every night graced by a distinguished group which included—well, I expect it's just as well not to say who comprised numbers of my friends.

"Well, there came one Saturday afternoon a middle-aged man, who showed a disposition to put on the gloves with us, and, naturally, he was accommodated. He was a regular personification of purple and fine linen. He wore as neat a silk tile as ever I saw on a man's headpiece, and had sparklers in his shirt bosom and on his fingers to beat the band. Too many by far to spot him as a regular honest gambling man, and his necktie was a downright kaleidoscope in the way of colors. It beat Joseph's coat a mile and a half, and he was proud and haughty, and ordered half pints of extra dry, while he was playing in a way to make the waiters think he was the scion of a royal house.

"Well, to shorten up this mournful story, the way that fellow made safe bets was harrowing in the extreme, and he cashed up Saturday night with $850, drank another half pint of champagne (at his own expense, of course), and stalked out of the house as supercilious and conceited as a peacock on dress parade.

"Well, next morning, Sunday morning, mind you, he came in and wanted to renew his triumphs, and perhaps I ought to be ashamed to admit, but I opened the game. There were several old fellows loafing about the room, and they joined in. But the tide turned, and the winner of the day before became the loser. He played the limit every time, and we soon had all our losings back and a cool thousand from him.

"This wasn't bad, but now comes the calamity. This drummer man, why, as I learned, was a drummer for a jewelry house somewhere up north, sent for me Sunday evening, and actually cried, shed bitter, burning tears, and demanded that the money he had lost be returned to him. He said it belonged to his employers, and asserted that if I didn't give it back, he would report it to the police authorities. Well, I had no desire to get into trouble, and I gave it back, and at the same time gave him a piece of my mind. He had lost his stately and ostentatious mien of the day before, and showed up as low, ignoble, whining pup. That's what he was, and that, mister—that giving him back the money—is the saddest trial I ever experienced in my career as a sporting man."

The first mention of shaving is in Genesis 41:14, when Joseph shaved himself just before setting forth to interview King Pharaoh.

DOG WAS PRESS AGENT.

Couldn't Be Lost No Matter Where He Was Taken and Turned Loose.

A dog fancier who lately moved into a semi-residence, semi-business district of the upper west side advertised his advent by means of a remarkably well-trained press agent from his own establishment, says the New York Times. The drummer was a large black and white dog that promenaded the boulevard and adjoining streets in lordly fashion, notwithstanding that the placards attached to his sides announced in conspicuous fashion that he was a "Lost Dog."

To make the description on the card appropriate the dog, of course, traveled alone, although the six-foot length of rope that dangled from his neck indicated that there might have been at one time a man attached to the other end of the string. The dog was a fine-looking, and passers-by, seeing him thus neglected, stopped to look at him. Many of them spoke.

"Nice doggie," said the women. "Bully fine dog, that," said the men, and "Gee, ain't he a buster!" said the boys.

Occasionally some one, growing overbold, assumed a familiar air and patted the dog's head. Those simple evidences of affection tapped a vein of sentiment in the canine breast, and he squatted back on his haunches and howled dismally. Then people wondered who had lost him and how the owner could be found. At length quite a crowd collected around the sorrowing animal and suggestions for restoration to his happy home were exchanged volubly.

Presently the dog took the solution of the problem into his own paws. With a final prodigious howl he jumped up and went racing down the boulevard. He traveled at a rapid gait, but every man and boy in the crowd, and as many women as could keep the pace, pelted along after him. After turning several corners the dog brought up before the door of the newly arrived fancier. The man stood in the doorway to welcome him.

"Does that dog belong to you?" asked the foremost runner.

"Sure," said the dealer. "You can't lose him.. Turn him loose anywhere and he will be sure to come back and bring the crowd with him. Walk right in, gentlemen. Here are a score more of dogs inside that are equally intelligent and trustworthy."

About half of the crowd accepted the invitation. "Well," said the foremost runner, "if that isn't the slickest game I've seen worked in a long while."

HAS TAME BUTTERFLIES.

California Genius Has Succeeded in Domesticating the Beautiful Creatures.

Miss Mable Adams Ayer, a prominent Sunshine club worker and a member of the Forum club, has succeeded in taming butterflies, reports the San Francisco Post.

At first the idea seems almost absurb, but if one can see the way Miss Ayer handles her pets is seems the most natural thing in the world. In speaking of them to-day Miss Ayer said:

"Why, it doesn't seem at all strange to me. They are just like any other trained pet. They have their likes and dislikes, and they are really lovable little things when you come to know them.

"The first thing that started me to studying them was when I was asked to deliver a lecture before the Forum club. I chose for my subject "Butterflies and Rainbows," and wishing to give something more than could be learned from books, I went into the garden and captured one or two of the butterflies. The more I studied them the more I loved them, and now they are almost like people to me.

"When I first get one I uncoil his tongue and feed him with sugar and water, and the rest—why, I don't know; they just come to know me, that's all. You know, the butterfly has six legs, and the two front ones he uses to wash his face and preen himself, much as a cat would.

"They live on sugar and water and I always keep plenty of flowers in the room for them. One big fellow called a "Morning Cloak" I was unable to do anything with. He seemed to have no affection. They are sensitive, and nervous temperaments affect them always. Some of them are quite playful, and two or three would run after and try to catch the end of a stickpin when I drew it in front of them.

"One evening I wore several of them on my shoulder as an ornament. Of course, it was in my own home, but they stayed on my gown all evening.

"I have had in all over 40 butterflies, but, you know, they live only three or four weeks, and most of them are dead now.

"No, I do not use a net for catching them. I simply go out and pick them up. I always breathe on them, and that seems to warm them, and they get so they will fly all around me and bathe or eat from my hand."

RAILWAY IN ALASKA

FOUR SYSTEMS NOW BUILDING OR IN OPERATION.

Travel in the Great Northern Territory Now a Matter of Ease and Comfort — More Lines Proposed.

There is a vast difference between journeying in Alaska to-day and journeying in Alaska a few years ago. When the first rush of the gold seekers occurred there was no means of communication between the Klondike and the outside world but the dog sledge and the rivers. To get to the gold fields men came as completely shut off from the world as though stranded upon a desert island in the middle of the ocean. Of news there was none save at long intervals when brought in by newcomers, and it was weeks old before it reached the camps.

To-day the telegraph wire carries its messages throughout all the gold camps, and the result of the big battles in the far east may be known at Dawson almost as soon as it is in Chicago. In modes of transportation the dog sled has given place to the railroad train, and travel in the far north is now a luxury instead of a hardship.

A glance at the map will give one an idea of the railroads now in operation under construction or proposed. So great has been the recent development of Alaska that there are now four distinct railroad systems in full or partial operation in the territory, two others in a preliminary stage of construction and several projected. All of the principal centers of population are connected with the outside world by telegraph, and a military cable line, 1,300 miles in length, will be completed this summer between Seattle and Juneau, giving an alternate route for commercial business.

The construction of the Council City & Soloman River railroad, the first of standard gauge to be put in operation in Alaska, has demonstrated the possibility of building in the far north a roadbed practically as solid as that of any of the best equipped systems in the United States. The tundra, or Arctic bog land, has been conquered by a system of thorough drainage.

The railroads now building and projected in northwestern Alaska will completely gridiron Nome peninsula.

EXISTING AND PROPOSED RAILWAYS AND TELEGRAPHS IN ALASKA.

The first road put in operation there was called the "Wild Goose Railroad" and has lately been acquired by the Nome-Arctic Railway company. The first rails were laid in the summer of 1890 and the enterprise was a financial success from the start.

During the last few months the Nome-Arctic company has extended the line to Dexter Creek, and securing a franchise to enter Nome has built a station in a central part of the city and added three spurs to facilitate the handling of freight. This spring work was begun on a line to Council City. The owners of this road are mostly men who have made their money in Alaska.

A railroad project of even greater importance to Alaska than the Council City & Solomon is the Alaska Central railroad, work on which was begun late last summer, and which will not be completed for another year or more. Trains, however, will be running regularly over the southern section late this summer.

The Alaska Central is built from Resurrection bay north and west to Cook inlet and thence in almost a straight line to Rampart, on the Yukon river, a total distance of about 600 miles. About 100 miles of the road are already practically completed.

The most ambitious of all Alaskan railway projects is that of the Trans-Alaskan Railway company, which was incorporated at the department of the secretary of state at Washington about eight months ago. The Transalaskan railway will run from Cook inlet to Port Clarence, on Cape Prince of Wales, the point where Alaska most nearly approaches to Siberia. Connection there will be made, according to the plans of the promoters, with a northern branch to be built from the Russian government's Trans-Siberian line.

An important link in the chain of Alaskan railroads will be a line which was built last summer by the Kuskokwim Bonanza creek, and which is being extended this summer to the Sweetwater and thence to Poorman. At the latter point connection will be made with the Alaska Central. On the south connection is being made with the White Pass & Yukon route.

ATTRACTIVE GOWNS.

Dresses of Checked Silk and Cotton Materials Are Popular.

At the races recently numbers of either plain silk gowns were observed, notably some of checked blue and white and mauve and white silk in pretty soft taffeta. One of the prettiest of these was very simply fashioned, with loose sleeves showing plaits of silk, a wide gathered flounce on the skirt and a wide folded belt of the same silk.

Checked gingham and lawn dresses, too, are ultra smart and can be prettily trimmed with embroideries in the shade of the dark check. One of these was seen recently at a seaside resort. It had a full blouse waist, with a wide collar composed of three rows of gathered trimming. The skirt was gathered around the hips, and it had three rows of scallops around the bottom. The hat worn with this was of the straw, trimmed with a wreath of cowslips and two ends of lace hanging over the back of the upturned side.

White dotted muslin dresses are combined with pale blue sash belts. The belt of pale blue reappears also on the sleeves at the elbow puff, and if desired another touch can be added in the shape of the wide hair bow.

The picture shows a cream straw shade hat trimmed with holly berries and leaves falling on the hair in the back.

UP TO DATE MATERIALS.

The Effects—White Wool Tailor Suits For Seashore Wear.

Cheviots and serges still continue to be in vogue and always will be, for nothing can take the place of one of these garments carefully tailored and worn with stiff shirt waists and other made stocks.

White wool tailor made, mostly with short coats, are being sold a great deal at present for seashore and mountain wear.

There is a fancy for all the softer materials, and satin messaline and crepe de chine are very popular. White muslin and lace are of course smarter than everything else at this time of the year, and the large sleeves show to great advantage in these materials.

TAFFETA GOWN.

From Vienna, home of the tailor suit, comes the dictum that the smart dress costume of the fall is to be extremely plain. Already last winter there was a hint of this in the straight tailor made models worn with severely plain shirt waists.

Pink is very fashionable. It has taken the place of the pale shades of green and lemon which threatened us in the early part of the season.

Everything in dress is shirred, appliqued and gauged. Quaint cross over effects are arrived at by means of blue stitchings or the soft fichu. There are also some curious old fashioned kilt bags, though the fabrics generally used are soft, and there is a little chemisette of lace or embroidered muslin. Ruches are also made in every variety. Muslins in particular can stand any possible amount of ruching and plaiting.

Chiffon veils this season are very little worn and then only for traveling and distinctly tailor made occasions.

The picture shows a taffeta gown of hortensia pink, trimmed on the waist with lace and small buttons. The scarf is of mousseline and lace.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Smart Summer Wraps—Flowered Muslin For Afternoon Gowns.

The three cornered shape is still considered extremely smart, and so is the marquise shape in chip and panama.

In general it may be said that millinery is simpler than it has been for some time. Straight brims are being affected, and often a large sailor hat will have no trimming on it save a bunch of roses or leaves and small berries. Coq feathers, too, are very smart, especially in white, and one sees great numbers of these on the mid-summer millinery.

Very smart wraps are made of white linen trimmed with bias bands stitched and applications of coarse lace. Coarse linen embroidery combining different shades of dull red, blue and green is mounted on white silk and makes a striking trimming for white linen suits and coats.

Flowered muslin is among the smartest materials for afternoon gowns. It is either made up over white or the tint of the flowers with which it is ornamented. The flowered nets are often made up over contrasting shades, such as blue figurings over a pale green, lavender over pink, etc.

The picture shows a black china silk waist with a shirred arrangement giving a long shouldered effect. It has a smart V shaped yoke and a trimming of ball end tassels.

High Crowned Hats—Accordion Plaited Gowns of Chiffon.

The new high crowned hat trimmed with plumes is very pretty, but at the same time rather trying to some faces. This high crowned hat made in white or in black crinoline is one of the prettiest frames for a really pretty girl's face, and the coiffure arranged in loose waves really is particularly adapted to this.

A great many leading Parisiennes are wearing soft black gowns relieved by touches of pink. Rose pink is much in evidence now, from the palest to the deepest shades. It looks really well in satin messaline, taffeta or muslin.

A pretty gown seen recently at a fashionable wedding was of embroidered mousseline de soie in black. It was worn with a beautifully pointed bodice of rose color, with revers of pink embroidered velvet and a picture hat of shaded rose chip, the brim of which was lined with pink chiffon and draped with black chantilly, the crown being trimmed with deeper rose colored plumes. Some bridesmaids' gowns also seen recently were of rose chiffon mounted over rose taffeta and finished with very wide, long chine sashes.

Many effective frocks for girls are made of accordion plaiting, and here again shaded chiffons are much in vogue. Blue and brown chiffons are also treated in the same way with incrustations of dainty dyed lace and pointed silk belts.

The picture shows a dotted linen dress trimmed with coarse linen lace and a red tie and belt.

IN VANITY'S REALM.

Gowns In Princess Style—Wool Lace on Cloth Gowns.

There is an increasing demand for plain white satin of a heavy make for evening wear.

The pointed eighteenth century bodice still continues a prime favorite. This is enriched with all sorts of tucks. Flounces, insertions and edging of fine lace figure on all smart gowns.

Some of the newest gowns are cut princess style. Evening gowns of this description are sometimes embroidered with velvet leaves. Occasionally they are further enriched with precious stones. White and old rose are the leading evening shades abroad just now.

Once again there is a craze for old brocade, but this is not of the stiff variety.

Checked silk is used even for very dressy costumes, especially in a shade of coral and white. This is trimmed with bands or ruchings of coral silk, and it is very effective.

As far as best dresses go, this has been a most extravagant season, but the girl with a small income can pick up many pretty gowns at this time of the year for one-half the original price.

Thinner gowns are many of them in the dainty flowered effects with parasols to match.

The picture shows a lace dress, ecru in tone, trimmed with black chantilly applique on white mousseline de soie. The wide belt is of black silk. The elaborate parasol is of black and white chiffon.

SEEN IN THE SHOPS.

New and Attractive Lingerie Models. Brown Evening Coats.

If a woman purchases a smart evening coat, she has a good chance of being able to wear it another season, for the styles in evening coats change as little as do those in tea gowns. The loose front, with the semifitted or entirely loose back and the hanging sleeves, is sure to be in good style. The great thing is not to have an evening coat skimpy. White cloth ranks first in popularity. Next come all the pale colors, ecru and black.

Pretty brown silk or velvet evening coats will be a feature of the coming fall season.

A deep mulberry red crepe de chine seen recently had its corsage trimmed with dyed lace of the same shade. With this was worn a mushroom shaped hat trimmed all around the crown with hoops of the mulberry colored velvet intertwined with a vine of the berries.

For the slender woman nothing is better than the frilled corset cover.

CHILD'S HAT.

This, as its name indicates, is made with three or four bias ruffles across the bust, each ruffle being edged with lace. The corset cover itself blouses, and this is the proper thing to wear with the thin blouse waists now all the vogue.

A new combination chemise, drawers and short skirt has been invented. The drawers are cut very full, so that they show no division, something after the manner of a divided skirt. This is joined to the upper half by a beading through which half inch ribbon is run.

The picture shows a child's lingerie hat of cream mousseline de sole accordion plaited into tiny ruffles. It is trimmed with a large cream satin bow.

Of Farm Life

Independent Women Are Finding It Pleasant, Healthful and Profitable

ONE of the very recent tendencies among women is a movement away from confining workrooms and office labor and toward the life of the open country. The drift toward the country will certainly continue. It has been found that woman can farm, that she can operate a mine, that she can carry mails over rough country roads and can even boss a foundry or a sawmill.

One of the most successful feminine farmers in our country at present is Mrs. Ella McLaughlin, whose land is in northwestern Indiana. Her agricultural business is on a large scale. Her estate comprises 2,000 acres and is called Runnymede Meadows. Its chief product is hay. A dozen years ago it was a waste of marshy ground that produced only a wild grass. This, when dried and baled, brought a small price as hay, but it was injured by the admixture of weedy flag and wild cane.

The owner eradicated the weeds. She is building an immense ditch to drain her land. The ditch has cost her $5,000. When it is finished, she will go in for general crops upon the land drained by it. Meantime the marsh land is producing 2,000 tons of hay every year. The vast crop is stacked by a lifting machine. Her steam hay presses can put into shape for the market 500 bales every day. Two hay barns, each holding 500 tons, have been built. Beside these are stables for thirty horses. Six mowing machines are required during the cutting season. Mrs. McLaughlin herself attends to the sale of the hay. Lately she refused $100,000 for her farm. Mrs. McLaughlin's lands came to her as a bequest on the death of her husband.

Miss Mary E. Way has shown her sex what a woman farmer can do upon a small, stony New England place. It was perched upon the side of South mountain, overlooking Bristol, Conn.

Miss Way was a farmer's daughter. Like so many country girls, she became a teacher, with every prospect of continuing in that occupation till death or marriage. Her parents lived on the home farm while she went away and taught school. But both her father and mother died and left her with the hillside on her hands. She resolved to farm it herself.

Then uprose that opposing hullabaloo always put forth by those who think they know more about other people's business than the people themselves do. One observes that these persons who know all about what others ought to do are the ones who have never made any success with their own business.

Miss Way began her farming operations in spite of the know it alls. She introduced improved methods; she bought pedigreed live stock instead of the old scrubs that were good enough for her great-grandfather. What is more, after she got new farm implements and the improved animals she took care of them.

Miss Way herself did all the farm work except the very heaviest, such as plowing and pitching hay into the barn. When she undertook the task she had already made up her mind that a woman could run a farm as well as a man. She has proved that one woman at least can run a farm better than nine out of ten men are able to do. For one thing, perhaps, she never had to spend hours talking politics at the postoffice. Except to a woman friend, she lived alone on her farm.

She rose at 4 o'clock, fed her stock, milked the cows and drove to market with her produce. She kept a fine dairy and raised vegetables and small fruits for sale. She sees a great field for women in the culture. She herself made a specialty of dairying and berry raising. Not long ago, being called elsewhere, she sold her farm and live stock for a handsome price. As to the health to be found in farming she says:

"The open air is a wonderful tonic. No matter how tired I was I never felt blue."

At Holliston, Mass., Mrs. Mary E. Cutler has become wealthy at gardening. Two Wisconsin girls, Mary Trostik and Matilda Meyer, are now the owners each of a quarter section of valuable land which they pre-empted and improved in Oklahoma.

FASHIONABLE COLORS.

New Shades of Bluish Green—Yellow Much Worn.

The new shades of bluish green are particularly charming, especially in taffeta worn with quaint ruches and legiorn hats with Romney strings.

In Paris a curious amongst of yellow is being worn. This is very effective worn with a big black hat and a chiffon pelerine.

Changeable taffetas of soft and supple quality really take on a variety of tints. Wash silks and satins have many possibilities for inexpensive gowns. After several visits to the cleaner's these white fabrics can be dyed blue or brown with good effect.

Nothing quite takes the place of the taffeta gown, especially in deep blue and black. Several red taffeta gowns have also been seen at this season, but this fashion should only be worn by those who have many gowns in their wardrobe.

Accordion plaited nun's veiling, or, better still, voile, makes admirable house frocks. Nothing is more becoming to a slight figure than an accordion plaited frock, even if it has become a little ordinary.

Gray still holds its popularity and a great many tailor mades of this delightful color are to be worn in the early fall. There is a fondness just now also for combining gray with a tint of coral red, with which it blends very charmingly.

The picture shows a lingerie hat made of tiny ruffles of silk mousseline de soie edged with valenciennes. It is trimmed with blue ribbon.

FASHION HINTS.

Gowns of Lace and Soft Materials. Shaded Effects.

The princess gown of the moment is a charming affair of soft material made rich with embroideries and fine tucks. When hung up in the closet it resembles nothing so much as a rag, and yet when on the figure it sets off its charms in a remarkable manner. Some of these princess gowns have the waist laid in fine perpendicular tucks, the tucks flaring to give the fullness to the hips and skirt. This is managed to a nicety so that just the right curves shall be given.

In Paris they are wearing tunics of beautiful lace over linings of different shades. One such lining was of white satin messaline, the lace itself being of the finest mechlin. It had sleeves and a slightly open decolletage of folds of embroidered mousseline de sole. Another tunic was of point de venise and was worn at a wedding reception over beautiful rose oriental satin. The waist was encircled by a band of shaded old rose taffeta cut in pointed Marie Antoinette fashion and having a strass buckle at the back. Worn with this frock was a white chip hat trimmed with a single long pink ostrich plume.

Shaded effects are all the rage in hats, gowns and even parasols. The three shades of red are especially popular. They shade from a shrimp pink into a coral and finally a deep rich ruby red.

The straight brim sailor seems to be supplanting the French sailor in popular favor.

The cut shows a schoolgirl's tailor made of blue voile, trimmed with blue and white taffeta bands. The underblouse is of white mull.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

The Latest in Shoes—The Woman Who Dresses in Black.

Champagne and yellow are among the smart tones seen this season. A pongee or ecru linen gown, trimmed with coarse lace, is the very thing for afternoon occasions, church, the races, etc., in warm weather, especially when a costume of this description is combined with an ecru hat and champagne colored shoes.

The latest in shoes is the garden tie, made like a slipper, with a slightly heavier sole and a tiny tongue, so small that it almost escapes notice. This displays to great advantage the stocking of fine openwork or lustrous silk and is therefore suited for wear with dressy gowns.

The smart woman who wears much black should have three gowns at least, one very thin and gauzy, such as crepe de chine silk, voile or eolienne, another of fine black cloth and one of silk, inlet with black lace, to wear over black or white slips.

In lingerie, night gowns are nearly all made low neck, the handsomest being trimmed with embroidery and V shaped ruffles of lace, while others have round Dutch yokes of fine lace and needlework.

The picture shows a costume of tan veiling, trimmed with ecru revers and frills. The skirt shows the fashionable full flounce. The hat is trimmed with two yellow roses.

SUMMER SUITS.

Linen Coat and Skirt Costumes—Pongee Three-quarter Coats.

The rage this year is for bright colored linens. Red linen is one of the novelties. Ecru and lavender are always smart also. To wear with these linen suits there are charming filmy waists of embroidered muslin. Linen suits themselves are made in two styles—the flocks and frills with the very short coat and half sleeves, and the tailor made with the smart three-quarter coat, tight fitting in the back and loose in the front. There is a species of sack coat, too, which comes in linen. It is cut without any curves and is loosely belted in at the back.

The pongee three-quarter length coat is one of the smart garments of the season. It is trimmed with scarlet, with green, or the new shade of bright blue, and some of them even are trimmed with bands of taffeta of a shade to match.

Many changes can be made in a few *costumes by a clever change of acces*sories. An ivory lace coat, for instance, may be worn with a black or a white skirt or even one of pale gray and a white blouse. The economical woman also changes the flowers in her hat to make it go with different colored gowns.

Shirt waist costumes of checked silk still continue to be the fashion, and to these are added linen coat and skirt costumes of the same fascinating black and white check trimmed with wide black braid and silver buttons.

The picture shows a foulard blouse trimmed with plain, darker silk and a white mousseline de sole yoke.

WHIMS OF FASHION.

The Difficulties of Voile—Some Handsome House Gowns.

The illustration represents an ultra fashionable voile gown, with the flounces, long shoulders and ugly sleeves. It is shirred at the hips and back and still further decorated with three flounces. It looks like an easy one to make, and it possibly would be of anything but voile. The amateur dressmaker who attempts this is advised to ask the prayers of the congregation before she cuts into the stuff, for of all the pully and generally reprehensible material to handle this is the worst.

But when a voile dress is once made it is certainly pretty and has so many points of value that we all want one, but I think they must have pixies or some other fairy hands to do the work on those we buy ready made, for they are all right and don't pull here and sag there.

Among the pretty house gowns for the coming season I see many pongees in light tan, brown and bleached. The latter are the most dressy, but are very delicate, being trimmed with self colored embroidery in raised designs and edged with lace especially of the silken guipure variety. This is in tan shades and cream so as to match the silk exactly. *Some of these light pon*gees are trimmed with many rows of the narrowest black velvet ribbon and have full ruchings, with long loops at the neck, at the elbows and sometimes down the front.

Ribbon in the narrow widths is to be much employed as trimming along the flounces now a fixed fact for the fall. The ribbon is half an inch to one inch wide and is laid on flat. It edges flounces or is put on in regular designs like key pattern, or diamond on diamond. It is stitched on in machine work. On some of the pretty gowns where there is more than one color rows of ribbon to match each color are gathered on one above the other. This makes a very artistic trimming. The ribbon should not be over an inch in width.

At the present moment the stores are selling off the goods left over from the spring and early summer trade, and it seems a pity not to be able to take advantage of the sales. Many pieces of goods which are really standard, such as silk warp eudoras and henriettas and mohairs, are being offered at less than a quarter of the price usually asked for them, while white made up goods which are slightly shopworn are sold for far less than the materials would cost, to say nothing of the labor. The wise woman keeps a few pennies aside for just such chances.

Hats are quite as large as they have been, but the prices have noticeably diminished. A straw hat offered early in the season for $25 was marked down to $4 yesterday. But, then, who wants to wait four months for a hat for the sake of the difference, great as it is in the price?

Bathing suits just now are much in evidence and are marked by good taste and decency. There is no pretty garment in the shape of knickerbockers, and over it are skirt and blouse. The skirt and blouse are in one, and there is a waist (which does duty for a corset) attached to the knickerbockers, so that nothing will clear loose. These bathing suits are mostly made of mohair in the fine rainproof qualities, which makes them the safest of all bathing suits, for the water cannot fill the pores and weigh the wearer down. Silk warp henriettas are also excellent, as they shed water well and do not cling to the figure.

Summer parasols are the daintiest and prettiest things of the sort ever seen. Chiffons like the flying scads are caught and blown against the frames, with at least 1½ yards, and then some one adds a pretty bit of pink or blue ribbon just where it will show up best—and there you are. The frames are covered with thin liberty in some pale tint, and the rest is put upon that. Some flimsy ruffles that move with every breath of air, soft rosettes set among puffs and shirrings, and flowers of different kinds made cleverly of the chiffon are among the legitimate trimmings for these airy to conquest.

Among other novelties calculated to deprive women of refreshing slumber is a new idea in trimming lace. The body of the lace is of white, black, ecru or cream, and the floral pattern is done in color and raised somewhat like the lace made by the Turkish women.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,
ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,
HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

THE TEN LIVING QUESTIONS.

(From The World, Morning Edition.)

The real, living, burning questions of the campaign are!

I.—Rough Rider or Judge?

Shall the people of the United States have for the next four years a Personal or a Constitutional government—the sovereignty of a party dictator or the sovereignty of the people—a Rough Rider or a Judge for Chief Magistrate?

II.—Reform the Tariff.

Shall the tariff never be revised except with the consent and under the direction of its beneficiaries—by "the friends of its abuses, its extortions and its discriminations"—or shall it be revised in a judicial spirit by "the friends of the masses and for the common weal?"

III.—Curb the Trusts.

Shall monopolies like the Beef Trust, constituting universal necessaries of life, continue to receive the protection of a sheltering tariff, and enjoy still longer indulgence in the non-enforcement of anti-trust laws by reason of their enormous contributions to party campaign funds and their potential influence with party leaders?

IV.—The Abuse of Power.

Shall the action of the President in ridding himself of the one successful trust prosecutor in order to placate the corporations—in making his former private secretary and head of the Department of Commerce a campaign-fund solicitor from the very corporations he was appointed to "diligently investigate"—in appointing a railroad corporation official Secretary of the Navy, and a political agent of the Southern Pacific Railway to the head of the department to supervise and curb corporations (all to aid his own campaign)—shall this "surrender of the Rough Rider" be approved by the people?

V.—No Corporation Rule.

Shall the rule of corrupt corporations in politics and their controlling influence in government be further enlarged and confirmed by continuing in power a party closely allied with them by the granting of special privileges in the tariff by the election of corporation agents to Congress and to State offices, and through the reconstruction of the Cabinet to meet their views?

VI.—Stop the Extravagance.

Shall we continue a policy of reckless extravagance, as evidenced by the expenditure of more than $2,500,000,000 during the last four years, or shall we return to a reasonable economy?

VII.—Check the Corruption.

Shall corruption bred of too long a lease of power, as instanced in the half-disclosed postal frauds, in the Land-Office scandals, in the pension abuses, in the sale of offices and negotiation of corrupt public contracts by Senators Dietrich and Burton, in the purchase of a seat in the Senate by the Democrat W. A. Clark, ratified by Republican Senators, and in the ascendency and Executive recognition of notorious corruptionists and professional spoilsmen, be condoned and continued?

VIII.—No "Big Stick" Bluster.

Shall the attitude of the United States toward foreign nations be that of a bully with a "big stick," and a chip on his shoulder, or shall we return to the policy of Washington and Jefferson—"Peace and friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none"—minding our own business and expecting other nations to do the same?

IX.—What Will the Filipinos Do to Us?

Shall we continue the malevolent effect upon ourselves of so-called "benevolent assimilation" in the Philippines until it is too late to withdraw from that deplorable and un-American adventure in Asiatic colonialism—which becomes all the more dangerous the more we impose upon them the veneer of our civilization—and until the hybrid and forever alien races of these islands shall be incorporated into our body politic, to cast the die in our National Conventions, as the delegate from Hawaii did at Kansas City in 1900; to participate in our elections, to sit in our Congress, and eventually to help to govern those who now by force impose upon them government without consent and taxation without representation?

X.—"Let Us Have Peace."

Shall we, forty years after the end of the war and after a complete reconciliation of the once hostile States, tear asunder by a revival of the sectional issue the bonds of fraternity and concord—and this when the people of the South have just secured the reunionism of a conservative and sound-money Democrat for President, and have given repeated instances of the strongest national and patriotic feeling?

It seems to be the general opinion that the St. Louis Fair's failure to attract the crowds is due to the fact that the managers did not appreciate the value of advertising. Just at present the exhibition is getting all the advertising it wants, but of the wrong sort.

Thirty years ago an agreement was made that no Sunday trains stop within a mile of Ocean Grove. After a long fight the Ocean Grove Association has consented to allow trains to be stopped at North Asbury station. It is to be regretted that the association made any concession whatever. It may be considered a small matter at present but in time it is likely to destroy the complexion of America's famous Christian resort.

CONGREGATION BIDS FAREWELL TO PASTOR

Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp is Given a Last Reception by Grace M. E. Church.

DR. CARROLL'S PRAISE

REFERENCE IS MADE TO GOOD WORK DONE BY RETIRING PASTOR.

Entertaining Programme is Given—Minister Preaches Here Tomorrow and Will Leave on Monday—His New Call.

Having resigned the pastorate in order to become professor of sociology in Syracuse University, Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp and the congregation of Grace M. E. church, formally bade farewell Thursday. The gathering was very large and many regrets were expressed at the leave-taking, yet all wished Dr. Earp every success in the new field he is to enter.

William M. Warren presided as master of ceremonies and early in the evening called upon Dr. H. K. Carroll to convey to the retiring pastor the sentiments of the congregation. Dr. Carroll responded in a fitting way, laying stress on the fact that bidding farewell causes pangs especially where both parties have been in close contact for a long time. He referred to the good work accomplished by Dr. Earp during his pastorate of two and a half years, notably the raising of $8,500 for the organ fund and interior improvements, and the healthy growth which the church has enjoyed.

In responding to Dr. Carroll's remarks, Dr. Earp said there were two lines of thought suggested by the leave-taking, first his regret to leave the pastorate; second, the regret to go away from warm personal friends. He explained that he was quitting the pulpit but that he was entering the field of teaching which he considered the most important next to the ministry. He related something of the sociological chair which he is to occupy and that the city where he will make his home is very beautiful. Syracuse University, he said, is an important institution and he felt that he had been honored by his selection to become one of its professors. He closed with a heartfelt prayer for the welfare of the congregation and continued growth for it under his successor.

A programme of entertainment which followed was made up of the following members: Solos by Miss Beenie Martin, accompanied by Miss Van-Fleet; violin and piano selections by Dyckman Winckler and Vincent Sokol. Refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

The affair was under the auspices of the official board of the church and the arrangements were made by Mr. Warren.

Dr. Earp will occupy the pulpit at both services tomorrow for the last time. On Monday he will leave with his family for Maryland to spend a short time and from there they will visit Mrs. Earp's parents at Ridgewood. They will establish their home in Syracuse about the first of September.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Paris by Night," the splendid spectacle and musical comedy which the Messrs. Weber and Rush are presenting atop the Madison Square Garden these days, has caught the popular fancy of New Yorkers and of the visitors to the metropolis in a manner before has a summer entertainment in New York. What with sixty pretty girls, a dozen comedians and comediennes, nearly a score of songs, magnificent costuming, girl tableaux, booths in which fancy articles are sold, various games such as Japanese pung pong, and cooling breezes which never fail to sweep across historic Madison Square, is no wonder that "Paris by Night" is the Mecca to which jaded New Yorkers and their friends journey nightly. Many new features have been introduced into "Paris by Night" since the beginning of the season, such as songs and specialties, and there is no doubt that this attractive resort will remain open until the cold weather of the fall compels its closing.

Europe and America will vie with each other during the coming week to furnish entertainment for Keith's patrons. The best of foreign acts will be pitted against home production, which will mean a vaudeville show of the highest standard, while the perfect arrangements for keeping the house cool will add to the delight of all who attend. Chief among the many good numbers that will support the home standard will be Robert T. Haines and company in that clever offering, "Their Honeymoon." This farce comedy one act playlet is totally different from anything of the kind ever done in vaudeville, and the change from the beaten path will be a pleasing novelty.

INGENIOUS DEVICE OF F. E. KINSMAN

Plainfielder Invents An Appliance Adopted by the N. Y. Consolidated Exchange.

SIGNALS FOR BROKERS

EXPLANATION OF A CLEVER PATENT ARRANGEMENT.

Superior to Any Device Heretofore Used—Lamps Show Where Broker is Wanted—Gives Satisfaction.

F. E. Kinsman, of this city, who is well known in the electrical world as the inventor of many appliances, including the Kinsman block signal used in the New York subway, has had another honor conferred upon him. The New York Consolidated Exchange has adopted a new plan of signalling devised by him, which supersedes the long established drop annunciator system. Mr. Kinsman's apparatus is complete in every detail and though a very large affair is a marvel of mechanical skill, reflecting the Plainfielder's wonderful genius.

For a long time in New York city, if a broker who happened to be on the floor was wanted at the telephone or at one of the entrances to the building, it was necessary to have a boy go about on the floor calling his name until he could be found, and the message delivered to him. An improvement over this method was effected when an arrangement was adopted exposing a shutter upon which a specified number appeared, directing the attention of the broker to the call. This method, however, has proved costly in maintenance, and also was productive of considerable noise when the drops were worked.

Mr. Kinsman was called upon to devise a new signaling system, and he conceived the idea of perfecting one which would be absolutely noiseless and would have such simple characteristics as would render maintenance charges very slight.

This was accomplished by placing upon an angle-iron framework, 414 eight-inch square, sheet iron signal boxes. Within these boxes, mounted upon porcelain pedestals which are screwed with an asbestos washer to the bottom of the box, are three eight-candle-power 110-volt lamps. Each of these lamps has a distinctive color. There is a green lamp, which announces a call for a broker at the Broad way entrance; a red lamp, announcing a call for the New street entrance, and a lavender lamp, which announces a telephone call. There is a switchboard located immediately behind the signal board, upon which are placed 414 switches. The attendants at each of the entrances are connected by telephones with the operator at his switchboard. When a broker is called for, his number is communicated to the switchboard attendant, who flashes the signal necessary. If a broker is wanted at the telephone, the attendant is called by the ringing of the bell, and, upon investigation, finds the proper instrument and gives the signal with a push-button switch. The broker answers the call, and, when through, destroys the signal by throwing off the switch above the telephone instrument.

The wiring arrangement has been worked up with a great degree of ingenuity and everything has been done in a most substantial manner. The system is working perfectly and giving great satisfaction to the members of the Exchange

NO HIGH LICENSE FEE FOR BOROUGH

Judge Schenck Refuses Application Made by the Council of North Plainfield.

GIVES HIS REASONS

"LICENSE FEES WILL STAND AS THEY ARE" SAYS COURT.

Related Decision Not a Surprise to Boroughites—Cause of Petition Was Difference in Rates Here.

Judge Louis H. Schenck has decided that the liquor license fee in North Plainfield will remain as it is. The present rate is $350 for retail and $400 for wholesale. The decision was rendered Thursday at the Somerville county court.

Considerable interest has been aroused in the matter since last April, when Former Senator Charles A. Reed, counsel for the borough, presented a resolution asking the Court to increase the retail liquor license fee in the borough to at least $600. In support of this he stated that in Plainfield, where the fee is $700, the saloons are obliged to close at 11 p. m., while in North Plainfield, where the fee is 350, the saloons and hotels can keep open all night if they wish to and the people from this city, after the saloons and hotels close, can step over the brook and get a drink.

Judge Schenck, in giving his decision, said that he had allowed the matter to rest a long time, as he had been trying to secure a conference with Justice Garretson about it, believing his wishes in regard to the same should be respected. He said that he and Justice Garretson went over the whole situation thoroughly and had come to the conclusion that, in view of the fact that North Plainfield already pays higher license fees than any other part of the county and that only recently the borough fees have been raised to $100, it would be unfair to make another increase, therefore the fees will stand as they are for the present. The Judge added that he might at any time reconsider the matter, if considered necessary, and take the affair up with a different result.

Mr. Reed is not in town today and his opinion regarding the decision could not be obtained. Mayor Smalley, when questioned said:

"The decision is just as I expected it would be. The people in North Plainfield who favor annexation, also favored the increase in the license fee, and in view of the fact that Judge Schenck is opposed to annexation no other decision could be expected. Our redress cannot be secured at Somerville and Judge Schenck's decision means that the fight in the borough and county will be continued with greater determination. We believed that our request was fair and should be granted."

Mayor Smalley also said that so far as he is concerned no further action will be taken in the matter at present.

REV. DR. RAYMOND HERE.

President of Union College Conducted Services at Crescent Ave.

Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond, president of Union College, conducted both services at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie. In the morning, Dr. Raymond spoke from the topic of Man's Delights as the leaven of Christian life. In the evening the text was taken from 1 Cor. 3:9—"For we are laborers together with God." In development of the topic, Dr. Raymond spoke of the fact that the truth of this statement was an unavoidable fact and that the laborer shall be judged according as he stand or fall in time of temptation. There was special music at both services. The Rev. Henry C. Minton, of Trenton, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday.

Craig Blair Hurt.

While he was returning from a visit with relatives in Washingtonville with his uncle, David Bozoe, on Sunday afternoon, Craig Blair, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Blair, of East Fifth street, was thrown from his wheel and he fell in front of an automobile going in the same direction. The accident happened in front of Manl's hotel at the upper end of Somerset street. The man driving the machine stopped as quickly as possible, but the lad's head struck the front part of the auto inflicting a cut. Otherwise he was not injured. He was brought home in the auto and Dr. D. C. Adams attended him.

AMUSEMENTS.

The series of fights and hairbreath escapes from death that Bonavita has had during the past few weeks with his group of twenty-seven forest bred African lions, culminated last Thursday in a terrible fight for life, in which he lost a thumb and was severely lacerated. So ferocious have his lions become of late, that Director Bostock, at Coney Island, was considering the advisability of discontinuing the act, but the entreaties of Bonavita prevailed and he was allowed to perform. In consequence, however, of Thursday's fight, which took the whole of the Bostock force to rescue Bonavita from death, Mr. Bostock announced the positive withdrawal of this act. Since doing so, he has been deluged with requests from patrons to reconsider the matter, which, coupled with the earnest entreaties of Captain Bonavita, Mr. Bostock has decided to permit Bonavita to give a farewell performance next Thursday, with his present group. After this one performance, however, Bonavita will commence to reconstruct the group.

During the hot weather the Eden Musee is one of the coolest amusement places in New York city. Every hall and corridor is supplied with artificial breeze, and the palm decorations throughout give a cooling effect. The winter garden has been arranged so as to represent a roof garden. The stage is handsomely decorated, and the programmes of the afternoon and evening concerts are made up to correspond with those at Manhattan Beach. The summer attractions at the Musee have never been so good as at present. A large and new moving picture show have just been received, and they include many war views from Russia and Japan which show troops marching over the plains and in actual battle, and also war ships in manoeuvres.

WESTFIELD IS SHUT OUT BY PLAINFIELD

In a Great Game at Recreation Park, Alis Defeats Its Rival By a Score of 3 to 0.

SUPERB EXHIBITION

ONLY ONE ERROR IS MADE BY ALIS AGGREGATION.

Magnificent Support Given Cronin —Waller Does Good Work for Westfield — The Contest in Detail.

There was a turn in the tide on Saturday and for the first time this season Alis defeated Westfield, the score of the contest at Recreation Park being 3 to 0 in favor of Plainfield. Bamford took McGoey's place in right field, where he exhibited considerable ginger. The whole Plainfield team was on its mettle and played gilt-edged ball. Cronin, of the Brooklyn Nationals, twirled masterly ball for Alis, striking out eight men and allowing but two insignificant hits. The fine support given him brought victory.

Walton was charged with the only error, which was a poor throw to first. Waller put up a great article of ball for Westfield, although he was touched for five safeties, including a corking two bagger by Courtney. The only errors made by Westfield were charged to Connelly at first. He made four misplays. The large crowd of Plainfielders witnessing the contest was more than satisfied with the result and gave the team much praise for its splendid work.

SHELL GAME CAUGHT MANY

FAKIR ROPED IN "EASY MARKS" AT GALVIN'S PARK SATURDAY NIGHT.

Fully equipped with a table and balls and a sufficient number of confederates, a shell game operator set himself up in business at the entrance to Gavin's Park, Saturday night. He soon had a crowd about him and in a short time was hauling in dimes, quarters and dollars. Included in the score or more of "easy marks" that struggled for a chance to make a wager that was all one-sided, was a good many young men from this city.

The fakir was having a good time and a nice run of business until he was spotted by one of the Fanwood township committeemen on a tour of inspection. Hearing the proprietor of the Park he ordered the fellow and his gang away from the grounds and they quickly complied. It is said they cleaned up several hundred dollars and would have gotten as much more but for the interruption.

MISS GWYNNE EVANS WEDDED

FORMER PLAINFIELDER NOW THE WIFE OF A MISSIONARY.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Gwynne Evans, formerly of this city, and Frederick Cramer, a missionary to China, which took place recently at Los Angeles, Cal. The couple will soon sail for China, where the groom will take charge of a mission station.

Miss Evans was for two years employed here as city nurse by the City Union, King's Daughters, and she made a host of friends during her stay. After leaving this city she went to Califorina where she has lived ever since. Her former home was in Canada.

INJURED WHILE CYCLING.

Elizabeth Man Collided With Frank Bailey Saturday Afternoon.

Irving H. Stantman, of Elizabeth, astride a swiftly moving motor cycle, and Letter Carrier Frank Bailey, awheel, collided with great force at Madison avenue and Front street, Saturday afternoon. Bailey's wheel was demolished and he was thrown some distance but sustained no serious hurts. Stantman described a circle in the air but sprang to his feet with only a slice of macadam on his face.

Witnesses said Stantman was purely at fault and both he and Bailey were taken to police headquarters. Bailey refused to make any complaint against him and he was allowed to go after giving security to pay for the wrecked wheel. The motor cycle was not damaged.

Bound Brook in Service.

The ferryboat Bound Brook, of the New Jersey Central's North river fleet, was placed in service again Monday for the first time since her collision with the excursion boat Cetus. The repairs that were made were quite extensive and proved very costly.

Father Boone at Elizabeth.

Rev. Father Boone, of this city, recently ordained to the priesthood, has been appointed a curate at St. Patrick's church, of Elizabeth. He assumed his new duties on Sunday.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM TERRIBLE DEATH

A Young Man Hung Head Downwards on a Freight Train for Over Ten Miles.

HE STOLE A RIDE

STRUCK REPEATEDLY BY PROJECTIONS ALONG TRACK.

His Head Badly Cut and Bruised—Awful Trip From Elizabeth to Fanwood Saturday.

With one foot held firmly as if in a vise, George Hardie, twenty-three years old, of Elizabeth, hung downward between two coal cars of a train on the New Jersey Central Saturday afternoon, while it travelled a distance of nearly ten miles. He was struck repeatedly by projections rising up from the track but was helpless to extricate himself and was noticed by no one until the train reached Fanwood. He was there discovered by the brakemen who hauled him up and brought him to this city.

When carried into the North Avenue Station he was bleeding from a dozen bad cuts about his face and head but despite the terrible ordeal through which he passed he retained consciousness and was able to tell how he came to be in the predicament. He caught the train at Elizabeth, he said, intending to come to Plainfield, but had barely seated himself on a brake wheel when a sudden jolt caused him to lose his balance. He fell between the cars and would have gone beneath the wheels but for his foot catching in a part of the coupling irons. The distance from there to the track bed is quite high and it left him hanging with outstretched arms but powerless to free himself. At times he caught hold of the frame work of one of the cars and rested himself but when it became too tiresome he had to let go. Keeping his senses he shouted as often as he could and it was while the train was slowly climbing the Graceland grade that the crew heard him and started the search that led to his discovery.

Hardie was afterward removed to police headquarters and his hurts were attended by Dr. Lafbarrow. It seemed impossible that he should escape so luckily after undergoing what he did but he took it calmly. He was placed on a trolley car and in charge of a patrolman was removed to his home.

RAILROAD MEN PLAY BALL

CONTEST AT BAYONNE WITNESSED BY CENTRAL'S OFFICIALS.

The New Jersey Central ball team met the Central team of the Philadelphia and Reading at Bayonne on Saturday, winning by a score of 5 to 1.

It was through the courtesy of Robert Davis, Democratic leader of Hudson County, that the league grounds were secured. The game was sharp and fast. The brilliant work of Arthur Smith in center field, was a feature. Monohan, pitching for the Jersey City team, held his opponents down to a few scattering hits. In the fifth inning Captain Giddis, of the visiting team, was knocked out of the box.

Among those who witnessed the contest were Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler, F. T. Dickerson, chief clerk to Mr. Besler, of this city, and a number of other officials of the road. Robert Davis was also present. There were about five hundred persons at the game.

Gifts to Charitable Institution.

Through the kindness of Miss Margaret Hayes, of New York city, six large double lawn swings and several lawn settees were presented to Miss Carry Saturday for use by the campers at the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home, Netherwood. The swings were purchased by Miss Hayes with the proceeds of a fair recently held in New York city. Miss Hayes, who is a personal friend of Miss Curry and a worker in the New York tenement district during the winter, is at present the guest of Mr. Benstein, of Oak Tree.

Affected by Lightning.

Mrs. J. S. Pray, of East Sixth street, is much improved from a severe shock she received during a heavy electrical storm at Exeter, N. H., recently. She was at the trolley station in Exeter at the time of the storm when a heavy bolt struck near the station. Mrs. Pray was stunned almost into insensibility, her left side being affected. She was taken to the home of friends whom she is visiting. Mrs. Pray's children, Martin Stutzman and the Misses Stutzman, are with her. At present they are at Hampton Falls, N. H., where they will probably remain until September 1.

FRANK O. REINHART ON HILLSIDE'S LINKS

Crack Young Player Attracted the Enthusiasts by His Fine Game on Saturday.

THE VARIOUS CONTESTS

MISS MURPHY WON IN THE CLOCK GOLF COMPETITION.

Low Scores at Park Golf Club for Two Cups—Events on Westfield Golf Club's Course.

Several events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday, attracted many enthusiasts to the course, and low scores were the rule. A feature was the return of Frank O. Reinhart to the game. He returned a gross of 73 to which was added four, giving him a 76 net and third honors for the Golf Committee cup.

First honors for the cup were won by G. F. Schoonmaker, who returned a net score of 74, while W. L. Glenney with a 75 net, finished second. These scores do no change the standing among the players, except that it gives W. L. Glenney 16 points.

These scores were returned for the Golf Committee cup:

G. F. Schoonmaker, 92, 18—74; W. L. Glenney, 74, plus 1—75; Frank O. Reinhart, 73, plus 4—76; Robert Abbott, 76, plus 1—77; Willard Wadsworth, 78, 0—78; Olaf Sungstad, 87, 9—78; H. F. Fox, 96, 17—79; C. B. Morgan, 87, 6—81; L. B. Taylor, 92, 10—82; G. T. VanBoskerck, 99, 9—83.

Miss Anna Murphy won the first prize in the clock golf competition for women with a score of 25, while for the second prize Miss Susan Wharton, Miss Josephine Lapsley and Miss Harriet Goddard were a tie with a score of 24. In the playoff Miss Goddard won with a 23. These prizes were offered by Mrs. Walter Gaston.

A new weekly event commenced Saturday, was a competition for a cup offered by Walter Gaston to be contested for by those having handicaps of 18 or over, the play to be on the point system, three points for the best score, two for the next best and one for the third best. During the time that few knew of the competition, a limited number took part on Saturday. There were two winners of points and the third had to go by default. These are the winners: H. L. Hall, 103, 0—103; H. Robert, 107, 1—106. As both of these players have handicaps under 18, they had to take reduced handicaps. The play will continue every Saturday till the end of the season.

Next Saturday there will be another clock golf competition for women for a prize offered by Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell.

Excellent scores marked the play for the President's and Park Golf Club cups at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, although the number of contestants was not large. Gus W. Faber won first honors for both trophies, with a score of 84, while Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Morgan T. Townsend won second and third honors for the President's cup. For the scratch cup, Morgan T. Townsend and Raymond B. Carroll finished second and third.

Faber now leads for the President's cup with nine points and Morgan T. Townend is tie with Arthur Peck with 5½ points and Raymond Carroll has a total of four points. For the other cup, Morgan Townsend has a substantial lead with 16 points and Gus. Faber is a close second with 11. Mr. McKelvey is now fifth with six points.

These scores were posted on Saturday for the two cups:

G. W. Faber, 84, 0—84; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 96, 12—84; Morgan T. Townsend, 90, 8—82; Walter McMasters, 116, 26—88; R. B. Carroll, 98, 48—50; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 108, 17—99; Nelson A. Miller, 105, 14—91; L. H. Thurlow, 109, 18—91; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 114, 16—98.

The only event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday was the Governors' competition. W. G. Delemeter and Hugh Talbot qualified in this play, each making a net score of 73.

These were the scores returned:

W. G. Delemeter, 103, 30—73; Hugh Talbot, 101, 28—73; A. D. Tuttle, 89, 14—75; R. K. Taylor, 94, 18—76; S. A. Trevvett, 96, 10—86; F. R. Simpson, 110, 27—83; C. F. Wersh, 121, 20—91; H. W. Gladwin, 117, 26—91.

Oldest Bank in State.

The National Newark Banking Company, of Newark, completed its one hundredth year of existence Saturday. It is the oldest banking institution in New Jersey. A charter was obtained from the Legislature of 1804, and it was afterward extended three times. The business was established in a dwelling house in Broad street. On the first day about $4,000 was taken in from depositors. The bank had no vaults, and the officers took the securities to the vaults of the Manhattan Company's bank in New York.

MATTERS CONSIDERED BY THE CITY FATHERS

Protest Against Speed of Trolleys on East Front St. and Watchung Ave.

BUY GARBAGE CANS

BONDS TO BE ISSUED FOR MACADAMIZING PURPOSES.

Public Hearing on Street Improvement—Fire Protection at Netherwood Fresh Air Home—Other Affairs.

The Common Council at its August meeting held Monday received a strong protest from Dr. J. R. Probasco and others asking that some action be taken to regulate the running of automobiles and trolley cars at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue. The petitioners cited the fact that the corner is a dark one and accidents are sure to occur unless preventive measures are taken. They asked that an arc light be placed on the corner and that the trolley cars be compelled to make a full stop before turning either into Front street or Watchung avenue.

Another matter to which the attention of the Council was called was that in reference to a cellar hole on the Durland property, the result of moving a portion of the building. The petitioners asked that steps be taken to fill this opening, thereby preventing possible accidents. The matters were referred.

J. B. Coward, Esq., representing Coward and Murray, owners of the property occupied by police headquarters on East Front street, appealed to the Council regarding the city water rent for the building, stating that as there is but one connection to the building, the water company cannot divide the bill. Mr. Coward desires that the city make some arrangements to pay the rent for water. The matter was referred to the proper committee with power.

Joseph E. Meyer, one of the property-owners signing A. D. Thompson's petition to have Denmark road and Berkely avenue macadamized, in a letter to Councilman Wilson, requested that his name be taken from the petition for the reason that the cost of the improvement would be greater than he anticipated. He added that he is willing to sign to have Berkely avenue macadamized.

Rev. E. M. Rodman petitioned the Council for a fire hydrant near the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, explaining that the nearest hydrant is over a half mile away. He spoke of the necessity of having better fire protection near the Home on account of the great number of children there during the summer. The matter was referred.

Assessor H. C. VanEmburgh reported several assessments made in error and at his request, Mr. Daniel offered a resolution providing that the same be cancelled. Assessor Charles H. Hand also made a request for the adjustment of several assessments on Hillside and Martine avenues and proper action was taken regarding them.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that thirteen building permits were granted during July.

Mr. Glenk offered a resolution that the city purchase 840 garbage cans at the cost of approximately $84.00, the money to be appropriated from the general fund. The resolution was adopted, Messrs. Daniel and Murphy voting in the negative. The cans are a part of the equipment of the old Plainfield Sanitary Company and if the city eventually adopts municipal collection of garbage the cans will be useful, besides the present cost is exceedingly cheap.

Mr. Lee's recommendation that the petition of Thomas Callahan, of Richmond street, for a fire alarm box at the corner of East Third and Richmond streets, was granted.

Mr. Glenk introduced an amendment to the ordinance presented at the last meeting providing for the macadamizing of certain streets. The amendment cuts out one block on Berkely avenue, where J. W. Rinehart owns property on both sides of the street. Mr. Rinehart protested against the macadamizing in front of this property and the ordinance was changed to read "from the easterly curb line of Berkely avenue to the southside of Park terrace." This improvement calls for the issuance of $13,000 worth of bonds and the appointment of commissioners by the Common Pleas Court to assess benefits and damages. A public hearing will be granted in the matter on Tuesday night, September 6.

After Mr. Daniel presented two resolutions, one providing for the transfer of $600 from the general to the fire fund and another providing for the borrowing of $1,500 for sanitary sewer improvements, the Council adjourned.

SERIOUSLY INJURED IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

John Geary, of South Plainfield, Falls Beneath Horses' Hoofs and is Badly Hurt.

UNDER WAGON WHEELS

VICTIM TAKEN TO HIS HOME IN POLICE PATROL.

Received Severe Blow on the Head —Horses Suffered—The Wagon Damaged—Wounds Dressed by Dr. Hughes.

John Geary, the well known South Plainfield produce dealer, was badly injured in a runaway accident which occurred on Somerset street early this morning.

While unloading vegetables in front of Garzia & Conover's store his horse gave a sudden start, throwing him backwards over the seat. In falling he grasped one of the animals by the tail which served only to frighten it and also its mate. Both sprang forward at a mad gallop, throwing Geary to the ground and trampling on him before he could pull himself away. He let go the horse's tail only to fall beneath the wheels of the wagon and they passed over his body.

Bystanders picked him up and carried him to Conover's residence where he was made comfortable until the arrival of Dr. Hughes. The physician found him badly cut, scraped and bruised in a dozen places and suffering from several blows on the head. A close examination disclosed no broken bones but there is a possibility of internal hurts from the weight of the wagon passing over his chest. His injuries were dressed and he was removed to his home in South Plainfield by the police patrol ambulance.

When the wagon was overturned what was left of the load of tomatoes, cabbages and other garden truck was thrown in every direction. A trail of tomatoes led up Somerset street from Grandview avenue to Codington avenue.

The runaway horses continued up Somerset street to Coddington avenue where they collided with a tree, smashing the wagon pole and throwing themselves down. They were captured and placed in Stonewall Jackson's stables. One of them was quite badly hurt and the other sustained a few cuts.

TO ERECT FLAT BUILDING

L. L. MANNING CONTEMPLATES IMPROVEMENT ON WEST FRONT ST.

L. L. Manning, the marble cutter, who owns the property corner of Central avenue and West Front street, has plans in preparation for the erection of a handsome building where his marble works now stand. It will contain well-appointed flats on the second and third floors and stores on the ground floor. In making this improvement the marble works will be transferred to the rear of the property.

Before actually commencing the work, Mr. Manning and John Abbott, the adjoining property-owner, asked the Council Monday to establish the building line on West Front street, between Central avenue and New street. This was granted and in connection with it, Mr. Glenk chairman of the street committee, said after the meeting, that the street corporation counsel Marsh returns from Europe he proposes to have him draft an amendment to the ordinance which will establish building lines in all of the principal streets, especially in the business parts of the city. This action will probably be taken in Sycamore avenue, where an unsuccessful attempt has been made to widen that thoroughfare.

LIGHTNING'S PRANKS THROUGHOUT THE CITY

Many Buildings Struck During Yesterday Afternoon's Heavy Electrical Storm.

ONE WOMAN HURT

FIRE DEPARTMENT TWICE CALLED OUT ON ALARMS.

Local Telephone and Telegraph Wires Damaged and Growing Crops Destroyed by Hail.

Five buildings struck by bolts, one woman hurt, fire alarm, telegraph and telephone wires crippled, scores of window panes broken by hail and a heavy downpour of rain, is the summary of a severe electrical storm which passed over the city yesterday afternoon. It was in reality two storms as there was a clear period intervening. In Washington Valley and parts of North Plainfield township, crops were badly damaged by hail and the farmers suffered thousands of dollars damage.

The buildings struck by lightning were the Rogers' Corporation factory on Madison avenue, the Campbell Press Works on East Third street and the residences of George VanNest on Monroe avenue, Mrs. C. E. Bloom on Mountain avenue and the barn of Grocer W. W. Wilson, on West Third street, used as a storage house.

The VanNest house was struck by a heavy bolt which ripped off boards and slates in many places and tore around the interior causing a large amount of damage. Mrs. VanNest was standing at the head of the stairs when the crash came and was severely shocked. She lost her balance and toppled part way down the stairs receiving further injuries. She was in a serious condition when assistance arrived but has since recovered to a certain extent. She still suffers from the effects of the lightning and the painful bruises received in falling. The bolt passed around three rooms, one of them being the kitchen, where the stove was wrecked and dishes thrown from a table. In another room a large chandelier was burst to pieces, and in the third floor boards were ripped from the beams. The extent of the damage is being placed by insurance adjusters today.

The bolt at the Campbell shop came in on wires. It extinguished the electric lights and knocked down several men but none were seriously hurt. A large hole was torn in the cement flooring and bricks were knocked out of a side wall.

When Wilson's barn was struck, the bolt set fire to a large number of brooms stored in it and the flames quickly spread about. Charles U. Graves was directly behind the storehouse when it was hit and seeing the smoke sent in an alarm from box 54. Owing to a bad cross with an electric light wire it failed to reach headquarters but the companies in No. 1 and No. 2 houses responded. The quick arrival of the later prevented the destruction of the barn, the men being directed by Captain Feiring. The roof of the building was badly torn and the damage in all will amount to $100, covered by insurance.

The Rogers Corporation silverware plant was forced to shut down as a result of the bolt which struck its chimney and passed into the boiler room. A hole as large as a man's body was knocked in the south side of the chimney and it was left in a weakened condition, so that warning signs have been posted about it. In the boiler room was a large heating apparatus, the doors of which were all burst open. The doors of the room were also burst open and bricks were knocked from the lower part of the chimney, shattering most all about. The engineer had stepped out of the place a short time before, otherwise he might have lost his life.

The Bloom house was struck on one side and the weather boards were damaged. The bolt was a heavy one and was plainly felt all through the neighborhood, though no one was hurt.

In the borough and outlying districts large hail stones fell for several minutes just on this side of the storm very few were noticed. The hail broke window panes, cut down shrubbery and knocked fruits from trees. In Washington Valley oats were cut, corn was laid level with the ground and farms were left in a bad state.

A house on West Fourth street just over the city line, occupied by John Ward and owned by Lawrence Kerwin, was badly damaged by a lightning bolt. Boards were ripped off and thrown a great distance and holes were knocked in the structure in several places.

A large maple tree, in front of the home of Richard W. Ouland on Westervelt avenue, was shattered by a bolt of lightning during the second shower.

The tree was badly split and a large branch was torn off. During the same shower, pedestrians on West Front street were alarmed by an unusually heavy bolt which struck the iron trolley pole in front of David Dreier's store, near Somerset street.

Early in the storm the lightning put the centre wiring service out of business at Hill & Shupp's store on West Front street. Not only the lighting of the store, but also the elevator and telephone were crippled and it was some time before the effects of the lightning could be remedied and service renewed.

The fire alarm system was out of order during this morning because of the crossing of the electric light wires and the alarm wires. This crossing of wires caused two taps to be sounded at 12:45 this morning and a single tap at 9:20. These taps were not recorded on the sounder at headquarters but merely at the engine houses. Linemen were at work this morning trying to locate the trouble.

For a while after the storm had passed, communication by telephone and telegraph was almost impossible. Lightning played on the wires incessantly and scores of fuses were burned out. The fire alarm circuits in the West End were either opened or badly crossed. Linemen were placed at work before the storm was over and today the greater part of the damage had been repaired. Especial attention was paid to the fire alarm wires and this noon a test showed everything in shape.

HOTEL HIGGINS PLUNDERED

BURGLARS TAKE $100 WORTH OF STUFF FROM SOUTH PLAINFIELD HOSTELRY.

Prying open a rear window, burglars invaded Hotel Higgins, the well known South Plainfield hostelry, early Friday morning, and got away with money, liquors and clothing worth over $100. The stolen goods belonged to the proprietor, Morris Higgins, and his son, John F. Higgins. The family knew nothing of the visit until they arose at 4 o'clock.

From appearances the work was accomplished by several men as the plunder could not be removed by one. The cash drawer containing $12 was broken from its fastenings and taken away and a check was removed from Proprietor Higgins' clothing. The son fared badly as they took all his best clothing, evidently using the coats to wrap up bottles of wine and whiskey.

The robbery was evidently committed by a gang which was seen hanging about the Lehigh's freights and coal yards early last evening. They were chased away by the night watchman several times and they finally made their way to the village. All the street lights in the place were out on account of the storm and this served to aid them in their work.

SCHOOL OF TAMED TROUT.

Connecticut Man Has Pond Full of Pets Who Eat from His Hand and Frolic with Him.

Three years ago Joseph S. Mitchelson, of Tariffville, Conn., stocked a small pond on his three-acre farm in his residence with brook trout. They have grown to be from one to two pounds in weight and are quite tame.

Mr. Mitchelson feeds the trout on raw beef, chopped fine, and plays with them much as he would with a puppy. They eat out of his hand and allow him to fondle them as he pleases.

One form of amusement which Mr. Mitchelson has invented is a sort of tug-of-war match. He fastens a piece of meat to one end of a string and then it's a tussel to see which is stronger, trout or man. The trout digs his toes into the turf, so to speak, sits back on his haunches, and pulls for fair. In reality he backs water with his fins. Then he will suddenly turn and try to run away with the bait. It is not fair to Mr. Mitchelson to say that he is like the circus manager, who always lets the woman charioteer beat the Romans.

Mr. Mitchelson has hardly tamed his trout so that they will come up into his hands, but he is strict in that part of the body where they stow away the worm. Properly soothed in this manner he can lift a trout completely out of water without his making a flop.

Mr. Mitchelson says he had one charmed where he lived in the west so that he could carry him all around a room without disturbing the trout's peace of mind. With his trained trout he has not yet attempted so complete a reversal of natural laws, but they like to be petted, as does a child with a stomach ache.

WAS RUINED BY PRAYERS.

Missouri Man Makes Strange Charge Against Wife He Is Suing for a Divorce.

Frederick Hyatt, of Macon, Mo., a veteran of the civil war, makes a wonderful attestation as to his belief in prayer in his divorce bill against his wife, Martha A. Hyatt. The couple were married in 1860. There was a separation at North Bend, Neb., in 1881, and for the last two years Hyatt has been trying to get a decree through the circuit court here. He admits that he left his wife, but says it was because she ruined him in a wheat deal at St. Louis by praying that the market would go against him.

The prayers of his wife, Hyatt says, were answered immediately and overwhelmingly and he has never been able to recover from the effects of them. He was demurred out of court in December, but got the case reinstated. One of his depositions has got in from Los Angeles, Cal. The deponent is Hyatt's brother, C. W. Hyatt, who was entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Hyatt at North Bend, Neb., when the incident that caused the separation occurred. On this point the witness deposes: "She went out into the public street, knelt down before the crowd and prayed that her husband would become a beggar. She acted so that he had to put her on a train and send her home in order to avoid being disgraced. She was a dangerous woman and had no control over her temper."

Mrs. Hyatt lives at Clarence. She denies her husband's charges, and will contest the proceedings against her.

LOCKED UP IN TOMB.

DEAD MAN AND HEIR BOTH PICKLED WITH RUM.

Coffin of Former Filled with the Liquid When He Was Buried—Replenished Regularly on Anniversary of His Death.

One of the old family founders in Somerset county, in northern Maine, left a heritage that just has proved a decidedly serious proposition to one of his heirs.

The family is among the wealthiest in the state. Years ago its pioneer went into Somerset county, and in time became the principal business figure of the section.

As he felt age approaching he put his men at work on the construction of a big tomb in the garden in the rear of the old mansion that stands as one of the show places in the town of Athens. On his deathbed he issued commands as to what his relatives should do with his body after dissolution. He ordered them in place him in the leaden coffin and after it had been stored in the tomb to pour the coffin full of Jamaica rum.

The will went on to explain that the testator couldn't bear the idea of being laid away in the tomb forever knowing that he would be left to molder forgotten. He wanted his relatives ever to bear him in mind, and his method of farring their memory mannally was this: The will directed attention to the little spout sticking up at the head of the casket. The command was that annually each June, on the anniversary of the squire's burial, the chief heir should enter the old tomb, bringing a jug of rum, and that he should replenish the supply in the coffin.

The family removed from the old mansion some years ago in order to afford the sons and daughters more advantages in one of the cities of Maine.

Recently the heir upon whom devolves the duty of carrying the jug of rum to the estimable and well-preserved old gentleman in Athens suspended his business engagements for a day and started on his annual trip. He went to Solon by train and, hiring a team at the stable, rode across country. The mansion stands a bit out of the village. When the heir turned in at the gate between the double rows of towering lilac bushes no one in the neighborhood happened to see him. The visitor hitched his horse at the rear of the house, out of sight of the road, and then proceeded toward the tomb. He let himself into it, and when the overflow from the spout indicated that the coffin was filled he started for the village.

Now it chanced, says the New York Press, that through age and heaving by the frost one of the flagstones with which the tomb is paved jutted its edge above the neighboring ones. The door of the tomb the heir didn't see the stumbling block and he struck it and tripped. As he tripped he lunged forward and slammed full tilt against the inside of the half-opened door. The door banged shut and the great catch outside fell into place. The heir was a prisoner in the tomb of his ancestor.

The door fitted very snugly against the jamb. The victim broke his finger nails in the cracks trying to start the door, but it was no use. The portal was immovable. There wasn't an article in the tomb fit for a lever. As the prisoner crouched at the door feeling around him his hand came in contact with the jug he had partly emptied. He was a temperate man and a churchman, but he realized that this was a case where heroic remedies were required. He tipped up the jug and began to numb his sensibilities.

That night a telegram was started for Athens inquiring the whereabouts of the heir. He had neglected an important business engagement. The telegram was delivered to the postmaster in Athens the next forenoon by a messenger, who drove over in a team which had ridden on the door of the mansion without getting a reply.

Of course the next thing was to open the tomb, and when the door was pushed back the heir was pushed back with it. He was lying against the portal with his jug clenched in his hand and he was fully as dead to the world as his venerable ancestor in the leaden coffin. Both were preserved in the same fluid, applied in different fashion. It took the doctor several hours to sober the heir off. A more gigantic load was never accumulated in that town. But the physician says if the man had not had that rum at hand during his wait in the tomb he would have been taken out a raving lunatic.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

AN OVERTURNED LAMP STORY

WOMAN HURT AND SOFA BURNED IN SOUTH PLAINFIELD HALL.

During the progress of an entertainment in Washington Hall, South Plainfield, July 27, an overturned lamp started a small fire back of the stage that subsequently resulted in Mrs. Peter Johnson sustaining severe burns.

The lamp was seized by Hollis Ouberly, who was about to throw it through a window pane when he was prevented by Mrs. Johnson who saw that it might add to the danger. In doing so her arm was cut and her hands burned. She then hurried to a stairway to get water when she tripped and fell down receiving painful bruises.

Ouberly and others succeeded in throwing the lamp out and the blaze was killed before doing much damage. The floor was burned and a sofa was partially destroyed. The audience knew nothing of the accident, otherwise it may have led to a panic.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clifton, of West Seventh street, who have been at Patchogue, L.I., have returned home.

DEMOCRATIC BOOMS IN SOMERSET COUNTY

Cruiser, Anderson, Shurts and Carney Mentioned in Connection With the Shrievalty.

THE ASSEMBLYMANSHIP

MAJOR NELSON Y. DUNGAN MAY SUCCEED S. S. SWACKHAMER.

Mr. Swackhamer held to Have His Eye on Governorship or a Seat in Congress—Carney's Boom for Sheriff.

Judging from the number of aspirants for the shrievalty nomination on the Democratic ticket, this fall, in Somerset county the coming convention of that party will be a "hot one." Thus far four names have been mentioned in connection with this nomination. Party workers in Montgomery township, the home of Major Nelson Y. Dungan, who two years ago resigned the Senatorial nomination in favor of Samuel S. Childs, who was nominated at a second convention, claim they are entitled to something and are actively booming Eugene V. Cruiser. Deputy Sheriff John Anderson, a defeated candidate for county clerk last fall, expects the delegation from Bernards to again present his name for this honor. Bridgewater has as a candidate, Jacob Shurts, of Somerville, while the delegation from North Plainfield will probably urge the nomination of David J. Carney. Carney is given much credit in his home town for the defeat of the annexation proposition two years ago.

Major Dungan is prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Assembly. Samuel S. Swackhamer says that he will not be a candidate to succeed himself and efforts made by party workers to have him change his decision have been unavailing. It is believed that the North Plainfielder has his eye on something better. His friends say that the gubernatorial chair or a seat in the lower House of Congress would be more to his taste. When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press Mr. Swackhamer disclaimed coveting the governorship or a place in the halls of Congress, but chose in a position to know say that he would not refuse a sing political berth where he would have an opportunity to advocate or carry out the principles of the Democratic party. Major Dungan is solid in North Plainfield and in every other section of Somerset county and if he would accept a nomination it is quite probable that the offer would be made unanimously.

HAND'S BOND ALL RIGHT

JUDGE VAIL ASSURES LOCAL JUSTICE THAT HE NEED NOT RENEW IT.

In defense of the accusation brought against him last week regarding the legal value of his bond as justice of the peace, Judge Hezekiah Hand journeyed to Elizabeth and paid a visit to Judge Vail, at the Elizabeth District Court. In the interview with the Elizabeth judge, Hand proved his original bond as justice of the peace to be all that is legally necessary to guarantee his continuance in office.

As his appointment as justice of the peace, Judge Hand's bond was furnished by his son, Horace Hand, who is now dead. In the fracas in Hand's court last week, the original cause for dispute was the assertion by the visiting lawyer that, on the account of the death of his son, his bond as justice was void and a renewal of the same was necessary. Armed with a new bond, given by two local business men in case it should prove necessary, the justice went to Elizabeth prepared to renew it. The interview with the judge showed that Hand has complied with the law in giving bond within two months after his appointment as justice of the peace in 1901, and that there is no extent law providing for a new bond upon the death of a bondsman. Contrary to Justice Hand's idea, Judge Vail announced that the renewal of the bond might affect the justice's of the peace removal from office.

BRUTE STRUCK THE WOMAN REPEATEDLY.

Has Figured in Other Escapades—Well-Known to the Local Police—Now at Elizabeth Jail.

On a charge of assault with intent to kill preferred by his wife, Thomas Kane, of this city, better known as "Cooley," was arraigned before Judge Clark at Scotch Plains July 27. Evidence produced by the woman bore out her statements and the husband was committed to Elizabeth in default of $300 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Kane was released from jail that morning on completing a ten-day sentence imposed by a Westfield justice, and returned to the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, at Grasoland. He was in an ugly mood and in a short time began quarreling with Mrs. Kane. Words were followed by blows and finally the infuriated man seized a beer bottle and buried it on her head. She avoided it by jumping to one side and as it struck against the opposite wall it smashed into a thousand pieces, so great was the force with which it was thrown. This only served to increase his anger and as he struck at the woman repeatedly he shouted:

"I'll do you yet if I get twenty years for it."

Interference resulted in Kane's ejectment from the house before he could make good his threat and he was arrested later at Elizabeth. The facts of the affair were brought out at his hearing and Mrs. Kane related further cruelties to which she had submitted in recent months. Judge Clark is familiar with Kane's past as he has been before him on several occasions and he expressed his contempt for the prisoner before committing him.

Kane has resided in this city nearly all his life and is well known to the local police. Three years ago he made a desperate attempt to escape from Patrolman Higgins when arrested for swimming beneath the Grant avenue bridge and he and the policeman fought for nearly an hour. He was finally conquered and landed at headquarters but not before both were bleeding in a dozen places and had the clothes torn almost entirely from them. At the trial which followed City Judge Runyon fined him $100 and sent him to jail for fifty-nine days.

LITERARY.

George Horton, who traveled through Siberia not long ago, and who knows his Japan right well, has written a story for the September Red Book based on the experiences which befell an American globe trotter in Japan, just before the outbreak of hostilities with Russia. The story is a clever one and it has been happily illustrated by the Japanese artist, Toyokuni, whose pictures in the July Red Book found such favor.

Ralph Conner begins a new novel, "The Prosecutor," in the August fiction number of Leslie's Monthly Magazine, and the first chapters promise a better story than either "The Sky Pilot" or "Black Rock." There are eleven other stories in this number, by such people as George Hibbard, Henry C. Rowland, Alice MacGowan, Heiman F. Day, H. I. Greene and Rex E. Beach, and they cover nearly every variety of up-to-date fiction. J. Adam Bede, the humorist of the House of Representatives, has a most amusing article on "The Spellbinders," whom we all expect to listen to during the next few months, in which he tells a number of good stories.

Thomas Nast's cartoon "Brains," that historic, unmistakable likeness of "Boss" Tweed with the money bag for a head, on the cover of August Pearson's draws attention to that particular one of Albert Bigelow Paine's article on Thomas Nast, which recounts the beginning of the fierce fight Nast made against the Tweed Ring! Mr. Paine tells the story with an energy that makes delightful reading. It is too long a tale to be contained within the limits of one magazine article, so its conclusion will appear in the September issue, as we are informed by a note at the end of the August number.

To Enlarge Greenhouse Plant.

Charles L. Stanley, the florist, has secured a permit for the erection of another greenhouse in the rear of his nursery on South avenue. The building will measure 16x16x35 feet. Work of erection will be commenced immediately.

TO COMMEMORATE FEAST OF SANTA MARIA

Italians Plan to Hold Another Big Two-Days Celebration at Concert Park Next Month.

PYROTECHNIC DISPLAY

SALVE VELAR IS CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE ON ARRANGEMENTS.

Carabinieri Band to be Here Again —Two Concerts to be Given —Francis J. Biatz Treasurer.

Despite the fact that the celebration of the local Italians on the occasion of the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel resulted in the financial loss to the committee, Salve Velard, the Italian leader, has announced that such interest was shown in the festival that a similar demonstration will be held in this city to commemorate the sacred feast of Santa Maria, Mother of God, on Wednesday and Thursday, September 7 and 8.

Arrangements are already under way for this celebration, which will be more elaborate than the recent one. Velard has already secured the services of the Carabinieri Band which gave such satisfaction with their music last week. Bandmaster S. Marciello promises to have five additional players here in September, some of whom are accomplished soloists. Band concerts will be held in Concert Park on the evenings of both days of the celebration and the band will give local concerts by day throughout the city. The fireworks display, which were so much enjoyed at last week's celebration, will also be repeated both nights on a far more elaborate scale. The display on the two nights will be of competitive nature, a different company having charge on each night. A variety of elaborate set pieces will be set off at these displays.

At the request of Velard, Francis J. Biatz, Esq., has assumed charge of the finances of the celebration. This has been effected to rouse enthusiasm in the part of the towns-people and so that subscriptions may be started to clear expense incurred at the celebration. Much interest has already been shown by local tradesmen over the affair.

YOUNG WOMAN BADLY BURNED

MISS ADDIE JOHNSTON HURT BY FIRE IN SCOTCH PLAINS HOME.

Trying to extinguish a small fire caused by an exploding oil stove in the kitchen of her parents' home on Forest avenue, Scotch Plains, on July 31, Miss Addie Johnston was severely burned about the hands. The young woman pluckily fought the flames and kept them down until the arrival of the fire department. She remained in the burning room until the last of the blaze was put out and only then did she consent to have her burns attended to.

The fire was started by grease boiling over a pan and dropping on the burner of the oil stove. Flames spread in all directions and a serious conflagration was prevented by Miss Johnston's timely action. The damage will about to $100, covered by insurance. The young woman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs William D. Johnson.

How "Ham" Was Treated.

Hamilton Kean, brother of Senator Kean, is a New York banker, with many European connections. Speaking the other day of the "imperialistic" issue, he said: "I know this has occurred in the last six years: Anything American now gets prompt and courteous attention in London, Paris or Berlin. One does not have to sit his heels waiting in the outer office of a London banker now, but gets an interview with the senior partner at once. Everything American is now important enough to get action, and this country has risen to the position of a first-class power in business and finance, since its government has stood up firmly for American rights."—Newark Evening News.

German Paper to Resume.

The Free Press, the German newspaper in Elizabeth which recently was under the hammer at public auction because its then owner, Captain Henry S. Altal, did not pay a chattel mortgage held on the plant, will resume publication the latter part of next month. Editor Charles H. Schmidt, who established the paper more than thirty years ago and bought the plant at the public sale, will personally conduct the paper and will have as editor a young newspaper man of ability, now in Germany, but who worked for several years on German newspapers in New York. In national and State politics it will be independent, but in local politics Democratic.

REFUSE CONSENT TO SYCAMORE ST. WIDENING

Property Owners Object to Ordinance Introduced at Common Council Meeting.

SCHEME AS PROPOSED

REPORT TO BE MADE AT NEXT SESSION OF CITY FATHERS.

No Action to be Taken Until An Agreement is Reached—Mr. Hand Favors the Improvement.

Property owners on Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, met July 27 with the members of the street committee at Street Commissioner Gavett's office, and strongly voiced their sentiments in opposition to the ordinance introduced at the last Common Council meeting regarding the proposed widening of that thoroughfare for the accommodation of traffic between Fifth street and the railroad station.

All owners of property were there or sent proxies to fight the measure with the street committee. The ordinance provides for the widening of the street to fifty feet, to more easily accommodate traffic. Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, is now fifty feet wide, the widest street in the vicinity, and to carry out this provision it would be necessary for each property owner to forfeit five feet of property to the thoroughfare. Of the property owners convened last evening, Charles H. Hand was the only one to consent to this and to favor the widening of the street. The other property owners were unanimous in their refusal.

V. W. Nash, Jr., Esq., who appeared for several of the property owners, and W. R. Coddington, Esq., who also came as a proxy, entered into the informal discussion for the defeat of the measure. The original issue of the measure, that the Fourth street entrance to the station made a broad approach necessary from Fifth street, was contested and the fact that the street is at present broader between Fourth and Fifth streets than it is between Fifth and Sixth streets, that it is broader than either Fourth or Fifth streets, and even broader than Park avenue between North avenue and Front street, were used as arguments to question the traffic so greater than on these thoroughfares mentioned.

After this discussion, which was carried on somewhat at length, the committee of Councilmen announced that they would consider the arguments presented and that opportunity for further discussion of the matter would be presented. At the next Council meeting they will formally report the feeling of the property owners, and no action will be taken by the city until some agreement is effected.

HER FARE.

The summer sun was rising fast
As out from Jersey City passed
A trolley car, all new and nice,
Upon its dashboard this device:
"Trenton."
"Fares please," the young conductor said.
A damsel, hearing, raised her head
And with a sudden, startled look,
She fumbled at her pocketbook.
He waited.
Through Harrison the street car went,
Still, still above the purse she bent,
The blue-clad man in patience stood—
Tis thus they earn a livelihood,
Conductors.
"All out for Broad and Market streets!
This car the Trenton trip completes."
The damsel breathed a heavy sigh;
A look distracted filled her eye.
"Ding-ding."
Across the fields of Jersey green
Elizabeth, her spires were seen.
The busy lout within the car
Not for a moment ceased to spar
With the reticule.
Cranford and Plainfield dropped behind,
Unseen by her whose eyes were blind
To all except her pocketbook
Its cardcase, nail-file, button-hook,
Stoppers.
"Round Brook!" the weary fare man yelled,
And still his eager hand outheld
In vain, as by the Raritan
Relentlessly the trolley ran
"New Brunswick!"
Full many a secret cell she oped,
And through and through her fingers groped.
And when the car was slowing down
Amid the heart of Trenton town
She found her money.
"Eureka!" cried the roving maid.
"I beg your pardon; I'm afraid
I've kept you waiting. What a sin!
But any way, this trip has been Just lovely!"
—Elizabeth Journal

Miss Ellen Hehn Married.

Miss Ellen Laura Hehn, of Raritan, formerly a resident of Plainfield, was married a few days ago to R. Winthrop Alcock of Easthampton, L. I., by the rector of the Church of the Holy Spirit, of Brooklyn. Only a few immediate friends were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Alcock are now on a honeymoon tour through the New England States.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 7.

Topic.—God's guiding hand in our lives. —I Chron. xxix, 10-12; Luke xii, 1-7. (Experience meeting.)

The subject of God's providence needs to be emphasized today. "Fate" and "chance" are words that are being too frequently heard in explanation of the events of life today. "Blind fate and not the enemy defeated us" was the explanation of a Russian defeat several months ago. "It take my chances" is the creed of too many in reference to the existence of a God and a future life. Hence we need to emphasize the great truth that God is over all and above all and that He guides the lives of men. "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, * * Both riches and honor come of Thee, and Thou reignest over all." "The very hairs of your head are numbered." God and not fate or chance rules in the universe which He has created, and the lives of His children who love and serve Him are the special objects of His love and care. "The lot is cast into the lap, but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord."

God's guidance is not only general, but specific and individual. Many believe in a general providence. They will say, "Of course I believe that God directs the great things of the universe, such as the planets and stars and the great events of human history, but that He guides individual lives and their special events is absurd." And yet this absurdity is true and is no absurdity. God could only direct large events by directing the smaller ones. Washington's life in the nation was only made possible by God's care over him in the wilds of western Pennsylvania, in protecting him when expert Indian riflemen made him in vain the mark of their deadly bullets. Egypt's national life at a certain important period could only have been what it was by God's guiding hand in the life of Joseph as an individual in the years before. God's providence is particular and individual. His guiding hand is in your life, though it may be one of chastisement and humiliation. His banner over you is love, and He guides you with His eye.

"But I cannot always see the hand of God," says some one. But that does not prove that it is not there. Some day the whole truth is hidden behind the clouds, but no one argues that there is no sun because it cannot be seen. "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform." The way may be mysterious, but God moves and performs the same. Ponder all the same, doubt it, child of God. When you can see His purposes in your life, rejoice for the light that you have, but when you cannot see or understand rejoice that you can trust God even if now and here you do not understand Him.

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. vii, 21, 22; Josh. vii, 14; Ps. xxxii, 8; civ, 1-21; cxxi, 1-8; cxxxvi, 25, 26; Isa. lviii, 11; Matt. vi, 25-34; Rom. viii, 28-39; Rev. xxi, 1-4.

Endeavor In Unexpected Places.

God has been showing us that in unexpected ways and unusual places on sea and shore He has a use for Christian Endeavor principles. On the ships of war and on the peaceful vessels of the merchant marine He has established our cause. In a score of American prisons men who wear the stripes have come worthily to wear the badge of Christian Endeavor and have learned, even behind prison bars, the true liberty wherewith Christ makes us free. In the old soldiers' homes in Virginia and Kansas and elsewhere the veterans not only "shoulder a crutch and show how fields were won," but take their Bibles and show how souls are won.

In a postoffice of northern Japan the clerks have formed themselves into a Christian Endeavor society to win their Buddhist companions to Christ. A group of firemen in one of our large cities have not failed for many years to hold each week a Christian Endeavor meeting. The Christian policemen of another city hold a similar meeting. In many outlying schoolhouse districts little groups of people have established helpful means of grace by organizing themselves into a Christian Endeavor society, loyal to Christ and tributary to some church. In busy factories and business offices and department stores other young people have thus banded themselves together, "trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength."—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Dr. Clark In Australia.

On one evening of the five days' convention in Melbourne the audience that greeted Dr. Clark numbered over 10,000 people. The convention committee issued a souvenir programme of hymns and music, on the cover of which was the latest photograph of the founder of Christian Endeavor. The large sacrifice that Dr. Clark willingly makes for the cause is shown by the enormous work he has done on this around the world journey. He has had public addresses in four or five meetings each day and interviews and conferences that rarely give him any leisure till midnight. He has also wielded a busy pen in the preparation of letters of record and newspaper and magazine articles that are having a large reading in this country and England.

Organization With a Definite End.

We hear much senseless talk about too much organization. What we need is more of it. Our churches is more organization, but organization with a definite end in view. The church in its ministry to the community's needs is like a great department store or like a great university. Study the organization of either of these and you have a fine model for the administration of a church.—William Shaw, Treasurer United Society.

EAGLE STEALS BABE.

STRANGE STORY WHICH HAS JUST COME FROM SCOTLAND.

Bird of Prey Carries Off Eighteen-Months-Old Child—Mother Finds Mutilated Form of Darling Lying on Rocks.

While a little girl about 18 months old, the only daughter of a young Sutherlandshire crofter, living about a mile from Invershin station, on the Highland railway, was playing at her father's cottage door, an eagle swooped down, gripped her in its claws and carried her off to the mountains, where some hours later her dead and mutilated body was found by a gamekeeper.

At first there was no clew to the mystery of her sudden disappearance. The little one had been playing in the sunshine while her mother was baking bread, and her father was still at work in the fields.

Her baking finished, the mother prepared tea, and called the child. As there was no response, she went to look for her, and, not seeing her anywhere, became alarmed and went in search of her husband.

Together they searched the country road, the fields and the hillside, calling the little one's name and waiting in vain for an answer.

Crofters and gamekeepers and all their neighbors soon joined in the search in the gathering dusk, and under the supposition that the baby had been kidnaped by gypsies or traveling tinkers, of whom several had been seen in the neighborhood earlier in the week, search parties were formed to scour the countryside.

No trace of any strangers was found, however, and not the faintest clew to the little one's fate. In despair the father decided a party to search the river, though it was felt to be impossible that the child could have strayed so far.

Meanwhile, a gamekeepers' party was hunting through the dense broom which covered a neighboring hill, and while this investigation was in progress one of the gamekeepers, recalling stories of lambs being carried away by eagles, made his way toward the rocky crags near the crest of the hill.

In a crevice in the rocks he saw a tiny shoe, and in a deeper cleft a little higher up he found the body of the missing child.

The sight was a pitiful one. Both eyes were missing, and the child's face was covered with blood. From her right cheek a piece of flesh had been torn away, and on her arms, hands and neck were other wounds that told their own terrible story.

On the clothing were found, outlined in the little one's blood, the cruel marks of an eagle's claws, and clutched in the baby's tiny hand was a bunch of eagle's feathers.

The gamekeeper shouted for his fellow searchers when he discovered the child's body. Swiftly they gathered round the cleft in the rocks. There they stood silent with horror and sorrow when they saw the child. Some of them, rough, strong, sturdy men, wept.

The little one's mother was brought to the spot by the commotion, and before the news could be broken to her had caught sight of her baby's mangled body.

With a heart-broken cry she clasped the little one in her arms. She fainted, and had to be carried unconscious down the hillside to her cottage.

The news soon spread through all the countryside, and the gamekeepers took their guns and spread themselves out to search for the eagle. This has been unsuccessful so far,

Two years ago an eagle attacked and killed a child in Sutherlandshire, and fed on its body until the keepers drove it off. Lambs are sometimes missed and their skelotons afterward found on the hilltops.

It is 50 years, however, since such a tragedy as that here related occurred.

The Original of Bluebeard.

The original Bluebeards of nursery lore was Giles, marquis de Laval and marshal of France. He was a famous general, and greatly distinguished himself under Charles VI. and Charles VII., but his bravery was completely eclipsed by his cruelty and wickedness. Wherever he went he was followed by his band of actors, sorcerers, packs of hounds and crowds of soldiers. It was said that he would gain the love of young boys and girls and then kill them in order to obtain their blood for incantations and charms. The duke of Brittany, against whom he had committed a crime of state, condemned him to be burnt alive at Nantes, but later he took pity on him and remitted the sentence to that he was strangled before he was burned.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Aug. 7.—God's Guiding Hand in Our Lives."—I Chron. xxix, 10-12; Luke xii, 1-7.

Some people find it difficult to realize that God has any particular influence or interest in their lives. They never see any visions, have no special manifestations made to them, but matters seem to move in a very matter of fact and natural manner. They have had to rely on their own exertions for what they have had and usually have had to work hard.

Many others have been taught to say thanks to God for the good things received and to believe that in some way not understood God does have some sort of influence in the matter, so much so that to omit to say thanks would be to run the risk of losing the good things. It is all very mechanical, but necessary, in their opinion. David had a different view and so had Christ.

David was interested to have a temple built worthy of his God. He was a busy man, almost continually engaged in war to prevent his people against invading enemies. But in all his campaigning he had uppermost in his mind the thought that Jehovah was the king and he was only a servant to execute the will of God in the rulership of his people. This was far more and far higher than the rulership of God in nature by mechanical forces. It was the presence of God in human society ruling by moral power and in the individual soul leading into all truth and right dealing.

He had no consciousness that God's activities in any way interfered with or made less necessary his own exertion. God prompted him to act and accomplished His purposes through the doings of men. God will have a temple. So David is moved to prepare material for it. He gets so deeply interested in the project that he carefully reserves the part of the spoils of war which by custom belongs to the tribal deity and devotes them to God. He is so filled with the matter that of his own personal share he gives unstintedly. Then he interests the princes and nobles and all the common people. He prepares "with all his might," he declares. Yet, after he has done all he possibly could, he says, as naturally as can be imagined, "But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort?"

He realizes, and his words voice the deep heart consciousness, that all power of getting and doing comes directly from God. The impulse of the heart stirring the will to generous gifts is also from the Lord, the result of contact of His Spirit with the human spirit.

The power of man to shape matter into forms he desires to produce is not more real than the influence of God on the hearts of men fashioning them according to His purposes. God guides men who will be guided by Him.

"All things come of Thee and of Thine own have we given Thee."

This lesson we need to learn at the present time. We are to work with all our might. But the plans and materials and impulse and strength must come from God.

"Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

"With the Lord."

The charm of heaven will be the Lord's presence. "Where I am, ye shall be also." We shall see His face and be forever with Him. What would not men give if some old manuscripts might turn up with new stories of His wondrous life, new parables as charming as those of the good shepherd and the prodigal son, new beatitudes, new discourses like that on the vine? God might have permitted this. But what would it be in comparison with all that lies before! The past has lost much, but the future holds infinitely more. We shall see new people enacted before our eyes, behold Christ as a real visible person in the glory of divine manhood, hear Him speak to us as His friends and shall know what He meant when He promised to give Himself and send forth to serve His servants.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

The Divine Carpenter.

We are all placed in this world to do a work and to be what only the Lord did. If we would live a religious life, we are to follow the Lord in the regeneration. Thus we are to be spiritual carpenters as He was the Divine Carpenter. We are, with the Lord's help—help that He will so gladly give us—to build up a life, to form a character, in which He can dwell with us. And in the building of this life, this truly religious life, we must always carry with us the Divine Carpenter's rule, the rule that is brought down to us in the two great commandments and to our very finger ends in the Ten Commandments.—Rev. William H. Mayhew in Helper.

The Immortal Life.

The immortal life may be said to surround us perpetually. Some beams of its glory shine upon us in whatever is lovely, heroic and virtuously happy in ourselves or in others. Heaven is by truth revealed to us in every pure affection of the human heart and in every wise and beneficent action that uplifts the soul in adoration and gratitude. The pure mind carries heaven within itself, and manifests that heaven to all around.—Channing.

At Our Right Hand.

The secret of a quiet heart is to keep ever near God. Stayed on Him, we shall not be shaken, and our "hearts shall be fixed, trusting in the Lord." We get above the fogs when we soar to God, and circumstances in their wildest whirl will not suck us into the vortex if we are holding by Him and knowing that He is at our right hand. —Alexander McLaren.

PLAINFIELD MAN AS A GLOBE TROTTER

Walter B. Rittenhouse Seeing the World Encounters Interesting Experiences.

IN SOUTH AMERICA

DESCRIBES CUSTOMS AND MANNERS OF THE PERUVIANS.

Sailed From Vancouver in January and Reached Callao in April —Has Crossed the Andes.

Partly in quest of health and also with a view to seeing as much of the world as possible, Walter B. Rittenhouse, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Rittenhouse, of Sandford avenue, has been having great experiences in his travels. A year ago last October he returned from a trip around the world, touching nearly all of the important ports. Upon his return he went to Duluth, where he remained for a year. He then decided to take another long trip. He sailed from Vancouver in January and was from that time until April in reaching Callao, Peru.

Letters written by Mr. Rittenhouse in May and June have been received by his parents and they give interesting accounts of his travels. The first came from Callao, and he describes the manners and customs of the Peruvians in an interesting way. Afterward with a young Englishman who was a sailor on the ship which carried him from Vancouver, he started over the Andes and Cordillera mountains in order to cross the continent. In a second letter dated May 16 he states that they left Callao and after the hardest kind of work succeeded in reaching the Pichis river. The trip was a perilous one and the two young men suffered great hardship but soon recuperated on reaching this spot. The letter states that Indians are building a raft for them on which they are to place their tent and float down the river a distance of six or eight hundred miles to a place called Iquitos. From Iquitos to the Atlantic the space intervening is equal to that between New York and London, thus showing the great distance the Plainfielder is covering. On the trip over they practically lived on bananas, oranges and pineapples which were to be had everywhere. He speaks of heat and sunshine as being plentiful but at intervals when they were in the mountains the weather was quite cool. Mr. Rittenhouse has his camera with him and he has already secured many excellent photographs to show when he arrives in Plainfield. When this will be he was unable to state in his letter as the journey before him required at least three months before he would reach salt water.

PASTOR'S WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Congregation of Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church Celebrate the Event.

Rev. Henry C. Ashley, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, and his wife were visited by members of the congregation at the parsonage on West Fifth street last Thursday on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The guests, nearly forty in number, were received at the home by Rev. and Mrs. Ashley, Miss Ida Ashley, Mrs. E. B. Maynard and Mrs. Henrietta Grobes. The couple received many tokens of remembrance from their friends in this city, Rockaway, Morristown, Camden and Philadelphia. Well wishers in the congregation presented a handsome oak sideboard. During the evening, Miss Edith Young, of Camden, Miss Alice Maynard and Miss Bessie Mitchell rendered piano selections and Howard Grobes gave some cornet solos. Refreshments were served to the company later in the evening.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL PRIZES.

Crosses as Rewards of Merit at St. Stephen's.

As an incentive to better scholarship in Sunday-school, a system of reward for application in Sunday-school work has been instituted at St. Stephen's church, Netherwood. Provision has been made by the rector for the reward of faithful pupils by the presentation of small silver and gold crosses. Close application to Bible study during the term of six months will entitle a pupil to a silver cross and special instruction in a higher grade, preparatory to teaching.

Satisfactory standing in this work again will bring reward by the presentation of a gold cross. A recipient of a gold cross will qualify as teacher in the school. This system was introduced last Sunday at the church and is a result of the grading of the Sunday-school. The pupils of all grades display considerable interest in the system.

HOURLY SCHEDULE OF P. S. G. DELAYED

Improved Through Express Service Prevented by Lack of Crews to Run the Cars.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM

MANY OF THE MOTORMEN AND CONDUCTORS RESIDE HERE.

How the Local Service Crews In Various Sections Block the Through Expresses—Suggested Arrangements.

It has been generally reported that the Public Service Corporation would next week begin the operation of through cars between Jersey City and Trenton every hour. The improved service is not likely to be introduced, however, until the company secures a sufficient number of men to operate the cars. This, at present, is a serious problem confronting the concern. The present force of conductors and motormen is just large enough to run the number of cars now in use and does not provide for any extra help in case a man is ill or meets with an accident. As a matter of fact, the extra men have been doing regular duty.

One motorman from this city, taken on a few weeks ago, was number twenty-one in line for a steady run. Now he is number six and he has been constantly employed since taken on, not being obliged to lose scarcely any time.

Since the introduction of the through service to Trenton the company has had more or less trouble in getting either motormen or conductors who are willing to give up other runs for this one. The reason for this is that it requires that they change their residences, compelling them to live either in Jersey City or Trenton. Men with families do not like this and then the run is considered a long one for a single crew. It is said that some men have given up their jobs rather than go on the through service.

The company realizing the difficulty in getting men for these long runs, attempted an arrangement whereby the motormen and conductors could be at their own homes when off duty. This worked with partial success, although not entirely satisfactory. Now another arrangement is being considered. It is proposed to have the men take the cars over their division, changing crews at the end of each. This would permit the men to retain their present residence and it is believed would meet with the approval of the employes.

One motorman in speaking of the affair today said that at present nearly all of the men on the through service are from this city, and while they work well together they do not get along with those running other cars along the same lines. The motormen on the local service often forget to change the signal lights and will purposely hold up the through cars in other ways, it is said. This is another thing that has made it difficult to get crews for the through service.

As soon as the requisite number of men can be secured, the Public Service Corporation will start its hourly service, but in the meantime the travelling public will have to get along the best it can with the present number of cars.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH HONORED

PLAINFIELDER MADE EXECUTOR OF THE S. J. TILDEN ESTATE.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, president of the New York Consolidated Petroleum and Stock Exchange, was July 27 appointed an executor of the estate of the late Samual J. Tilden, who was defeated for President of the United States by a Congressional commission, by the surrogate of New York. The appointment was made on the application of John Bigelow and George Smith, the surviving executors.

Mr. Randolph has for years been connected with affairs of the Tilden estate and is especially well qualified to serve as an executor. Shortly after the death of Andrew H. Green, Mr. Randolph was named as one of the executors of his estate. His business training as president of the Atlantic Trust Company gave him a peculiar executive ability that has made his services very valuable in the settlement of estates.

Capt. Martin on Team.

Capt. W. H. Martin, of Co. K, has been chosen as one of the members of the State rifle team to shoot for the National trophy at Fort Riley, Kansas. The New Jersey team will leave on Thursday, August 18, arriving at Fort Riley in time for practice before the shoot.

Former Congressman Not Adverse to Becoming Party's Nominee for Governorship.

CAMPAIGN'S ISSUES

HE REPUDIATED BRYAN AND BOLTED THE PARTY TICKET.

Says Equal Taxation and Republican Extravagance Should be Democratic Slogans in the State.

Former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, father-in-law of former State Senator Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, is "in the hands of his friends" so far as his boom for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination is concerned.

"I cannot tell how the party shall consider me in relation to the Gubernatorial candidacy," said Mr. Clark. "While I can frankly say I am not a candidate for the nomination, I cannot say I would not accept if it should be tendered to me. But there may be many things who may be deemed to be stronger and more capable of making a successful fight than I. There are many essential things to be considered and we must trust to the wisdom of the party in the proper solution of the problems that confront it when the time comes to select the candidate.

"For instance, it would not do to name a man regardless of his character, simply because he may be willing to spend a large amount of money. On the other hand, money, added to character, might not be considered a serious handicap. But above and beyond all, the party must name a man in whom the people can have trust and faith that he will serve them honestly and capably. The campaign in New Jersey will be a very trying one; more so than usual in State, and even in national elections. The national issues and candidates will, of course, wield a great influence upon the election, but the State issues and candidates will also bear their full share of the battle."

Mr. Clark confessed inability to discuss, in a personal sense, other men whose names may have been suggested as Gubernatorial possibilities. Like former Senator Smith, he said that he does not know Mr. Black. He was even unfamiliar with the reputation of the Hudson man, except in a general way. His knowledge of Mr. Black has been entirely of the hearsay order, but it has impressed him into the belief that Mr. Black is a man of high character, learned in the law and a thoroughly good Democrat.

The dominant issues of the State fight, Mr. Clark believes, will be equal taxation and the extravagance of the Republican party in its administration of State affairs. In discussing these questions he gave the first place to the taxation issue, but was certain that the people had cause to rebuke the party in power for its too lavish use of the public money. There has been a tremendous increase in the appropriations in recent years, much of which, in his judgment, has been unnecessary and quite out of consonance with the principles of a government based on reasonable frugality in the handling of the public funds.

He does not believe that the people countenance wasteful outlays of the State's funds merely because it receives a very large annual income most of which is received through the taxing of corporations. The time to acquire wealth, according to Mr. Clark's doctrine, is when the opportunity presents itself. New Jersey has that opportunity present now, he believes, and it is wrong to waste it by reckless use of the funds simply because they are available.

If Mr. Clark becomes the candidate of his party he will go before the people of the State under a platform pronouncing against the attitude in a period when the party was dominated by the silver coinage idea. He has always been a gold standard advocate, and when the silver failure obtained the mastery over the sound money doctrine within the Democratic party, Mr. Clark not only refused to subscribe to the new conditions, but he repudiated the silver platform and the candidate who stood upon it.

St. Stephen's Picnic.

The regular annual outing of the Sunday-school of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, was held Saturday afternoon at the grounds of the Netherwood Hotel. Some seventy-five children were present and the afternoon was spent in playing all sorts of outdoor games. Late in the afternoon refreshments were served to the children by a committee of the women of the parish. The committee in charge of the affair included Rev. Arthur S. Peck, rector of the church, Mrs. Hugh Knox, Mrs. E. Hill and Mrs. Walter F. Platt.

DEMOCRATS PLAN EXCURSION

PROMINENT MEN INVITED TO SPEND AUG. 25 WITH COUNTY DEMOCRATS.

All things are now in readiness for the annual Democratic outing and excursion to Point View Grove on Long Island Sound on Thursday, August 25. A number of Plainfield Democrats will go on the excursion.

It has been decided to charter the steamer Oyonus, one of the Iron Steamboat Company's fleet. It has been arranged to steam around Staten Island and then up the Long Island Sound to Point View Grove, where the excursionists expect to arrive at 2 o'clock.

A fine shore dinner will be served on landing, and a photograph taken of the excursionists by an Elizabeth artist.

The band on the boat has been enlarged this year to twenty-five pieces because of the size of the steamer. Last year there were 600 on board. This year, says Secretary Zier, the demand for tickets is coming from all over the State, and there will be a very large attendance.

An attempt is being made to arrange a series of games between the two parties. It is planned to have a tug-of-war, baseball game, fat man's race, etc. The prizes will be gold medals.

Invitations have been sent to many prominent Democrats, including Judge Alton B. Parker, Henry G. Davis, Thomas Taggart, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, Mayor George B. McClellan, of New York city, and former Congressman DeWitt Clinton Flanagan.

SHOCK IMPAIRED HEARING

MISS NORETTA CLAWSON INJURED AS RESULT OF LIGHTNING'S PRANKS.

As a result of the severe electrical storm that visited this city on Thursday afternoon, Miss Noretta Clawson, employed at the Rogers' Corporation plant on Madison avenue, as a bookkeeper, is likely to suffer impaired hearing as well as other injuries. She was in the building when a bolt struck the chimney. It will be remembered that the accident stopped the machinery and brought all work to a standstill.

Miss Clawson suffered a severe shock and for sometime afterward she was unable to hear the least sound. Her condition was such that she had to be taken to her home in Dunellen, where she is now under the care of a physician. Her entire right side has since become affected, similar to paralysis and it will probably be some time before she will recover.

Not a Party "Organ."

The Plainfield Press comes out and officially declares that it is neither for Parker nor for Roosevelt. But it adds: "Unless something unforeseen occurs we do believe that Jersey will cast its vote for Mr Roosevelt." Accepting the stand of The Press as absolutely non-partisan, the Democrats cannot assert that in stating its belief the wish was father to the thought.—Newark Evening News.

Released on His Own Recognizances.

By the intervention of his fellow-employes at the Lake Pigment factory, John Burgess, colored, who was being held in $100 bonds to answer statutory charges made against him by his wife, on Saturday, in Justice Hand's court, was released late Saturday afternoon. Judge Hand released him on his recognizances.

Wheel Smashed, Escapes Injury.

Losing control of her bicycle on North avenue, near Park, Saturday evening, Miss Emma Swenson, of Hillside avenue, plunged headlong into a carriage driven by Charles Barry. She was thrown against the vehicle but luckily escaped with barely a scratch. Her wheel was demolished. No case is disposed of.

SPECIAL PRIZE FOR CO. K

FRENCH CUP TO BE AWARDED WHEN LOCAL BOYS LEADS IN MARKSMENSHIP.

The qualifications necessary to win the silver trophy offered by Elston H. French have been misunderstood by some of the members of Co. K. It was thought that when the company led the regiment in marksmanship it would receive the trophy, but the conditions prescribe that the company shall lead the State. This it has failed to do since the offer was made, although the feat was accomplished the second year in camp. Last year the company was third or fourth in marksmanship.

The members will make a determined effort this year to lead the State militia and thereby win the trophy. Heretofore, the company has made an excellent showing on the State rifle range, special merit being accorded members for fine work in shooting.

CHILDREN'S HOME WANTS.

Fruit, Vegetables and Clothing Are Desired by the Managers.

For the information of the friends and supporters of the Children's Home, it is stated that the children are temporarily living in the old Nurses' Home on Muhlenberg place, while extensive alterations and repairs are being made at the Home on Jackson avenue.

These in charge of the Home wish the public to know that donations of fruit, vegetables, clothing and other things that can be used, will always be gratefully received. When possession of the remodelled Home is taken, the needs will be much greater than ever and it is earnestly hoped that the institution will receive adequate support.

FORMER RESIDENT DEAD.

Mrs. S. H. Moore Passes Away in Chicopee, Mass., After Long Illness.

Word has been received in this city of the death at Chicopee, Mass., of Mrs. Stephen H. Moore, who formerly resided on Liberty street, where Mr. Moore conducted a bakery. It occurred last Friday after a long illness and the interment was made Monday. Mrs. Moore was a member of Hope chapel and was very well known throughout the West End.

She leaves four sons, one of whom, William, is in a serious condition at the present time from a Fourth of July accident. The premature discharge of a cannon cracker injured his eyes and filled his face with powder. He is still under the care of a physician who is trying to save the sight of the optics.

Not a Hit in Nine Innings.

"Warry" pitched a great game for the Elizabeth Stars against the Cuban Giants at Elizabethport. In the entire contest only twenty-nine men faced him and only two reached first base. Not a Cuban reached second base and not a single hit was made off "Warry." Only two balls were batted out of the diamond, both flies, one caught by McGeay and the other by Poole. The Stars made two runs and also hits and one error. The Cubans made no runs, no hits and two errors. The contest was witnessed by the biggest crowd of the season, many from this city being present.

Police Looking for Wearren.

The police are on the lookout today for Patrick Wearren who broke faith with them. He was arrested at 4 o'clock Sunday morning for drunkenness and in response to his sister's pleadings and the boasted condition of his cell at night, he was let out on promising to be in court the next day. He failed to show up and as no word came from him he will be arrested on sight and allowed no concessions until he appears.

BANDITS LOOT TRAIN

St. Louis Excursionists Robbed Outside Chicago.

MASKED ROBBERS IN PULLMAN CARS

Illinois Central Has Offered a Reward of $5,000 For Outlaws, Who Held Up Passengers In Their Night Robes.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Four highwaymen, all heavily armed, two of them wearing masks, robbed the passengers on the Illinois Central's Chicago and St. Louis express train known as the Diamond special, on the outskirts of Chicago as it neared Matteson, Ill.

The robbers secured all the money and valuables carried by the thirty passengers in the two Pullman sleeping cars, stopped the train and escaped in the darkness. The forward sleeper was entered first. The occupants were aroused and, with nothing on but their night clothes, were marched back to the Pullman car behind.

Two of the passengers who were slow in responding to the commands of the robbers were hit on the head with a hatchet, and one was seriously injured.

One of the bandits fired into a berth whose occupant was slower than the rest. He came scrambling out in a hurry, and the rest responded more readily to the orders after that.

When the passengers in the two cars had been lined up in the rear Pullman two of the robbers stood guard, one at each end of the car, with heavy revolvers. The third, who is supposed to have been the leader, ordered the passengers who had been compelled to bring along their clothes from the first car to throw the garments on the floor. The passengers in the rear car were then commanded to return to their berths and deposit their clothes in the same heap.

Then the leader, with the utmost coolness, began to search the clothing for valuables. When he had finished this search he made a close examination of the passengers for any money they might have secreted.

When the search was completed all the booty was placed in a flour sack, and the three robbers joined their companion, who had been left in the vestibule of the train. Pulling the bell rope, the signal to the engineer to stop was given, and when the speed of the train had slackened sufficiently the robbers, after having locked the doors of the car, jumped off and fled in the darkness.

So systematic was the work of the bandits, and with so little confusion was it accomplished, that the train crew was unaware of what was going on. It was not until the engineer, in response to the signal, brought his train to a stop and seeing nothing of the remainder of the crew walked back to the rear of the train to ascertain what was the matter that he learned of the robbery.

No attempt was made to rob the mail or express cars. The robbers secured more than $1,000 in money and valuables.

G. H. Groce, superintendent of telegraphs for the Illinois Central, who was one of the men robbed, left the train at Kankskee and notified the Illinois Central railroad detectives in Chicago. The latter wired the Central police, and detectives were sent out on a train to begin search for the robbers.

The officials of the Illinois Central railroad have decided to increase the first reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the bandits who held up the Diamond special to $4,000, reward of $1,000 being placed on the head of each of the robbers.

Mrs. Nelson A. Miles Dead.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 3.—The wife of Gen. Nelson A. Miles is dead of heart disease here, where she was visiting her son Sherman. President Roosevelt has sent to Lieutenant General Miles a telegram expressive of the sympathy of himself and Mrs. Roosevelt with the general's bereavement. Mrs. Miles will be buried in a beautiful plot of ground resting on the crest of a long sloping hill which rises from the Potomac and overlooks the city of Washington, in the national cemetery at Arlington.

One Thousand Defendants.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Aug. 3.—The Cudahy Packing company has applied for an injunction in the federal courts to restrain 1,000 striking butchers in Sioux City from interfering with the work of the company and from threatening employees. One thousand strikers are made defendants. The company charges the strikers with resorting to coercion and violence.

Say Strikers Ask For Work.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 3.—Packers say that many strikers have applied for their old positions, but that none of these are employed, as the companies had all the men they could use. All pickets have been withdrawn. The strikers continue to say they are satisfied with the situation.

Two Drowned at Fire Island.

HELLO WON THE MOHAWK.

Saratoga Track Sees Delhi Make Mile in 1:37 3-5.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Newton Bennington's three-year-old Hello won the Mohawk, the stake feature of the racing at Saratoga, in impressive fashion. Passing under the wire Hello was two and a half lengths ahead of Champiain. Frank Farrell's Gensalvo-Lillian Hello colt Champlain, made the running until the stretch was reached. At this point Hello came up under a hard ride by O'Neill and was never headed. In the last few jumps Bobsdill, ridden by Sperling, an apprentice, advanced from the rear and finished in third position. The opinion prevailed that Mrs. Drake's colt would have gained a better position with a better boy up.

The best race of the day was the last, in which Mr. Keene's great colt Delhi covered the mile in 1:37 3-5, equaling a track record and coming within one-fifth of a second of Dick Welles' world's record. Gray Friar, in at bottom weight, closed in the stretch and was only half a length behind at the finish. Delhi is a candidate for the Great Republic, the richest stake of the meeting.

Ingomar's Protest Did Not Go.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Aug. 3.—The protest of the yacht Ingomar, owned by Morton F. Plant of New York, against the White Heather in the race for the Commodore's cup, the American boat claiming that the British yacht fouled with her, has been decided in favor of the White Heather, which won the race on time allowance, though the Ingomar crossed the finish line first.

Penn Defeated Kramer.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 3.—The first race of the cycling events of the grand circuit meet and national championships of the National Cycling Association, consisting of a one mile open, was run off this afternoon on the Southern grounds. The feature was the defeat of Frank L. Kramer of East Orange, N. J., by W. S. Penn of Waterbury, Conn., in the one-third mile grand circuit championship.

Hussah at Harlem.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The feature event at Harlem was a handicap at a mile and an eighth. It was won by Hussah by three lengths. Birch Broom beat Bragg four lengths for second place. Port Royal, the only other starter, ran out at the far turn and again teeming into the stretch, losing whatever chance he may have had. Weather clear and warm; track fast.

Racing at Dover.

DOVER, N. H., Aug. 3.—The midsummer light harness meeting opened at the Granite State park with a large attendance. Three favorites won in straight heats, although Kitty Gilmer was hard pressed by Zambia in each heat of the 2:20 trot. There were but two horses in the 2:25 pacing event, Terrell Wilkes finishing third. The 2:15 pacing race went to Jim Kyle.

Hilee Won at Fair Grounds.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 3.—Hilee, in great form just now, won the feature of the fair grounds card yesterday in the fastest time for the track this year, going six furlongs in 1:13¾. Folios Borgeres was only a head behind the winner. Woodlands, a two-year-old from Schreiber's stable, ran six furlongs in fourteen flat, beating Braden a nose at the wire.

Girl Starved to Death.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 3.—Mystery surrounds the death of Miss Bodies, aged twenty years, who came here from New York city two months ago. She is thought to have starved to death. The girl boarded alone. When a gentleman who knew her went to her room in the boarding house at 3315 Washington avenue he found her dying. He summoned the landlady, but the girl died within a few minutes.

Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCE HERE IN OCTOBER

Junior Members of This State to Consider Various Phases of Association's Work.

300 DELEGATES COMING

KENNETH ROBBIE IN CHARGE OF THE ARRANGEMENTS.

Banquet to be Held Oct. 28—Morning Afternoon and Evening Sessions—Programme Later.

Boy delegates from every Y. M. C. A. organization in the State will visit Plainfield the latter part of October to attend the annual conference convention to be held in this city. According to the apportionment of delegates which is scaled according to the membership of the boys' department, nearly 300 delegates are expected to be present, and aside from these, it is expected that delegations of members will be sent from the nearest associations. Last year's conference was held in Newark, and it has been five years since Plainfield has entertained association delegates.

At this early date, no theme has been decided upon for conference discussion, but it is expected that this subject will be formally announced before many weeks. While the conference will be devoted to all phases of association work, special papers will be made on the conference subject and there will be addresses and discussions. Morning and afternoon sessions will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building and the committee in charge is seeking to secure one of the larger churches of the city for the evening sessions. On the evening of October 28, a banquet will be served to the delegates at the Y. M. C. A. building. The visiting delegates will be accommodated with lodgings at the homes of the local members of the boys' department.

Entire arrangements for the affair are in charge of Boys' Secretary Kenneth Robbie, of the local association, and the committee on boys' work composed of Orra S. Rogers, chairman; Dr. Norman H. Probasco, Dr. Charles Davis, Phillip Suffern and Louise H. Bigiow, Jr. This committee will be assisted in the work of reception by the boys' cabinet. Howard Freeman is president of the cabinet, Walter Caldwell, vice president, and Marshall Ward. Serving on the committee are Weston Gavett, Malcolm VanArsdale, William Taylor and Harold Robbins.

Further details of the conference are yet to be arranged by Mr. Robbie and the committees but all arrangements will doubtless be completed by the latter part of next month.

CONDITION OF A. O. U. W.

STATEMENT MADE BY GRAND RECORDER TO LOCAL LODGES OF THE ORDER.

Grand Recorder J. H. Lippincott, of the New Jersey A. O. U. W., has communicated with Central and Columbia Lodges, of this city, notifying them that in accordance with statements of May 28 last, he has received instructions from the Supreme Lodge to deduct from future remittances, on account of the mortuary fund, the full amount of the claims for deficiencies on the March deaths, amounting to $8,096. This makes the total deduction for January, February and March of this year, $16,654.

The claim for April will be $1,528 and for May, $1,426, making a total for five months of $13,908.

The last announcement informs the *various lodges that there will be bene-*ficiary assessment for next month, but there will be an assessment of fifty cents on each member to the State for the general fund of the Grand Lodge, payable on or before August 26 next.

This report accompanies the regular statement: Members on good standing June 1, 1904, entire order, 109,729; amount of beneficiary fund paid out in May, $269,410 73; grand total beneficiary fund disbursed by the order from organization to June 1, 1904, $136,965,397.01; new members admitted in May, 1,094.

Not Afraid of Herman.

George Boss brought action against Jacob Herman in Justice Mosher's court Saturday on grounds of fear and to secure sureties from his warlike neighbor to keep the peace. E. S. Swackhamer, Esq., was attorney for Herman and in the cross examination caused the plaintiff to admit that he wasn't afraid of anyone. This caused Justice Mosher to dismiss the complaint. W. G. DeMass, Esq., represented Boss.

A. J. Loader, of Deer street, started for Kearsage, N. H., on Monday, where he will enjoy a much-needed vacation for a week or ten days.

JOSEPH W. YATES GONE TO HIS REST

Prominent Citizen of Plainfield Died at Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., Sunday.

DEATH UNEXPECTED

ROSE TO POSITION OF INFLUENCE AND WEALTH THROUGH HARD WORK.

Active As a Democrat—For Years a Member of Chamber of Commerce—Survived by Wife and Four Children.

Joseph Washburn Yates, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known citizens, died Sunday night at Lake Minnewaska, N. Y., where he had been spending the summer according to his yearly custom. He left here a month ago and at that time was enjoying excellent health. Soon after his arrival he contracted a cold which developed complications and death soon followed. His wife and daughter, Miss Margaret Yates, were with him at the last.

By the death of Mr. Yates, New Jersey has lost one of her prominent and honored citizens and Plainfield one of its oldest and most esteemed residents and in addition to the bereaved members of his family, many who have looked upon him as their kind, sympathetic and helpful friend, will deeply mourn his loss.

Mr. Yates was born in Bristol, Maine, in 1836. He received such an education as could be obtained in the public and private schools in that vicinity. When he reached the age of ten years he lost his mother, and four years later his father. Soon thereafter he commenced to earn his own livelihood by following the sea, and developing considerable ability in this direction he was early placed in command of a vessel, which position he continued to fill until about 1854. During his life at sea, he improved his spare time by reading and study, thereby adding to his knowledge and education. In 1854 he settled in New York city and formed a partnership with Robert PorterField, a firm which until within a few years carried on an exporting and importing business with the West coast of Africa and engaged freighting business to ports of the world. The founders of the house retired from active business in 1884.

In 1855 Mr. Yates married Susan Gray Jackson, a daughter of Samuel R. Jackson, of Providence, Rhode Island, and in 1865 moved to Plainfield, where he continued to reside for the remainder of his life. He took an active part in public affairs, serving the city as councilman and the State as legislator. He was among the first to organize the city government secured for it much favorable legislation. He was one of the original trustees of the Plainfield Public Library, and continued to act in that capacity up to the time of his death.

For many years he was a trustee in the New York State Colonization Society, and was one of the oldest members of the Chamber of Commerce, with which he became identified in the early part of his business career. In 1876, Governor McClellan appointed him a visitor of the State Agricultural College of New Jersey, and for many years he had been Consul from this country for the Republic of Liberia.

Mr. Yates always took an active interest in the politics of his city, State and country and was conservative in the expression of his views and consistent in the adherence to his principles and to what he believed for the best interest of the people. Although urged by his friends several times to accept the nomination for mayor of his city, the congressman from his district and for other offices in the State, he never felt that the time had come when he would be able, if elected, so to fulfill justice to the public and to the duties of the office, to leave dependent upon him in private life. He was to the time of his death a close student, keeping fully abreast of the age and was considered one of the conservative, deep thinking, well read men of the present time, notwithstanding his advanced years, and his loss will be deeply felt.

He leaves a wife, three daughters, Mrs. C. Dudley Holman, of Plainfield, Mass.; Mrs. Harry V. Borden and Miss Margaret G. Yates, of Plainfield, and two sons, Joel T. Yates, of San Francisco, Cal., and Frederick W. Yates, of Plainfield.

Public Library Sub-Station.

Hope chapel has been made a substation of the Public Library, and will be opened between the hours of 3 and 4 every Wednesday afternoon for the distribution and exchange of books. The service is intended for West End residents who find it inconvenient to go to the main building.

—Letter-carrier John Hines is expected to return home the last of the week from Atlantic City.

SEWER EXCAVATIONS INTERFERE WITH TRAFFIC

Many of the Streets in the East End of the City Are Impassable.

DANGER IN CASE OF FIRE

RESIDENTS COMPLAIN ABOUT THE CARELESSNESS OF CONTRACTORS.

Streets Through Which the Sewer Was Recently Laid Have Not Been Open to Traffic Since the Heavy Storm.

Residents of East Seventh street are complaining over the action of the sewer contractor in making the sewer excavations and house connections on that street between Richmond street and Kensington avenue. A property owner on the thoroughfare stated this morning that the present condition of the roadway would practically make progress of the fire engines impossible in the event of an alarm from any of the houses on that street.

Though a thoroughfare ha been left along the right side of the street between Richmond street and Carlton avenue while house connections are being made with the buildings on the left, the fact that above Carlton avenue work on the main trench is still going on and the dirt excavated is being heaped on the right side of the street makes necessary a turn from one side of the street to the other. Though a space of about 100 feet had been left in which vehicles might make a turn here, still another house connection, begun yesterday afternoon, has narrowed the thoroughfare here to about twenty-five feet, and makes a sharp turn necessary. Rapid travel here is impossible, and especially so on account of the poor surface of the roadway, which has been torn up by the contractors and is deeply gullied.

There is also considerable ill feeling toward the sewer contractors who had charge of the trenching of Netherwood. Residents say that practically none of the streets through which the sewer was recently laid have been open to wagon thoroughfare since the series of heavy rains last week. This is especially noticeable in the less travelled streets back of the Netherwood Hotel and in the vicinity of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home. Here the filling in has been so carelessly done that the earth has further sunk since the recent storm and leaves gullies in some places nearly two feet deep. Stones and standing piles of earth have been left in the thoroughfare by the contractor's gang. The property owners feel that the city should see that these streets are properly repaired.

TAX LISTS REVISED.

Both the City and Borough Councils Hold Special Meetings for the Purpose.

Both the city and borough Councils held special meetings last evening, for the purpose of correcting and reviewing the tax lists and duplicates as prepared by the assessors. It sufficed but a short time to do the work and everything was found to be in satisfactory condition. The assessors were also in attendance and aided the Councilmen in the inspection.

Heretofore the meetings for this purpose have been held on the third Tuesday in August, but the new State law requires it to be done on August 9. The lists are now ready for presentation to the Council in a formal way for their acceptance.

Funeral of E. S. Swackhamer.

The funeral of Ruliff S. Swackhamer, eighty-eight years old, the father of Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, was held at his late residence near Whitehouse, yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. S. D. Decker, pastor of the Whitehouse Methodist Episcopal church, officiated. The pallbearers were Grant Davis, Henry Bishop, George W. Buckley, Cornelius Messler, David Lindaberry and Theodore Vleit.

Mr. Leader Had a Good Time.

A. J. Leader, of Deer street, returned home last evening from Kearsage, N. H. where he has been the guest for a week of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Porter, of Brooklyn, former borough residents, at their summer home. Mr. Leader enjoyed his outing thoroughly and he never tires telling of the pure air, beautiful scenery and fine trout fishing to be had at Kearsarge.

FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE

SUCCESSFUL EUCHRE HELD AT TRUELL INN THIS MORNING.

The euchre party given for the benefit of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home at Truell Inn this morning was a social and financial a success. Mrs. Truell granted the use of her parlors for the affair. There were thirteen tables used in the play.

Many more tickets were sold than the gathering represented, and those who had the affair in charge are justly gratified over the success. The committee consisted of Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, chairman, and Mrs. Arthur Murphy. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Truell as the conclusion of the playing.

There were six prizes offered which were awarded the following persons: First, Mrs. L. W. Serrell; second, Miss Ida Cook; third, Miss Shell; fourth, Miss Agnes Smith; fifth, Mrs. Hall; sixth, Mrs. Russell.

The patronesses for the affair were as follows: Mesdames N. Pendleton Rogers, H. M. Bowen, Rowland Cox, Henry Lapsley, Charles E. Brooks, L. W. Serrell, E. C. Perkins, L. V. F. Randolph, Marion S. Ackerman, Arthur Murphy, E. L. Finch, T. J. Mumford, Jules E. Erickson, G. H. Hooley and J. W. Reinhart.

G. O. P. NAME COMMITTEES

BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY THE UNION COUNTY ORGANIZATION LAST NIGHT.

At the meeting of the Republican County Committee at the Dix building, Elizabeth, last evening, the final list of names of the election officers was submitted to the committee, and it is from these that the selection will subsequently made. In the case of the Third ward, Second district, however, there were no names handed in, and unless a recommendation is received by the fifteenth of the month, the county board will re appoint the old members.

The names submitted from the various wards and districts of this city were as follows: First ward—First district, Andrew J. Stiglitz and David Donavan; Second district, Horace Ackerman and G. Storrs. Second ward—First district, J. W. Drayton and J. Hervey Doane; Second district, Edward Willis and William R. Townsend. Third ward—First district, Theodore LaRue and James W. Leonard. No nominations from the Second district. Fourth ward—First district, William T. Newman and Daniel Force; Second district, Edward Mosher and Ferdinand O. Smith; Third district, Garrett Dunham and William A. Craig.

Chairman Hamilton Kean reported a communication of invitation to five delegates and five alternates to attend the State Republican League Convention to be held in the Asbury Park Auditorium on Friday, September 2. The balloting for such delegates resulted in the choice of the required number from Elizabeth and Rahway.

After discussion, the chairman was instructed to see County Clerk Howard and Judge Benjamin Vast, of the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth to arrange for the county clerk's office being open evenings for naturalization purposes.

After further business of a routine nature, the committee adjourned until August 24, when a special meeting will be called. At that time blanks will be distributed for the filing of nominations to be distributed to the members. This special meeting will be in place of the meeting on the first Tuesday in September, which cannot be held on account of that being primary day.

Plainfield was represented at the meeting by three members of the committee, James P. Runkle, of the First ward, and Frank H. Smith, William Newcorn and James Morrison, of the Fourth ward.

A Lively Runaway.

A Grand Union Tea Company horse, left standing on West Fourth street near the Irving School yesterday afternoon, became frightened by children shoving a soap-box wagon beneath its feet, and ran away. The wheels of its attached rig caught in a street railway switch and was upset and badly damaged. The animal was unable to free itself and was caught.

Arrested on a Serious Charge.

John and Edward Burnett, who live just east of Washingtonville, and who are well known in this city, were arrested yesterday by Detective Totten, of Somerville, charged with attempted assault on their niece, Annie Burnett, fifteen years old. The men were arraigned before Justice Sutphen in the afternoon and were held for the Grand Jury.

RESIDENTS ASK FOR RICHMOND ST. SEWER

Continued Damage From the Heavy Rains May Lead to Quick Councilmanic Action.

TROUBLE LAST WEEK

STREET COMMITTEE NOW HAS MATTER UNDER CONSIDERATION.

Thoroughfare Becomes a River Bed and is Badly Torn Up by the Rushing Water After Every Storm.

Through the damage caused by the heavy rain last Friday afternoon, the need of a storm sewer in Richmond street has again been demonstrated and the matter has been taken up by the residents. The street committee of the Common Council has been appealed to and in response the subject has been discussed informally but will shortly be acted upon officially. It is not at all improbable that the preliminary steps leading to an appropriation for the purpose will be taken at an early meeting.

The peculiar conditions which surround Richmond street have been spoken of before in these columns but after each heavy storm matters seem to be worse. The thoroughfare is low in grade and is the natural outlet for water which flows into it from all the intersecting streets between East Front and East Seventh streets. Consequently a small river rushes down it when there is a rain of any length and besides tearing up the macadam, the residential property suffers. Flooded cellars are common and on one occasion last fall E. H. Keenan's new building was badly damaged.

At the present time the street is closely built up and a storm sewer such as proposed is imperative. The plan is to build one from East Front street to Cedar brook at East Seventh street. It can only be placed a very short distance below ground as Cedar brook is almost even with the street level and too much of a fall would bring the outlet below the bed. The piping can be placed on the east side and at Scatter and a sort of square culvert would have to be built. This is what the street committee has in view and what will undoubtedly be done before a great while.

The damage done Richmond street by last week's storm was repaired yesterday. The top dressing of the macadam was completely washed away and had to be replaced. In some instances the old stone was returned but a new lot had to be added to it. The street railway company will bear some of the expense.

Other streets which suffered and which will have to be gone over are North avenue above Richmond street, Grant avenue, Clinton avenue at West Third street, Putnam avenue and Prospect avenue. The street gang has been taken away from Madison avenue, which is undergoing remacadamizing, and with the steam roller are putting on new top dressing and rolling it down. It will require several days more before the thoroughfares named are in their usual condition.

WATERMELON FEAST.

Exempt Firemen Have a Good Time at Their Meeting.

A largely attended meeting of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association was held last night. The second floor of the building was taste fully decorated for the occasion with flags and bunting.

After the usual routine business and election of new members, there was a general discussion on the subject of the new rooms. Some time ago the Board of Trustees decided to enlarge the living rooms of the Association by renting the first floor in the building in addition to the second floor which they now occupy. It was decided last night to reserve the second floor for meetings, while the lower will be devoted to pool tables, shuffle boards and other attractive means of amusement.

At about 9:30 all business was laid aside and an unlimited supply of watermelon was served. A good time was enjoyed by both the old and new members. In the midst of the festivities a borough photographer took a flash-light picture of the group assembled with their faces buried up to their ears in watermelon.

To Be Married September 15.

The date of the wedding of Frank Kemerling, of Chatham street, and Miss Mabel Dean, of East Front street, has been set for September 15.

CO. K'S FINE WORK ON THE STATE RANGE

Excellent Chances to Retain the Trophy for Highest Percentage in Shooting.

CORP. BILYEU'S RECORD

FORTY-FIVE OUT OF FIFTY-THREE MEMBERS QUALIFY WITH GOOD SCORES.

Privates Morrison, Hood and Frazee Eligible for Sharpshooters' Range—Twenty-One Men Yet to Qualify.

Of the fifty-three members of Co. K who visited Sea Girt yesterday to attend the prescribed practice shoot on the rifle range, twenty-seven qualified as marksmen, six as sharp-shooters and twelve as first-class men. Twenty-one still have to shoot and out of this number it is expected that at least ten more will qualify. Should this be the case, the Plainfield company has a strong chance to retain the State marksmanship trophy, awarded to the company making the highest percentage in this shooting. After all have shot, the local soldiery will await with interest the outcome of the contest, believing their especial opponent to be Co. I, of Princeton, perhaps acknowledge the crack company of the State. The fact that Plainfield has a good show to keep the trophy is shown by comparison of the scores of yesterday with those made by Co. M, of Somerville, at the same time. But twelve men of Co. M qualified.

Yesterday proved an ideal day for the shooting at the shore. In the morning work, the wind was puffy and shifting, but came in such gentle breezes that the men shot with confidence and made good their rifles. In the afternoon, the wind blew directly toward the shooters and the conditions were ideal.

The best work of those who qualified for marksmen was the shooting of Corporal Clarence Bilyeu, who qualified with 268 points where only 235 are necessary. This shooting breaks the National Guard record for last year in this contest by two points, 261 being the best score.

An excellent showing was made by the new men of the company, and especially noteworthy among these was the work of Private Morrison, who made a score of 112 points in the marksmanship contest, where but 98 are required for qualification. Privates Bond and Frazee made equally good records in their qualifications. Such shooting makes these men eligible for work on the sharpshooters' range by a margin of two points. Those who made scores of 75 or over in the qualification for marksmen will receive the national marksman's reserve button and will have their names published in the adjutant general's orders.

Lieutenant W. K. Browning, former captain of the company, took part in the shooting yesterday and did excellent work. It was through the interest roused by him as well as through his personal shooting that Co. K carried off the trophy last year.

According to special orders recently announced, those who did not have time to finish their shooting in the State contest, or who have qualified for work on the higher ranges at State expense will have transportation furnished by the State on Tuesday. Such men, who include the twenty-one regular members who did not shoot yesterday, will assemble at the company armory at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, clad in khaki, and will proceed to the range on the 7:36 train from the city. Any members of the company, regular or honorary, who have done all prescribed shooting, can go to the ranges Tuesday as reduced State rates, and those who failed to qualify yesterday can shoot again if they pay their way.

Direct Newark-Backensack Service.

Arrangements have been made between Public Service and the Hudson River Railway Co., for a connection of the lines of the two companies at Arlington, thus providing for a direct service between Newark and Hackensack. Cars will be run every half hour from the cross-over at Broad and Green streets, Newark, from 5:35 o'clock a. m. until 12:05 midnight.

Music and Dancing Prove Popular.

Music and dancing on Saturday afternoons and evenings have proven so popular at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club that they are now features of its social side. The trustees have decided to continue the series weekly until the end of the season.

MANY BIDS RECEIVED FOR HIGH SCHOOL WORK

Twenty-Six Contractors Want to Construct the New Building.

AWARDS AUGUST 16

ESTIMATES SLIGHTLY EXCEED THE APPROPRIATION MADE.

Believed That No Further Change in Plans Will be Necessary—Other Business of the Board of Education.

Bids for the construction of the new city High School were received last evening at the postponed meeting of the Board of Education, but no award will be made for either erection, lighting, heating or ventilating until next Tuesday evening. This postponement has been brought about because of the fact that the Board wished a discussion of certain special conditions subjected by various bidders before its entire body, and Leander N. Lovell, a member of the building committee, and Eugene M. Cave were unable to be present at the meeting.

Of the twenty-six bids submitted, nine were estimates under the general building contract, seven were for the electric lighting, three for plumbing, and seven for heating. All the bids exceeded the appropriation of $100,000 but not to such an extent as to necessitate another alteration in plans or material so as to come within the amount. The amount in excess of the appropriation was so slight that the Board believes that a bid can be awarded Tuesday and a subsequent compromise entered into with the contractor to bring the amount within the appropriation limit. The bidders submitted separate figures for the work on the new building if constructed with the two extensions in the rear, and there were also separate bids for heating under the two systems proposed.

Being, as it was, the most important business of the meeting, the greater part of the time was devoted to the opening and reading of the various bids. Under the head of new plans, however, the question of the comparative durability of red and grey paint for the city school buildings was brought up in connection with the painting of the Irving School. Discussion of the wearing qualities of metallic red paint and the grey lead and oil color resulted in the decision by the Board that the latter was the more durable and the announcement that the Irving School be painted with it, as well as the other schools as occasion should demand. The wearing qualities of the paint on the city High School, after nine years of wear, was instrumental in bringing about this decision.

In connection with the routine business of the meeting, reports from the clerk, treasurer and custodian showed round balances on hand. The clerk was authorized to borrow $5,100 for immediate use in anticipation of the receipts from taxes, and the usual budget of bills were ordered paid.

INTER-STATE GYMNASTIC CONTEST.

Many Athletes Will Compete Here in the Fall.

Much enthusiasm is being shown over the approaching Interstate gymnastic contest under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. Those who are intending to enter the contest are training regularly. Last night there was considerable activity at the local gymnasium. Among those on the floor were O. H. Munger and F. H. Marcley, who were perfecting a few tumbling acts. In all probability Walter McMonagahon and Ray Smith will represent the association in the meet. The affair will take place in the fall, and will include entries from all the associations in the northern part of the State.

"In the athletic meet recently held at Orange, the Plainfield boys easily captured first, and they will make a hard fight for first honors in the coming event.

Civil Service Examination.

On Saturday, Aug. 13, at 9:30 A. m., a civil service examination for a rural free delivery carrier to take the new route to be established between Somerville and New Centre September 15 will be held. This route will be 23½ miles long and will extend through a populous country. There are applications for two other free delivery routes out of Somerville — one to Washingtonville.

WILL SUE FOR $50,000

C. F. HAINES THREATENS THE LEVERING & GARRIGUES' COMPANY.

Charles F. Haines, a Philadelphian, who gives his occupation as a promoter, was put under $200 bonds yesterday by Justice Charles T. Rogers, of New Market, to appear for trial next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. The charge against him is that of destroying property, belonging to the Levering & Garrigues' Company, of Dunellen, by whom the warrant was sworn out.

The arrest was the result of action on Haines' part, when, with a gang of men, he attempted to tear down and remove property belonging to the Levering & Garrigues' Company, which he declares is on land owned by him. The instant he took hostile action the warrant was served on him by Constable Blaine and he was taken before Justice Rogers. His bail was furnished by Howard Bird.

Mr. Hamery, who is president of the Dunellen Heights' Improvement Company, which claims to own the land in question, is expected to arrive in town today and it is probable that the matter may be settled then. Haines says he intends to bring action for $50,000 damages against the Levering & Garrigues' Company. Sheriff Carman, who was sent for yesterday, did not arrive.

BOUNTY FOR A MOUNTED FOX

ALBERT CALLOWAY WANTS $3 FROM SOMERSET COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

Albert Calloway, of North Plainfield township, startled the Somerset County Board of Freeholders at the meeting yesterday, by submitting a bill of $3 bounty for killing a fox two years ago. The animal had been mounted and was in a glass case but Calloway believed he should be paid as though he had delivered the pelt. The board informed him it did not care for mounted specimens and his bill was rejected.

Freeholder Henry Garretson caused a stir by urging the board to build a new stone road from South Bound Brook to New Brunswick. He asked that immediate action be taken but after a discussion the matter was laid over. The county collector was authorized to borrow $30,000 in anticipation of taxes and adjournment was taken to meet on the New Brunswick-Franklin Park road Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

MISS DAVIS AMONG THE VICTIMS.

Niece of Mrs. Tomlinson Among Those Killed on the M. P. R. R.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of East Seventh street, is in receipt of a telegram from her brother, Henry C. Davis, of Pueblo, Colorado, stating that his daughter, Mineola, is among the victims of the railway horror which occurred at Eden, Colorado, on the Missouri Pacific, Sunday evening. It is thought that Miss Davis was one of those carried down into the bed of Fountain river in the chair car which sank in a bed of quick-sand, making the recovery of bodies from it both slow and difficult.

Miss Davis, who was eighteen years old, was returning from a stay at Colorado Springs, following a trip to Kansas, when she met her death. The news will come as a distinct shock to those who met her in this city three years ago while on a visit here.

The Practice Must Stop.

The practice of passing through the gates of the dividing fence at the North Avenue Station, on the part of passengers and outsiders, has come beneath the notice of the New Jersey Central officials and peremptory orders have been issued against it. Hereafter all persons entitled to go have been provided with a key and must lock the gate after them. Failure to do it is declared will result in dismissal. The practice had become so prevalent that it was being made a regular thoroughfare and there were several narrow escapes from injury.

Veteran Expressman Celebrates.

Augustus M. Frazee, Plainfield's pioneer "pony" expressman, is making preparations to observe the eightieth anniversary of his birth which occurs tomorrow. He entered the express business in New York in 1850 and continued it until October, 1892. He then began the "pony" trips between Plainfield and the metropolis and which are still conducted by his son, DeWitt Frazee. The octogenarian still enjoys good health and will spend the day receiving his friends.

ALUMINUM PRESS CO. WILL NOT SHUT DOWN

President P. W. Hall Makes a Strong Statement Regarding Affairs at the "Klondyke."

ORDERED CHANGES

SAYS HE IS MAKING A GENERAL SHAKE-UP IN THE OFFICIAL HELP.

Men Laid Off Temporarily Owing to Summer Depression—Hopes to Have Everything in Good Shape Within a Short Time.

President P. W. Hall, of the Aluminum Press Company, to a Daily Press reporter today branded the story of the concern's bad state of affairs as published by a local paper yesterday as an absurd misstatement of facts.

"There is no truth in it whatsoever," he said, "in fact I might say that it is 'wind' and nothing more. I did lay off a gang of men last week, but August is a dull month in manufacturing circles and I hope to have them back within a short time. I have been reorganizing the official help and Superintendent Leary was asked to resign as were others when I recently began 'housecleaning.' The story said that 'Assistant Superintendent O'Keefe had also resigned.' He was never more than a clerk in this concern and was included in the cleanout."

When asked about the statement that several of the stockholders had become so dissatisfied that they intended bringing suit for the return of money invested, Mr. Hall exclaimed:

"You can say that I own more stock in this company than all the other investors put together multiplied by ten and I am by no means dissatisfied. I would know about it. Last year there was one small stockholder in New York who commenced an action but such a thing happens with any young concern. Regarding Dr. Brakeley's outspoken views, I don't see how he is entitled to say anything as he is only a small outside stockholder who got possession of some floating stock. The shop is not going to shut down, there is not going to be a re-organization and when I adjust a few minor business affairs the plant will be in good condition."

The concern was originally organized by John Brooks, for many years superintendent of the Potter plant, as the Aluminum Plate and Press Company, to manufacture a color press that prints from an aluminum plate instead of the lithograph stone. The building at the corner of North avenue and Berckman street was secured and for several years affairs were precarious. With the death of Mr. Brooks, the company was reorganized as the Aluminum Press Company and it remained at the North avenue place until this summer when it removed to a new building just west of Dunellen.

When spoken to by a Daily Press reporter yesterday, Mr. Leary declared that he left the concern because of the unsettled management and the fact he was greatly in need of a rest, not having had a vacation since he was twelve years old. As to the future he has no definite plans, he said, but he would continue to make Plainfield his home.

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

Local Players Will Contest for East Jersey Trophy.

Local tennis clubs have received invitations from the Elizabeth Town and Country Club to enter teams in the East Jersey Challenge Cup tournament and the other annual open events of that organization. Tournament play will commence Wednesday afternoon, August 31, and will be continued through Labor Day. Three events will be played, a men's singles for the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association Challenge cup, men's doubles and mixed doubles. The winner of the championship singles tournament will be privileged to hold the trophy for one year, but will be called upon to defend it next year. The cup is to be the property of any one winning it three years, not necessarily consecutive. In addition to the challenge cup, first, runner-up and consolation prizes will be awarded. First and runners-up prizes will be awarded in the men's doubles and in the mixed doubles. All matches will be the best three out of five advantage sets, except the mixed doubles, which will be two out of three. Subsequent arrangements are in charge of Miles S. Charlock, of the East Jersey Tennis Association, who is chairman of the tournament committee.

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

Wonderful Arch Over Three Hundred Feet Wide Spanning a Deep Canyon.

Here, across a canyon measuring 325 feet seven inches from wall to wall, nature has thrown a splendid arch of solid sandstone, 60 feet thick in the central part, 40 feet wide, leaving underneath it a clear opening 357 feet in perpendicular height, writes W. W. Dyarz, in "The Colossal Bridges of Utah," in Century. The lateral walls of the arch rise perpendicularly nearly to the top of the bridge, when they flare suddenly outward, giving the effect of an immense coping or cornice overhanging the main structure 15 or 20 feet on each side, and extending with the greatest regularity and symmetry the whole length of the bridge. A large rounded butte at the edge of the canyon wall seems partly to obstruct the approach to the bridge at one end.

Here again the curving walls of the canyon and the impossibility of bringing the whole of the great structure into the narrow field of the camera, except from distant points of view, render the photographs unsatisfactory. But the lightness and grace of the arch is brought out by the partial view which Long obtained by climbing far up the canyon wall and at some risk crawling out on an overhanging shelf. The majestic proportions of this bridge, however, may be partly realized by a few comparisons. Thus its height is more than twice and its span more than three times as great as those of the famous natural bridge of Virginia. Its buttresses are 118 feet farther apart than those of the celebrated masonry arch in the District of Columbia, known as Cabin John Bridge, a few miles from Washington city, which has the greatest span of any masonry bridge on this continent. This bridge would overspan the capitol at Washington and clear the top of the dome by 51 feet. And if the loftiest tree in the Calaveras grove of giant sequoit in California stood in the bottom of the canyon, its topmost bough would lack 32 feet of reaching the under side of the arch.

The bridge is of white or very light sandstone, and, as in the case of the Caroline, filaments of green and orange-tinted lichens run here and there over the mighty buttresses and along the sheltered crevices under the lofty cornice, giving warmth and color to the wonderful picture.

TICKLISH "ANIMAL FOOD."

Old Negro Could Do Justice to Corn and Oats, But Hay Stopped Him.

An ancient colored man who used to work for Dr. G. Frank Lydston called upon his former employer a short time ago, complaining of being "powerful weak." The doctor asked him something about what he generally ate and discovered that the venerable darkey had not been sufficiently nourished with good food, and suspecting that it was because he was not financially able to have better, the doctor gave him some money and told him that he should eat more animal food, relates a Chicago exchange.

Gratefully the old negro departed, promising to return in a week and report his condition.

The end of the specified time brought "Uncle" Cato back to the doctor's office, looking almost pale in the ashiness of his chocolate complexion.

"Well, how do you feel now, Uncle Cato?" the doctor asked.

Uncle Cato, huskily and with evident embarrassment, for he much disliked to reflect upon the professional ability of Dr. Lydston, for whom he had great respect, replied:

"Hit sorter 'pears lak, Marse Lisstun, dat dar animal food whut you done tole me to tek ain' reachin' lak hit orter."

"What have you been eating?" the doctor asked.

"Well, suh, de fac' is I tuk de cawn en oats right smart chance every day, but w'en hit come to de hay, Marse Lisstun, hit tickle me in de face, suh, ya'as suh, hit tickle me in de face, en Ah doan see how dem animals kin eat hit. Ah doan b'lieve, Marse Lisstun, dat Ah's done jestice by dat hay."

When the doctor had recovered sufficiently to hold his face straight the old ebon philosopher said:

"Ya-as suh, hit wuz ticklish, dat is er fac'."

Uncle Cato has been set on the right track. His diet has been changed from "animal food" to good every-day "grub," and the old man is looking less ashy, to say the least.

Wanted a New Phrase.

One of the men who write essays on the financial situation was trying the other day to find a new phrase to describe the dullness which has becalmed the waters of Wall street. He turned to his assistant, who was drowsily dreaming in his chair. The sleepy adviser roused himself sufficiently to suggest that the words "nothin' doin'" would most accurately and succinctly describe the condition of things when a visitor who had dropped in for a chat with the editor awoke, and who had been awakened by the editor's question, objected:

"No," he said, "that is too long; just write 'Nix.' "—N. Y. Times.

Coincidence of Death.

A curious and fatal coincidence occurred lately at Lassa-Patak, in Hungary. A woodcutter named Jassa was crushed to death under a tree, leaving his wife and children destitute. Finding no other work, the widow joined the woodcutters and was killed in exactly the same manner as her husband had been a few days previously. The superstitious population refuse to fell any more trees.—London Express.

EARLY FALL FASHIONS.

New Shapes of Skirts Make Larger Bustles Necessary.

The summer is over as far as the making of new garments is concerned, and all the factories are busily at work making up the things for early fall, and among them, what do you think of bustles? These are made almost necessary by the newest shapes and styles in skirts, which are to be wide and fully flounced so that much more cloth goes into them than heretofore for many seasons.

The shapes of the skirts being cut so tight and narrow made it necessary for the manufacturers to invent this and slimsy silks and other stuffs so that even a woman in very moderate circumstances could get a new dress oftener than she could when the materials were better. Then she did not need to get them so often, for when she bought a good Chency silk it could be transformed at least twice and still remain new. The silks for the fall season are exceedingly handsome and rich, and the American silks particularly are close, firm and fine, the plain ones being apparently devised so as to possess the closeness of taffeta, the richness of gros grain and the fruity bloom of peau de cygne, which all women know is not only beautiful but valuable for all purposes. The firm texture of our American silks makes them much more valuable than those from abroad.

The black silks, from taffeta to peau de cygne, are now being made into tailor suits, where there is much white stitching on straps, bands and all kinds of arrangements. Flounces have rows on rows of very fine white stitching.

I notice in the different places where thousands of dresses are making that ribbon is going to be one of the favorite trimmings on handsome garments. It is particularly well adapted to the flounced dresses, where they are edged by one or more rows of narrow or wide ribbon. Shades are also "in" again for all kinds of home and evening gowns, and they make a rich showing with any costume. One fancy is to have several very narrow ruffles at the foot of the skirt, each ruffle in different shades and as often in black or the actual color of the dress.

I saw a new fall walking suit recently and it was pretty and stylish enough to have special mention. The material was a very fine and fancy gray crayenette, the admixture of threads giving the color. The warp was white and the woof black, which was not dyed at all, as only natural black sheeps' wool was used. This gave a close pepper and salt effect and a rich luster. It was also rain proof, being thus an ideal outdoor suit. The skirt was cut so that it had a slot seam on the front breadth, and the rest of the skirt had box plaits, each turned forward and stitched down about the knees. From there it was loose, forming an agreeable fullness. The waist had three plaits which lay forward on the shoulders, throwing the fullness into a blouse effect. There was a belt all around, but in the front, where the blouse opened, there was a white vest, the point of which came down over the belt. A lace chemisette and stock collar finished the neck.

I saw some new cheviot waists making in one big house, and they were very handsome and stylish. They were checked, plaid and striped, and all were cut on the bias, and had ornaments in the shape of handsome white pearl buttons, with loops and frogs of white corset cord. Collars to match were made separate. These on the high white lined turndown can be adopted, whichever is the most becoming. They all have the regulation sleeve with buttoned cuffs.

Pongee also will survive the advent of cold weather, when waists will be afforded by underwear. Pongee is so very useful, can be washed in ten minutes, and does not have to be starched, only just shaken out.

I present in the illustration a black silk gown, trimmed with narrow ribbon and chenille, and a Monte Carlo coat of cream broadcloth, trimmed with application of renaissance lace and hand embroidery. These coats are much liked and will be seen in great numbers. Each will have something a little different from the others to make it individual.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

The New Woman

Women Swimmers Serve as Official Life Guards

THIS summer Coney Island is notable for something new—the presence of two young ladies in uniform who are hired to serve as life savers during the season. The two girls are Miss May Raymond and Miss Sally Dunne. They wear pretty blue uniforms with the Red Cross badge upon the left sleeve. Miss Raymond has been a swimmer ever since she was a child. Her family lived at Far Rockaway, one of the noted bathing beaches near New York, and there the girl swam, summer after summer, till her friends used to ask her if she wasn't webfooted. Once she swam five miles without stopping. Miss Raymond holds two long distance racing records. These girls are the first women life savers employed at any of the New York beaches, but Miss Dunne has served in that capacity already at Revere Beach, near Boston. While there she saved several lives. She asserts that her one talent is to be useful in the water, where most women are helpless. Miss Raymond says she does hope to save a man from drowning, as she never expects to be able to save one any other way. The young ladies are employed by the proprietors of one of the largest of the Coney Island beach shows. Their entertainment is much patronized by women and children. It is women and children who usually drown, if anybody does, and among these the work of Misses Dunne and Raymond chiefly lies. Women are often foolishly timid about going into the water, and in consequence their children may not go in. The life saving girls take charge of whole flocks of little ones in the frantic, electric sail water, while their mothers sit on the beach and watch the youngsters having fun. The two young ladies are entirely fearless in the water and splendidly strong and skillful. There is something glorious in knowing how to swim, anyhow.

Crime, disease and poverty, these three, must be abolished, and they will be abolished in the race evolves from barbarism into civilization. Do not let us make the mistake of believing we are already civilized. Statistics show that of 1,000 persons only one dies a natural death—that is, from old age. Disease or accident cuts off all the other 999 before their time. This is an appalling waste of human life. Science, intelligence and human will power must combine to stop the waste and stamp out all disease. It is not sentimental; it is criminal. We can do much to keep ourselves in good health by making up our minds we are going to keep well and sticking to it.

When a woman is too stupid to shine in public life or in society she usually tells people that the home and the domestic circle are woman's true sphere, out of which none of the sex should ever step. That is how the stupid woman excuses her stupidity. But she is awfully tiresome, all the same.

Have you noted that while the Republican national convention had four women as alternate delegates, one of whom actually voted in the absence of her principal, not one woman was appointed even as alternate to the Democratic national convention from any of the four full suffrage states? Historic Alamo Girls In Love

Texas Ladies Save It From Destruction

IT is a pity the people of this country are not more minutely acquainted with the history of the noble state of Texas. Even Texans themselves are busy developing the matchless resources of their state and getting rich that historic Alamo was in danger of being destroyed till the women of the state took up its cause.

In the Lone Star State is an organization of patriotic women called the Daughters of the Republic of Texas. It is their aim to preserve throughout all the vast Texan domain objects of historic and natural interest.

Hardly any state in this Union is in all respects so interesting as Texas. With its old Spanish missions and forts and its up to date oil wells and real *estate boomers it is more of a link be*tween today and four centuries ago than almost any other state. The most famous of old Texan landmarks is the Alamo mission at San Antonio. The Daughters of the Republic of Texas have recently bought the old Alamo buildings for $75,000, and now are working as only women can work to raise money to pay the sum. The society is pledged to pay $10,000 on each Feb. 10 till the debt is wiped out. We may hope rich Americans all over the Union will "Remember the Alamo" financially and all the patriotic ladies in their object.

The Alamo mission, called the "Mission San Antonio de Valeso," was founded by Spanish priests from Mexico back in the 1000's. Their design was at once to convert Indians to Christianity and possess the land for Spain against all other nations. For this reason the Alamo buildings were quite as much fort as church. They covered some three acres, were in the form of a rectangle and had around them a wall in some parts four feet thick. The only entrance was through the granary, which was a regular arsenal, and the whole site was protected by earthworks, cannon and a moat. The church militant in those days was more important than the gospel of the Prince of Peace.

During the fight of Texas to be free from Mexico in 1835-36 a body of Texans took refuge in the Alamo and refused to surrender to a force of a dozen times their number. They placed upon the outer walls a notice to Santa Ana to come and take them if he could. Santa Ana did, March 5, 1836, and massacred every one of them. That massacre Texans have not forgotten to this day, and from it arose the war cry, "Remember the Alamo"—a cry heard on all sides at the battle of San Jacinto, April 21, 1836, where the Texans, under General Sam Houston, finally defeated the Mexicans.

Following the achieving of independence came the republic of Texas with its lone star flag. The republic presently honored the United States by offering to become a member of its sisterhood and the offer was gratefully accepted. The man who designed the beautiful lone star flag was General de Zavala, a fighter for Texan independence and the young republic's first vice president. Today his granddaughter, Adina de Zavala, is president of the San Antonio chapter of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas. It is named for her, the De Zavala chapter. Miss de Zavala has been intensely earnest and energetic in her efforts to save the old Alamo. The word "Alamo" means in Spanish "poplar tree." The whole structure will be turned into a museum and hall of fame by the women's organization. It will contain pictures, sculpture and historic objects. It was in the upper stories that the heroic Texans made their last stand. These upper floors will be converted into art galleries. The lower part will contain historic relics and books.

All the women of the United States must sympathize with the Daughters of the Republic of Texas in their effort. Miss de Zavala is calling the attention of Texan clubwomen to the enterprise. At the recent meeting of the state federation of women's clubs she read an eloquent paper appealing to all to aid in the important work undertaken. Already the Daughters have caused to be replaced on the Alamo chapel the famous old bell, "San Antonio," which had been removed. The date of this bell is 1722. The Alamo building, in which the Texans made their last stand, adjoins the Alamo chapel.

Why Some Engagements Are Broken

"THERE goes a long engagement that won't be an engagement long," remarked little Mrs. Flippant.

And while the others cried "For shame!" Mrs. Commonsense looked after the couple with a grieved expression in her eyes. "Quarreling again," she sighed.

"Well, that's always the trouble with long drawn out engagements," observed one woman. "The man and the girl haven't anything new to find out about each other. The result is that to fill in the time they find fault with what they do know, with this very charming result."

"Not with all girls," remarked Mrs. Commonsense. "There are many varieties of the girl in love, and they all differ."

"Merging at length into the sameness of the married woman, I suppose?"

"Yes, if you want to be pessimistic. But marriage, while it removes a few of the bumps of originality, also takes away quite a few of the angles of eccentricity, let me tell you."

"Well, what about the married ones?"

"I may be prejudiced, but I still say they are in the minority as far as crankiness is concerned. After all, it is a great developer of diplomacy and suavity of disposition to have to live right along with one person."

"Ye-es, especially some persons," observed little Mrs. Hardtimes, with a grim expression around the corners of her mouth. "But do go on, my dear, and classify the married woman in the raw, otherwise the girl in love."

"Well, first and foremost there is the sentimental girl. She is more in love with the idea of being in love than anything else. The man who is going to marry her may be merely a captain of industry and not a knight errant, but, for all that, she invests him with all sorts of highfalutin nonsense.

"Then there's the coquette. She uses all her wiles to capture the man of her heart, and once she has him she doesn't take any better care of him than if he were an old shoe.

"Then there is the mercenary girl. But I almost hate to speak of her, because she really isn't in love. She is the cold blooded little fish who leads all men to propose to her regardless of their feelings, and then she passes them in review and picks out the one who can give her the most ermine muffs and silk stockings."

"Let me remind you of the exacting girl."

"Exactly. She wants James chained to her door mat, where she can make use of him at any hour in the twenty-four. She is the queen, and queens do nothing. The poor man is the slave to be made to fetch and carry. If he goes away from her, he must render an account of every minute of his time.

"The nagging girl is a little different. She finds fault with the cut of Teddy's collar, with the way he fixes his hair, with his ties, with his manners. She teases him to tell her things when it is evident he doesn't want to. She urges him and repeats things over like a tiresome child.

"Then there's the society girl. It's no rest for the man to whom she is engaged. She drags him around everywhere. She gives more in the appearance of her escort than she does in his love."

"And the jealous girl?"

"Plain fool, my dear, because if the man who is engaged to her really does things and should make her jealous she shouldn't marry him, and if it is merely a case of ungovernable imagination on her part she deserves to lose him.

"There are two kinds of girls I left out: One is the girl reformer who marries a man, or rather falls in love with him, to make him change all his habits of life and adopt new ones to please her. The other belongs to the stupid type—the girl who can't take an intelligent pleasure in a man's interests, who the minute the conversation leaves the personal is out of her element and has nothing to say."

"For goodness sake, give us now the ideal girl in love!"

"The thoroughly nice, healthy minded girl, who honestly loves the man she is about to marry with a sincere, warm hearted affection which makes her patient and kind to him, trusting him absolutely and while expecting the right treatment giving him the right treatment. She loves all the girl who is his chum and his companion."

FASHIONS FROM PARIS.

Simpler Millinery—Heavy Lines Lace Is Much Used.

The best millinery from Paris is extremely simple, especially when worn with the somewhat elaborate silk frock. White chip and manila with variations in the way of Tuscan straw are the rage. Small hats still show a flat crown, and many have a straight brim tilted back from the face and raised at the sides.

The popularity of voile seems never to wane. They predict a winter of it in Paris, and truly nothing is prettier than a cream white or gray voile made up daintily with plenty of dyed lace or insertion and a touch of chiffon to soften it.

The tendency now is toward coat and skirt, instead of shirt waist costumes. This is especially true of linen, in which material dressy and cool frock and stuff models are almost universally becoming.

A great deal of heavy white linen is being used for automobiling. Long coats of natural linen trimmed with collars and cuffs of red are also smart.

Heavy ehuny and linen laces are used to trim the dressy open mesh linen gowns, as well as more dressy frocks of voile and white cheviot. There seems to be a craze for heavy laces this year.

The picture shows a silk gown trimmed with lace and ruchings. The corselet and choux are of velvet.

Taffeta Is Always Smart and Becoming—Late Motor Styles.

For dressy wear the soft taffeta frock seems very popular, and quite charming evening gowns are also made of it. A model seen recently was of sky blue taffeta, the full skirt gauged around on cords until midway between waist and knee, but otherwise guiltless of decoration. The waist was similarly treated below a chemisette of lace, and it was worn with a beautiful pale blue chiffon and lace evening coat cut very full and loose.

The strictly smart woman will leave the floating ends, the scarfs and other fluffy detail, including hat strings which tie under the chin, to her more picturesque but perhaps less well dressed sister. It is a question whether the picturesque in the present fashions is not carried too far by the woman who has not fine taste and discrimination.

The picture shows a dotted muslin negligee having a V shaped lace edged collar and very wide sleeve ruffles, also edged with the lace.

AT A DANCE.

What a Girl Should Do and What She Should Avoid Doing.

The girl who attends few dances is apt to find the etiquette of the occasion trying. There are certain things no girl should do unless she wants to lay herself open to the suspicion of not being well bred, and the most important of these is going to a dance alone with a young man when she does not know any older married woman there who is willing to chaperon her. This is not purely a question of convention, but one of convenience. The man she goes with cannot dance all the time with her, and she cannot be left by herself in the intervals of her dances. After a dance is over, unless a girl is invited to take refreshments or to walk, she should be taken back to her chaperon, never under any circumstance should she sit by herself even for a minute in a ballroom.

It goes without saying that she should introduce her partners to her chaperon, but I have seen even this courtesy ignored, although when she had no one to talk to or dance with a girl found this same chaperon very useful to stay by.

Three times in all a man should be a girl's partner at a dance, unless he wants to make her conspicuous. As a matter of fact it is rather bad form for a man, after being introduced to a girl, to ask for more than two dances during the evening.

A girl should be careful how she refuses to dance with a man. If she dislikes him she may simply say she does not care to dance that particular number, and, if he is a gentleman, he will not insist.

To the thoughtless girl I want to say: Don't cross the room alone. It is very awkward and looks badly. Don't sit out dances in corners unless you want your hostess to have a very bad opinion of your ideas of propriety. There are other equally enjoyable and less conspicuous ways of flirting.

Don't be afraid of introducing your partners to your girl friends.

Wear a pretty gown by all means, but not a loud one that makes you the observed of observers from one end of the hall to the other; and don't by your behavior obtain a man in conversation when he is engaged for a dance with another girl.

Before I close I want to add also that invitations to a large dance should be sent two weeks ahead of the time, and those to a small dance ten days in advance. In either case an answer should be sent at once.

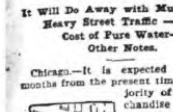
SOLVING A PROBLEM

EASE IN HANDLING CHICAGO'S VOLUME OF MERCHANDISE.

THROUGH TUNNEL SYSTEM

It Will Do Away with Much of the Heavy Street Traffic — The Cost of Pure Water— Other Notes.

Chicago.—It is expected that six months from the present time the majority of the merchandise shipped in and out of the business district of Chicago will be delivered to and from the depots underground.



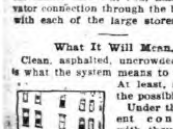
Present Condition of the Streets.

The Illinois Tunnel & Telephone company is above all else a tunnel company. The automatic telephone served very well as a blind for an unsuspecting public. The telephone has been installed; some day it may be useful and a competitor for the old established Bell system; to-day, and for several years to come, it would not pay operating expenses, to say nothing of dividends on an investment of some $30,000,000 which the company has put into the tunnels. The 60 miles of tunnels, which were ostensibly built to serve merely as conduits for telephone wires, but telephone conduits are not necessarily 15 feet high by 12 feet wide, which represents the dimensions of the largest tunnels, or even 10 feet wide by nine feet high, which is about the dimensions of the smallest of the tunnels. Neither is an electric railway track in all of these tunnels, or hundreds of electric cars needed in the operation of a telephone system. The telephone wires are there; they occupy a few inches of space in the apex of the tunnels; the remainder of the extensive system will be utilized for the purpose of freight delivery to and from the depots.

The company has purchased a large tract of land at a point where it is possible for every railroad line in the city to reach it. All merchandise freight going to or from the wholesale or retail district will be received at or shipped from this point. To this point the tunnel cars will run, making elevator connection through the basement with each of the large stores.

What It Will Mean.

Clean, asphalted, uncrowned streets is what the system means to Chicago. In fact, such are the possibilities.



As the Streets Are Expected to Be.

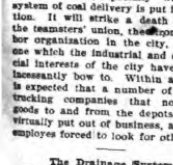
Under the present conditions, with thousands of heavy trucks passing to and fro constantly asphalted streets are out of the question. Nothing but cobble stones will stand the heavy traffic. Granite cobble stones are expensive to lay, and even more expensive to keep clean. In fact, it is next to impossible with the limited means at the command of the city to clean such streets. To make even a semblance of cleaning them they must be swept by hand, inch by inch, every day. Washing is out of the question. Every crevice is a lodging place for dirt, and there it sticks, only to be removed by the efforts of a lusty street sweeper applied to a heavy brush.

To-day the streets in the business districts of the city are horribly overcrowded. More so than the muchly advertised overcrowding of Broadway in New York. Long lines of heavy trucks block important thoroughfares all through the working hours, and pedestrians must either take their life in their hands and thread their way through them when wishing to cross or wait until an obliging policeman stops the steady procession for a few seconds so as to give the pedestrians an opportunity.

Another thing which this system of tunnels will do, especially when the system of coal delivery is put in operation. It will strike a death blow at the teamsters' union, the strongest labor organization in the city, and the one which the industrial and commercial interests of the city have had to incessantly bow to. Within a year it is expected that a number of the big trucking companies that now haul goods to and from the depots will be virtually put out of business, and their employes forced to look for other jobs.

The Drainage System.

When plans now in course of construction are completed Chicago will have one of the most complete drainage systems known in any country in the world.



Work in the Evanston Golf Camp.

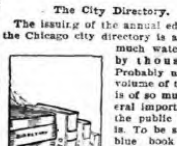
In the effort to provide pure drinking water for the people and remove the pollution of the lake by turning the drainage of the city in another direction more than $35,000,000 have been spent, and the work has but just begun. To complete it the big system of intercepting sewers on both the South and North sides of the city must be completed. Those on the south side are well along, and water will be flowing through a part of them within a short time. Those on the North side are hardly begun.

In addition to those projects new territory has been added to the drainage district, making necessary the building of new tunnels from the Calumet district on the south to connect with the main canal now in operation, and from the lake at Evanston on the north to connect with the north branch of the river which already connects with the main canal. When these projects shall have been completed practically every bit of Chicago's drainage for a distance of 25 miles north and south, will flow through the drainage canal and into the Mississippi by the way of the Illinois river. Before they are completed not less than $70,000,000 will have been expended in the effort to give the city pure drinking water.

The route of the new north shore canal cuts directly through the grounds of the exclusive Evanston golf club. This will take out of the center of the grounds a right-of way not less than 500 feet wide, and through this will be constructed a ditch of 120 feet in width flanked on either side by high banks of earth. The tunnelers and water hazard such as these will make are too much for the north shore golfers, and the club is sadly preparing to vacate and is looking for new grounds.

The City Directory.

The issuing of the annual edition of the Chicago city directory is an event much watched for by thousands. Probably no other volume of the year is of so much general importance to the public as this is. To be sure the blue book holds first place with the elite element, but the numbers of that class is as yet so small that the coming of a new volume makes but a small stir in the city. The "oldest citizen" takes great pride in making comparisons of sizes between each new volume and others that have preceded it. He goes back half a century and more to the little volumes that contained but a few hundred names, and following it down comments upon the rapid growth, illustrative of the growth of the city, to the present book of ten pounds' weight, and carrying 657,000 names, indicating, so the experts say, a population of about 2,250,000 people.



Growth of the City Directory.

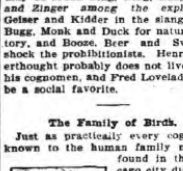
Owing to a new rule of the publishers, made this year, to leave out the names of "all unmarried men not engaged in business," the book is not so noticeably larger than the one of last year as has been the case in previous years, there being but 3,000 more names this year than last.

A study of the book shows the most common name in Chicago to be Johnson. There are 57 closely set columns of him. Smith is the next most popular name, with ten columns less than the Johnsons. Then comes Brown, rank third with 40 columns; Browns are fourth with 25 columns, and good, old, familiary Jones comes along in fifth place with but 18 columns.

From the ghetto district many peculiar names are gathered, among which may be found Bing, Ding, Bang, Zipp, and Zinger among the explosives; Geiser and Kidder in the slang class; Bugg, Monk and Duck for natural history, and Bosse, Beer and Swig to whom the prohibitionist Henry Weyerthought probably does not live up to his cognomen, and Fred Loveiady must be a social favorite.

The Family of Birds.

Just as practically every cognomen known to the human family may be found in the Chicago city directory so may virtually every species of bird known to the northern states be found within the city limits.



The Flight of the City Birds.

The robins, the bluebirds, the red-winged blackbird, the prettily colored wild canary, the wren, the little king bird, the crow and, in fact, all up and down the bird scale numerous representatives of each family may be found. Like the Johnsons of the human family, the sparrows—the little victims of the air guns and the slingshots of the boys—are by far the most numerous. Another family that is not so common is the chimney swift. They find attractive nesting places in the unused chimneys of the city. The barn swallows are another family that is even less numerous than their cousins, the swifts. In the residence districts, especially, the purple martins are favorites, and are catered to with attractive bird houses, which are often preempted by the ubiquitous sparrow.

Rather an uncommon bird for the city, and yet one of which there are considerable numbers, is the nighthawk. They build their nests on the graveled roofs of the downtown buildings and flat buildings, and many a janitor refers to them as "my friends."

Of all the birds of the city none are more popular with the passing thousands than the pigeons of the downtown districts. Their feeding place is the street and the sidewalk, and for any person so ruthlessly harm one of them [illegible] for a time.

SUMMER IN GOTHAM

HOW THE OTHER HALF LIVE ON HOT NIGHTS.

ROOFS AS SLEEPING PLACES

Society Comes In for Ridicule from the Pen of a French Guest—The Romance of Senator Clark —Other Gossip.

NEW YORK.—A mid-summer night's dream in New York is likely to be the rule. After dark on one of these intolerably muggy, sleepless nights, a large proportion of the population moves up from the supheated streets to the roofs. How many do so, and under what circumstances they do so, no one class is prone to suspect. Of course, one half doesn't know how the other half lives, and it is a good thing for each half that it remains in this condition of ignorance. If the half that goes to the roof gardens knew the squalid misery of those who sleep on the roofs it might taint their appetites. And if the roof Jwellers of the East side (and other sides) knew about the cushioned indigenes of the roof garden thousands, the knowledge might make their third a little harsher and their tin beds a trifle harder. The contrast is indeed violent enough. Under the stars in one quarter are the lucky, who can loll in comfortable seats, listening to gay music, watching the best that modern vaudeville can do to amuse, drinking iced drinks from tall glasses. These favored are carried to and from the street levels in easy elevators, and to and from their homes in devil wagons. Under the stars in another place, best described tenement crowds are climbing to the roofs, roofs still radiating the heat of the blistering sun, with cheap pillows and maybe an occasional tattered blanket, to stretch themselves on the tin or tar paper, coveted, offering inclosure. At midnight both phases of life are to be found at the same time. At one in the morning the arching lights of the roof gardens have disappeared. Who shall say that after that the roof sleepers always have the worst of it? There are hot rooms in the best houses and best hotels in New York.

An Impolite Book.

THE book of the Frenchman, M. Jules Huret, describing his visit to America, is making a great deal of talk. A few extracts have been printed, but one must look over the volume to find what a peculiar book this Frenchman's book is. Foreigners have written about us ever since there was anything to write about. They have flattered, ridiculed, sneered, prophesied as they have pleased, and we have always read what they have had to say with a great deal of interest. Foreigners pretend to be amazed at the curiosity with which we read such books. But this latest analysis, praisful as it is, for the most part—abounding in glorifications of the American girl, and all that —has brought up a new question, or one that seems new to its readers. How far is a guest of an individual privileged to go in describing what he sees and hears while he is a guest? Is it good taste for a Frenchman or for anyone else to accept entertainment at a private house and then go away to find fault, satirize, even guy a little? This is what M. Huret seems to have done. The Astors, Fishes, Belmonts, Whitneys, Sloanes and Harrimans took him up; he saw their drawing-rooms, heard their talk, ate their dinners and it is the unanimous opinion that he has not shown great delicacy in what he has written of his experiences. Very bad taste is what the society people as well as those who do not like to be called society people say of M. Huret's chapters.

An Engagement and a Wedding.

THE gorgeous new house of Senator Clark, at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue is being prepared for occupancy. Senator Clark is coming to live in Millionaires' Row. He is to bring home, not his ward, but his wife. Of this more sensational has hit New York's moneyed society more startlingly in many years than the announcement that Senator Clark has for three years been married to his ward. The little romance in the south of France will have a very curious and very spectacular sequel in the metropolis. There are to be some superb entertainments at the Clark house. But the most-looked-for feature of these entertainments will not be the palace or its fixings, but the little girl who captured the heart of a multi-millionaire, was married to him, bore him two children, all without the knowledge even of the multi-millionaire's family.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss [illegible] to Senator Clark is confirmed.

The man in the case has already had his share of notoriety. Capt. Herbert Henry Spender Clay [illegible] to the Second Life guards. He became mixed up in a money scandal, and his resignation was thereupon demanded by the king, after he had refused to resign to Lord Roberts. The father of Clay was a heavy stockholder in the rich Bass Brewing company. Last year the captain was hunting grizzlies in the Rockies. It is said that he is not popular in London. Hence it may be suspected that the marriage will not increase the popularity of the Astors, who are not liked in London any more than they are liked in New York. William Waldorf Astor was so much disliked in New York that he shook the dust of the metropolis from his feet and went across the sea to make himself an Englishman. England likes his money and has taken a great deal of it, but it has never been able to like Astor. The king is known to have said some pretty hard things about "that fellow Astor" while observing the outward form of civility to the American. I fancy that the king knows that he would not popularize himself with the Americans—and this is a thing he is always desirous of doing—by making Astor a peer, though Astor would pay more for a good title than ever was paid when the market price of that commodity was at its highest.

Fashions Becoming Very Femine.

UNTO the mere man who does not observe the subtle changes in fashion it has come with considerable astonishment that women's dress is now exceedingly feminine. All the new fashions are fluffy and delicate. Laces are in evidence everywhere even in bathing suits—and the touches of masculinity that were wont to creep into feminine apparel have entirely disappeared. Woman is no longer tailor-made, and one of the economic results of this change is the ruin of the ladies' tailor. The imagination cannot picture a man in the act of making any part of one of these new creations, and the fact is that no man does. The Fifth avenue ladies tailors are losing out of business one by one. Except for riding habits there is nothing for them to make, and automobiling has cut so seriously into outdoor entertainment that riding habits are not so much in demand as they were. The change in Fifth avenue is great, but it is not so great as the change in the appearance of the fashionable women. It is just as true that unfashionable women show the change. The shop girls reflect these new ultra-feminine styles in clothes that are by no means so well adapted for business as the former tailor-made suits.

Among new feminine fads is that for "tanned" hair. Tanned complexions have been in favor for some time. So long as physical culture is fashionable I suppose that all the signs of out-door life will be fashionable also. But tanned hair is new. There are tricks about washing the hair and drying it in the sun which keep the hair from being streaky and make it "shaded." And this is the necessary quality—"shaded" hair.

A Christian Science Leader.

ANOTHER annual summer pilgrimage to Mrs. Eddy, participated in by many thousands of New Yorkers, calls attention to one of the most conspicuous figures among the active workers in this city. Some half dozen years ago a sensation was created in Wall street by the announcement that a big firm of brokers, both members of the exchange, were about to part company on account of Christian Science. It was Henry Pennington Toler who had taken up the new creed. The separation of the partners was entirely friendly, and Mr. Toler took a new partner of the new faith, opening large offices at the high-priced corner of Broadway itself, across the way from Trinity church. Mr. Toler comes of a prominent New Jersey family. He was famous at Princeton as one of the greatest footballers that college has ever produced. Later he won fame at golf. He is a large, handsome, magnetic man, with a manner that is at once charming and forceful. About two years ago Toler astonished New York by handling the biggest fight to the upper part of Manhattan island, it being shown that the old town of New Harlem had never been legally ceded to the city. Search made by lawyers on behalf of Toler showed that about $2,000,000,000 worth of property on the water fronts and old creek beds were never New York's to give away. Scarcely less astounding was Toler's proposition to take this tract of valuable locally belonging to New Harlem, and make it into a new Jerusalem—a Christian Science New Jerusalem. When the scheme was fully under way, and after Toler had spent $150,000, Mrs. Eddy sent word to Toler that the Christian Science could not set up a material New Jerusalem. At this moment Toler had five richly furnished offices in New York, all devoted to the propaganda. He had sold his seat on the exchange to advance the work. He closed all the offices without a murmur, uncomplainingly faced what looked to everybody else like financial ruin, and turning his back upon Wall street and all other business connections, became a devoted follower now with Mrs. Stetson at the First Church of Christ Scientist, cured with the doctrine that the basis

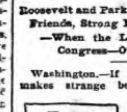
UNIQUE FRIENDSHIPS

THEY ARE TO BE FOUND DURING CAMPAIGN YEARS.

SOME SEEN IN WASHINGTON

Roosevelt and Parker, Warm Personal Friends, Strong Political Enemies —When the Laugh Was on Congress—Other Gossip.

Washington.—If politics sometimes makes strange bed-fellows it also sometimes develops unique friendships in the ranks of the opposing forces. In the present campaign men in both parties will be waging inveterate political warfare against bosom friends in the other party. There are some strong friendships among public men who differ in political belief. The standard bearers of the two great political parties in this year's contest, President Roosevelt and Judge Parker, furnish an example of warm personal friends representing opposite political sentiments. These two men are more than mere acquaintances; they are friends of many years' standing, and each finds much in the other to admire. The governor of New York Mr. Roosevelt was thrown into close personal contact with Supreme Court Justice Parker, and has never hesitated to express his admiration for that latter's courage and distinct ability as a judge. Justice Parker has reciprocated the personal friendship of the president and entertains an exalted opinion of the character, courage and ability of the young man now chief executive of the nation.

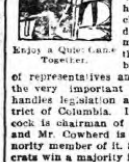


Friends Outside of Politics.

There is such a personal sentiment existing between the two families that a favorite dog owned by Judge Parker bears the name of "Teddy Roosevelt." The president is having a good deal of quiet fun about this dog just now, and has laughingly indicated to friends of the judge that if the latter finds it at all embarrassing to have "Teddy Roosevelt" in evidence at Esopus during the present summer, when the spot will be the Mecca of hundreds of good democrats, he, the president, will agree to care for the dog at Oyster Bay. The young Roosevelts would gladly undertake the task of looking after the animal until after election. Judge Parker laughs good-naturedly over the situation and declares that "Teddy Roosevelt" will not be in the way at Esopus this summer so long as he does not object to the visit of his democratic friends.

Campaign Committee Chairmen.

The chairmen of the two congressional campaign committees, while not exactly Damon and Pythias, are exceedingly warm friends. They are Mr. Joseph W. Babcock, of Wisconsin, the chairman of the republican congressional committee, and William S. Cowherd, of Missouri, chairman of the democratic congressional committee. Both gentlemen are members of the house of representatives and both serve on the very important committee that handles legislation affecting the District of Columbia. In fact, Mr. Babcock is chairman of this committee and Mr. Cowherd is the ranking minority member of it. Should the democrats win a majority in the next house Mr. Cowherd would probably become chairman of the District of Columbia committee and Mr. Babcock would be the ranking minority member. There is very little politics in this committee and Mr. Babcock and Mr. Cowherd work together for the interests of the district, and each supports the other on the floor of the house on nearly every proposition that comes from the committee.

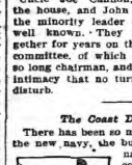


Enjoy a Quiet Game Together.

The friendship that exists between "Uncle Joe" Cannon, the speaker of the house, and John Sharp Williams, the minority leader of the house, is well known. They have served together for years on the appropriations committee, of which Mr. Cannon was so long chairman, and there formed an intimacy that no turn of politics can disturb.

The Coast Defenses.

There has been so much heard about the new navy, she building up of the navy and the necessity of having a navy equal to any other in the world that the public has lost sight of another arm of the service, used for the defense of the country. This is the system of coast defense, which has been proceeding quietly and without attracting one-tenth the notice that the fine new navy has.



The Harbors Are Defended.

When the war with Spain came on the government realized that the very important [illegible] harbors of the country demanded. Under the direction of President McKinley, defective features of the coast defense were corrected, and he promptly used a part of the emergency appropriation of $50,000,000 for the planting of harbor mines and protecting important ocean harbors of the country with modern submarine mines. Since that time the whole subject of coast defense has been more seriously regarded until to-day the report of the war department shows that since the system was inaugurated this military defense shows the expenditure for fortifications, armaments, electrical appliances, etc., of $90,000,000 in round numbers. According to the defense project first mapped out, and which is still being followed, it will yet cost to complete the work about about $51,000,000. The whole aggregate cost of providing defense for the coast, ocean harbors of seaport cities will, therefore, be approximately $141,000,000. The annual cost of maintaining this defense, including garrisoning, annual supplies, etc., is estimated at $18,000,000.

It will be seen that the war department has considerable to its credit as well as the navy department in providing adequate defense for the country

The Last Laugh.

The executive departments have a joke on congress. Last session Mr. Landis, of Indiana, stirred up quite a commotion by denouncing the practice of supplying cabinet officers and bureau officials with free carriages. He delivered one of his impassioned speeches on the floor of the house on the subject of abuse of the carriage privilege, and declared that bureaucrats had a line of public carriages for private use that would extend from the capitol to the white house and back.

As Congress Would Have Had It.

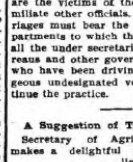
There was not the best of feeling between the executive and legislative departments at that time, as the Bristow post office scandal report had just come in containing the names of upward of 200 congressmen as being connected with irregularities. The statesmen were eager to find some way in which to "get even" with the departments, so they hit upon the plan of regulating the use of carriages for official purposes. To this a proviso was inserted in one of the appropriation bills that no carriage should be used for personal use and each should have painted upon it the name of the department to which it belonged.

There was a good deal of chuckling over this latter provision, as it was believed few of the department officials would care to attend social functions and go about personal affairs in a carriage labeled with the name of a public department.

It now turns out that as the law is construed by its official interpreter in the treasury department, Comptroller Tracewell, it only applies to those carriages named in that particular appropriation bill. It so happens that the only carriages so named are those for the use of the superintendent of public printing and the superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing. These are two of the hardest-worked officials in the government and two who have more legitimate use for public conveyances than any others. They are the victims of the scheme to humiliate other officials. Their two carriages must bear the label of the departments to which they belong, while all the under secretaries, chiefs of bureaus and other government officials who have been driving about in gorgeous undesignated vehicles can continue the practice.

A Suggestion of Thanksgiving.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson makes a delightful contribution to light summer reading by the publication of a brochure on turkeys. The genial secretary could not have found a more delectable subject for the dog days, as the finely illustrated little pamphlet brings up visions of Thanksgiving and Christmas days, with snow and ice, sleigh bells and skating. This publication gives a history of the turkey and states a well established fact in these words: "No other kind of domestic poultry has come into such general use throughout the entire world for Thanksgiving and holiday feasts as the turkey." It was introduced as a delicacy in England in 1541, but in 1573 it had become the customary fare of the farmer.



Secretary Wilson's Timely Suggestion.

According to Secretary Wilson's little book the turkey is a most beautiful bird. Its raising affords a chance for money-making and, as compared with other live stock, it will return a larger profit when properly handled. It is a self-sustaining forager, as it gains the greater part of its living from bugs, grasshoppers and waste grain that it picks up in its wandering over the range. Its grower is at little or no cost for its keep for several weeks. The statement is made that turkeys are now used not only for roasting "but to an increasing extent as cold cuts for sandwiches and for salads, and large numbers of poults are sold for broilers. No dish is more relished in our large cities than the [illegible] time than the broiled poult."

HEN WITH A RECORD

VERMONT BIDDY HATCHES A BROOD OF EAGLES.

Bessie Found Deserted Aerie and Encamped on Two Speckled Eggs —Didn't Like Result of Her Labor.

Wilmer Eaton, of Shrewsbury, Vt., is willing to bet anything he owns that he has the prize-setting hen of Vermont, or of any other state. The last setting adventure of Bessie (that's the Plymouth Rock's name) was startling, and there are no takers, and the town generally agrees with Eaton.

Bessie has never hatched out any chicks of her own, as she has never been able to lay eggs that would hatch, but she has mothered the eggs of nearly every other kind of barn fowl that exists, and has brought up families of bantams, geese, ducks and even pigeon. So strong are her maternal instincts that it makes little difference to her what she has in her nest or where her nest is, so long as she can sit undisturbed and hatch something.

Like Emily, the chronic setting hen in Owen Wister's novel, "The Virginian," Bessie's family instincts are abnormally developed, and when she isn't engaged in roosting on eggs she is rushing around in search of something on which to sit. She has even been known to rake together a lot of mashed potatoes and keep them warm for a week, and has adopted kittens, mice and one litter of motherless flying squirrels.

Whenever a farmer hereabout has a setting of eggs he is particular about he has them to the Eaton farm and turns them over to Bessie, for no matter what the season or how good the feeding happens to be, the hen will cluck with delight and immediately spread herself over the eggs. Once a man named Turner brought up some eighteen eggs and left them in the back of an old buggy in Eaton's carriage barn. Eaton was not about, so he told Mrs. Eaton. She forgot where Turner had left the eggs and her husband hitched up his mare to the old buggy to drive over to Turner's place and find out. "I left 'em in the back of the buggy you're gettin' in," chuckled Turner. And when they looked there were the eggs with Bessie encamped on them.

But, says the New York World, all former accomplishments paled into insignificance last week when Bessie was found contentedly sitting on a pair of bald eagle's eggs high up the side of a cliff a half mile back of the farm. The eagles have nested in some dead wood on the face of the cliff for several years and have come to be looked for every spring. This year they had nested as usual, when a couple of city chaps, encamped on the shores of Cold river, took it into their heads to shoot the birds. They had little difficulty, but found it impossible to get at the eggs. They made two attempts, and on the second were astonished to look down upon the coveted nest and find a hen calmly sitting on the eggs. It had been easy enough for the boys to get there, but the reason she did it was baffling.

The boys had never heard of Bessie, but a neighbor of Eaton's to whom they told the story had, and he communicated with Eaton. The latter feared that Bessie could starve to death before he could be investigated. He found his prize hen keeping the eggs warm and tried to lasso her, but couldn't, and compromised by lowering a box of feed in front of her nooze. This was done several times until the young eagles were hatched.

Just what to do with the youngsters puzzled the hen, as they didn't take kindly to grain. She was in a great stew when one of the boys volunteered to be lowered over the cliff and rescue the entire family. When the nest was brought up, the youngsters were carried to the farm, where they were put in a cage and fed. Bessie visited them regularly until the young eagles turned on her one day and nearly pecked out one of her feathers. At this she deserted, went into the pantry and an hour later was found sitting on a bowl of china eggs.

Small Farms in Denmark.

Most of the farms in Denmark are from five to 25 acres, and are owned by the peasantry. About half of the land is in oats, hay, pasture and root crops for the horses, milch cows and sheep. In proportion to her size, Denmark has more cattle than any other country in Europe.

Jap Children Learn English.

English is taught in the public schools of Japan. The Japanese youths in the towns and cities are all eager to learn English, as a passport to wealth, position and employment.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,
ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,
HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Illinois Democrats want Mr. Cleveland to take the stump in that State. If the party in Jersey is wise it'll keep him at work mating votes for Parker in his own State.

A dispatch from Wakefield, Mass., says that a resident of that place became totally blind while in bathing. There are some people down this way who look as if a bath would be a great shock to them.

Now that the Right Rev. Henry Codman Potter, D.D., LL.D., S. T. D., bishop of New York, member of "a dozen clubs" and rum advocate-in-extraordinary, has dedicated a tavern, it is in order for him to consecrate a cemetery to hold the bodies of the victims of strong drink. There'll be need for a "Potter's field."

Mayor Smalley's announcement that he has no intention of removing from North Plainfield to Plainfield is not surprising to those who know the man. No matter what his opponents may say of "King Newton the First," that progressive official is not the kind of man who deserts the firing line when his enemies are making a hot attack.

Some foolish criticism has been made of the new tenement house laws and some people in this city imagine that they are detrimental to the interests of Plainfield. A little study will convince anyone that they are the very best that could be devised. The greatest benefit is that it prohibits the erection of flat structures containing dark rooms. Is there anything unreasonable about such a provision? What is the name of common sense? Is there about the laws in the least objectionable?

This morsel is hot off the Elizabeth Times' griddle:

"Certain Plainfielders think they want a district court. The people of Elizabeth do not object to their having one, it is not our privilege to object. But it is true, nevertheless, that the local district court can easily accommodate all the business within its jurisdiction which will be done in this county during the next ten years. The tax payers of Elizabeth are now paying for a privilege which those of the entire county enjoy, and they are so liberal not to object to continuing to do so. If Plainfield wishes to share the expense, very well. But we trust that the promoters of the plan in Plainfield, and the newspapers there, will not be so mistaken as to contend that Elizabeth finds fault with their proposition."

Elizabeth find fault with Plainfield's own business? Ha! ha! you clever man in The Times editorial sanctum, don't you know that Elizabeth learned once and for all last fall not to "butt in" on Plainfield's affairs. It is very thoughtful of you to inform us that Elizabeth will not interfere with the scheme to locate a district court here, but do you know that it never occurred to us that Elizabeth would dare to do so.

CRUISERS ON THE SHREWSBURY.

Plainfielders Enjoy Sailing Trip From Amboy to Little Silver.

Word has been received to the effect that the sixteen-foot cat-boat, manned by H. C. Fenno and T. O. Gavett, has completed a safe voyage from Perth Amboy to Little Silver, on the Shrewsbury river. Those interested in the cruisers will remember that they left town about two weeks ago with the cat-boat, which is of their own construction, for Raritan Bay. The water was found to be too rough for the boat there, and the crew decided to remove to the Shrewsbury river.

The trip was made Saturday morning under the most favorable circumstances, as there was a strong wind but not a heavy sea. The boys sailed from the southwestern side of Staten Island inside the Hook to the mouth of the river, a distance of about fifteen miles, without encountering any misfortune.

Will Change Church Entrance.

Work has been begun at the First M. E. church on West Front street on the alterations to the exterior approach. The stone steps have been torn away and changes have been made in the basement entrances.

AMUSEMENTS.

B. C. Whitney's "Isle of Spice" has been selected to open the Majestic Theatre, New York, for the season of 1904-1905, the date being set for Tuesday, August 23. Mr. Flaherty has naturally been anxious to secure an attraction that would run through the season as did "The Wizard of Oz" and "Babes in Toyland," and believes that in the piquant, musical mixture in three acts the "Isle of Spice" he has secured just what the patrons of the Majestic Theatre will be pleased with. The "Isle of Spice" was first produced in Chicago where it enjoyed a tremendous degree of success, running for twenty-three weeks to crowded houses. It is probably would have been there yet but for the reason that Mr. Whitney bought it and wished to bring it East.

They are having a series of farce comedy revivals at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, where many of the best farces of the past ten years are again being presented. Recent minor changes in the company have resulted in the formation of a particularly clever comedy company, and the revivals will come no more than favorably with the original productions, in many cases the authors declaring the Proctor presentation to be even better than the original. This week a new star is to be seen at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in the person of Donald Brian, who is to be presented at the head of his own company next season in "Myles Aroon," a play in which W. J. Scanlan was most successful, and which served to introduce Andrew Mack as an Irish comedian. Mr. Brian is said to possess very favorably with his predecessors, and his presentation at Mr. Proctor's is a matter of unusual interest.

P. S. C. DECLARED UNFAIR

STATE ASSOCIATION OF PLUMBERS HAVE GRIEVANCES.

The Public Service Corporation has come under the ban of the State Association of Journeymen Plumbers, being declared on the unfair list at a meeting of the association held in Trenton, yesterday. Resolutions were passed that each local union make an effort to have every union man in each city take out the gas meters and dispense with all gas ranges belonging to the company.

The trouble is over the gas stove connections. The corporation has had employed in this work men whom is pays 35 cents an hour and who are not plumbers. The plumbers believe that they should be given the bulk of this work. The plumbers see that these men who pipe houses and make connections soon get expert at the work. The plumbers scale of wages is 41 cents an hour.

The plumbers say that the corporation refused to grant them a conference or to talk over the matter.

The convention was attended by forty-two delegates, representing almost every city in the State.

STARVED ANIMAL SHOT.

Metuchen Farmer Has Troubles in This City.

A family of the name of Lambert, returning to their home in Metuchen, were interrupted in their journey Saturday evening by the inability of their horse to go on any further The horse was one of the thinest specimens which has been seen in the vicinity for a long time. It showed signs of starvation.

The weary animal refused to move and lay down at Park avenue and Fifth street. A crowd soon gathered to assist in raising the animal, but all efforts were in vain. Policemen Higgins and Frederickson were summoned and after examining the beast informed the owner that either the horse must be shot or the driver arrested for cruelty to animals. After much argument on the part of the owner, and a consultation with Dr. Knott regarding the possibility of the horse's recovery, he decided that he would rather part with the horse than pay the fine for driving it. The beast was finally shot by Roundsman Higgins.

A Contemptible Act.

Burglary of the meanest sort was perpetrated in Grace M. E. church, Friday morning, when someone effected an entrance through a basement window and smashed the missionary collection box. The contents, consisting of the usual collection taken Wednesday evening, were taken but nothing else in the place was disturbed. An effort has been made to learn the identity of the thief, but so far without success.

Merry Sailors.

Allen Vanderhoef and Clarence Smalley have purchased a sixteen foot canvas canoe from Fred Haynes, of New Market. The canoe is now on New Market pond and the owners are enjoying the use of it daily. The boat is equipped with oar-locks and can be used for rowing or paddling. The young men intend to furnish the canoe with sailing rigging soon.

WHY COMMON COUNCIL VETOED WOOD PAVE

Result of Experiments Some Years Ago in Other Cities Influenced the Majority.

CLAIMS OF EXPERTS

AUTHORITIES HAVE DECLARED WOOD TO BE PREFERABLE.

Street Commissioner Gavett to Superintend the Work—Preliminary Work of the P. S. C.

Now that the city has decided to pave Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street, with brick, instead of wood, preparations will be made to commence the work early in September, or as soon after the ordinance is passed as possible. While several officials still believe that the wooden pavement is the better and that it would give the greater wear on Watchung avenue, they do not want to obstruct the improvements if the majority prefers brick.

A member of the Common Council in speaking of the decision in favor of brick, said that he was sorry that wood was turned down. He declared that considerable opposition to wood pave comes from the experience had a number of years ago, when the art of putting down that kind of pavement was not so well advanced. He cited instances in New York and Baltimore, where wooden pavement was laid alongside that of asphalt and brick and after each had had about the same amount of wear, it was found that wood stood the test much better than the other kinds.

Experts today claim that the wooden pavement is the best and that brick comes next. Inasmuch as the city's expense of putting the brick pavement down will be $200 less than with wood, there is naturally a preference for the brick. Those who favor wood say it is practically noiseless, while with brick there is considerable racket, even more than with asphalt.

As Street Commissioner Gavett thoroughly understanding the work of laying brick pavement he will undoubtedly superintend this job, thereby saving the city money. The Public Service Corporation is to stand one-half of the expense, but no work is to be done until the company deposits $1,100 with the city treasurer. This will be done at the proper time as the people are as anxious to have the improvement made as are city officials.

In the meantime while the city is waiting for the time to adopt the ordinance on the last reading, some preliminary work will be done. The trolley company has secured permission to change the rails on Watchung avenue and this work will be done within a short time. The company wants to put in a heavier rail and before the permanent pavement is laid will have a good opportunity to do so.

According to those who know something of the kind of work, it will not take long to lay the brick pavement and there is no doubt but what it can be done before frost comes. If that pavement gives satisfaction, there is reason to believe that other streets may be similarly improved. Once a start is made in this direction toward a permanent pavement, the Common Council will probably continue the work in the business section of the city, at least.

THE WEST END'S VICTORIOUS

DEFEAT NEW BRUNSWICKS BY A SCORE OF 8 TO 2.

"Smiling Jimmie" Montross twirled his second game, which was also a victory, for the new team at Somerville Saturday afternoon. New Brunswick was the victim and the score was 8 to 2. Montross fanned ten, made a hit that brought in two runs, and gave no passes to first on balls. Allen and Bradley also played good ball.

John Harkins, the old-time idol of the Somerville fans, was on the bench and is manager of the New Brunswick team. His son played third base and put up almost as good a game as his "pater" did years ago, although he did not make the home runs his sire used to.

Score by innings:

West Ends.....4 0 0 0 2 0 0 2 x—8
New Brunswick..0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 1—2

Batteries — Montross and Allen; Bradley and Francis.

George Thatcher Leaves Vandeville.

George Thatcher, the well known minstrel man and former Plainfielder, has signed with the "County Chairman" company for the coming season, leaving vaudeville for the first time in many years. He will play the one darky character in the play, created last year by Willis Sweetnam, and which is considered one of the most important in the cast.

ELIZABETH'S COUNCIL SLIGHTS FREEHOLDERS

Director J. F. Hubbard is Surprised at Discourteous Treatment in Court House Matter.

WANT MACADAM ROADS

UNION'S BOARD BORROWS $100,000 FOR CURRENT EXPENSES.

No Application Filed by Traction Company for a Franchise—Bills Amounting to $1,6000 Paid.

The Union County Board of Freeholders at its monthly meeting in Elizabeth Thursday afternoon felt slighted as an alleged snub given to the board by Elizabeth's aldermen, who failed to send any communication to the freeholders relative to the action of the aldermen on Monday night in refusing the county legislature to change the line of Rahway avenue, where that thoroughfare runs along by the new county courthouse. Director J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, declared he was surprised at this discourteous treatment and could not understand why nothing official had been received from Elizabeth's aldermen. The subject was so painful that it was then dropped. The aldermen refused, by a vote of twenty to three, to approve of the plan for altering Rahway avenue, as proposed by the freeholders.

It was expected the Morris County Traction Company would apply to the Union freeholders Thursday for a franchise allowng it to lay its tracks along Morris avenue through Springfield and Union townships to the Elizabeth city line. The application, however, was not forthcoming, but it is understood will be presented at the September meeting of the board.

The freeholders resolved to borrow $100,000 in anticipation of the payment of county taxes.

It was voted to build a bridge across the Rahway River on Roselle avenue, in Roselle Park Borough, at a cost of $250; also another at Seven Bridges, in Springfield, at a cost of $1,300. A bridge will also be constructed on Stimson street, Linden, where it crosses Meadow Brook, this structure to cost $1,600.

A petition was received asking that a new macadam county road be constructed to run through portions of Westfield, Cranford, Mountainside Borough and Springfield to Summit Township line. This road, it was stated to the freeholders by Mr. Pierson, of Westfield, who appeared for the petitioners, would be about two and three-fourth miles long. He said the communication was signed by people who owned seventy-five per cent. of the property along the line of the proposed county road, and that each of the signers to the petition had set down opposite his or her name the exact number of feet of land controlled by them. The board, however, did not take very kindly to this scheme to saddle more expense on the county and unanimously voted that the document be simply received and placed on file.

After ordering bills paid aggregating $6,000, the board adjourned.

REINHART'S GREAT WORK

HE LOWERS THE AMATEUR AND PROFESSIONAL RECORD.

Frank O. Reinhart, of this city, broke both the amateur and professional records on the Cranford Golf Club course Thursday afternoon. He was playing with W. L. Glenney and Robert Abbott, all three making very good scores. The professional records for the course are 38 for nine holes and 80 for eighteen. Reinhart lowered both by scoring a 37 and a 41. Glenney made an 82 and Abbott an 84, which constitutes for the amateur record of 83 for the course.

The Cranford course is the longest nine hole course in the country, but its excellent condition makes up for its length.

Celebrate Their Golden Wedding.

The home of Dr. F. S. Wells, of Grant avenue, was the scene of the golden wedding celebration of Mrs. Weeks' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Draper, of DeRuyter, N. Y., Wednesday afternoon. Many old friends who knew the couple in their young married days fifty years ago were present at the celebration. Many handsome and valuable gifts were received by the old people, who are still hale and hearty in their old age.

Case on Contract.

Demand for $100 on contract has been brought against Mrs. Florence C. Wakefield and Frank W. Cleaves by Alpheus L. Mundy and James L. Griggs, executors of the estate of the late Israel C. Mundy. The case is returnable Monday at 9 o'clock in Justice Hand's court.

SECOND PETITION FOR HIGHER LIGENSE FEE

Judge Schenck's Adverse Decision Ignored by the Borough Councilmen.

VOTE IS UNANIMOUS

MAYOR SMALLEY EXPLAINS WHAT HAPPENED TO FIRST REQUEST.

Declares Lawyer Dungan Made Grave Mistake in His Argument —Did Not Seek to Punish Saloon Men.

Ignoring Judge Schenck's decision rendered against the request for a higher liquor license in North Plainfield, the Borough Council last Friday, again took up the matter and passed a resolution calling for another petition, this time to the Supreme Court. The vote on it was unanimous, Councilman VanWinkle returning to his seat to cast his.

The resolution was introduced at the request of Mayor Smalley and before the vote was taken he explained why he believed it should be done. The original petition, he said, was addressed to the county court which is presided over by Judge Schenck and Judge Garretson, the latter the Supreme Court judge of the district. When the matter was argued, Garretson was absent and Judge Fort presided in his place. As he was there only for the day, he refused to cast any vote and the petition was left to the decision of Judge Schenck alone, he voting against it. The question has never yet been considered by a Supreme Court judge.

"I am in favor of a higher liquor license," said the Mayor, "and I want everybody to know that I am. When Nelson Y. Dungan, Esq., appeared before the court and argued against an increase, he declared the petition was a scheme of mine to punish the dealers for the part they had taken in the annexation fight, but he made a grave mistake in attributing it to me. The members of this Council asked for the petition and voted for it.

"I believe we should have a higher license fee because it will tend to keep the number of selling places where it is and will also keep down our expense account. Liquor places are a damage to the town; they make us maintain a large police force and besides the borough needs the money. Judge Schenck declared at the Trenton annexation hearing that North Plainfield owed Somerset County money. If the borough is in debt, why did he vote to keep us from getting money to pay up?"

Councilman Lee expressed himself as being heartily in favor of a second petition and moved that the resolution be adopted. Councilman VanWinkle asked that it be laid over in order to give the members time to consider it fully and also because he had to leave the meeting and could not vote intelligently. He was finally prevailed upon to remain and the resolution was passed.

THE THISTLE CLUB'S OUTING

SCOTCH ORGANIZATION SPENDS SATURDAY AT CHIMNEY ROCK.

Accompanied by their wives and many friends, the members of the Scotch Thistle Club journeyed in stages to Chimney Rock, Saturday afternoon, where the organization's annual picnic was held. They took possession of a small grove and while the children enjoyed swings and similar amusements, the adults engaged in athletic contests and competitive games of Scottish origin. Among them were quoit pitching, hammer throwing and pole vaulting. Late in the afternoon cloths were spread beneath the trees and dinner was served by a committee of women. The return to Plainfield was made early in the evening with everyone thoroughly tired but pleased with the success of the outing.

The affair was arranged and directly in charge of a committee composed of Councilman and Mrs. William Gloak and Mr. and Mrs. William Wilson.

Purchased a New Home.

Julius Williams, of Central avenue, has purchased the desirable property on the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Front street, which was formerly owned by Alburtus Swaim. The purchaser is having some improvements made on the grounds and about the house, and will probably occupy the house about the first of September.

Letter-Carriers to Meet in Newark.

Final arrangements have been made for the State letter-carriers' convention to be held in Newark on Labor Day. It is expected that the gathering will be one of the largest in the history of the association, and Plainfield will be well represented.

Sunday Excursion to Manoch Chunk.

There is no more popular resort for a Sunday than Manoch Chunk, and to reach it entails a delightful rail journey, and at Manoch Chunk there is a diversity of amusements, the chief of which is a ride over the Switchback. This journey occupies more than one hour, and leads over and around the mountains with widely changing scenes at every turn. The Switchback is a gravity road, and the speed attained is close to a mile per minute. Another feature is Flagstaff, the summit of which is reached by trolley, and from this pinnacle points there is a view extending over miles and miles of beautiful country. An interesting spot close at hand is Glen Onoko, a short distance above Manoch Chunk, and, as its name implies, is a beautiful glen, with falls, cataracts, mountain paths leading to cool and delightful places. On August 14 the New Jersey Central is to run a popular excursion to Manoch Chunk from Plainfield by special train leaving at 9:20 a. m. Returning train will leave Manoch Chunk at 5:40 p. m., and the round trip will cost but $1.50. Frequent train service will be in effect between Manoch Chunk and Glen Onoko, and trains on the Switchback run every few minutes. 8 6 7 c

Puzzling Case of Lockjaw.

Miss Lida Ackerman, of Clinton avenue, is seriously ill with lock-jaw, the cause of which has not been determined by local physicians. She was first attacked four weeks ago and has since been growing steadily worse despite every preventative used. There is no wound upon her body and she does not remember swallowing anything that might have caused the trouble.

Miss Florence DeForest, of Mt. Pleasant, has returned from Oak Ridge, where she has been spending a month.

George Beggs, of Manning avenue, left today for Bloomsbury to spend a week's vacation.

PLAINFIELD WHITEWASHES WESTFIELD AGAIN

The Mt. Aarat Aggregation's Second Shut Out, Score 6 to 0.

GARVIN'S FINE WORK

BROOKLYN TWIRLER STRIKES OUT TWELVE MEN.

Alls Plays an Almost Errorless Game—Waller Receives Poor Support—The Contest In Detail.

For the second time this season, Alls shut Westfield out on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, the score being 6 to 0. A week ago the Mt. Aarat bunch was whitewashed 3 to 0. In consequence the local fans are happy. It now begins to look as though Alls would have a peep at the county championship. The team played an almost errorless game, and gave the best support to Garvin, the pitcher. The latter had Westfield at his mercy and not a man reached second base. He struck out twelve men and allowed but one scratch hit. Barry made this, beating a bunt ball to first.

There were only three men up in each inning, except the third and ninth and then four men each faced Garvin, a total of twenty-nine going to the bat for Westfield. On the other hand Waller, while pitching a good game, allowed nine safeties. It gave the supporters of Alls considerable satisfaction to see the defeat of Westfield and they cheered the home team generously.

The whole left field was submerged with water, the result of Friday's rain, and the left fielder on each team was obliged to play directly back of short-stop. Nine boys, barefooted, occupied positions in the water and looked after the few balls batted there. Only one base was allowed on a hit to the lake. The general play, with a few exceptions on the part of Westfield, was sharp.

R. S. SWACKHAMER DEAD

FATHER OF NORTH PLAINFIELD'S ASSEMBLYMAN PASSES AWAY.

Rulif S. Swackhamer, one of the most prominent residents of Whitehouse, and father of Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, passed away at his home Sunday morning, after a long illness. He was born in 1816, on the old Swackhamer homestead in that vicinity. He secured an excellent education, principally by his own efforts, and began teaching school at an early age, following this vocation at intervals for many years.

In 1863 Mr. Swackhamer received an appointment to a Government position, under President Pierce's administration, and with his family removed to New York. He was assistant to his brother, the late Conrad Swackhamer, who was the superintendent of the Custom House in New York. When Buchanan was elected President the deceased returned to Whitehouse and settled on his farm, where he has since resided.

Mr. Swackhamer held several minor offices in Hunterdon County. He was at different times Township Superintendent of Schools, Justice of the Peace and Assistant County Examiner of Schools. In 1876 he received the appointment of County Superintendent of Schools in Hunterdon and held the office for two terms. It was wholly due to his efforts that an appropriation was made to purchase Bibles for use in the public schools. He always took an active part in public life and no one in his time was better known as a speaker and debater.

A widow and six children survive, as follows: Mrs. W. C. Williams, of Arkansas; Mrs. Emma F. DuBois, Mrs. George W. Dufford, Mrs. Alfred Emmons, Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer and Frank L. Swackhamer, of Plainfield; Judge Austin H. Swackhamer, of Woodbury and Mrs. George W. Lunger and Miss Bertha Swackhamer, of Whitehouse.

"Billie" Redmond to Sing.

Leader Ben LaVere has received word that "Billie" Redmond will be the soloist at next Friday evening's band concert in Concert Park. He is well known to Plainfielders, having appeared here on several occasions. The programme otherwise will be practically the same as the one intended for last week.

NOCTURNAL SPOONERS DISTURBED BY SHOTGUN

Judge Coddington Mistakes Them for Burglars and He Blazes Away With Weapon.

RESIDENTS AROUSED

THE ENTIRE NEIGHBORHOOD LOOKS ON WHILE COPS INVESTIGATE.

Evidence That Lovers Had Taken Possession of Porch—Made Hasty Departure When Shotgun Was Discharged.

East Second street in the vicinity of Richmond street was wrapped in slumber at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, when a reporter from a shotgun rang out with startling loudness. Instantly the aspect changed and after the banging of windows had ceased and each open space was occupied by a white-robed figure, a policeman arrived on the scene to learn the cause of the racket.

Investigation led him to the home of Former Judge William H. Coddington where the genial counsellor was found pacing the floor with a double-barrelled gun grasped in his hands and on the alert to fire again at the occasion demanded. In a few hurried words he explained that burglars had been making an attempt to enter the home of William Rockwood directly next door and that he had discharged the gun to frighten them off and bring the police. The officer hurried out and with Patrolman Higgins, who had been sent from headquarters in response to a telephone call, looked over the adjoining premises.

On the porch of the Rockwood house was found two handkerchiefs and a quantity of cigarette papers, their positions indicating that the late owners had made a hasty departure. There was no evidence of any attempt having been made to enter the house and with the arrival of neighbors the mystery of the occurrence was cleared up. Instead of burglars, the intruders who had roused Judge Coddington from his beauty sleep and led to the awakening of the neighborhood, were evidently a couple of nocturnal spooners who had taken possession of the porch chairs for a quiet talk that was not quiet enough. One resident who jumped to his window the moment the shots were fired saw a man hurrying up East Second street toward Richmond, while a woman was hurrying in the opposite direction. The handkerchiefs, both dainty lace affairs which bore out this statement, were confiscated by the police and they wended their respective ways. Judge Coddington placed the shotgun in the corner, a dozen beads withdrew while as many windows went down with a bang, and the incident closed for the night except where some unfortunate troubled with insomnia expressed himself on lovers in general and the absurdity of midnight strolls.

ST. STEPHEN'S SOCIAL CLUB.

Young Men Organize to Promote Manliness.

The "N. B. A.," a social club recently formed among the young men of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, convened Saturday afternoon for the election of officers. By the consent of the boys, Rev. Arthur S. Peck, rector in charge of the church, was elected director of the club. Frederick Crook was elected president; John Kinz, vice president; George Lee, treasurer and George Hobbs, secretary. The object of the club is to promote manliness among its members, and arrangements are being made to hire special club rooms where the weekly meetings can be held.

The "N. B. A. Juniors," composed of the smaller boys of the parish, are to hold their meetings on Friday afternoons. At the meeting on Friday, Fred Bowe was elected president; Bergen Moore, vice president; George Mattox, treasurer, and Harry Christian, secretary. The average age of the members of this organization is ten years. The rector is also in charge of these boys.

Independent Paper.

"The editor of this paper regrets that its independent policy has not been pleasing to either of the two party organs in this city. The editors of those papers may thank themselves, surely, for their mental disquietude, for the Home News has never essayed to follow their example in its treatment of public matters. If the aforesaid editors know what real independence was and were not willing slaves to party leaders and dependent on party pap for existence, they might be supremely happy. Some day a new light may dawn upon them which shall make their emancipation a possibility." — New Brunswick Home News.

AUTHORITIES STOP DANCING AT THE PARK

Notice Served on Management of Place Puts Quietus to Sunday Desecration.

COUNSEL CONSULTED

PROPRIETOR INCLINED TO RESENT, BUT COMMAND IS OBEYED.

Regulars May Form a Social Organization to Evade the Law—Action Due to Committeeman Nichol.

Crowds from this city and other places flocked to Galvin's Park as usual, Sunday afternoon and evening, but for the first time in many months they found little to amuse them. There was no dancing, no pool playing, and about the only thing that seemed to have life was the merry-go-round. Even this felt the depression and its usually noisy organ emitted a few muffled, mournful notes from beneath a blanket which had been wrapped about it.

The change was due to a notice served upon the management Saturday afternoon, by the Scotch Plains Township Committee, in which it was stated if the usual Sunday violations were allowed to continue, arrests would follow. It caused consternation among the park attaches and some were inclined to resent the command but better judgment prevailed. To see that the notice was obeyed to the letter, Township Clerk Edward L. Hand and Officer Guerrier went to the place yesterday afternoon.

When they reached the entrance-way, the pool room was open for business, but before they were inside the place was closed and presented an innocent appearance. A few of the booths on the midway from which refreshments and others things are sold, were open but their attendants did not seem overjoyed at the prospect of business. The men in charge assured the officers that dancing and pool playing would not be allowed and accordingly no action was taken.

Following the receipt of the Township Committee Saturday, the proprietor of the place consulted counsel and an effort was made to evade the law by organizing an "association." It was believed if a social club could be formed that dancing on Sunday could be conducted under its auspices and the authorities could not stop it. A paper was circulated, to which many of the "regulars" signed their names, and a meeting was called for yesterday afternoon but so far as known it was not held.

The residents of Scotch Plains and those directly near the Park are greatly elated at the authorities' action and they attribute it mainly to Township Committeeman Thomas J. Nichol, who was appealed to upon his return from a vacation. While he was away the other committeemen did not care to act and the Westfield police could do nothing as it is out of their jurisdiction.

Central Improvements at Cranford.

New Jersey Central workmen have commenced the improvements ordered at the Cranford station. A tunnel is now being constructed beneath the tracks south of the depot and with its completion a substantial fence will be erected to divide east and west-bound passenger traffic. Other changes are contemplated that will make the facilities compare favorably with any station on the road.

SOUTH AMERICAN CURIO.

Bird's Nest Brought Here in a Bunch of Bananas.

Tarantulas and other insects without number have been brought into Plainfield in bunches of bananas, but it has remained for Louis Martial, of West Front street, to get a real curiosity. Snugly tucked away in a big bunch of the edible fruit which arrived from South America a few days ago, was a pretty little bird's nest, constructed of grass and fibres.

It was somewhat deeper than the nests seen in this vicinity, and at the bottom reposed two tiny eggs as undisturbed as if they were hanging high up in a banana tree in a South American province. Mr. Martial carefully removed the nest and its contents and by many who have seen them, the eggs were declared to be those of a species of humming bird common in the warm countries. The bunch was evidently picked while it was out foraging and it is probably still wondering what became of its home.

GUS FABER WINS FIRST HONORS AT PARK CLUB

He Returns Best Score in Competition for the Two Trophies.

VERY FEW GOOD CARDS

H. F. FOX ANE A. L. OTTERSON DIVIDE HONORS AT HILLSIDE.

Harold Robert Gets Three Points for Gaston Cup—G. E. Crase and R. W. Gladwin Qualify at Westfield.

Gus. W. Faber captured first honors for the President's and the Park Golf Club cups at the Park Golf Club, on Saturday, for the third consecutive time this season. While the course, as a result of the heavy rain on Friday, made it very soft, Faber's score of 97 was considered good. Owing to the weather condition the number of contestants on the course was small, besides many are away on their vacations.

There was an abundance of water in some places, as many players discovered during the early part of the day. It was not to be wondered that the scores were high. Morgan T. Townsend, who played with Gus. Faber, met with considerable trouble and failed to complete the eighteen holes. Raymond B. Carroll, another good player, returned a score far above his usual.

The rain on Friday considerably damaged the road leading from Mountain avenue to the club and the road leading down the hill also suffered.

Charles L. Nichols and J. L. Watson were second and third Golf Club on the handicap cup, while Raymond B. Carroll and L. W. Hallock captured the second and third honors for the club cup.

These scores were returned for the two cups:

Gus. W. Faber, 87, 0—87; Charles L. Nichols, 112, 23—90; J. L. Watson, 123, 30—93; L. W. Hallock, 109, 15—94; R. M. Hallock, 122, 15—97; Raymond B. Carroll, 104, 4—100; Nelson A. Miller, 117, 14—103.

Owing to the hilly condition of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, the rain on Friday did not affect it as badly as at the Park Golf Club. There was a good field out on Saturday to compete in the several events. H. F. Fox and A. L. Otterson were tie for first honors for the Golf Committee cup, with a net score of 75, and Robert Abbott finished second with a net score of 76. A number of the scores were low and the play was about up to the usual standard.

These scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

H. F. Fox, 92, 17—75; A. L. Otterson, 100, 25—75; Robert Abbott, 75, plus 1—76; W. L. Glenney, 76, plus 1—77; Frank O. Reinhart, 74, plus 4—78; Willard Wadsworth, 78, 0—78; Dudley H. Barrows, 84, 4—80; George T. VanBoskerck, 89, 9—80; T. W. T. Maxwell, 105, 23—83; L. B. Taylor, 99, 10—89.

In the play for the Gaston cup, Harold Robert, T. W. T. Maxwell and G. F. Earl won the honors with these scores:

Harold Robert, 103, 1—102; T. W. T. Maxwell, 105, 2—103; G. F. Earl, 117, 1—116.

Scores in the clock golf tournament at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday afternoon, were very poor, owing to the condition of the greens. The wet weather made the ground soggy and uneven, the whole surface being lumpy and soft. Miss Martha Robert won the hand-some loving-cup, offered by Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell, with a score of 34. There were about a dozen entries in all.

Two events attracted a number of golf enthusiasts to the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday. The first, a ball sweepstakes, was won by H. W. Gladwin and W. J. Beggert, while G. E. Crase and H. W. Gladwin qualified in the Governors' competition. These scores were returned in the competition:

G. E. Crase, 97, 21—76; H. W. Gladwin, 104, 26—78; F. P. Condit, 98, 14—79; C. F. Worth, 111, 30—81; W. J. Beggert, Jr., 94, 12—83; A. D. Tuttle, 96, 13—84; R. I. Townley, 94, 10—84; S. A. Trevrett, 97, 10—87; J. W. Woodward, 97, 10—87; R. K. Taylor, 108, 18—90; A. E. Keller, 110, 18—92.

PAYS $1,000 TO STRING WIRES IN TOWNSHIP

Telephone and Telegraph Co. Agrees to Terms Made by Fanwood Authorities.

TWENTY YEARS LEASE

WANTED PRIVILEGE FOR NINETY-NINE YEARS, BUT WAS REFUSED.

Second Time Township Committee Has Profited in Granting Franchise—Dictated to Street Railway Company.

For the privilege of stringing its wires through the lower end of Fanwood Township, the Northeastern Telegraph and Telephone Company has paid the Township Committee $1,000. The terms were only recently agreed upon after the concern had found that the only way it could complete its big trunk line was to pay the amount asked. No other township in the State has received as high an amount for such a franchise and the Fanwood officials have been highly commended for their tact in forcing the corporation to accept the conditions.

An erecting gang in the employ of the company has been working through North Jersey for several months building the trunk line and when the Fanwood township line was reached, the committee was applied to for permission to set up poles and string wires along Raritan road, which runs from the Westfield line to the Middlesex county line near Alison. It was stated that no local business was to be sought and that in other places the necessary permission had been granted free. This did not suit the committee, however, and the applicants were informed that the necessary privilege would cost $1,000.

The company declined to pay a cent but after suspending work awhile and finding that there was no way out of it, the committee was informed that $1,000 would be paid for a ninety-nine year lease. The committee would only agree to a twenty year permit and this was the franchise eventually given. For Fanwood township, the papers were signed by a committee composed of Chairman Thomas J. Nichol, Theodore Bruchman and Ivan Goodman.

This is the second time that the township has gained in giving out franchises. When the Westfield and Elizabeth Railway Company, now the Public Service Corporation, asked permission to lay tracks through its confines, the terms were not suitable to the committee and were rejected. Meeting after meeting was held and although the residents were anxious for the road to go through, their representatives were not until the company paid for the valuable franchise and they finally won out. An agreement was drawn up that was acceptable to both sides and it was passed, since then the terms having been copied by municipalities throughout the State.

ANOTHER TROLLEY MERGER.

P. S. C. Said to be Seeking Direct Line to the Shore.

It is reported in trolley circles that in the near future the Public Service Corporation will absorb the system of the Jersey Central Traction Company at Red Bank, efforts having been made by the corporation to take in this line as well as the Monmouth County Electric Company, so that they will have direct communication with the shore.

There are several rumors afloat to the effect that the traction company is to be dissolved and that a number of Newark capitalists will take charge of the road, eventually merging it with the Public Service. Both the Public Service Corporation and the traction company are extending their lines toward South Amboy, where they will join each other.

Accident to Auto.

While running his automobile Saturday afternoon, E. A. Laing had occasion to suddenly reverse a lever and in so doing the gearing refused to work smoothly so that two cog wheels became jammed and eight cogs were wrenched from one of them. The damage is such that a new wheel is necessary, and the machine is now at Lougheed's garage.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Joseph Connors Demonstrating Cancelling Machine for Uncle Sam.

From an ordinary workman in a Brooklyn machine shop to a traveling inspector of cancelling machine in the employ of the Government is the rapid promotion that has come to Joseph Connors, son of Edward Connors, of West Third street. Taking advantage of his spare time, the young man studied industriously and when the position of foreman was declared vacant in the Brooklyn shop where letter cancelling machines are made, he was selected for the position.

Afterwards he was advanced further and when the government asked for an inspector to tour the country, Connors was recommended. He was soon appointed and is now in Michigan demonstrating the workings of the machine to postoffice employes. He will go further West during the present month and will return to Plainfield some time in September. Mr. Connors' success has been heard of with pleasure by his many local friends and his chances for further advancement are considered very good.

Mr. Hobbie to Wed.

Invitations has been issued for the wedding of Miss Florence Margaret Hughes, daughter of Mrs. Elisabeth M. Hughes, of Waltham, Mass., to Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here. The ceremony will take place at the Hughes' home in Waltham, Mass., on Wednesday, August 17.

Group of Girls Carrying Weights Black Full of Grapes to the Winery to be Crushed and Made into Wine.

The Speer Wine Company, Passaic N. J.,

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal, as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

GETTING AND SPENDING.

Americans as a Rule Make Considerable Money, But Do Not Hoard It.

We are glad to learn from an intelligent foreigner, Dr. Emil Reich, that we are not a dollar-grabbing people, says the Brooklyn Eagle. He has lived with us for five years, has studied our ways, and he reports to his fellow-Germans that our faults have been exaggerated. He says that while ours is a country where the most money is earned by the individual, it is also the land where the least value is attached to it. We hope that this is so. We had grown so accustomed to seeing ourselves in European cartoons as too intent on stuffing our pockets to notice where our morals were straying to that we had almost begun to believe that we needed missionaries from abroad.

The doctor is both wrong and right. A conspicuous but hardly representative element does devote itself to making money, and little more. It is not identified with anything that makes a nation better of greater. It is not active in science, scholarship, research or art; it is not useful in industry; it does not set any desirable precedents in fashion and observance; it is not religious; it is never satisfied with its material gains, however big they may be, and will ashamed of its greed, reaching after millions which it can never use as eagerly as if there were not another dollar in the world. But we have, withal, our generous millionaires, who are more genuine than those of any other country, and we have among the common people a respect for thrift, yet a willingness to spend that makes them different from Europeans of the same rank who take up their abode with us.

And it is that tendency the doctor has reported rightly. We make more than others, but we spend both carelessly and for advantage. The American mechanic's home is brightened by pictures; well-made furniture, carpets and tables are for his use; he has books on the shelf; has a parlor organ, or even a piano; he goes to the play once in awhile, and expects a few holidays in the summer, when he can visit some crowded seashore. The American professional man lives in his own house or comfortable apartments, and dresses and lives nearly up to his income, no matter what it is. He is never averse to receiving large fees, but he is averse to storing them away in vaults. And this easy-getting and free-spending and also at a larger view of life than can obtain among peoples who are forever counting the pennies and trying to minimize expenditures. Such people will have few of the wholesome pleasures that we enjoy, and their lives lack range and variety. The individual who works for $10 a week and saves $9 of it is your true type of money-maker, but he is not an American.

JAP HUMBLE NO LONGER.

Since His Countrymen Have Beaten the Russians Servant Becomes Proud.

"We have a Jap servant at my house," said Berswiggle, relates the New York World, "and he's a bit. When my wife hired him he was as meek and lowly as you could ask for, but since his countrymen began to swat the bear he has lost that humility, and now is so puffed up that I can't stand for him. If Japan keeps on licking Russia, our Jap will finally boss us around, I imagine, if we keep him till then.

"Just to show you. The other night my wife went out into the kitchen to fix a salad for dinner, as the Jap isn't good at fancy things. The little fellow is scrupulously clean, and to keep the kitchen floor from spots generally has a newspaper spread in front of the stove and the sink.

"As my wife went in the kitchen she took a newspaper off the set tubs and threw it, spread open, on the floor, to walk on.

"He smiled as she put the paper down, but suddenly he made a dive for it and nearly tipped my wife over as he grabbed the paper from the floor and began to brush it off against his coat.

"'Why,' said my wife, noticing with astonishment the little heathen's excitement and wondering what she had done to occasion it, 'what's the matter?'

"For reply the saffron youth exhibited the newspaper on which she had been walking, and on the first page of which was a picture of the mikado of Japan. Pointing to this picture, he said, in a voice tearful with pride:

"'My king!'

"Then he put the paper carefully away and spread another on the floor."

Extreme of Politeness.

"The car was entirely empty, with the exception of one man, and his condition was exactly the reverse," said Miss Cayenne. "As I entered, he rose, made me an unsteady but magnificent bow, and said: 'Madam, pleashe be kind 'nough to asshept thish plashe.' There was nothing else for me to do, so I thanked him and sat down. And for 20 blocks that idiot hung from a strap, swaying in the breeze, with not a soul in the car but ourselves. Occasionally I have been taken for other women, but I never before had anyone think that I was a car-full."—San Francisco Argonaut.

From Paving Blocks.

An ingenious use has been found for the discarded wood blocks with which London streets are paved. Several toy manufacturers now purchase these blocks which are not damaged in the process of being torn up, for the purpose of making cheap toys out of them. Owing to the fact that the raw material is purchased so cheaply, the home manufacturers are in a position to outretail their foreign competitors.—Toy Trade.

NOT OF THE IDLE RICH.

Notable Sons of Wealthy Americans Who Do Not Fritter Away Their Time.

Not all sons of wealthy families give themselves over to the frivolities presumed to be the trade-mark of the "400," says the Atlanta Constitution.

John Jacob Astor, for instance, spends most of his spare time in studying and experimenting in electrical science. With a fortune approximating $100,000,000 he finds no time for idleness. He has developed a system of marine turbines which old engineers say are destined to be of great practical value; and while he has taken out patents on these inventions, he has declared that all the benefits of his discovery are to be freely given to the world.

Cornelius Vanderbilt insisted upon learning the trade of locomotive building by working in the shops of the Vanderbilt railroads. He has invented a fire box which is said to have practically revolutionized the freight locomotive, and now this is being used on a number of the principal railroads of the country.

J. Pierpont Morgan's only son, who is named after him, worked for several years as a clerk in the different departments of the great Morgan banking house before he was taken into his father's office to learn the elements of higher finance. He is a serious and hard-working business man, and is now the practical head of the London house.

George Gould is looked upon as one of the best business men in America. He was given absolute control of the Gould fortune upon his father's death, and has doubled it. He is in every sense a man of affairs, and he takes no more time for loafing than his father did. Howard Gould is, like his elder brother, a serious business man not given to frivolity.

Peter Cooper Hewitt inherited a fortune from his father, Abram S. Hewitt, but he has devoted himself to the study of electrical science with magnificent results. His Cooper Hewitt mercury light not only a practical but a commercial success. He is devoting himself now to the problems of electrical power transmission and to wireless telegraphy.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Harry Payne Whitney, John D. Sprecikes, Clarence Mackay, George Crocker, John R. Drexel and James H. Hyde are cited as other illustrations of the way the sons of very rich Americans are fully meeting the responsibilities placed upon them. Each in his particular sphere has demonstrated that he is fully capable of holding his own place in the lists of captains of industry.

Such men are good citizens. Their careers put to shame the many feather-brained and pinheaded sons of noveau riche families who seem to think that idleness and frivolity are synonymous with gentility.

CORSETS FOR THE NOSE.

Form of Facial Beautifier Much in Demand in London Society at Present.

The "smart" set in society—and their followers in humble life—will do almost anything, says the London Daily News, to "improve" their personal appearance. Cutting dimples has been the rage for some time past, and the writer knows that "dimple cutters" in the West End have been doing quite big business during the present season. Ladies who never dreamed of having dimples before have now got what they think admirable as specks upon the face and neck. What will happen when dimples go out of fashion it is difficult to surmise, but no doubt the "beauty doctors" will be able to make the necessary repairs.

Our contemporary, the Medical Press and Circular, in its current issue deals with another of the latest novelties in this direction. It emanates—like other things of the kind—from Paris and is a "special corset for the nose." It is claimed for this that prolonged and severe pressure for the correction of a supposed malformation may be most injurious under certain circumstances; while it is questionable if mere alteration in position would have the slightest effect in removing a "bottle" nose or in overcoming a chronic rosacea. To the practice our medical contemporary applies this sledge-hammer denunciation:

"To lower the art of surgery to the level of mere facial beautification may be sometimes undignified, but to tamper with the anatomical outlines of the human countenance is one of the most insidious forms of quackery when undertaken by unskilled hands, and for the sake of pampering a foolish vanity."

Boy Is Drowned by a Fish.

Arthur Langrige, son of a business man at Corpus Christi, Tex., was drowned in Corpus Christi, in an unusual manner. The boy, about eight years old, was seated on a wharf fishing. A violent movement showed that a large fish had attacked the bait and the boy attempted to haul it from the water. He was pulled off the wharf into nine feet of water and sank. It was found after a three hours' search. The fishing tackle was taken out into the Gulf of Mexico by whatever had attacked the bait.

Danger in Mosquitoes.

The houses of the laborers who are improving the harbor of Rio de Janeiro have been covered with screens in order to minimize the chances of nocturnal damage by mosquitoes infected with the germs of yellow fever.

Silk in Servia.

Silk cocoon cultivation is becoming one of Servia's national industries. Last year there were collected in that kingdom 345,000 pounds of silk cocoon. The government is distributing free of charge the eggs of the silkworm.

PLANS FOR NEXT SEASON'S BALL TEAM

The "Plainfield" Nine to be Put on the Diamond Will be a Strong Aggregation.

ENCLOSED GROUNDS

GEORGE JOHNSTON WILL BE THE MANAGER.

New York Americans and New York Nationals May Cross Bats With Alis This Fall.

Although baseball here this season has had its ups and downs, plans are already being laid for next year's team. It is proposed to make a number of improvements at Crescent Oval, provided a long enough lease can be secured on the grounds, and there seems to be every reason to believe that it can be. It will be called the "Plainfield" nine.

Among the improvements now in contemplation is to enclose the grounds with a substantial fence and to build a large wing to the present grandstand that will accommodate half again as many persons as the present one. It is also proposed to make room for carriages and automobiles and the outfield will receive attention.

George Johnston will undoubtedly remain as manager and he expects to retain the present team, with a strong pitching department. The idea is to give the public a fast article of baseball and only the best and strongest teams will be brought to this city. Manager Johnston is much pleased with his present team, believing it to be one of the strongest in the State. With a strong twirler he is sure that he can meet the best aggregations in this part of the country.

Mr. Johnston is now negotiating with a first-class pitcher to remain with the team for the balance of the season and if successful, he will have no fear as to the Westfield team. If Cronin is not able to pitch against Westfield on Saturday, Mr. Johnston will have a man equally as strong. He has every reason to believe that he will take a majority of the remaining contests in the series with Westfield.

A strong attraction for the close of the season will be either the New York Nationals or the New York Americans and possibly both. Mr. Johnston has practically closed the deal for the appearance of at least one of these teams here and he believes that a fine exhibition will result. The contests will be played right after the close of the big league season and before the around-the-world trip is taken.

WILLING WORKERS' SOCIAL

TRINITY CHURCH ORGANIZATION GIVES SUCCESSFUL OUTDOOR AFFAIR.

After two postponements, the open air social of the Trinity Reformed church Willing Workers was given Thursday on the lawn surrounding the premises of Horace J. Martin, of Marion avenue. It was well attended and proved successful financially as well as socially, a substantial sum being cleared. It will be applied to the building fund of the church.

The grounds were brilliantly illuminated with paper lanterns and in their light croquet and other games were played. Fancy articles were sold from booths and there were many devices to add to the amusement and swell the proceeds. Musical features were solos given by Miss Florence Bennett and Mrs Coddington; piano selections by Miss Hazel Martin and cornet selections by Edward Young.

The committee which had the affair in charge consisted of Mrs. M. V. Kinney, Mrs. William Lindsay and Miss Sarah Hummer.

Improving Big Tract.

The Mills' estate, of Morristown, is cutting and sub-dividing 150 acres of land at Westfield and C. M. Meeker, of this city, has a contract measuring to $4,000 to grade and lay it out into avenues and streets. H. C. VanEmburgh, as civil engineer, is also engaged in the work of improvement.

Invitations for Wedding.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Mabel G. Dean, daughter of Mrs. Laura Dean, of East Front street, to Frank E. Kesselring, of the borough. It will take place at the home of the bride's mother on Monday evening, September 5.

Martine His Sponsor.

Delancy Nichol, of New York, who has just been appointed vice chairman of the National Democratic Committee, was first brought to fame when Randolph B. Martine, then district attorney of New York, appointed him his assistant. Randolph B. Martine was a cousin of James E. Martine, of this city.

AERIE OF EAGLES FOR PLAINFIELD SOON

Movement on Foot for Organization of Fraternal Order of Eagles in This City.

CIRCULATING PETITION

"TIM" SULLIVAN, OF NEW YORK, INTERESTED IN THE SCHEME.

Fifteen Plainfielders in the Elizabeth Aerie—President Roosevelt a Member of the Order.

Known throughout the State as a home for secret societies and kindred organizations, Plainfield is soon to have another lodge added to its already large list. Members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which is considered one of the strongest in the Western part of the country, have taken steps to establish a local aerie, as the lodges are called, and a petition list has been put in circulation. Thirty names have already been secured and before the institution date is set it is thought the number will reach fifty. Timothy D. Sullivan, one of New York's best known politicians and the head of the aerie in that city, made the request that the charter be applied for before September 22 in order to have the Plainfielders attend the annual convention at Baltimore as the "baby" aerie, but this has been found impossible. It will probably be October before the organization is perfected.

The Elizabeth aerie includes 15 Plainfielders in its membership and it is they who are working to secure the local foothold. Among those most interested are Charles Stransenbach, Samuel Terry, Daniel Foros, Fred Moore, Daniel J. Shea and Rudolph Kampf.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles has gained thousands of members in the East during the past year and it bids fair to rival many of the older established organizations within a short time. Its principals are akin to those of the Elks but differ in the fact that it pays sick and death benefits. One of the best known enthusiasts in the order is President Roosevelt, who was made a member while one of his Western trips and who has since attended all the big conventions and affairs it has conducted. In New York city it has become an important factor in social affairs and when the annual meeting was held there last year Mayor Low welcomed the thousands of visiting Eagles.

MR. BESLER ON C.R.R. OF N.J.

VICE PRESIDENT EXPECTS GREAT INCREASE IN ROAD'S BUSINESS.

W. G. Besler, of North Plainfield, vice president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, expects a general improvement in the business of the road in the fall.

"We are now expending $1,000,000 at our ferry landing in New York and are also making improvements at Thirty-third street, which will increase our facilities and enable us to render better service," he said yesterday.

"We have enlarged considerably on the plan for the proposed extensions at Bayonne, N. J. It will not mean an arrangement to enter Staten Island, but will provide only for a spur 1,000 *feet long, which we have long de*sired. The outlook for the iron industry, which is the barometer of trade, is improving, the crop prospects over the country are good, and there are other favorable signs which cause me to feel happy."

GOT RIGHT OF WAY.

Traction Company Obtained Permit Through Union Township.

The Morris County Traction Company has been granted a franchise to build a trolley line through Union township to connect at Springfield with the proposed road which will run to Summit and into Morris County.

The grant was made at the monthly meeting of the Union Township Committee. The application was originally made about a year ago, and it was for a permit to construct the road from the Springfield bridge along Morris avenue to Elizabeth, connecting with the Public Service Corporation line at Cherry street.

The company agrees to begin the construction of the road within four months and to have it completed within a year.

The fare from Springfield line to the Central railroad depot in Elizabeth will be five cents. The cars are to run on half-hour headway.

PLAINFIELD PASTORS ON "MODEL" SALOON

Local Ministers Express Their Views on Bishop Potter's Experiment.

SOME CONDEMNED HIM

DR. SHODGRASS, SAYS IT IS MERELY CHOOSING LESSER EVIL.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Explains the Idea—Opinions of Other Local Clergymen on the Plan.

Included in the storm of protest from all over the country that has followed Bishop Potter's participation in the dedication of the "Subway Tavern" in New York, for the elevation of tippling, is emphatic disapproval of his action by Plainfield clergymen. Several local pastors who were approached on the subject expressed the belief that the bishop had erred in his action and that instead of bettering the saloon evil it will tend to further it.

The saloon in question is supposed to be a "model" affair or a "poor man's club," the primary idea being to "immoralize immorality" from the drinking habit. The originators propose to eliminate that profit in the saloon business which comes from the sale of inferior goods and encourages men to drink more than they should. A man can enter the Subway Tavern and use the place as a clubroom, look over papers and magazines, smoke his pipe or cigar and sit in the company of decent fellows where the treating habit is discouraged. A man showing signs of intoxication is not to be served, women do purchase beer at the fountain of the front part and, in short, the saloon is to be conducted on the lines of the taverns in England started by Lord Grey. This is an ex*tract from the statements made at the* dedication.

Among the Plainfield clergymen who expressed an opinion in the matter yesterday, was Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, who has followed up Bishop Potter's action and who is also thoroughly acquainted with Lord Grey's plan and its workings. He did not approve of the bishop's participation, he said, and he did not believe that the P. E. church would uphold him in any way.

"It is simply substituting a lesser for a greater evil," he continued, "but any that encourages a man to take his first glass of liquor. Of course the proprietors say they will not serve a man who shows signs of intoxication but it is only a step from this place to dozens of others where no restriction is made. Instead of this Subway Tavern what the country needs is a substitution for the saloon like the Holly Tree Inn in England, where the drinking of liquor is discouraged and coffee, tea, milk and chocolate is to be had in abundance. Bishop Potter says the saloon is the poor man's club but it need not be necessarily. The Y. M. C. A. has in nearly every city warm, comfortable and well lighted reading rooms where everyone is welcomed without having to buy a drink for the privilege. I believe there should be a Y. M. C. A. building for every saloon and in this way their influence can be offset."

When Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace P. E. church, was asked this morning if he believed the Episcopal church would approve of the Bishop's action, he answered he doubted it and he did not believe the Bishop of New York would take any cognizance of it.

"His presiding at the exercises," said the clergyman, "was a questionable action but he is right in a good many views. For a long time he has argued that it was an injustice for him to have dozens of privileges at fashionable clubs while the poor man had no place to go but the saloon after his day's work. It is his belief, that if the saloon can be remodelled and liquor sold as are groceries it will mean the uplifting of the evil. Personally I believe the Bishop realized fully what he was doing when he went into the place but whether or nor it will bring about any good remains a question that can only be decided in time."

Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp spoke of the saloon reform as very grave question. Social reformers have considered it time and time again but they have found that while the church has sought to do away with it they have failed to suggest a substitute. The evil must certainly needs a club, he said, and since he is not able to get in costly organizations, something must be provided for the poor.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E church, said he had not followed up the facts, having just returned from his vacation but he did not surprise him as he was aware that Bishop Potter has been working along this line for several years. His idea, he said, is but a copy of the Gothenburg plan in Europe which has been tried with varying results and which was once attempted in North Carolina. He also referred to the efforts of Rev. Dr. Rainsford, rector of St. George's Episcopal church, New York, along the same lines.

Mrs. David Thomas and family, of Washington Heights, New York, have returned to their home after spending a few days with Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, of Liberty street.

ACCOMMODATIONS FOR CENTRAL'S COACHES

Arrangements Being Made to Provide for Passenger Car Storage at Dunellen.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS

SWITCH TOWERS AND ADDITIONAL TRACKAGE.

Dunellen a Railroad Man's Town Somerville Terminus Receiving Attention at This Time.

The New Jersey Central is preparing to provide greater facilities for caring for passenger coaches at Dunellen, and has a number of other improvements in contemplation. The company recently acquired an additional strip of land at Dunellen, the present accommodations for coaches being too small. A switching tower will soon be erected at that point and another one near the freight house in this city.

Improvement are also being made at Roselle, the terminus for the Roselle, Newark and New York trains. The turntable is being repaired and additional trackage will be laid. The Somerville terminus for certain trains is also receiving attention.

The trains running between Roselle and Newark and New York take care of a certain class of commuters, giving them quick service and frequent trains, an advantage over the Pennsylvania.

The same is true of the trains running between Dunellen and Somerville and New York. They all serve their own particular purpose in a way that would not be possible if the company was obliged to have but one or two such terminals. It is for this reason that the company is spending considerable money at these terminal points with a view to making them as efficient as possible.

This arrangement permits the crews to make their homes in these suburban towns, away from the noise and inconvenience of other larger towns or cities. In nearly every case the employes own their homes and take special pride in them. Not only that Mutual Hall Association's Affair.

The Plainfield Mutual Hall Association, incorporated, will hold an entertainment in T. A. B. Hall on Thursday night, August 18. Mr. Vandervere, of Elizabeth, will furnish music. The committee in charge consists of J. C. Connett, chairman; C. C. Irby, secretary; Dr J. C. Anderson, treasurer; E. A. Austin and W. H. Jones but they frequently become identified with the interests of the towns, take a hand in the government of them and are not infrequently elected to office, where they serve their constituents faithfully.

This is especially true at Dunellen, where on several occasions railroad men have held positions as Councilmen. These employes are of the better class of mechanics and they are most desirable in any town. They patronize home trade and generally work for those things which tend to advance the best interests of the communities in which they live.

ELIZABETHWANTS CONVENTION

DEMOCRATS MAKE A BID FOR MEETING TO NOMINATE A CONGRESSMAN.

It was decided at the meeting of the Union County Democratic Committee, held at Elizabeth, last night, to recommend that the Congressional convention be held in Elizabeth in September, and Col. D. F. Collins, R. H. McAdams and Frederick Zior were appointed a committee to confer with representatives from Morris and Warren Counties, with a view to selecting the place of meeting. There will also be a meeting of the executive committee of the county committee, the county and Elizabeth city committees to arrange for a ratification mass meeting.

John Mooney, chairman of the county committee, presided last night, and Frederick Zior was secretary pro tem. There was a unanimous endorsement of Parker and Davis and stirring ad*dresses were made by Former City* Attorney Connolly, and Charles H. Moore, of Elizabeth, and James E. Martine, of this city. The harmony now existing among local Democrats was referred to and it was a source of gratification to learn that the Hearst and Democrats Clubs are united and will attend the outing to be held soon.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Edith Blanche Clark, daughter of Mrs. C. H. Clark, of Grove street, to William McD. Corbell, of West Fifth street. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Miss Carrie Beiter, of East Front street, has returned from a visit with Newark relatives.

LET A LAMP FALL; DAMAGE WAS $1,000

John Trotter's Residence Escaped Total Destruction by Timely Arrival of Firemen.

BATTLE WITH FLAMES

GAS FUMES INTERFERE WITH WORK OF FIRE LADDIES.

Blazing Oil Runs Down Register and Spreads the Flames to First Floor—Loss on House and Furniture.

Accidentally dropping a lighted lamp which he had been carrying through an upper room, at 12:15 Friday a. m. John Trotter, of 131 Berkman street, narrowly escaped severe burns in the fire which followed and which would have destroyed his home but for the prompt arrival of the city department. He fought the flames for ten minutes before an alarm was sent in and retreated only when he was practically exhausted and scorched about the hands, face and head. The blaze was killed after an hour's hard work on the part of the firemen with a total loss of $1,000, divided evenly between the structure and furniture. Both are covered by insurance.

Trotter had been out during the evening and was about to retire when he heard a noise, supposed he had the lamp in his hand when it fell to one side suddenly and dropped to the floor. It landed alongside of an open register leading to the room below and unknown to him blazing oil ran through it and dropped down. Trotter seized rugs and clothe, finally putting out the flames upstairs only to find that a worse fire was raging below. He sought to put this out but was finally forced back. In the meantime his brother-in-law, a young boy, had gone first to Herckman street and South avenue to send in an alarm and failing to secure a key had returned to Richmond and Front streets, where he pulled box 16.

When the department reached the scene the flames had gotten outside of the house and were creeping along the porch and sides. Two streams were laid in and they were soon gotten under control. The structure was badly burned but not gutted and can easily be repaired. Mrs. Trotter was not home at the time, and not an article of clothing or furniture was saved.

Several of the firemen were made very sick while at work by inhaling escaping gas. There is no curb shutoff at the place and the breaking of a pipe filled the house with the deadly fumes. Captain Daley, of No. 1 Hose Company, was partially overcome and made very sick and Chief Doane was twice forced back. Others suffered from the effects until the flow was shut off from the cellar.

TO PROTECT HIS ESTATE

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST WILLIAM A. WHEELER BEFORE COMMISSIONERS.

To have him declared an habitual drunkard in order to protect his estate, William A. Wheeler, of East Seventh street, was arraigned before a jury in the city court, this morning. The proceedings were viva voce by Dr. C. B. Parburst and William A. Codington, Esq., who sat as commissioners appointed by the Court of Chancery. Many witnesses were examined and the jury after a brief deliberation returned with a verdict of "habitual drunkenness."

Wheeler was formerly a stationer with a large business in New York city but through excessive indulgence in intoxicants he became incompetent to manage it or to take care of his estate. Two months ago he was sent to the State Hospital at Morris Plains but according to law he still has charge of his estate. By having him declared a drunkard proceedings can be taken to have it placed in the care of others and this will now be done.

The members of the jury were the following: Floyd T. Woodhall, John J. Kenney, James F. Buckle, J. F. MacDonald, James C. Pope, U. R. Crane, D. W. Titsell, Cornelius van Herwerden, Frank H. Smith, Harry W. Marshall, Dr. Pocock and J. Hervey Doane.

Election Board Officers.

The Union County Election Board has been organized by the election of John L. Crowell, of Rahway, as chairman; J. W. Murray, of this city, secretary; S. R. Ryno, of Rahway, clerk; and Oliver Conlon, of Elizabeth, sergeant-at-arms.

Miss Titsworth Engaged.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Ella V. Titsworth, daughter of the late Mrs. Emma Titsworth, of Madison Avenue, and Herbert S. Putnam, of Rochester, N. Y.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Aug. 14: "Obeying the Call of God When Obedience Is Hard."
Gen. xxii, 1-8.

Human sacrifice has put an ineffaceable stain on all the religions of antiquity. In the days of Abraham it prevailed in all the nations around him. In Chaldea, from which he emigrated, he had become familiar with it as practiced at all the great sanctuaries. The discoveries of the last few years at some of these very shrines have shown unmistakable marks that such sacrifices were not uncommon there.

Abraham was being led of Jehovah into a purer religion and a higher understanding of the nature of God. It will take long ages for men to believe that God is not to be propitiated with the blood of beasts, and even as late as the days of Micah, the prophet, he will need to cry, "Shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?" It is exceedingly difficult to teach men that what Jehovah requires is "to do justly, to love kindness and to walk humbly with God." Many lessons of many kinds are needed before the truth in its fullness will be grasped.

This obedience of Abraham is one of the great object lessons of our holy religion. Paul, James and John always write regarding this transaction, "God did prove Abraham," and the conclusion was, "Now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from Me."

There is a double truth revealed here. The first and one most frequently spoken of is the obedience of Abraham. It is, in fact, an illustration of the supreme need in human life of fidelity to some great love. Whatever we may prize, nothing is to be preferred to God. All we have is to be held subject to his disposal.

This is the inexorable demand of the religious nature. On no other terms can we be religious. It is the call of our own nature in response to the call of the divine nature. It is the one and only possible decisive test of the genuineness of our devotion. In some sense and under some form it comes to all of some

HAVOC WROUGHT BY SMALL CLOUD BURST

Thousands of Dollars Damage Results From Terrific Downpour of Rain.

BROOKS OVERFLOWING

BUILDINGS, FENCES AND TREES ARE CARRIED AWAY.

Factory Suspends Work and Railroad Train Held up—Borough Residents Among the Heavy Losers.

Succeeding a harmless shower which passed over in a few moments, the city and borough was visited Friday afternoon, by a miniature cloudburst which caused thousands of dollars damage and left streets, farms and gardens in a state of ruin. Rain fell in blinding torrents, swelling small streams to raging torrents that leaped out of their course and tore away fences and small buildings and flooded lowlands and buildings. In the city the trolley cars were blocked, telephone and fire alarm wires were crippled and many of the streets resembled rivers. The down-pour lasted about two hours and in that time a total of 2.82 inches of rainfall was recorded. The total for the day was 3.07.

While the storm was at its height and for several hours afterward the rushing water did great damage, especially along the course of Stony brook, leading from Watchung through the borough, and Green brook from West End avenue through to Bound Brook. The banks were washed away and the foundations of several bridges were weakened. The factory of the Levering & Garrigues' Company at West Dunellen was forced to shut down as the water put out the engine fires and a passenger train on the Lehigh Valley road was held up for an hour.

Upper Somerset street was washed bare of macadam, the stones being deposited on lawns, and the damage, opposite Dr. Cooley's retreat will foot up to $1,000. Dr. Cooley himself is a heavy loser, while the damage done Former Mayor Wilson's grounds at "Tunlaw" is the worst he has ever known. His fencing was torn away, shrubbery uprooted and even flagstones lifted from the walks and carried a great distance. The foundation of August Wolf's barn at Grove street and Greenbrook road was washed out and the structure tilted part way over. All the small buildings bordering Stony brook from Greenbrook road to West End avenue were carried away and hundreds of chickens were drowned. One of the heaviest losers in this respect is Charles Faber, of Rockview avenue, who lost 200 Orpington fowls, these being one of the most valuable breeds. A large hole was washed out of the bank adjoining the Rockview Terrace bridge and of the many beautiful gardens in that section but few are left.

West Front street, Grant and West End avenues and parts of South Second street near the Potter Pressed Works were completely submerged during the storm in some places to a depth of four feet. Near the West End avenue bridge, the street and sidewalks suffered badly and the macadam will have to be relaid. At Grant avenue and Front street the water carried sand and gravel into the railway switches and several cars were derailed. Along Cedar brook the lowlands were flooded but the damage was not heavy. At Prospect avenue and East Ninth street, a deep gully was washed in the roadway and further to the near Randolph road a few fences were carried off.

Up in Watchung the ruin was widespread, nearly every resident sustaining some damage. The bridge near Demler's place was covered by eighteen inches of water and it was all but carried away. A valuable cow belonging to a farmer named Faber, in the Notch, was drowned early in the storm. The animal was grazing in a field and becoming alarmed rushed into deep water. It was carried several hundred feet along Stony brook and was dead when pulled out.

At 1:40, shortly after the start of the downpour, a single tap was recorded at fire headquarters. After this there was no communications between headquarters and the West End of the city on account of the crossing of wires. Linemen found the trouble and the necessary repairs were made, so that at 5 o'clock the entire system was in condition again.

A Pet Dog Poisoned.

A small white dog, which has been for some time a pet in the family of John H. Stevens, of Watchung avenue, was deliberately poisoned by some malicious person on Saturday night and died Sunday morning in great pain. The animal had never been complained of by any of the neighbors, but had always been a trusty pet of the family. Stevens is convinced that the poisoning was done maliciously.

LOCAL BANKING HOUSE GETS THE SCHOOL BONDS

Borough Board of Education Awards $36,000 Issue to Plainfield Trust Co.

THREE OTHER BIDDERS

WILL BE READY FOR DELIVERY ABOUT SEPTEMBER 5.

Contract For Erection of Building to be Given Out Friday Evening

—Plans Will Meet Appropriation.

A special meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education was held last evening for the purpose of receiving bids for $36,000 of four per cent. school bonds. They were allotted the Plainfield Trust Company, which offered to take them for $36,540 with accrued interest. There were three other bids as follows: Burlington Loan and Trust Company, $36,355; Kounts Brothers, New York, $36,097.86; H. L. Crawford & Company, New York, $36,407.75.

A certified check accompanied each bid and all were returned with the exception of the Trust Company's. The bonds are now in the hands of printers and will be ready for delivery September 5.

Although the amount secured was not as high in proportion as the amount bid for the Plainfield school bonds, the members of the Board expressed themselves greatly pleased with the result. They were also pleased that they had been secured by local concern as will leave the work of the finance committee in completing the details in transfer.

The only item of business transacted at the meeting was the passing of a resolution to purchase modelling clay from the Trenton Pottery Company and a check was drawn for payment of the first shipment. Adjournment was taken until next Friday evening when new bids will be opened for the erection of the new school building. It is thought they will be passed this time as the plans have been altered and many new contractors have looked them over and declared they will be covered by the appropriation.

LOCATES HER IN THE BOROUGH AT THE HOME OF A FRIEND.

Philip Swick, of Danville, was married to a young woman named Sargeant, of Mt. Bethel, on October 6, of last year by the Rev. M. Morris, of Oxford and neighbors who were intimate with them believe that they had been living happily ever since then.

This knowledge makes all the more mysterious an affair which happened last week. Swick went out of his house one morning to his regular employment and when he came back his wife was missing and the breakfast dishes were upon the table unwashed.

Swick had some inside information and started off on a hunt for his wife, finally locating her Friday night at 26 Chatham street, Plainfield, but the husband was able to get an interview with her only through the aid of a policeman.

It looks as though Mrs. Swick had left her husband for good and the acquaintances of both are in the dark as to the causes. Swick claims that he does not know why his wife left him. —Washington Star.

BALL PLAYERS WHEREABOUTS

WHERE SOME OLD FAVORITES ARE TO BE FOUND.

During the past two years many ball players, of more or less prominence, have been identified with teams in this city and vicinity, and the fans will, no doubt, be interested to know where they are playing at present. A number of them have been members of the Asia Club team, last season and this, and those who follow the sport can easily pick them out.

MASONIC HOME DEDICATION.

New Orphanage Will be Completed in October.

Early in October the Masonic members of the State will be called upon to take part in the dedication ceremonies of the new orphanage at the Masonic home in Burlington County.

The new orphanage will be entirely finished by the time of dedication.

There are now sixty two inmates in the home, of whom sixteen are orphans. There was one death during July and two additional inmates were received.

The beautiful grounds of the home, which are not excelled in this State, look immensely well just now, owing to the frequent rains.

The home is prosperous and the officers who made an inspection last Friday are highly pleased with the condition of affairs.

Fred Martin, of Jackson avenue, has gone to Camp Wanamasen, Asbury Park, to spend a month's vacation.

PARKER'S ADDRESS.

Democratic Candidate Accepts Nomination.

PROMISES POPULAR GOVERNMENT.

Denounces Class Legislation and Executive Usurpation—Tariff Revision and Regulation of Trusts—Imperialism.

Esopus, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The following is the address of Alton B. Parker accepting the Democratic nomination for the presidency of the United States:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I have resigned the office of chief judge of the court of appeals of this state in order that I may accept the responsibility that the great convention you represent has put upon me without possible prejudice to the court to which I had the honor to belong or to the eminent members of the judiciary of this state, of whom I may now say as a private citizen I am justly proud.

At the very threshold of this response and before dealing with other subjects I must, in justice to myself and to relieve my sense of gratitude, express my personal appreciation of the confidence reposed in me by the convention. After nominating me and subsequently receiving a communication declaring that I regarded the platform adopted as firmly and irrevocably established, a matter concerning which I felt it incumbent upon me to make known my attitude so that hereafter no suggestion of any kind that his support had been secured through indirection or mistake, the convention reiterated its determination that I should be the standard bearer of the party in the present contest. This mark of trust and confidence I shall ever esteem as the highest honor that could be conferred upon me, however whatever may be the fate of the campaign, the future can in no degree lessen or impair.

The platform speaks for itself upon which the party appeals to the country for its confidence and support clearly states the principles which were so well condensed in the first inaugural address of President Jefferson and points out with force and directness the course to be pursued through their proper application in order to secure needed reforms in both the legislative and administrative departments of the government. While unhesitating in its promise to correct abuses and to right wrongs heretofore existing, and which have caused; to investigate the several administrative departments of the government, the conduct of whose officials has created scandals, and punish those who have been guilty of a breach of their trust; to oppose the granting of special privileges by which the few may profit at the expense of the many; to favor honest economy in the expenditure of the moneys of the people and to that end to return once more to the principles of the founders of the republic by observing in disbursing the public funds the care and caution a prudent individual observes with regard to his private affairs, and which the platform assures conservative instead of rash action, the protection of the property rights of the people, encouragement for the benefit of all of man's inalienable rights, among which, as said in the Declaration of Independence are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Liberty, as understood in this country, means not only the right of freedom from actual servitude, imprisonment or restraint, but the right of every man to use his faculties in all lawful ways, to live and work where he will and to pursue any lawful calling he may choose. The personal rights of life, liberty and property are not only guaranteed to the citizen by the constitution of each of the several states, but the states are by the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States forbidden to deprive any person of any one of them without due process of law.

Occasionally, by reason of unnecessary or impatient agitation for reforms or because the limitations placed upon the delegated powers conferred by the constitution are disregarded by officials desiring to accomplish that which in their seems good, whether the power exists in them or not, it becomes desirable to call attention to the fact that the people, to whom all power resides, have seen fit through the medium of the constitution to limit the governmental powers conferred and to say to departments created by it, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther." To secure the safeguards which people have by the constitution separated and distributed among the three departments of government, and thereby established and judicial—certain powers, and it is the duty of those administering each department to act as to preserve rather than to destroy the potency of the checks and balances which, if maintained and thus secure the exercise of all the powers conferred by the people.

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to William C. Jarvis touching the perpetuity of our institutions, written many years after he had retired to private life, said, "If the three powers of our government maintain their mutual independence of each other many last long, but not if either can assume the authority of the other." It must be confessed that in the course of our history encroachments by employed powers not belonging to them. Statutes have been enacted which are expressly forbidden by the constitution, and statutes have been set aside as unconstitutional when by other departments not the provisions said to be offended against in their enactment. All this has been done with a good purpose, but it has disregard nevertheless of the fact that ours is a government of laws, not of men, devised by the people for the government of the governed." If we would have our government continue during the ages to come for which it was framed, we shall succeed us we must over be on our guard against the danger of the usurpation of that authority which resides in the whole people, whether the usurpation be by officials elected by the people or by the great departments of government or by a body of men acting without a commission from the people.

Impatience of the restraints of law as well as of its delays is becoming more and more manifest day by day. Within the past few years many instances have been brought to our attention where in different parts of the country persons supposed criminals have been seized and punished by a mob, notwithstanding the fact that the constitution of each state guarantees to every person within its jurisdiction the right to life, liberty or his property shall not be taken from him without due process of law.

In a few instances mine employers and employees dynamite is said to have been used by the latter, resulting in the loss of life and the destruction of property. The perpetrators of this crime against the laws of God and man and all others engaged in the commission of such crimes should after due trial and conviction, have had meted out to them the most rigorous punishment known in the law. This crime, added perhaps to others, led to the formation of a committee of citizens that, with the support of the military authority, deports from the state without trial persons suspected of belonging to the organization of which the perpetrators of the dynamite outrages were supposed to be members. In both cases the reign of law gave way to the reign of force. These illustrations represent some evidence of the failure of government to protect the citizen and his property, which not only justifies the action of your convention in this regard, but made it its duty to call attention to the fact that constitutional guarantees are violated whenever any citizen is denied the right to labor, to acquire and to enjoy property or to reside where his interests or inclination may determine, and the fulfillment of the assurance that "the rights and powers of the people, whether brought about by individuals or government agencies, should be secured by the judicial and supported by every citizen. The essence of good government lies in strict observance of constitutional limitations, enforcement of law and order and rugged opposition to all encroachment upon the sovereignty of the people.

The foregoing suggestions but emphasize the difficulties which exist to-day in our own and many other forms of government. It has been well said in substance that there are but two bases of government—one the power of the sword, sustained by the hand that wields it, and the other the power of the will sustained by an enlightened public sentiment. The difference in these powers is the difference between a government such as rests based on law and a written constitution, supported by intelligence and sustained, and a monarchy, sustained by force exerted by an individual, uncontrolled by laws other than those made or sanctioned by him. One represents constitutionalism, the other imperialism.

The great trust of to-day lies in its operation, excessive in many of its rates and so framed in particular instances as to enact legislation which is class legislation. So well understood has this view become that many prominent members of the Republican party in the recent state and state conventions have dared to voice the general sentiment on that subject. The party seems, however, to be collectively able to harmonize only upon a plank that admits that revision may from time to time be necessary, but in the phrased that it is expected to be satisfactory to those in favor of an increase in duty, to those who favor a reduction thereof and to those opposed to any change whatever.

Judged by the record of performance rather than that of promise on the part of that party in the past, it would seem as if the outcome in the event of its success would be to gratify the latter class. With absolute control in the legislative, executive and executive departments of the government since March 4, 1897, there has been no reduction nor an attempt at reduction in tariff duties. It is not unreasonable to assume in the light of that record that a further continuance of that party will not undertake a revision of the tariff downward in the event that it shall receive an indorsement at the polls or can secure a majority in the senate may consent. While therefore we are unable to give assurance that the party will not continue the excessive duties as burden them, it is due to them that we should state our position in the matter. We are not opposed to protection as the tariff, that we believe that it is demanded by the best interests of both manufacturer and laborer, and that the wages and beneficent revision of the tariff can be accomplished as soon as a Democratic congress and an executive in favor of it are elected without creating that condition of uncertainty and disturbance which has on other occasions manifested itself. This can be achieved by providing that such revision shall take effect in the month between the date of the enactment of the statute making a revision and the date of the presidential election. We deem it sufficient for the industry or business affected by such revision to adjust itself to the changed rate and conditions imposed. So confident am I in the belief that the democratic party can be safely trusted with the tariff is just that I indulge the hope that should a Democratic house of representatives and a Democratic senate with a Democratic president by the people even a Republican senate may heed the warning and consent to give at least some measure of relief to the people.

The combinations, popularly called trusts, which aim to secure a monopoly of trade in the necessaries of life as well as in those things that are employed upon the farms, in the mines, in the shops and other fields of industry have been encouraged and stimulated by excessive tariff duties, which have given to them a substantial market in the necessities of eighty millions of people free from healthful competition. With so large a market and highly remunerative prices continually ruling, if free from healthful competition would naturally be reached, the temptation of all engaged in the same line of production to enter into a combination to control the market and a resulting reduction of prices has proved irresistible in a large number of instances. It is well known that the net result of enacting laws that foster such inequitable conditions is most unfortunate for the people as a whole, and it would seem as if all ought to agree that the effective remedy would be to appropriately modify the offending law. The growth of monopoly, of which complaint is made, cannot be charged to the open doors of the courts of this country. The decisions of the supreme court of the United States, the court of last resort in this state and the courts of most other states warrant the assertion that the present law of trusts affords a complete legal remedy against monopolies. The fact that they have multiplied in number and increased in power has been due not to the failure of the courts to apply the law as properly invoked by administrative officials or private individuals, but to the failure of officials charged with the duty of enforcing the law to take the necessary procedure to procure the judgments of the courts in the premises. Legislation is necessary only to the extent of defining the duties of officials and the courage to enforce existing law. While in some cases it may be wise and common law, if it should be made to appear that it is a mistaken one then I favor such legislation as will not violate constitutional limitations as will give the people a just and full measure of protection.

It is difficult to understand how any citizen of the United States, much less a democrat, can view with favor or even tolerate the thought of permanently denying the right of self government to the Filipinos. Can we say to the liberty loving minds of our descendants reverence and devotion for a government by the people which we have denied to the people of the inhabitants of distant countries whose territory we have acquired either by purchase or by force? Can we say to the Filipinos, "Your lives, your liberty and your property to be taken from you without due process of law for all time," and expect we will long glory in that fundamental principle of law now become incorporated, in substance and effect, into the constitution of every state as well as into the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States? Can we hope for the respect of the civilized world while proudly guaranteeing to every citizen of the United States that no law shall be made or enforced which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States or deny to any person the equal protection of the laws and at the same time not only deny similar rights to the inhabitants of the Philippines, but take away from them the right or trial by jury and place their lives and the disposition of their property in the hands of men whom we send to them to be their governors? We shall certainly run to a nation if we make any such attempt. Viewing the question even from the standpoint of national selfishness, there is no prospect that the twenty millions of dollars expended for the purchase of the islands and the six hundred and fifty millions said to have been since disbursed will ever come back to us. The accident of war brought the Philippines into our possession, and we are not at liberty to disregard the responsibility which thus came to us, but that responsibility will be best subserved by preparing the islanders as rapidly as possible for self government and giving to them the assurance that it will come and as soon as they are reasonably prepared for it. There need be no fear that the assertion so often made of late that we have now become a world power will then be withdrawn. Once in a world power, and as such it must be maintained, but I deny that it is at all recently that the people of the United States have become a world power. Within a century ago, when, having thrown off foreign domination, the people established a free government, the source of whose authority sprung and was continuously to proceed from the will of the people themselves. It grew as a world power as its sturdy citizens, to whose natural increase were added immigrants from the old world seeking to obtain here the liberty and prosperity denied them in their own countries, spread over the face of the land, reduced the prairies and forests to cultivation, built cities, constructed highways and railroads, till now a nation which at the formation of the government numbered only three millions of people in population has become eighty millions, and from ocean to ocean and the lakes to the gulf she occupies the front rank as a free and prosperous people, advanced in the highest degree in the learning and arts of civilization, full of the spirit of advancement and the prosperity of its citizens, not any career of conquest, that make the possession of the Philippines a condition we owe to the bounty of Providence, unlimited as to the great natural resources of the country; to the wisdom of our forefathers, manifested in the form of government established by them, to the energy, industry, moral character and law abiding spirit of the people themselves.

We are not a military people, bent on conquest or engaged in extending our domains in foreign lands or desirous of reducing by force the people of other lands to bondage, but a people loving peace not only for ourselves, but for all the nations of the earth.

The display of great military armaments may please the eye and for the moment stir the blood, but it is of course one that it cannot bring to the country the brains, and skill needed to secure adequate investment or induce the investment here of a dollar of capital. Of course such armament as may be necessary for the maintenance of the country and the protection of the rights of its citizens at home or abroad must be provided, but the wisdom of our people is not only false economy, but pusillanimous. I protest, however, against the feeling, that by reason of the fact that we have the commanding position we have assumed in the world we must take part in the affairs of every land in which disorder arises and that because we have grown great we should intervene in every imperfect state of society in any other part of the world. I also protest against the creation of any such military establishment as would be required to maintain the country in that attitude. We should confine our military activities and efforts to matters in which the rights of the country or of our citizens are directly involved, or to the defense and protection of isolation, but of independence.

The government of the United States was established by the people of the United States. While it was contemplated that in this country should become a refuge for the oppressed of every land who might be fit to discharge the duties of free citizenship, that we have always sympathized with the people of every nation in their struggles for self government, that we would not crouch for a career of political or civilizing evangelization in foreign countries or among alien races, that we would mind our own affairs. The most efficient work we can do in uplifting the people of other countries is by the precept and force of our own peaceful, self governing nation as an ideal to be emulated, a model to be followed. The greatest service our citizens in the arts of peace, or the absence of large military armaments, tend to impair neither patriotism nor physical courage, as for the truth of this I refer the young men of the land to the history of the civil war. For fifty years, with the exception of the war with Mexico, this country had no standing army and when the army need of the time of less than ten thousand men. He who thinks that the nation had not the courage to defend itself as it proved should read the casualty rolls of the armies on either side at Shiloh, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, at Stone River and Chickamauga. I would by the last man to pluck a single laurel from the crown of any of the heroic dead who rose to whom this country owes so much, but I do protest against the heroic dead being proceeded infinitely more from devotion to the country than from martial spirit.

The duty presented at no too great length, other questions suggested in the platform must await my letter of acceptance.

Mr. Chairman, in most graceful speech you have reminded me of the great responsibility as well as great honor bestowed upon me by the convention you represent this day. Be assured that I have fully appreciated, as I have appreciated that I am humbled in their presence.

I accept, gentlemen of the committee, the nomination, and if the action of the convention shall be indorsed by an election by the people I will, God helping me, give to the discharge of the duties of that station all the energy, service and which I am capable and at the end of the term retire to private life. I shall not be a candidate for a second term, nor a renomination. Several reasons might be advanced for this position, but the controlling one is that I am and have been persuaded that no incumbent of that office should ever be placed in a situation of possible temptation to consider the effect of action taken by him in an advancement of personal interests. Importance might have upon his political fortunes. Questions of momentous consequence to all of us will arise during the next term and will be in the future presented to the president for determination, and in approaching the discharge of that duty and in weighing the facts and the arguments bearing upon them he should be unembarrassed by any possible thought of the influence his decision may have upon anything whatever that may affect him personally. I shall be responsible to the criticism of any of our presidents from Washington down who have either held office for life or have sought to succeed themselves, for strong arguments can be advanced in support of the reelection of a president. It is simply my judgment that the interests of this country are now so vast and the questions presented so frequently of such overpowering magnitude to the people that it is indispensable that the president shall be free from all bias before the people not only that the chief magistrate should be independent, but that the fullest independence should be known of all men.

LINEMAN SURVIVES A TERRIBLE ORDEAL

Michael Caffray Helpless High in the Air While Heavy Voltage Passes Through Him.

AN HEROIC RESCUE

VICTIM UNCONSCIOUS FROM HORRIBLE SUFFERINGS.

James Ellis, a Fellow Workman, Risks His Own Life to Save Caffray—His Fingers and Thumbs Badly Burned—Will Recover.

Held high in the air by a net-work of wires while hundreds of volts of electricity coursed through his body and burned his flesh to the bone, was the terrible experience through which Michael Caffray, of Watchung avenue, a Public Service lineman, passed through Saturday a. m. For several minutes his fellow-workmen looked on helplessly and it seemed impossible to save his life until the arrival of James Ellis, one of the most experienced linemen in the city. Hastily securing a rope he climbed up the pole where Caffray hung and at great risk to himself, passed it about his form and over one of the cross arms. Then with the assistance of Thomas O'Gorman, of the city police patrol, who climbed to the top of a ladder, he was lowered to the ground and despite the time he had been subject to the heavy current, he soon regained consciousness. After being treated by Dr. Buchanan he was taken to his home in the police ambulance and though badly burned will recover.

Caffray had been working on top of the pole situated at Rockview avenue and Rockview Terrace and was about to descend when his head struck a wire which had been bared of insulation. It was heavily charged and the shock threw him backward only to be caught on other wires with his right hand resting on another bared spot. The successive shocks caused him to lose consciousness and he hung in this position while attempts were being devised to get him down.

One of the first to witness the accident was Henry Nischwitz, of the borough. Leaving the linemen he ran to the nearest telephone and summoned the borough fire department, requesting a long ladder, the city ambulance and a doctor. All three arrived in remarkably short time and just as Ellis' plan brought Caffray down.

He was greatly weakened by the ordeal but the only injury otherwise was a deep burn across his fingers and thumbs. He was placed on the ambulance stretcher and on reaching home took to his bed, where it is believed he will be for several days.

MRS. SCHENCK ACCEPTS CALL

WILL TAKE IMMEDIATE CHARGE OF AFFAIRS AT MARCONNIER CHAPEL.

Responding to a call extended her by the consistory of Trinity Reformed church, Mrs. A. W. Marshall, sister-in-law to Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, has decided to accept charge of affairs at Marconnier chapel at Oak Tree. She will remove to the latter place at once, making her home at the residence of William VanCourt, near the chapel, and will assume all the duties usually incumbent upon the minister of a small congregation, beginning today.

Mrs. Schenck was for several years a missionary in North Japan where she worked faithfully until her health began to fail her. She was prevailed upon by the Board to take a vacation and decided to come to Plainfield. She has been living with her husband's brother's family and since recovering her strength fully, has been longing to renew her efforts for the cause of Christ. The vacancy at Marconnier chapel has existed since the resignation of H. W. Marshall and the consistory of Trinity church eventually decided to call Mrs. Schenck in the same manner as they would a clergyman.

She has had the matter under prayerful consideration for some time and Monday accepted the call. The members of Trinity Reformed church are greatly pleased with her decision and it is thought that with her superintendency and advice the Marconnier congregation will enjoy a speedy and healthy growth. She is thoroughly competent because of her long experience in other fields and enters upon the work confident of success.

Extensive Improvements.

The entire front of Harry Werner's store on West Front street has been torn out, and a new glass front will be put in similar to those in the metropolitan stores. It is expected that the work will be finished about the last of next week.

FORMER MAYOR'S DEATH DUE TO AN ACCIDENT

George W. Rockfellow Sustained Broken Neck in Fall From Hay Loft.

WIFE FOUND BODY

RAN HALF A MILE THROUGH LONELY FIELDS TO SECURE A DOCTOR.

Went to the Barn to Make Cattle Secure for the Night and Did Not Return—Funeral at Bound Brook Yesterday.

The body of Former Mayor George W. Rockfellow was brought to Bound Brook from Cardinal, Va., Tuesday, and with it came word for the first time that Plainfield's former chief executive had not died from natural causes but had been killed by a fall from the loft of his barn. Evidently in making a misstep in the dark, he had plunged headlong through an opening to the floor below and broke his neck. His lifeless form was found at 1 o'clock Sunday morning by Mrs. Rockfellow but in the hope that he might be revived she ran half a mile across lonely roads and fields to rouse a doctor. She secured one but when the physician examined the body he declared that Mr. Rockfellow had been dead at least three hours.

Since residing in Virginia, Mr. Rockfellow exercised personal supervision of his plantation and before retiring at night he always made a tour of the yards and buildings. He left the house at 9 o'clock Saturday evening to see that the horses and cattle were secure and shortly afterward Mrs. Rockfellow, who was in the house alone with her little grandchild, went to her room. She awoke soon after midnight and noticing that her husband was not in, called for him but received no response. She then went to the yard and eventually to the barn where she made the discovery. For a moment she was overcome but quickly recovering hastened for the doctor and assistance.

When George Rockfellow, Jr., and Herbert Rockfellow were informed of their father's death both were heartbroken and the former collapsed to such an extent that he could not accompany the body north. The funeral was held from the Bound Brook Presbyterian church yesterday at 4 o'clock and many local officials and friends were in attendance. The pall bearers were six Plainfielders as follows: T. S. Armstrong, F. C. Langhorne, Albertus Swaim, H. C. Compton, J. E. Morse and Charles Steiner. The interment was in the family plot at Bound Brook. Rev. Charles H. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, assisted in the services.

Word of the former Mayor's death first came by telegram Sunday, devoid of details, and the suddenness remained a mystery to relatives and friends until Tuesday, as it was generally supposed that he had been enjoying better health than he had for a long time previous.

To Erect a Dwelling.

Plans and specifications are on file at the Building Inspector's office for a new dwelling to be erected by Frederick H. Houston, adjoining the Houston home on West Front street. The permit to build was granted this morning. The building will be two stories in height and will measure 28x28x7.5. The plans were prepared by W. H. Chun; Theodore Gray is to have charge of the mason work, and Louis Beck will do the carpenter work. Excavation will be started immediately.

In Justice Hand's Court.

The contract case of Griggs, Mundy et als against Wakefield, Cleaves et als, which came up in Justice Hand's court yesterday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, has been adjourned until next week. Contract proceedings in the case of Dickerson against Ruggles have been adjourned until next week from Saturday, when they will again come up in Justice Hand's court. The contract case of Sachs against Greenberg has been set for the same day at the same court.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, of Netherwood avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Dunbar Talmadge, to Daniel Runkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, of West Eighth street.

L. H. Biglow, Jr., who has been spending the summer at Seabright, and who is now making Montclair his home, was in town this week calling on friends.

JOHN ABBOTT & SON, SUCCESSFUL BIDDERS

Local Firm is Awarded General Contract for Erection of the New High School.

BOARD TAKES ACTION

D. J. GALBRAITH TO DO THE PLUMBING WORK.

Contracts for Heating and Lighting to be Reconsidered—Complete List of the Bidders.

The general contract for the erection of the new city High School and that for the plumbing were awarded last night at a special meeting of the Board of Education held at the home of Charles F. Abbott. John Abbott, of West Front street, was awarded the general contract, his bid being $84,000. D. J. Galbraith secured the plumbing contract, his bid being $5,115. Work is expected to be commenced within a short time.

As further consideration of the heating contract is desired, that matter was not decided, neither was that in reference to the electric lighting of the building. The bids were rejected owing to a change in the system of wiring. Bids will be advertised for under the new system.

According to the specifications the work must be done within one year of the time of signing contracts. The plans are in duplicate, one set now being with the State Board of Education for approval. As soon as this is done the contracts will be signed. The successful bidders must furnish the necessary bonds; required in this kind of work.

The session was a lengthy one. The contracts were considered in executive session. In the opinion of the members the contracts awarded are very fair and will insure the building of a structure of which the city can be proud.

This is a complete list of all bids received:

General contract—John Abbott & Son, Plainfield, $84,000; J. E. & A. L. Pennock, Philadelphia, $99,604; Cramp & Co., Philadelphia, $133,899; Herbert A. Weeks Co., New York, $99,155; Herman Probst, New York, $98,270; T. H. Prior & Sons, Trenton, $93,000; H. P. Cummings Co., Boston, $93,957; The H. Wales Lines Co., Meriden, Conn., $94,730; Conover & Gunzelman, Somerville, $100,470.

Plumbing—D. J. Galbraith, Plainfield, $5,115; G. J. Tobin, Plainfield, $5,997; James Tucker & Sons, Boston, $8,330.

Electrical work — Lord Electric Company, New York, $2,359; M. B. Foster Electric Company, New York, $3,468; Craig & Apgar, Plainfield, $3,530; Keystone Electric Co., New York, $3,700; New Jersey Electrical Construction Co., Newark, $3,900; John B. Laing, $3,850; Electrical Construction and Supply Co., New York, $3,315.

Heating—George J. Tobin, Plainfield steam, $14,754; hot water, $12,373; William M Tobin, New York, steam, $16,385; Selvey Wyckoff Co., Springfield, Mass., hot water, $12,150; Arthur McGonagle, New York, steam, $15,560; F. P. Schroder, Jersey City, steam, $22,418.04; Johnson Temperature and Register Co., New York, heat controller system, seventeen rooms, $430; Powers Regulator Co., New York, steam, $334, water, $384.

Special Notice.

To all members of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., you are requested to meet in the lodge rooms, 110 West Second street, on Thursday, at 1:30 p. m., to attend the funeral of our late brother, Augustus Sergeant. Kindly attend.

Signed, Geo. M Townley, Councilor.
John Bicknell, Rec. Sec.
Eph. Compton, Vice Councilor.

Final Notice.

Her Eighth Birthday.

Marion Mair, the little daughter of Alexander Mair, celebrated her eighth birthday yesterday afternoon at her home on Belmont avenue. Many of her young friends attended the party and the afternoon was passed in playing games on the lawn. Later the company adjourned to the house where an eight candle cake was cut and other refreshments were served. The little girl received numerous birthday remembrances.

Miss Delia C. Dufford, of this city, is spending her vacation with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Dufford, of Middle Valley.

TELLS OF MARRIAGE ON HIS DEATHBED

Before Dying Augustus H. Sergeant Informs Parents of a Secret Wedding.

TWO YEARS A BENEDICT

NELLIE KREGAR, OF LIBERTY STREET, IS A WIDOW.

Young Man Passes Away From Lingering Disease—Son of Alexander Sergeant, of East Second Street.

Lying on his deathbed at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sergeant, of East Second street, Tuesday, Augustus H. Sergeant announced for the first time that he had been married for more than a year. To the surprised relatives gathered about him he stated that he and Miss Nellie Kregar had been made man and wife in New York and that for reasons not given they had kept the fact a secret. Within a short time after relating the circumstances he succumbed to hemorrhages, brought about by an illness from which he had long been a sufferer.

His widow is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Kregar, of Liberty street, and is widely acquainted. It was supposed that she and Mr. Sergeant were engaged and the announcement of the marriage occasioned great surprise.

The young man was in his thirty-first year and was very well known throughout the city. Until his illness began he was employed as a machinist in the Scott Press Works and he was regarded highly by his fellow workmen. He was a member of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., and at various times was connected with local social organizations. He is survived by one brother, Howard Sergeant, and two sisters, the Misses Eva and Lina Sergeant, all of this city.

Funeral services will be held from his late home this afternoon at 2:30 and interment will be made at Hillside cemetery. The members of Franklin Council will attend in a body.

WILL ERECT NEW BRIDGE

FREEHOLDERS DECIDE TO DO AWAY WITH OLD WOODEN STRUCTURE.

A joint committee from the Union and Somerset county Boards of Freeholders met at Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon, and passed an unanimous vote to replace the old wooden bridge over Green brook at Mountain avenue with a modern steel structure. It was decided also to place upon it a concrete covering instead of the usual board flooring, thus making it one of the most substantial bridges along the course of the stream. The committee will submit its decision to the respective boards at the next meeting and bids will be asked for within a short time.

The members from Union county who were in attendance were Freeholders Adams, of Cranford; Scudder, of Westfield; Pierson, of Elizabeth; Meisel, of Springfield, and Robison, of Fanwood.

MRS. HARNED BURIED.

Funeral Services in Charge of the Society of Friends.

The funeral services of Mrs. Maria S. Harned, widow of John Harned, who died Sunday, were held at her late home, on East Front street, yesterday afternoon at 2:30. Mrs. Harned was a member of the Society of Friends and the service was in charge of that religious organization. William D. Williams made the address.

The pall bearers were George Griffin, and Bertram Rockwell, of this city, Albert Tapier, of New York, Walter and Ralph Reader, and Phillip Harned, of Trenton. The last three were grandchildren of the dead woman. The burial was at Hillside cemetery.

Drum Corps to Honor Drum Corps.

The Imperial Fife and Drum Corps, of Elizabeth, will give a banquet in its rooms on Monday evening, September 12, in honor of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, of this city. Mayor Jenkins, Chief Kiely and other of the city officials have been invited to attend as it will be an elaborate affair in every respect. Mayor Ryan and Elizabeth office holders have already signified their intention of being present.

GOLDSACK'S GOOD SHOOT

MAKES A 268 OUT OF A POSSIBLE 300 AT SEA GIRT.

In the regular weekly shoot of the members of Company K, at Sea Girt yesterday, Private Robert Goldsack scored a 268, which is the highest score which has been made by a Company K man, with the exception of Captain Martin, in two years. There are several different ranges from which shots are made, the highest possible score being 300. Such a record is almost impossible to make however, though Captain Martin has approached very near in that next year the highest score made was 261.

About fourteen of the members of the local company were present at Sea Girt yesterday, among whom were those who had shots left, or who had not attended the shoot last week. Corporal Bilyeu qualified yesterday as expert with a score of 268. First Lieutenant Lewis and Private Goldsack increased their rank to that of sharp-shooter. There were several of the privates who qualified as marksmen, while Privates Darby and Lambert scored the first-class.

MRS. PHILLIPS TO RESIGN

PLAINFIELD WOMAN TO QUIT OFFICE IN NEW JERSEY MOTHERS' CONGRESS.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers will be held at Trenton, October 28 and 29. Mrs. H. G. Phillips of this city, recording secretary, has signified her intention of resigning her office. Charles J. Baxter, State superintendent of schools, and a former resident of this city, is a member of the Board of Managers.

This will be the fourth annual meeting of the State society and Mrs. E. C. Grice, the president, together with the other officers, are preparing an attractive programme. It is hoped to have present Mrs. Frederick Schoff, of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress, also the honorary president and founder of the National society, Mrs. Theodore W. Birney, of Washington.

The purpose of the National Congress and of the State congresses, for there are some twenty States that have such associations, is the attainment of the best opportunities for the moral, physical and intellectual development of children.

Poor Children Made Happy.

The birthday anniversary of three of Miss Sara Currier's female children was happily celebrated yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Currier, of Netherwood, gave a lawn party in their honor. She was assisted by Mrs. Herbert Henry, the Misses Currier, Miss Curry, Miss Smith and Miss Anna Smith. The afternoon was spent in playing games, after which supper was served. A feature of the affair was a presentation speech by Miss Anna Smith.

Trousseau for Rent.

Acting upon the advice of her counsel, Clarence L. Murphy, Mrs. Agnes Holmes, of West Third street, is bringing action against Mr. and Mrs. Perry Jenkins for $35 rent owing to her at the departure a week ago. At the time, Mrs. Holmes attempted to retain part of Mrs. Jenkins' trousseau in lieu of rent but was compelled to return the property. The case will come up before Justice Hand at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Complaint Against Plumbing Firm.

On complaint of Health Officer Thurlow, the senior member of the plumbing firm of Giles & Voorhees, of Bound Brook, was arraigned in the city court, this morning, on a charge of violating the city ordinances in not securing the necessary permits for plumbing work. Owing to the absence of the complainant the matter was laid over until next week.

In Justices' Courts.

Action has been begun by I. Louis Currier against the Liquid Air X-Ray Substitute Co., of New York, on contract. The papers are returnable Saturday morning in Justice Hand's court. George A. Sobuck has brought landlord and tenant proceedings in Nash's Court against Charles Jenkins. The papers are returnable Monday at 10 o'clock.

Kane Wants His Hotel.

Alex. Kane, who claims to own the hotel at Galvin's Park from which Louis Clark has refused to move, has commenced proceedings against the lessee in Justice Hand's court. The matter was to have been heard today but at the request of Clark's counsel, Levi Hart, Esq., of Westfield, it was adjourned until Tuesday.

CAPT. MARTIN OFF FOR NATIONAL SHOOT

Company K's Head Leaves With State Rifle Team for Fort Riley, Kansas.

REPRESENTING N. J.

HIS FINE WORK AT SEA GIRT THIS SEASON.

Has Come Nearest to Scoring the Highest Possible Mark—Contests In Which He Will Participate.

Captain William B. Martin, of Company K, left this morning with the State rifle team to take part in the annual National shoot at Fort Riley, Kans. He is one of twelve men who represent the State in this shoot, and the representatives are chosen from all the companies in the State. It is therefore considered a great honor to make this team, and Company K's captain is said to be the best shot on the team. The contest at Fort Kansas will last ten days.

Captain Martin has made a remarkable record for himself with the military rifle. Two years ago, he won the Wimbledon Cup at Sea Girt, and subsequently went to England, with the All-American team to compete against English riflemen at Besley. He has come nearer than any of the different company competitors at Sea Girt, this year, in making the highest possible score of 300.

Captain Martin has been greatly interested in the local company shoots at Sea Girt and his valuable instruction has done much to improve the marksmanship of the company. He has spent a great deal of time at the range lately, where he has been practicing. He has long since qualified as expert.

At the conclusion of the National shoot, Captain Martin will return to Sea Girt where he will practice for the meeting of the National Rifle Association and the New Jersey State Rifle Association. On September 10, he goes to Creedmore, N. Y., where the New York State Rifle Association meet will be held September 12-17.

FROM BRUNSWICK TO AMBOY

THROUGH TROLLEY SCHEDULE BETWEEN THE TWO POINTS.

Through cars from New Brunswick to Perth Amboy and Boynton Beach every half-hour, and a half-hour service between New Brunswick and Bound Brook from 5:37 in the morning to 12:07 midnight, are some of the contemplated improvements the Public Service Corporation introduced yesterday.

The first car from New Brunswick for Bound Brook will leave at 5:37 in the morning and cars will leave every thirty minutes thereafter until 12:07 midnight, inclusive. Cars will leave Bound Brook from 6 in the morning until 12:45 midnight. The new schedule gives residents at Perth Amboy, Metuchen, Boynton Beach and New Brunswick a much improved service. The half hour schedule will be maintained all day, in both directions.

Runaway Boy Arrested.

Arthur Hermans, a sixteen-year-old boy who claims to have a home in Camden, was found by Roundsman Flynn, this morning, making a house-to-house canvass in the West End begging clothing. At police headquarters he said he had left his home last April and since then had been wandering all over the country. Wishing to return he found his clothing in such bad condition that he decided to replace it in this city and he had secured a pair of trousers when the officer arrested him. He will be given a hearing this afternoon.

Chimney Fire.

A small chimney fire broke out at the home of William Smiles, on Watchung avenue, at about noon yesterday. The borough department was summoned by telephone, and responded quickly. It was but the work of a few minutes to distinguish the flames, which were the result of a defective flue. No damage was done as nothing but soot burned, but there might have been serious results if the flames had not been discovered when they were.

Miss Etta Raybert, of North avenue, accompanied by Miss Jessie Pruden, of East Second street, left yesterday to spend several days at Bridgeport, Conn.

DR. J. H. BUCHANAN TO BE GRAND CHIEF

Plainfielder to Fill Highest Office in the Knights of the Golden Eagle.

AT ANNUAL SESSION

FREEDOM CASTLE TO BE REPRESENTED AT THE MEETING.

Convention to be Held at Trenton on Monday, September 5—To be Largely Attended.

Dr. J. H. Buchanan, of Duer street, who is identified with many local fraternal organizations, will be elected Grand Chief of the Grand Castle of New Jersey, Knights of the Golden Eagle, at the twenty-first annual session of the Grand Castle to be held at Trenton, Monday morning, September 5. The meeting will be held in the Ribeam building and will be largely attended by delegates from lodges all over the State. There will be several delegates from this city who will go to the meeting.

The convention will probably last two days, during which time Grand Chief Charles K. Gano, of Long Branch, will preside. The order is one of the largest in the State, having a membership, according to the last records, of 7,187, which is a gain of 196 over last year. There were relief during the year 888 sick members and 15 families. Sixty-nine members died during the year, and 39 wives of members were buried. About $73,000 was received from all sources and the Grand Castle paid out $59,655.32. Its present worth in New Jersey is $105,356.41. There are 72 castles

The principal matters to be brought before the State session will be the amendments to the constitution for grand and subordinate castles offered at the session of 1903.

In the choice of a new Grand Chief, the members of the order have selected a man who is very prominent in fraternal orders, and who has served in a leading capacity in several local organizations. Dr. Buchanan is Past Noble Chief in Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, and is a prominent member of Freedom Commandery, of this city.

Mase Edwards' Outing.

A letter received from Mase Edwards, of this city, who is now at Houston Villa, Caseville, Mich., indicates that he is having a good time. He says: "I am enjoying the rest, quiet and health-giving air of this neighborhood, which is about 'jumping off' place of civilization, situated in what is called The Thumb of Michigan. The 'Villa' is on a high bluff, about 200 feet from the water's edge, and the scene is delightful. Pine trees fringe the shore and we sling out hammocks, and take our ease ad. lib, afternoons, after the daily visit to the postoffice for mail and The Daily Press, which keeps us posted on home events." Mr. Edwards will return Sept. 1.

Woolen Mills Bankrupt.

In the United States District Court at Trenton yesterday, Judge Lanning adjudicated the Somerville Woolen Mills to be bankrupt. At the same time he authorized the receiver to sell the heavy weight cloth and clothing on hand. The papers were referred to William V. Steele, referee in bankruptcy at Somerville, and the first meeting of creditors will be held Tuesday, Aug. 30.

Verdict Against Judge Bartine.

Former Judge John D. Bartine, of Somerville, was involved in a law suit before Justice Kitchen and a jury at Somerville yesterday. He sued his farmer, John Yanis, of Harlingen, for a balance on an unsettled account. Yanis filed a claim equally as large and also asked for his share of a rye field cut by the former Judge. The jury gave Yanis a verdict for $15.

Fall Broke His Arm.

John Mair, eight years old, of Essex street, climbed an apple tree in the West End, yesterday, stepped on a rotten limb and when it broke, fell twenty feet to the ground. He was carried to Dr. Cregar's office with a broken arm, a sprained shoulder and several bad head bruises. This is the third accident of this nature he has had within a year.

Gets a Week's Vacation.

For the rumpus he caused over in the borough yesterday, "Mike" Gleason, of the city, was fined $10 or seven days by Recorder Dood, last night. "Mike" will spend the next week at Somerville.

LAND CO. OFFICIALS CONDEMN HAINES' ACT

Say His Attitude Toward Levering & Garrigues' People Was Unwarranted.

HAD NO AUTHORITY

DECLARE HE IS ONLY A MINORITY STOCKHOLDER IN THEIR CONCERN.

Promotor Arraigned Before Justice Yesterday, But Hearing Put Off on Account of Defective Complaint.

An official of the Levering & Garrigues' Company called at The Daily Press office today and submitted the following statement relative to the trouble between the concern and Charles F. Haines over lands located near the works at West Dunellen:

"Mr. Ramsay, of York, Pa., president of the Dunellen Heights Land Company and George H. Sherman, one of the directors of Camden, called at the office of the Levering & Garrigues' Company today and notified them that Charles F. Haines, who has been representing that he is the owner of the land of the Dunellen Heights Land Company, has been acting without any authority; that he is not the owner, nor is he connected with it in any way other than a minority stockholder; that at a special meeting of the board of directors of the land company, resolutions were passed that action would be taken if he did not desist from using such unwarranted and illegal authority and that the company would in no way be liable for the act of the said Charles F. Haines.

"Mr. Ramsay further stated that Horace Keesey, Esq., of York, Pa., had been elected attorney to the board of directors and that he and George E. Sherman have been appointed an executive committee which has full charge of the company's property."

These statements were made before Justice Rogers at New Market yesterday on a charge of using threats against the Levering & Garrigues' Company but owing to a faulty complaint, the matter was laid over for thirty days. On Tuesday, August 9, Haines and a gang of men and boys which he had hired in Dunellen, appeared at the works and informed the officials that unless it vacated a strip of ground which adjoined the Dunellen Heights concern's land, he would demolish its blacksmith shop and other buildings resting on the disputed section. When his demands were ignored he started to fulfill his threats but his hired gang refused to help him and could not do it. He was then arrested on a warrant sworn out by Book-Keeper Kelly of the works but was later released on his own recognizance until yesterday.

Released on Parole.

After ten months' detention at the State Reformatory at Rahway, George Gardner, of this city, was released under parole, yesterday, and brought to this city by Superintendent Moore. He was placed at work in one of the local shops and if he behaves himself the parole will be removed within a certain time. Gardner, who is but twenty-one years old, was committed to the institution as a confirmed drunkard and it is believed his incarceration has been an effective cure.

Plainfielders at Asbury.

These Plainfielders are stopping at Asbury Park: Brunswick—Miss Beadle P. DeForest, John Montclair, J. L. Whittier and wife, Miss Catherine Whittier, Smith Whittier; Coleman House — Herbert DeWitt Regaljo; Albion—John Dead and S. C. Schuck; Ocean House—Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Keese, Lucius and Chauncey Keese and William H. Kenmond. These Plainfielders are in Ocean Grove: Seaside—Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Mantrup, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. MacMurray.

Funeral of Albert Manning.

Funeral services over the remains of Albert Manning took place from his late home on Cottage place, yesterday afternoon, with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. J. W. Mitchell was the officiating clergyman. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, those who acted as pall bearers being Arthur and Harold Potter, Howard Lowrie, David Thompson, Herbert Doyle and Robert Johnson.

—Neuman Brothers continue to receive consignments of Maryland Gem watermelons. "Simply delicious" is the proper term to apply to them.

The Misses Julia and Nellie Mooney, of this city, have been visiting relatives at High Bridge.

ELLIS AND ABYSSINIA

IS HE SEEKING POWER IN THE COUNTRY OF MENELIK?

Case of the Cuban Negro Who Accompanied Kent Loomis on His Ill-Fated Voyage — Proposed a Big Trading Company.

William H. Ellis, the Cuban negro now on his way to Adis-Ababa, capital of Abyssinia, with the commercial treaty entrusted to the care of the late Kent Loomis, has had a remarkable career.

It has been reported of the dusky messenger that he has an ambition to become an African potentate, and that he had dreamed of vast power to be wielded in the dark continent. Those who know him doubt not that he has had such dreams, nor do they doubt much his ability to realize them if he has seriously set out to accomplish that purpose.

Ellis is one of the oddest characters with which the state department at Washington has ever had dealings. Of wealth he seems to have an unlimited amount. For experience he has herded cattle on the plains of South America, has boomed towns and made fortunes out of real estate, has figured prominently in South American and West Indian trading companies, has explored interior sections of Africa, and calls himself the friend of Menelik, a title which the Abyssinian king does not seem to object to. In New York he is known for his extravagance —which, by the way, he can well afford —for his gaudy dress, and as the receiver for water supply corporations, and also as a minor figure in the Fayne Moore badger case.

When Consul General Skinner proposed an expedition to the Abyssinian capital for the purpose of negotiating a commercial treaty with the "king of kings" Ellis sought an opportunity of joining the expedition. He had visited Menelik several times before and offered his services as a friend of the African potentate. Though vouched for by reputable persons at Washington he was not used as a part of the Skinner expedition, but fitted out an expedition on his own account, and with many trunks full of valuable gifts for the king he traveled with his own caravan to Adis-Ababa.

When the treaty was drawn granting the American commercial privileges in Abyssinia Menelik promised Ellis valuable commercial concessions if he would return to Abyssinia. Upon his return to America he began interesting influential friends in the project of an Abyssinian trading company. It was at this time that he met Kent Loomis, and it was decided that they should travel to Abyssinia together with the signed copy of the treaty. This they were doing when Loomis disappeared from the William II., on which they were traveling, when the vessel was off the English coast.

Ellis is proceeding alone to complete the mission which in reality had been entrusted to Kent Loomis. He is now in Abyssinia hastening toward the capital of Menelik, but he is going simply as a messenger, and the African king has been informed by cable that he represents this country in no official capacity.

It has been suggested that Ellis hoped to secure great prestage through his delivery of the treaty, a prestage which would give his proposed trading company unusual concessions. That such a company might find the field a profitable one is proven by Consul Skinner's report in which he says:

"Ethiopia is wealthy in resources beyond the power of any man to calculate. Gold, silver, asphalt, petroleum, iron and coal exist in combination with a salubrious climate, agricultural productiveness and a population of singular docility, with wasteful eyes upon the future, the emperor seeks to pit one European power against another in order to preserve the political independence of his people, which has been handed down through the centuries, and in the meantime he hopes to develop the intelligence and resources of the population to such a point as to enable it to withstand any pressure from without.

"The empire holds out no attractions to the commercial adventurer with limited means. Too many Europeans now in the field are of that class, and the emperor, with just reason, is weary of the constant clamor for concessions from all sorts and conditions of persons, whose only object is to find a purchaser at an exorbitant figure. On the other hand enterprises planned with skill and backed with sufficient capital may be undertaken and carried out with every assurance that property interests will be respected by the government and that promoters of such enterprises will be welcomed with a catholic spirit.

"Whatever may be the results of this mission, it is certain that if the treaty be ratified it will have regularized an uncertain condition."

Home Health Club

By DAVID H. REEDER, Ph.B., M.D.
Laporte, Ind.

"All that a man hath will he give for his life," is a true saying that is older than the Bible. In speaking of "all," a person naturally understands that worldly possessions or money is meant and in that sense it is true. There are other things, however, which, next to life will not give up, even though they can know with considerable accuracy that continuous indulgence will ultimately mean death. In many, yes, the majority of cases it is ignorance which causes people to do, or neglect to do, many things which will give a reasonable insurance of continuous good health for many years.

The mission of the Home Health club as declared by me many years ago, is to teach the natural laws of health, prevention and cure with simple, practical helpful knowledge. Teaching how the many little ills of the family or of the individual may be overcome or cured by the natural remedies supplied by an allwise Creator and nearly always at hand.

One of the most powerful and effective therapeutic agents known to medical sciences is water. It is always at hand and even a rudimentary knowledge of how to apply it in the treatment of disease is one of the most valuable kinds of information that could be taught in our public schools, and yet there are many physicians who know but little of the wonders which may be performed by its use.

A few days ago I received a letter from a lady telling about a neighbor who had suffered for a long time with a diseased jawbone. A number of able physicians had failed to give relief, and finally the surgeons were called. They decided to remove the man's jaw and prefer to save his life. The operation was to be performed in a week. The woman who wrote me was a life-member of the Home Health club, and she mustered up courage to tell him of a lecture I had written upon the subject of curing diseased bones by the simple, practical application of hot fomentations, and she gave him the lecture to read. He lost no time in applying the treatment, and when the time came to operate the surgeons found such a change for the better that the healing process going on that they were astonished. The operation was not necessary and the man has been perfectly well for several months.

Another woman tells of how she nursed her two granddaughters through smallpox and saved them, balance of the family from having it, although all of them lived in the same house, during the entire sickness, and all by the simple means of which I had told in one of these lectures. All of the means of prevention as well as the successful treatment for the smallpox are at hand in almost every home in the land, and by a practical knowledge of their use the dangers of vaccination are avoided and the horror and dread of the disease is forever removed.

Mosquito Bites.

During the summer months we are in no danger of frost bites, although I recently received a letter asking for the Home Health club relief for the horror that is annoying and painful condition. Instead of frost bites we have mosquito bites, and in many cases the sting of bees and other insects, which are not only painful, but in some cases quite dangerous. There are many people who seem to be immune and the poison of insects or even of poison oak, sumach or ivy has no effect upon them. I think the question of the purity of the blood and the character of the circulation, as well as the condition of the skin, are all factors to be considered in determining the susceptibility of anyone. As for myself, the sting of honey bees, hornets, or even the bite of a mosquito has so much pain or swelling as a common mosquito bite will have upon many others. I have had patients upon whom a mosquito bite would cause a hard and painful swelling almost as large as half a hen's egg, which would remain to itch and burn for two or three weeks. Almost instant relief can be had by anyone, from the effects of such bites and stings, by briskly rubbing the spot for a few moments with a leaf of the common dock which grows in nearly all parts of America, and is too well known to need description. When the smart weed is not at hand or cannot readily be secured, plantain leaves will act with almost equal beneficial effect. Indeed, a poultice of bruised plantain leaves is said to counteract the poison of many snake bites and is a most excellent remedy for bruises and burns. The plantain leaves which grow in the dooryard and by the roadside is the kind to use. A letter received this morning from a lady who lives in this state says that plantain leaves well bruised and laid on a boil is the best remedy she ever knew to draw it. And that the seed stalk of plantain used as an infusion is an excellent remedy for dysentery, and that an infusion or tea made from blackberry leaves will give relief from hemorrhoids of the bowels in cases of typhoid fever. These remedies are always at hand and can safely be used by any one.

Another remedy equally safe is given by the same lady, to counteract the dangerous blackjaw which is liable to follow hurts by rusty nails or iron. Two tablespoonfuls of wood ashes (if very strong, half the quantity), scald with a cupful of boiling water, thicken with cornmeal and apply when nearly cold as a plaster.

Whenever one receives an injury with a rusty nail which penetrates the flesh beneath the skin, great care should be taken to see that the hurt does not heal upon the outside before it does upon the inside, in other words, the wound must be kept open and made to heal from the inside, then there will be no danger of lockjaw.

Club Notes.

Brunswick, Ga.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I was greatly interested in one of your recent treatises regarding the effect of the mind upon the body, and the effect of cheerfulness and the will in curing disease. I will not undertake to answer your son's question as to "what makes the heart beat faster when one is scared," but will be pleased to read the reply from yourself and others. Will give some of my personal experience in regard to the effect of the mind over the body in the battle of Gettysburg, Pa., July 2, 1863. I was severely wounded by a minnie ball crashing through the bone of the left knee, lacerating muscles and tendons. In this condition I lay on the ground without surgical attention for twenty-two (22) days before arriving at the David's Island, New York, hospital, where I received treatment from the best army surgeons (Dr. Priestly and others). Being so long without surgical attention, my wounds were so much inflamed and congested that the attentive nurses were merely keep me alive was about all that could be done. After eight months' treatment my wound was pronounced hopeless—incurable, and they would send me back home, as I could never be of any more use in the army. These learned surgeons, supposed to know all that human skill and science could learn about the human body, all with one accord did not hesitate to say that I would never be on that leg. While lying convalescing on one foot, supported by two crutches, my lame leg suspended by a bandage from my neck, ignorant of the physiology of man, not knowing the importance of the parts lacerated and destroyed, in total ignorance of the restorative powers of nature, in the face of all this evidence against me, I boldly asserted my belief that I would again walk on that crippled leg. They sent me out on a litter. Two years more of suffering in southern hospitals, with hard and poor treatment. At the end of 28 months from the time I was wounded, the last splinter of fractured bone came out. Then the wound was healed. The limb, even, was perfect and was crooked and useless. Still I had faith. I went to work pulling and stretching on the muscles and in less than two years I had it down so I could walk on my toes with the help of a walking cane, and in another year I had left the cane. This was about 35 years ago. My left leg is still about one inch short, but I make the difference in my hips, so that I do not limp, and people seeing me walk the streets would not suspect that anything had ever been the matter with my legs—that is a case of the effect of the mind over the body. "For of the soul the body form doth take, for soul is the form and doth the body make." (Science of Health.) When I was quite a young man I went from the rocky hills of Georgia to the rich swamp lands of Mississippi. Had never had a chill, and was rather inclined to laugh at my friends shaking with the shaky chills. They told me I would have them after awhile. So in about two years I began to have the shakes. When I first took them, or rather they took me, the people were very kind, gave me nice hot tea, wrapped me up and left me feather-bed with hot rocks to my feet and back, but finally it became necessary to change boarding houses. At the new place I was treated quite differently. A hard cold bed, no fire, hot teas or any comforts whatever. It made me real angry, which cured me of the chills and fever, and my health was splendid as long as I remained in that part of the country. That was a case of anger administering and bringing about reaction in the system which as the chill tonics and specifics had failed to do.

I once had a friend, if I met him downtown and had a chat with him, he would tell me all his troubles, domestic and financial. I would be sure to go home with a sick headache—that was a case of sympathy.

The ignoramus knows that these things exist, but it remains for science to explain them and tell us "why one's heart beats so much faster when one is scared." Sincerely yours,

H. T. J.

The above is only one of the many letters I received from various parts of the world in answer to a question asked by my son when he was about six years old. My own answer to the question, together with those of several others, will be given at another time.

Motley Cakes.

Beat a pound of sugar and a half pound of flour to a cream and add the well-beaten yolks of a dozen eggs. To this stir in three cups of sifted flour and beat vigorously; add the stiffly beaten whites, and put half the batter into another bowl; color one-half with cochineal to a pretty pink, and flavor the other half with peach extract. Drop the two batters by alternate spoonfuls into a well-greased cake pan and bake at least three-quarters to an hour in a moderate oven.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

POLITICS IN GOTHAM

GOSSIP OF CANDIDATES AND POLITICAL CONDITIONS.

ATHLETICS ARE THE THING

Strenuousness Is Demanded of the Nominees — Devery's Campaign for Leadership—Gambling in New York—Other Gossip.

NEW YORK.—Of course this is a season whose temperature is supposed to dictate a quiet life, an insidious life, a secluded life, but it is also a political summer and it is all but astonishing to note how much is expected of the candidates.

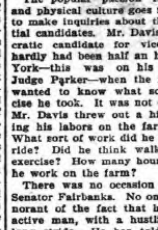
I am not speaking of straight campaigning, of exacting interviews, correspondence, acceptances, and so on. I am speaking of the personal habits of the men who are honored by the nominations.

There was a time when it was enough to be a statesman. Now, it seems, the candidate must prove that he is something of an athlete. It is expected of him. People want to know when and how Judge Parker swims. Also how long he rides each day. President Roosevelt has been especially devoted to tennis since he came home for the summer vacation. What sort of a game he plays is a matter of grave importance, one would suppose. That the president will ride, fish, and camp is taken for granted.

The popular passion for athletics and physical culture goes further than to make inquiries about the presidential candidates. Mr. Davis, the latest candidate for vice president, hardly had been half an hour in New York—this was on his way to see Judge Parker—when the interviewers wanted to know what sort of exercise he took. It was not enough that Mr. Davis threw out a hint concerning his labors on the farm at home. What sort of work did he do? Did he ride? Did he think walking a good exercise? How many hours a day did he work on the farm?

There was no occasion to question Senator Fairbanks. No one can be ignorant of the fact that he is a very active man, with a hustling walk—a long stride. He has told the interviewers that his natural activities give him all the exercise, and by inference, all the physical culture he wants.

The Return of Big Bill.



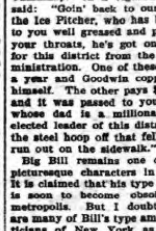
BIG BILL DEVERY is back at the pump, hot weather and all. I don't say that Big Bill is there every night as in a more temperate season, or as he was before his political downfall. But he is there; the Pump is reestablished as a political headquarters.

The other night the Deverites spread a Parker and Davis banner with appropriate ceremonies. Under the portraits of the national candidates appears a large portrait of the large Devery with the legend: "Our choice for leader, William S. Devery." This tells the story.

Big Bill is not interested in national issues. He has begun a fight to regain his leadership of his district. To be a district leader is to be a great power in New York, and Devery covets the lost honor and profit. The ex-chief of police declared to his lieutenants that this is to be his greatest fight and that they would "win in a walk." Inevitably Devery paid his respects to the man who has stolen the district from him and now sits in the councils of Tammany. In a vigorous speech he said: "Goin' back to our old friend, the Ice Pitcher, who had been handed to you well greased and pushed down your throats, he's got only two jobs for this district from the present administration. One of these nets $6,000 a year and Goodwin copped that for himself. The other pays $1,000 a year and it was passed to young Noonon, whose dad is a millionaire. If I'm elected leader of this district I'll take the steel hoop off that feller and he'll run out on the sidewalk."

Big Bill is one of the most picturesque characters in New York. It is claimed that his type of politician is soon to become obsolete in the metropolis. But I doubt it. There are many of Bill's type among the politicians of the city, and among the politicians of other of our large cities. He is very American, Bill is, after all.

The Gamblers.



REGHE VANDERBILT continues to be listed among the exiles of New York. He cannot come back until District Attorney Jerome ceases to desire his attendance in the investigation of that other exile, Gambler Canfield. Young Vanderbilt has indeed, stolen into the city on occasion and again. Yet he has never been molested. He has even enjoyed the experience.

Mr. Jerome is the chief terror of the gamblers—and of many others. "Al" Adams has been trying to secure his own release from Sing Sing, at this writing, without success. Reason: Jerome. The Western Union Telegraph company shut down on its race track service at the threat of Jerome. The pool rooms—race track gambling quarters—are supposed to be closed, and the police have just indulged in a spectacular raid in an effort to prove that there are some left and that the Western Union gives them a preferred service.

When racing began at one of the tracks a batch of plain clothes detectives lined up at the betting ring with hundreds of telegrams prepared in advance and addressed to various persons in New York, and thereby held the wires until all the races were over. The result was a day's disaster to the pool rooms, much annoyance to the newspapers, who got no racing news until very late, and no particular proof against the telegraph company.

Despite all the crusading there is, of course, gambling everywhere in New York. There are many pool rooms and halls at this hour, except those of an exceedingly secluded and exclusive kind. But race track gambling flourishes much the same as ever, and gambling games large and small are in sight on a peculiar kind of boom of those who know how to reach them.

Recent court decisions having frowned upon the use of violence by the police, axe assaults upon suspicious doors are likely to go out of fashion, and a new police battle will be along from one sort of attack than immediately hitherto. Yet it must be remembered that Brother Jerome is still at his post. Jerome is a law unto himself, and it may be taken as an axiom —and I am not making a pun—that Jerome will find a way.

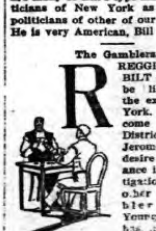
The Girl Who Wins.

NE of the saddest phases of life in New York is that which shows the tragic failure of a large proportion of the students who come here to study music, art, literature or the stage. Happily we have had some "success" stories lately, and some of these point to one fact, which may or may not be taken as a good sign. If the girl struggler is pretty she occasionally emerges from the fight triumphantly. This is notorious enough with regard to the stage, but it is also true with regard to other groups of students. Certainly it is true among the singers. It is even true among the writers. Young geniuses, if they be feminine and have good looks, actually have the better chance.

The other day a girl artist wrote to describe her success at the art schools and in illustrating. Her picture accompanied the article and showed a very pretty, Miss Joyce Dillon, who has carried off the gold medal at Cooper Union is still prettier. But Miss Dillon, who comes from Kentucky, is more than pretty, and her beauty had nothing to do with her success in this instance. She is a genius in draughtsmanship.

The point I wished to make is that the pretty girl has a great chance in the big city, just as she has in the small city. So far as the stage is concerned there are not half enough to go round. To look well in the picture papers—and picture papers multiply—is to be profusely advertised. And to be advertised is to be desired, regardless, to a great extent, of merit. This is more creditable, perhaps, to the success of the plain girl when it happens.

Automobile Tragedies and Comedies.



IT would scarcely be an exaggeration to say that politics, business, weather and foreign war, the automobile is the dominant topic in New York. If a number of recent accidents would of itself be sufficient to attract and hold attention to the devil wagons. At grave crossings near the city there have been a tragic series of fatalities. In the streets the mishaps have been varied. Sometimes the auto is killing people. Sometimes the auto is being smashed by trolleys and its occupants mutilated. Then again, there are the riots over the machine among the slum populations. These have been renewed and though they have not turned out seriously they indicate the bitterness which has been occasioned by fast driving in the city streets.

The bitterness extends beyond the slums. How far it extends may be judged from the fact that there is almost no popular sympathy for automobilists, whatever may be the law in the case at bar. Terrific driving continues on all the suburban roads, with the same surly or jocular defiance of local authority. One of the city magistrates the other day declared, in a moment of supreme irritation over the conduct of automobilists who broke the laws and defied the authorities, that police officials would be abundantly justified in shooting at such offenders. As a result of this dictum a constable has fired three shots at a machine, bringing its occupants to terms. Two of the bullets struck the touring car in question and there was an uproar of protest from the automobilists, but there is by no means general condemnation of the magistrate.

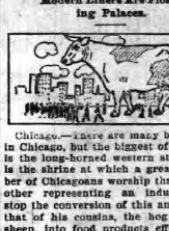
THE MEAT INDUSTRY

IT IS THE BIGGEST THING KNOWN IN CHICAGO.

A PACKING HOUSE CENTER

Evolution in Passenger and Freight Boats of the Great Lakes—The Modern Liners Are Floating Palaces.



Chicago.—There are many big things in Chicago, but the biggest of them all is the long-lived western steer. His is the shrine at which a greater number of Chicagoans worship than at any other representing an industry. To stop the conversion of this animal and that of his cousins, the hog and the sheep, into food products effects Chicago quicker than the stoppage of any other local industry. Not only does it effect Chicago, but it affects the entire country and the world, for the packing plants of Chicago give to the country more than one-third of the meat furnished by the United States. The product of these plants go into every country of Europe, of Asia, of South America, of Africa and the islands of the sea.

In Chicago there are 38 meat-packing establishments, employing about 30,000 wage earners, with an invested capital of close to $70,000,000, paying in wages nearly $10,000,000 annually, and turning out each year a product valued at close to $300,000,000. These establishments are killing each year one beef, one and a half sheep, and three hogs for every man, woman and child in the city each year. They are paying to the farmers and cattle raisers of the country close to $225,000 for live stock each year. The stopping of this industry means the stopping of nearly one-fourth of the total of manufacturing industries of the entire state, and the state ranks third in the value of manufactured products in the United States.

Such figures give an idea in a general way what the strike in the packing houses of Chicago meant to Chicago. In no other branch of industry could a strike have hit the city harder. In but few branches of industry in the city were the men less organized than in the packing houses.

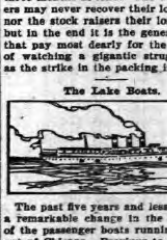
Effect on the Boarding Houses.

The strike cost an almost untold amount of loss to the various classes interested. It meant a loss of more than half a million in wages to the operatives; another heavy loss was occasioned the commission men, the men who sell the receipts of live stock at the yards; another heavy loss fell upon the stock yards company; still another on railroads, for the packers paid heavily for the experience in the at least partial closing of their plants and the initiating of new help; the loss to the farmers and stock raisers would run into the millions, but of all the losers the smallest amount of consideration was given the boarding house and restaurant keepers.

Virtually one-fifth of the population of Chicago live in boarding houses. Close to 400,000 people eat at boarding house tables twice each day. Let us take for example a boarding house the writer knows, and at which there are some 20 boarders. Allow for these 20 boarders ten pounds of meat for each meal. During the strike meat advanced but three cents a pound, or five cents per pound. That means not less than 50 cents per meal to the landlady, or one dollar per day, or $365 per year. Over and above the item of house rent and heat for herself and family, that amount would mean practically all the profits of the business of keeping boarders while the rise in prices continued. It meant no fund for new clothing, no amusements, no vacation trips. It left nothing but the bare necessities of life.

As it was with the boarding houses so it was with the private families. Their cost of living increased materially during the rise in prices, and it takes longer for prices to go down than it does for them to go up. The strike will affect meat prices for the next three months at least. The wage earners may never recover their lost wages, nor the stock raisers their lost profits, but in the end it is the general public that pay most dearly for the privilege of watching a gigantic struggle which as the strike in the packing industries.

The Lake Boats.



The past five years and less has seen a remarkable change in the character of the passenger boats running in and out of Chicago. Previous to that time the boats carrying passengers to and from lake ports, with but two or three exceptions, were the veriest tubs, equipped with none of the modern conveniences of water travel, small in comparison with modern vessels.

The writer has a vivid recollection of crossing the lake on several occasions during the summer of 1900 in a boat, then running in the regular service between Chicago and Michigan ports, that was capable of carrying but 90 passengers. It contained berths of questionable character, but no dining facilities. A dozen years ago it was one of the floating palaces of lake navigation, and was the pride of the line to which it belonged. To-day it is considered fit for nothing better than a small local trade between coast points from which it is desired to make connection with the lake liners.

To take the place of such boats there are on the lakes now magnificent floating palaces, carrying 1,000 to double that number of passengers; with crews running from 100 to 200 men; equipped with every convenience known to the ocean liner, such as private baths connected with state rooms, elaborate dining saloons, handsomely furnished smoking rooms. Instead of the ten miles an hour of the old boats, these vessels will make better than double that speed, as they are driven by the finest of marine engines.

With the coming of the new boats there has come an impetus in the passenger business on the lakes. Previous to the Buffalo exposition such a thing as a through boat from Chicago to Buffalo was unknown. Now a regular line of steamers carry hundreds of passengers between the two points each week. The new boats have also done much to popularize Michigan resorts, which are growing rapidly in favor with the Chicago public.

Lake Freight Traffic.

An even more wonderful development is to be found in the lake freight boats. But little more than 50 years ago a lake boat sailed into Buffalo harbor with 3,000 bushels of grain from Chicago, and the event was hailed as one of the notable happenings of a century. To-day there are many boats carrying more than 500,000 bushels in Chicago. The movement of grain from the west to the seacoast by way of the lakes is represented by an average of nearly 300,000,000 each year.

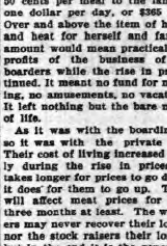
The first cargo of iron ore shipped from Lake Superior mines contained 600 tons. To-day single cargoes of 6,000 tons and over are being unloaded at South Chicago docks so regularly that they do not excite a passing comment even in lake marine circles.

Evolution has followed evolution in the type of the lake freighter, as in the type of the lake passenger boat. As late as 1862 there were on the lakes 1,152 wooden sailing vessels, and but 350 steam vessels. To-day the relative change of the fleets is nearly four times as large as the sail tonnage.

Another evolution is in the material used in ship construction. In 1886 there were but six steel freight boats plying the waters of the lakes. To-day two-thirds of the fleet is built for the lakes are of steel, and but a few years more will mark the passing of the wooden freighter.

One of the oddities of the lake traffic was the whale backs. The first of these boats, the big passenger boat built for the excursion trade at the time of the world's fair and which is still running between Chicago and Milwaukee. This was followed by a large number of freight boats built on similar lines with the exception of upper decks. They were in demand as ore and grain carriers. But the fad for this type of vessel is passing, and while a number of them are still in service no more are being built.

Terrors of the Lake.



Lake navigation has its terrors equal in many ways to those encountered on the ocean. Violent storms have seen many a good vessel and all its passengers and crews to watery graves. The stretch of 60 miles of water between the east and west shores of Lake Michigan hides beneath its surface terrible mysteries that may never be solved.

The big passenger boat that met the fate of the steamship Chicora, last seen on the morning of January 21, 1895, when she left Milwaukee for St. Joseph. She fell a victim of the terrible storm that broke within a short time after she left port. What became of her and of the 30 on board has ever been able to tell, though a reward of $10,000 was offered any one who could locate her. She carried 22 persons down with her.

Other lake boats have so completely disappeared that they have never been located. Among these were the steamers Alpena and Doty, and the schooners Mary D. Ayer and Thomas Hume. But recently it was believed that the hull of the Wells Burt had been found off Grosse Point. She sank near this point in 1882, and nothing was known of her afterward. The case of the Alpena was much like that of the Chicora. She was last seen off Holland, but where she went down no one knows.

The greatest of the Lake Michigan disasters was the sinking of the steamer Lady Elgin, on September 9, 1860. She was carrying a church excursion from Milwaukee to Chicago, and sank with 225 of her passengers and crew. Less than 100 of the total number on board were saved.

FRAUDS IN SARDINES

SO-CALLED FRENCH BRANDS ARE NOT ALWAYS GENUINE.

Imported from Spain and Portugal and Exported Again to Other Countries—How to Detect the Fraud.

Attention has been called to the fact that although the product of the French sardine fisheries has fallen off considerably in the past three years, the exportation of sardines from France has not diminished, and it is noticed that the quantity of sardines imported into France is almost double the quantity consumed there. During the 11 months ending June 1 the importations into France reached 19,237,375 pounds, while the annual consumption is estimated at 5,511,500 pounds.

The French sardine is excellent, both fresh and preserved. It ranks high when preserved on account of the careful preparation it undergoes in that country and the quality of the oil used. The cost price to the factory of the usual size box of French sardines (weighing about 0.71 pound) is about 12 cents, while the cost of the same size box of Spanish or Portuguese sardines in France, freight and duty paid, is only about six cents.

Sardines are imported into France in two different ways:

1. In boxes of the usual size, with a deceiving mark or label, such as is shown in the illustration. On top of the box, in this instance, the words "Sardines Françaises" are carefully covered by a thin coating of paint which is easily removed. Only the initials "E. D." and the words "Qualite Choix" are apparent when the box passes the French customs, but it becomes "E. D. Sardines Francaises, Qualite Choix" after entry; the address "Usine a Port Louis, France" on the side undergoes the same transformation. The boxes are of course stamped on the bottom "Produit Importe," but this indication of foreign origin is too vague to be of much value. Another method of deceiving is to print the name of the place of origin in very small letters, or to hide it in a figure printed on the label, which is in French.

2. Sardines are imported in large boxes and repacked in the usual size boxes, with labels and other indications in French.

The "Chambre Syndicale" of food products of Paris has taken an active part in the pending negotiations to have a new bill passed increasing the duty on imported sardines from 25 to 50 francs per 100 kilos (from $4.82 to $9.65 for 220.46 pounds), and insisting that the name of the country of origin be stamped in the tin. The bill also prohibits the importation of sardines in bulk, as it is an easy matter to repack them in small boxes and thus evade the law. The increase of duty would not be sufficient to check importation; it would only increase the cost price of foreign sardines in France by six centimes (slightly over one cent) a box, thus raising it from six or seven cents to 12 cents, which is the cost price of French sardines to the French manufacturer.

All labels on the boxes, such as "Firmin Jullien, Setubal, Portugal," with the origin in very small letters; "Societe Parisienne," with the words "Product Importe;" "Poissons Choisis" in French, "Packed in Spain" in English; and "Importe" in French, stamped on the tin, and many others, are intended to present the goods as French sardines to the majority of consumers both at home and abroad.

He Got Up.

A traveler put up for the night at the leading hotel in a small town, and, before retiring, left very particular instructions to be called in time for an early train. Early in the morning the traveler was disturbed by a lively tattoo upon the door.

"Well?" he demanded, sleepily.

"I've got an important message for you," replied the bell boy.

The traveler was up in an instant, opened the door and received from the boy a large envelope. He tore it open hastily, and inside found a slip of paper on which was written, in large letters: "Why don't you get up?"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Sure.

VANITY'S MIRROR.

White Yachting Costumes—Linen Gowns For Street Wear.

Boots and shoes of cigar brown are affected with pale tan linen; also shoes of champagne leather with silk stockings. White shoes are either of buckskin or of fine canvas. The former are more on the cream than the pure white.

For yachting nothing surpasses the three-quarter tailor made coat, worn with an equally tailor made plaited walking skirt. The material may be either serge or linen, as the weather demands. There is a new kind of cloth, much used for strappings and facings. It resembles suede leather, whence it takes its name. This suede cloth is used for belts and even for shoes.

The large white yachting cap may be softened by the addition of a veil on a ring which is passed around the cap, leaving long ends to tie around in front. This is also an excellent fashion for motoring.

Crash, linen and holland, in all tones, are the materials worn by smart women on the street. Muslins have no place there, as they crush too easily. The linen gown of the season is by no means inexpensive, as it is invisibly embroidered and trimmed with galloon, and it is generally worn with a handsome leather belt or one of shirred silk.

Gray is perhaps one of the most favored tints of the season, but in muslin pink plays an important part, or a pale pink and green design on a white or ivory background. Pink and purple and pale blue and purple are mixed this season in a manner never attempted before.

The cut shows a tailor made walking costume of gray wool. The sleeves of the coat are especially smart with their tiny tucks. The revers are of white cloth.

DETAILS OF DRESS.

Spotted Fabrics Fashionable—Pink a Favorite Color.

Spotted fabrics are exceedingly fashionable this season, and the mercerized cottons are very smart when well made. Almost all the linen gowns are trimmed with some touches of lace or embroidery, only this lace is of a coarse heavy description, and sometimes it is enriched by medallions of coarse linen applied with French knots.

Pink is a favorite color for muslins this season. A pink and white flowered muslin seen recently was made up over a pale pink lining, and the round skirt was very full, having four flounces edged and headed with valenciennes. The bodice had a fichu finished with two small frills. This fichu ran down to a point in the back just above the wide waistband.

Sleeve ruffles still retain their large size, and every variety of chiffon mousseline and mull is used for these plaitings.

A useful gown for morning wear is of undyed crash trimmed with narrow white strappings. The little bolero has facings of white lawn, tucked, and loose bell sleeves finished off with white frills. The skirt is made with a hip yoke and plaits set off by perpendicular strappings of the white.

The picture shows a white embroidered linen waist with the fashionable long shoulderest effect and long, tight cuffs of embroidery.

IN WOMAN'S REALM.

Cream Serge Worn Till Late Fall. Polished Bodices and Belts.

A gown seen recently at the races was of gray and white checked cotonne. The triple skirt and pelerine were adorned with silver braid and silver embroideries. This was softened at the neck by a small turned down collar of velvet and was worn over a simple blouse of white cambric and a hat of pale gray straw trimmed with white blossoms.

Cream serge will be worn late in the autumn, and a costume of this description seen recently was strapped in black and gold cord. To carry out the picturesque idea, it was worn with a three cornered white hat trimmed with little gold tassels.

All the new walking skirts are quite beautifully plaited, with the plaits lying flat around the hips and floating from the knees down. Some of the washable skirts are so finely plaited that it will be quite an effort for the washerwoman to launder them into shape.

Pointed bodices and pointed belts are to be among the rules of Dame Fashion during the coming season.

High crowned hats are slowly but surely creeping in, and already the flat hat is most decidedly a thing of the past.

The picture shows an automobile coat of tan silk held in at the back with a belt which passes under the loose front. The cap is made of the same, with a chiffon veil, dotted in red, gathered around it.

FASHIONABLE WRAPS.

Lace Coats For Dressy Wear—Motoring Capes of Pongee.

Heavy lace forms the material of some very smart summer wraps. The favorites for this purpose are Irish, alencon, Italian and chantilly laces, and in addition quite a smart combination is made of bruges and brussels.

LINGERIE HAT AND STOLE.

More often, however, there is a mixture worked into a harmonious whole. For instance, supposing the groundwork is Irish crochet, there will be medallions of brussels or alencon lace outlined with frills of valenciennes or very narrow gathered ribbon and perhaps a border of point de venise to complete the scheme. The coats have for lining accordion plaited chiffon or very supple satin enriched with frills of the chiffon around the edges. There is sometimes a little touch of color introduced in the shape of a tiny collar of blue or burnt orange or a series of tiny bows.

Natural colored shantung mantles, made without sleeves and trimmed with coarse lace, are very popular for motoring on the continent. They are unlined and can be slipped over the daintiest costume without injuring it.

A pretty white gown made recently was of ivory cloth, fastened in two tiers with raw edges scalloped over a simulated undershirt of pale blue cloth, likewise scalloped.

The picture shows a lingerie hat trimmed with blue ribbon. The stole is made to match the hat.

THE WELL DRESSED WOMAN

Collarless Gowns For Warm Weather—Princess Effects.

Collarless gowns are again being worn during the hot weather, and, indeed, this is both a dainty and a practical style, for in warm weather a collar becomes mussed right away, besides being most uncomfortable and spoiling the shape of the neck.

The elbow sleeve is a distinct feature of summer clothing, and many lace dresses are made both collarless and with elbow sleeves. These lace gowns are often softened with mousseline de soie insertions. Apricot and deep cream shades are the newest and smartest in lace, and they are as a rule made over foundations of white taffeta and chiffon. Chiffon must be used generously in a gown of this sort to give the proper soft, luxurious effect.

Princess effects, consisting of a high skirt and a beautifully embroidered bolero, are among the smart novelties, while high belts of all kinds continue to be the only fashionable ones worn.

The picture shows a white mull gown trimmed with valenciennes lace. The wide belt is of lavender taffeta, and the small bows used in trimming are likewise of this material. The hat is a simple white straw shape trimmed with lilacs.

MIDSUMMER STYLES.

New Tailor Made Coats—Brown Hollands, Blue and White Drills.

For semidressy wear, when traveling, in hotels a white taffeta skirt and a lace waist are admirable.

Many of the new tailor made coats boast short basques, while the severe three-quarter directoire coat has been worn for some time in Paris. The coat which is made a little longer in the front than in the back is always smart and becoming, as also is the loose Eton, which is youthful and becoming to slender figures. An attractive gray canvas costume seen recently showed three big tucks at intervals around the skirt, with some fancy black and gold braid at the top of each. The bolero coat was held in at the waist with a deep black and gold braided band and showed a daintily braided waistcoat and an inner vest of tucked muslin and valenciennes lace. This was worn with a three cornered hat of white, trimmed with black and gold cords and a single waving bird of paradise plume.

Some brown hollands and dark blue and white drills are made up effectively this season with the real old fashioned sailor blouse worn over a pretty white muslin front or shirt waist. The skirts, of course, just clear the ground all around. Some are trimmed with coarse lace or borders of oriental embroidery; others have strappings of the material, which, if neatly done, is perhaps more effective. A neat suede or kid band is an appropriate finish to a gown of this description.

The picture shows a child's dress of batiste and embroidery. The little skirt has a double ruffle, and a quaint touch is added by the Dutch cap of lace and blue ribbon.

FASHIONABLE MATERIALS.

Brown Still the Craze—Much Taffeta Silk Used.

Brown in lustrous silks and soft taffetas continues its reign of popularity. When brown by itself is not becoming it should not be relieved by touches of bright color such as blue or green, as, alas, is seen too often. A cream tulle bow worn at the neck will help matters considerably; so will a touch of soft coral red in the shape of a string of beads or some other ornament.

The new coarse woolen lace will be ultra effective this fall and winter on gowns of white and pale colored wool.

A great deal of tussore silk is being made up with simple shirred skirts and bodices. They are useful for morning wear, and, when enriched with heavy lace, these little gowns do duty as well for afternoon wear. Pongee gives excellent wear, for it cleans well and does not show the dirt readily like most of the lighter linens. It also combines well with almost any pale color, which permits it to be worn by blond and brunette alike. A heavier weave of pongee, known as "cloth of gold," is used for motoring and evening coats. It is a tribe fellower in tone than pongee and does not wrinkle so readily. Pongee is also combined readily with oriental embroidery, and for those who can stand this kind of trimming it is by far the most smart.

The picture shows a brown taffeta tailor made trimmed with pipings and fine braid. The skirt is shirred on the hips with a full double ruffle.

PARASOLS AND FOOTWEAR.

Fancy Louis XV. Shoes Much Worn. Victorian Parasols.

Some of the smart Paris houses are showing a parasol of the genuine old fashioned shape. It is of a tiny size and fashioned of lilac, of white or green, also white checked silk, adorned with little pinked out ruches of silk, and a deep silk fringe all around. The carved handle, which is in the form of a crook, is designed to be folded up, and the whole thing is meant to accompany an early Victorian toilet.

In Paris they are wearing light biscuit colored shoes, which are very dainty and smart, but only possible to her who has a pretty foot. For those not so blessed there is the chocolate brown or medium brown shade. The combination of patent leather with insertion of gray or white buckskin is another novelty this season. Blue, green, purple and red leather is made up into French heeled ties and garden ties, which are very dainty to wear with short skirted linen costumes and muslins.

The Louis XV. heel is more than ever in vogue and shows no sign of being crowded out to make room for sensible footwear.

For evening wear there are a number of gold slippers worn, striped with white.

The picture shows a suit of white voile trimmed with black and white silk. The skirt is especially full.

UP TO DATE TRIMMINGS.

Maltese Lace Much Used—Autumn Styles to Be Plaited.

Among midsummer novelties are French sailor shapes in stitched white silk, bound all around the edge with blue silk ribbon and trimmed with a plain but jaunty little bow of ribbon at the side.

Maltese lace is used a great deal in trimming the smart gowns of the moment. A charming blue and white checked taffeta frock was adorned with little bows of blue velvet having ends of maltese and caught up with tiny steel buckles. Another gown of fancy green taffeta, piped with velvet of the same shade, had rosettes of maltese lace with tiny rosettes of velvet in their centers.

The autumn styles promise to be much plainer, and leaders of fashion say that we shall return to smaller sleeves again. The tailor made frock pure and simple will be seen a great deal more this fall, and fussy effects will be for dressy wear and not for the street.

A soft tint of silk is known as pigeon's breast. A very smart cloak of this was trimmed with graduated bands of sapphire blue velvet, edged with tiny gold braid. It was slashed up cape fashion all around and laced together with gold cord and tiny tassels. The lining was of cream white accordion plaited chiffon.

FASHION HINTS.

The New Copper Tones—All Shaded Effects the Vogue.

The new millinery shade is a combination of burnt orange and copper. It is very striking and in its many tones ranges from brilliant pinkish orange to a deep red like that of the oak leaf in autumn. It is pretty sure to be becoming to the black haired woman and to the girl with just the right shade of auburn locks. Red of a peculiar terra cotta shade will be all the rage next winter. It will be combined in several shades.

Indeed, while speaking of shaded effects, I might as well mention that they are to be all the rage in almost every tint.

Last spring we had tinted evening gowns of chiffon so beautifully graded in tone that they run almost the entire scale of one color, and the eye was not offended. The present season this will be continued and carried to perfection by means of beautiful and, alas, expensive embroideries and trimmings. The day of cheap dressmaking is unfortunately past, and nowadays the ornaments of dress, handsome and costly as they are, are not deemed sufficiently attractive unless they are pulled apart by the dressmaker and either fitted to match the gown or overlaid with fagoting and grouped into new designs.

CREPE DE CHINE GOWN.

The picture shows an evening dress of pale blue crepe de chine, trimmed with ruffles and insertions of yellow lace embroidered in blue.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Feminine Mail Carriers in the Rural Districts.

Scores of women and girls are now earning their living as mail carriers in the rural districts of the country. One young woman in a rough and hilly region of Pennsylvania rises at 4 in the morning, milks the cows and feeds the hungry farm animals, gets breakfast for the family, then harnesses her horse to the mail cart and starts on a *run of fifteen miles to the railway sta*tion. She also takes passengers and parcels. She has done this for several years without missing a day. Most women who undertake occupations generally followed by men are at a disadvantage. While the woman stands up to what popular prejudice looks on as "man's work," she is nevertheless not at all excused from fulfilling the duties this same prejudice classes as within woman's sphere. If that Pennsylvania woman mail carrier were a man, would she have to get up and milk the cows and feed the live stock and then come in and get breakfast for the family and after that harness her own horse? Well, not much! If she had been a man the women folk of that family would have milked the cows and fed them, too, and would have hustled around lively to get for the favored masculine creature just the nicest hot breakfast cellar and pantry afforded and then would have petted and pitied him if it happened to be a cold or wet morning and gone out to see him and his mail wagon off in state. No such favors for the brave girl mail wagon driver who steers her vehicle over rough and stony roads, through light and darkness, cold and heat, rain and thunder and lightning. However, she stands up to the work and needs no pity. Ohio has at least one woman mail contractor who carries parcels, passengers and mails over a route thirty-five miles long. Her district covers five towns. She, too, is a young lady.

Mountaineer folk are not apt to get into the newspapers, else it would have been widely known years ago that in the coal region of West Virginia is a woman, now a great-grandmother, who for more than thirty years has carried the United States mail bags in and out and up and down over stony mountain paths that are difficult for a horse to tread; for a wagon, impossible. Yet over these paths the remarkable woman mail carrier has traveled on horseback for a generation. She is past sixty now, over six feet tall and straight as an arrow. She knows not fear of man, beast or fiend.

In Massachusetts is another woman mail carrier who should be mentioned. She is Miss Ruth Lane of North Marion, a well educated young lady in full of pluck and power that she has never attempted anything she did not achieve. Some of the things she has tried were so difficult that men quailed before them. One such task is covering this very mail route. The country is so rough that a horse would not speedily in drawing a wagon up hill and down dale. In winter, through the worst rigors of Massachusetts weather, the trip will have to be made on horseback, with saddlebags. In the rich and fashionable ladies who make their summer homes among the New England hills, Miss Lane rides astride.

There is one peril attending her route that would hardly be looked for in that part of the Union. It is a real danger from highwaymen. Many wealthy persons spend the warm months in the re*gion covered by her route, and the mail* daily conveys to them letters containing money and other valuables. More than once in a lonely spot on the road mail carriers who went before her had been held up and robbed. Even this fact has no terrors for Ruth Lane. She is an unerring shot with the revolver and her faithful pistol will be always with her, and Ruth's alert eye will enable her to get the drop on any fellow that attempts to interfere with her.

When she was a schoolgirl some three years ago a severe winter was so bad that it kept her brother at home, but never Miss Ruth. One winter she was a church sexton; building the fires in the meeting house and even sawing the wood that fed them. She is a famous cyclist. She used to ride to school on her bicycle. At a house on the road there was a vicious bulldog that terrorized bicycle riders so much that they finally abandoned the route. Not Ruth Lane. One day she took with her an ammonia gun, filled with an uncommonly strong charge. As the fierce beast sprang at her she let him have the charge full in his eyes. With an awful howl he fled and never again troubled a cyclist.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,

ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

For Vice President,

HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Of course President Roosevelt will wire his congratulations to the Czar and Czarina.

The Chicago packers insist that they have all the men they need. If that is true what is the reason for the continuance of the trouble and the indifference to the continued high price of beef?

The Standard Publishing Concern, of Westfield, which publishes the Union County Standard, has passed into the full control of Lloyd Thompson, of that place, who will hereafter dictate the editorial policy of the paper through right of ownership. The Standard has always been one of our most welcome visitors for its pungent editorial wit and newsy columns and under the new regime we bespeak for it continued success and prosperity. Alfred E. Pearsall, the former vice president of the company and wielder of the editorial pen, has retired from the local field in order to devote his time to New York interests.

The one ray of light in the dark cloud that has been hovering over Russia came Friday with the birth of a son to the Czar and Czarina. To the Czar the event is of more importance than a decisive victory as the absence of an heir has been an undisguised disappointment to his people. Since the days of Anna and Catherine the tradition has been in Russia that a woman cannot reign and in the ten years of their married life four daughters have been born to the Emperor and Empress. The people of other countries will rejoice with the subjects of the Empire in the final consummation of their hopes so long delayed. To the Empress of Russia, especially, will go out the good wishes and congratulations of all feminine Christendom. Her boy, if he lives, will be the absolute ruler of the widest domain on the globe.

Counsel for the State Firemen's Relief Association has decided to carry the question of the right to grant exemption to firemen from taxation, to the Court of Errors and Appeals. Under the circumstances it is what they should do but there is little possibility of the controversy being decided even then and the chances are that it will not be until the facts have been given full consideration by the highest tribunal in the State. The appeal has been taken in the case of Edward Tippet, an exempt firemen in Rockaway, Morris county, whose resignment to an assessment led to the decision which has affected thousands of active firemen, national guardsmen, soldiers and widows of soldiers. No move has yet been made by other associations of men directly interested, but future action will be based on the verdict of the Court of Errors and Appeals. Richard V. Lindabury has been engaged as the special counsel to aid the Firemen's Association.

The Trenton State Gazette in today's issue says: "Mr. Swackhamer, of Somerset, is out of politics." Judging from Mr. Swackhamer's activity at the Garwood rally Saturday evening and the interest he continues to display in political matters generally, we should say the State Gazette has another guess coming. It certainly is news to us.

Imagine the smile that spread over the Czar's countenance when the nurse said, "He's the image of yousky."

"The Milk Trust in Boston was smashed by newspaper advertising," says an exchange. "When it was organized, the independent milk dealers bought space in the leading newspapers and represented to the public the evils of the proposed monopoly. Their campaign won, and the Trust went to pieces."

Collision on Park Avenue.

Fred Kneding, one of the drivers for Jim Fraser, of Somerset street, while driving a cab on Park avenue last Monday, collided with a boy of the name of Carr who was riding a wheel. The lad was not badly injured, but was severely frightened by the collision. The wheel was a wreck. Those who witnessed the accident say that Kneding was not to blame.

AMUSEMENTS.

The appearance of the original massive production of Hall Caine's latest and greatest play, "The Eternal City," at the Academy of Music, New York city, magnificent and enlarged for the Academy's big stage, is certainly an event for which the managers of the Academy, and its legion of patrons are alike to be congratulated. "The Eternal City" has always been recognized as one of the most elaborate and most expensive productions Liebler & Co. ever put out, and when it is known and understood that with this splendid original production appears the original cast of the great play, practically in its entirety, then the Academy patrons will comprehend what a treat is awaiting them during this all too brief engagement—for other advance bookings elsewhere make a longer stay at the Academy absolutely impossible. Hence those who desire to see this sublime spectacle, and under Academy stage opportunities, and at Academy prices should note the opening date, and attend as soon thereafter as possible.

The one hundredth Boston performance of B. C. Whitney's newest, brightest and most popular musical melange, the "Isle of Spice," was celebrated at the Majestic Theatre on Saturday, by a most unusual display on both the part of Manager Whitney and the enormous audience that witnessed it. When the "Isle of Spice" opens at the Majestic Theatre, New York, Tuesday evening, August 23, it will be an entirely new production. Three news sets of scenery having been painted by W. Franklin Hamilton, the scenic artist, and a new set of costumes having been made by Freisinger, together with new mechanical and electrical effects. All of the stage business, groupings, dances, etc., are absolutely original with the "Isle of Spice" and have been arranged especially for the New York run by Mr. Whitney's general stage director, Gus Sohlke, and mark a new departure in the manner of presenting musical plays. The company is a very large one, numbering one hundred and thirty people and including a number of the most popular and best known comedians and comediennes, together with ninety young women who have been described as being young, pretty and shapely, who can dance as well as sing.

Another interesting programme is announced at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre this week. A prominent position is occupied on the bill by Powell, the magician who has recently returned from a European tour. The first appearance here of James Clarence Hyde's clever comedy, "Her Busy Day," is interpreted by an excellent cast. Of a different type in "The Shadow," presented by the Mansfield-Wilbur Co. The Bathelor Club Quartette, Max and Morits, comedy cyclists, Fialkowski, an imitator of animals, Mathews and Haverley in travesty, Nina Collins, a soprano, Barnes and Osburne, duettists, Bailey and Flescher, singers and dancers, and Minnie Harrison, soubrette, are others on a lengthy programme. So successful was the revival of "The Lady of Lyons," at Mr. Proctor's up-town house that a repetition of the performance at the Fifth Avenue Theatre has been decided on for this week. W. S. Hart and Adelaide Keim sustain the principal characters supported by the members of the stock company. Wood and Berry lead the vaudeville programme with a capital singing and dancing specialty. Tiddlewinks and Dugan, the miniature Irish comedians, offer a comedy conversation, the Aerial Shaws are to be seen in a ring and trapeze specialty, and Nina Collins, a soprano, will offer excellent singing.

There will be a fine display of fireworks, in addition to the Spectacle of Decatur and the blowing up of the Philadelphia, in Pain's Amphitheatre, at Manhattan Beach tonight. It will be made in honor of New Jersey and will be denominated New Jersey Night. It is expected there will be quite a rally of the people from the nearby cities and towns of the neighboring State to witness the exhibition. Several prominent citizens from here will be present, and fire pictures of Governor Franklin Murphy, as well as former Senator Smith will be set in fire for the occasion. The pyrotechnic display will be on an elaborate scale, and be such as cannot fail to repay the pleasure of a visit to the Amphitheatre to witness as novel interesting and brilliant a display of fireworks as has been offered to the public during the season.

Y. M. C. A.'s Prospectus.

Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A., has been busy preparing the new prospectus for the association and the work is about completed. It only awaits the plans of the physical department, which will be completed as soon as Mr. Hencke arrives. The new prospectus will undoubtedly bring to light several new plans especially in the physical department, and will be a very interesting booklet.

Miss Catherine M. Conway, of this city, has been visiting out-of-town friends.

FREIGHT TRAIN DASHES INTO CROWDED TROLLEY

Crossing on South Avenue Near Aldene, Scene of Bad Accident.

TWO PEOPLE HURT

NEW BRUNSWICK MAN INJURED IN BACK MAY BE PARALYZED FOR LIFE.

Company Starts Investigation to Learn Why Derailing Switch at the Crossing Was Not Thrown.

Crowded to the rails with half-holiday passengers, trolley car No. 185, of the Newark-Plainfield line, on its way to this city Saturday afternoon, was struck and badly damaged by a freight train that was backing down on the Lehigh Valley Jersey Central joint crossing over South avenue at Aldene. J. H. Dodd, of New Brunswick, a drummer, was so badly crushed that he may be paralyzed for life, and Mrs. John Dinke, of Newark, received a sprained ankle. Another woman was slightly hurt and a score of passengers were either bruised or cut. Dodd was removed to Cranford and later to an Elizabeth hospital, but Mrs. Dinke was able to return home. The car was in charge of Motorman Peter Voorhees and Conductor Charles Ryder, both of this city.

The accident happened despite the fact that the crossing is guarded by the latest type of derailing switch such as the Public Service Corporation has generally installed of late throughout its entire trolley system. That more persons were not injured or killed was deemed wonderful by those who witnessed the smash-up.

When it was evident to the passengers that the train was bearing down on the street vehicle, which was of the open car type, there was wild scramble to get off. Men and women piled over each other in their hurry to escape, and the shock threw from their feet to the roadway those who did not jump immediately. As for the trolley car itself, it was smashed and the front seats crushed together in accordion fashion.

Many of the trolley passengers were from Newark and Elizabeth, the majority being half-holiday pleasure seekers. The Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey branch extends through Aldene and the railroad crossing on South avenue is used as a connection for the exchange of freight between the Lehigh Valley and Central railroads. It is about a quarter of a mile long.

About 3:30 o'clock the trolley car reached the crossing. There is a wide space on all sides at South avenue and it seemed to border on the wonderful how it came to pass that the crew of the car failed to notice that a freight train of four cars, to which a Central Railroad locomotive was attached, was backing down on them.

The fact that the derailing switch necessitated the pulling of a lever on the opposite side of the grade crossing from which the trolley car came also brought forth much comment how it was possible for the accident to occur. The first intimation that the collision was imminent was when the trolley car was directly on the railroad tracks. In a moment the passengers were all excitement. When the rear car of the freight train hit the trolley the latter vehicle was thrown from the tracks.

Dodd was in one of the front seats that was crushed in and was caught before he could get out. The two women also hurt were likewise on the car when the collision happened. Nearly every passenger suffered bruises or contusions in trying to escape. The engineer of the freight saw the trolley car in the way and reversed, but not in time to stop his train entirely.

Dr. J. K. MacConnell, of Cranford, and Dr. G. W. Strickland, of Roselle, attended the injured. They examined a number of persons, and Dr. MacConnell attended to Dodd. The injured man was taken in a carriage to Dr. MacConnell's. Several women suffered from hysteria.

Neither Motorman Voorhees or Conductor Ryder would volunteer any statement as to how the accident came about. It could not be learned from the passengers whether they had seen either man go across the railroad and pull the lever of the derailing switch.

There was another car just ahead of No. 185, and one passenger said he thought it possible that the switch might have been left open by the crew of the car ahead in order to accommodate the conductor or motorman of the vehicle that was struck. An investigation was immediately started by the trolley company.

Work Suspended.

Work on the laying of the sewer pipes on East Seventh street has been suspended on account of the fact that the shipment of pipe which has been ordered for several weeks, has been delayed on the road, and further work can not be done until the shipment arrives.

QUESTION OF TAX EXEMPTION

THE COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS WILL DECIDE IT.

Shall firemen be exempt from taxation? This question, though once decided in the affirmative, is again agitating the minds of those interested by the recent refusal of the tax assessor of Rockaway, N. J., to grant such exemption in the case of Edward Tippet, an active fireman of that place. The matter has been in the courts once but was decided in the negative, in favor of the tax assessor. Refusing to abide by this decision, the State Firemen's Relief Association has carried the question to the Court of Errors and Appeals, and upon the verdict of that body rests the action of tax assessors in the future.

This decision directly affects nearly five hundred firemen, active and exempt, in this city, and the outcome of the case will be watched with great interest. Because of the numerous cases in the court docket to be brought up at the fall session, it is not known exactly how soon a decision will be rendered. In speaking of the matter yesterday, Chief Doane, of the local fire department, said that he is inclined to think that the court's decision will favor the firemen.

"For the last forty years and more," said the Chief, "both active and exempt firemen have been free from taxation where their taxable property amounts to $500 value or less. This Rockaway tax assessor's action has caused all the trouble, but I believe that when the court does render a decision, it will favor the firemen."

William A. Collier, counsel engaged by the State Firemen's Relief Association, will be assisted in the case by Richard V. Lindabury, special counsel engaged by the association. Though the court's decision affects national guardsmen, soldiers and widows of soldiers to the number of several thousand, no one but the firemen have thus far taken definite action protesting the decision.

A BOOK OF INSTRUCTION

POINTERS FOR ELECTION OFFICERS AS WELL AS VOTERS.

The Secretary of State has issued a book of instruction for the use of election officers and voters, which contains information with regard to all election business between the dates of August 16 and November 14. The instructions are very explicit, and full as to the duties and appointment of all election officers. There are however a few directions which every voter should be familiar with.

The terms of office of all members of the district board of registry begin on the first of September, and on or before the third of September all petitions for the endorsement of candidates for public office or as delegates shall be filed with the city or township clerk. Notice of the time and place of primaries will appear on this date. Between September 6 and 9, all voters will be registered by a house-to-house canvass by the board of registry. The results of this canvass are transcribed into two lists of the registered voters at a meeting of the board of registry on September 13. On this date the primary elections are held from 1 to 9 p. m.

Before October 24, all petitions and certificates naming candidates for election shall be filed with the Secretary of State, and by November 5 all ballots must be printed and ready for delivery, and all registry revisions must be completed.

On November 7 all remaining preparations for the election on the following day must be finished. On November 8 the polls will be open from 6 a. m. till 7 p. m. for the election of candidates.

Many to Attend Conference.

The General Conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination will hold its annual session at Nortonville, Kans., from Aug. 24 to 29 inclusive. The Plainfield church will have as its delegates Rev. George B. Shaw, the pastor, Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Charles Potter Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Frank S. Wells and Orra S. Rogers. The American Sabbath Tract Society will be represented by its corresponding secretary, Rev. A. H. Lewis, who will go from his summer home at Watch Hill, R. I., and its business manager, John Hiscox.

More Alarm Boxes.

In accordance with action taken by the Common Council some time ago, Chief Doane has secured an additional fire alarm box from the Gamewell Alarm Co., and it will shortly be installed at Third and Richmond streets. The box will be No. 32.

Plainfielders in the Chorus.

Alfred and Walter Manley, of Park avenue, were among the one thousand children taking part in the Children's Musical Festival at Ocean Grove, last week. There were twenty-four children from Union county in the chorus.

YOUNG MEN BATTLE OVER GIRL'S AFFECTIONS

Farmhand Slashed in a Duel With Another Who Courted the Same Maid.

ON "FIELD OF HONOR"

SWAINS VICIOUSLY ATTACK EACH OTHER WITH BIG KNIVES.

Edward Smith Arrested on Complaint of John Watson, But is Released Because of Technicality —Watson Departs.

With his face hacked and gashed in a fearful manner, John Watson, a young farmhand, was found wandering about Richmond street, Monday afternoon by Constable John Gjestel-son. The man was weak and tottering from loss of blood, having walked all the way from Alton, where he and Edward Smith, both in the employ of Charles Payne, had engaged in a knife duel through quarreling over the affections of a girl.

Gjestelson hurried Watson to police headquarters and Chief Kiely summoned Dr. Lufburrow. The latter worked over him for more than an hour and when he completed operations he had counted a dozen deep cuts on his face, head and neck. He was so weak from loss of blood and the journey in from Alton that it was almost impossible to get from him the facts of the fight which led to his condition.

He declared that he had been smiled upon by a young woman living near Alton and when Smith learned of it, he became enraged, declaring that he had been "keeping company" with her long before Watson had appeared on the scene. He gave Watson to understand he must remain away from her but his commands were only jeered at. Yesterday both were working in a field side by side when the girl's name was brought up and within a short time words led to blows and then knives were drawn. Neither weapon was sharp and the vicious thrusts served to back more than they did to cut. They continued the struggle until weakness compelled them to desist and Watson hurried to this city to inform the authorities.

A warrant for Smith's arrest was sworn out before Justice Mosher and with Patrolman McCarthy, Watson was taken by carriage to Alton. The complainant alleged that the fight occurred in Union County and with this belief the officer placed Smith under arrest. He was also badly cut but his wounds were not as numerous or as deep as those of his adversary.

When the two were returned to Mosher's court, Smith declared the quarrel had taken place in Middlesex County and the Plainfield authorities had no jurisdiction in the matter. Witnesses sworn to the truth of his statement regarding the location and as no warrant could be secured from New Brunswick there was nothing left for the justice to do but to dismiss the complaint. Watson objected vigorously but afterward he and Smith met outside and friends finally induced the two to shake hands and they went off smiling. It was said this morning that Watson had given up all claim to the girl and left last night for New York, from which place he came originally.

MISS ACKERMAN'S FUNERAL.

Held From Monroe Avenue Church and Largely Attended.

Funeral services over the body of Miss Lida Ackerman were held from the Monroe Avenue church, Saturday afternoon, with a large gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. George Mooney was the officiating clergyman. There were numerous floral tributes, among them being set pieces from the Sunday-school departments with which she had been connected.

Interment was made in Evergreen cemetery, members of the family acting as pall bearers.

AMUSEMENTS.

Johnstown Flood is still enjoying the tremendous degree of success which it is certainly entitled to. It is today, as it has been for the past four seasons of Coney Island a huge success. It seems as though this grand and remarkable scenic-electric production would never lose its great popularity. There is no doubt that this spectacle is in as much favor with the great masses of people who visit this famous old resort of Coney today as it ever was. This is evidenced by the crowds who visit it daily. To most of these this realistic show which depicts the greatest disaster in American history has been a revelation. "The greatest show on the Island," an enthusiastic visitor called it recently in advising a friend what to see, and how to see it, and he added, "Don't miss it, or you will be sorry."

PLAINFIELD IS WHITE-WASHED BY WESTFIELD

"Red" Waller Pitches Phenomenal Ball, Allowing His Opponents But One Hit.

A FINE EXHIBITION

O'NEILL IS TOUCHED FOR EIGHT SINGLES.

The Teams Play Almost Perfect Ball—Poor Work of Umpire Watt—The Detailed Score.

The Plainfield team was outplayed by Westfield Saturday afternoon, and the locals went down to defeat at Recreation Park by a score of 3 to 0, in a fine exhibition. This is the first whitewash that Westfield has the credit of giving Manager Johnston's team this year, except the forfeited 9 to 0 contest. "Red" Waller twirled phenomenal ball for Denman's team, allowing but one hit, which Cusick had the honor of making, and striking our four men. His support was almost perfect, Patience being credited with the only error.

Plainfield lost through inability to hit, while O'Neill, of the St. Louis Nationals, who stood on the firing line for the local team, was a disappointment in allowing eight hits. He may be a good pitcher, but he was in poor form Saturday. At the receiving end was Marshall, of the New York Nationals. His work was very satisfactory, not a base being stolen on him. Westfield made hits when they counted most, yes when it is considered that they got eight singles and five sacrifice hits and only three runs, it can be appreciated what a fine game the Plainfield team put up. The contest was in nearly every respect the reverse of the one played on Crescent Oval a week ago, when Westfield was shut out. At that time the team from down the line was just as weak in batting.

The work of Umpire Watt was far from being satisfactory. His decisions in some instances were very yellow. The series between the teams now stands four to two in favor of Westfield.

NO MERCY FOR WIFE BEATER

JAMES NOLAN GETS SIXTY DAYS IN JAIL FOR THE OFFENSE.

With tears in her eyes and her face still showing the marks of a beating he had given her, Mrs. James Nolan appeared in the city court, on Monday, and begged Judge Runyon to be lenient with her husband by giving him another chance to behave himself.

"Under any other circumstance I might consider it," said His Honor, "but I have no patience with wife beaters and they will get no mercy in this court. Nolan, sixty days straight in the county jail."

Nolan was arrested on Liberty street, Saturday night, by Patrolman Hamilton, after he had struck his wife repeatedly in a vicious way. The affair took place in the street while she was making every effort to get him to return home. Despite the blows he showered upon her she remained loyal to him and belittled her hurts to the policeman and also to the court when the prisoner was arraigned. Nolan was formerly a conductor on the street railway and is well known throughout the city.

JAMES PETTIT KILLED.

Well-Known Railroad Man Meets Death in Cab of His Engine.

Spreading rails on the Sound Shore division of the New Jersey Central threw an engine in Morse's Creek, near Elizabeth, Sunday, causing the death of Engineer James Pettit and injuring Fireman Fred Mooney. The former was caught in his cab and crushed while Mooney jumped, escaping with sprained ankles and injured feet. The Sound Shore division is a one-track line and is used for carrying workmen from Elizabeth to the factories at Cartaret. The wrecked engine was hauling three cars filled with 300 of these passengers and all escaped injury.

Pettit's home was in Jersey City and he was well known to Plainfield railroad men and all along the main line. He had been in the employ of the Central for fifteen years.

Death of An Infant.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Peterson, of West Front street, died Saturday. The funeral was called for that purpose. Other changes are also contemplated.

DEATH OF FORMER MAYOR GEORGE W. ROCKFELLOW

Passed Away at His Home in Cardinal, Va., Early Saturday Evening.

NEWS UNEXPECTED

LAST REPORTS BY LETTER LED RELATIVES TO BELIEVE HE WAS IMPROVING.

Was Twice the City's Chief Executive and a Man of Wide Prominence—Body Was Brought North.

George W. Rockfellow, twice elected Plainfield's mayor, died at his home in Cardinal, Va., after a long illness, Saturday night. Word of his death came by telegram to relatives and friends and occasioned great surprise as it had been supposed that he was doing unusually well during the past few weeks. Nothing was said as to the cause but it was evidently due to a nervous malady and heart trouble from which he had suffered for many years.

Born in Bound Brook in 1846 of Scotch parentage, Mr. Rockfellow came to Plainfield thirty-three years ago and established himself in the grocery business at North and Park avenues. Through his geniality and tactful methods he prospered rapidly and soon was the city's leading grocer. He remained at this stand until the erection of the Clifton building at Park avenue and Fourth street a few years ago, when he occupied the corner store. Failing health and changes in his business induced him to dispose of his interests two years ago and he removed to Cardinal, a small place situated on a high bluff overlooking Mobjack and Chesapeake bays. There he lived a quiet life, enjoying his favorite pastimes of hunting and fishing and seeking by outdoor exercise to regain the health that would permit him to return to the North. His last visit to Plainfield was made last fall, when he remained two weeks and every hour was a pleasure and delight to him. When he started for Cardinal he was exceedingly well and to his friends said he intended returning within a short time.

Although devoted to his business, Mr. Rockfellow found time to take part in municipal affairs and he served his townsmen in various ways year after year. In 1884 he was elected Mayor on the Republican ticket and served until 1886. The honor was again conferred upon him in 1896 when he ran against Fred C. Lounsbury, who headed a Citizen's ticket, and defeated him by a small majority. During both terms he served conscientiously and faithfully, his policy being to please all classes of citizens with the result that he became liked better than ever.

He was president of the Board of Health for a long time, president of the State Grocers' Association and vice president of the Dime Savings Institution. He was one of the organizers of the Congregational church and always retained his membership. He was superintendent of its Sunday-school for fourteen years and headed the Board of Trustees for as long a term. Personally, he was a man to whom everyone was attracted and his generosity and good traits were sometimes carried to a fault.

Surviving him are a widow, who was Miss Cornelia Mollison, of Bound Brook, and four children, Mrs. Fred Stack and Roland Rockfellow, of this city; and George Jr., and Herbert Rockfellow, who have been with him at Cardinal. The body was brought North Tuesday and funeral services were held from the Bound Brook Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment was in the family plot at Bound Brook.

Endeavorers at Fresh Air Home.

A large delegation from the Warren chapel Christian Endeavor Society attended the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home, Neshanic, on Saturday and passed the afternoon with the little New Yorkers. The time was pleasantly spent playing games. Later in the afternoon a donkey party was played by the members of the society, and the children joined in the fun. Bean bags were distributed as prizes. Watermelon was subsequently served to the campers, and the remaining part of the time was spent in listening to phonograph selections.

PLAINFIELD A. C.

The Alls Club Changes the Name of Its Organization at Meeting Saturday Night.

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the Alls Club, held Saturday night, the members voted unanimously to change the name of the organization to Plainfield Athletic Club.

For sometime there has been a movement on foot to change the name, and the meeting Saturday night was called for that purpose. Other changes are also contemplated.

"MRS. W. C. WHITNEY" MOVES

SHE IS FORCED BY LEGAL PROCEEDINGS TO CHANGE HER QUARTERS.

In anticipation of a high governmental office within a brief period, Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver is bilding his time and trusting in the promises of Miss Nellie V. Miller, who announces her self as the widow of Hon. William C. Whitney, and states that when she finishes proving her title she will reward him for his courtesy to her on Saturday.

During the past four months, "Mrs. Whitney," who up to yesterday occupied lodgings on the third floor of the building at 338 Washing avenue, has been constantly in trouble with her landlord, Charles H. Hand, the real estate broker. Summoned and subpoenaed again and again, she has refused to appear in court to answer in the numerous "landlord and tenant" cases on court dockets against her name. Matters recently reached a climax when Mr. Hand decided to enter into dispossess proceedings because of non-settlement of rent. On hearing of this action on the part of her landlord, "Mrs. Whitney" decided to advertise a public auction and fool the constable by selling it. Accordingly, announcing herself as "widow of the Hon. William C. Whitney," she advertised a public auction for Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and secured the services of Auctioneer Latourette.

Grasping the opportunity thus offered for entrance to the apartments, Constable Weaver, armed with his legal dispossess papers, went around Saturday afternoon "to attend the sale."

At the conclusion of the sale, the Constable marched up to the astonished "Mrs. Whitney," and presenting his papers, began the dispossession immediately by grasping a chair and depositing it upon the sidewalk. Unable to prevent execution of the law, "Mrs. Whitney" ruefully watched the dismantling of her apartments. Mrs. Soden, a second floor neighbor, finally allowed the furniture to stand in the hallway. It was there that the woman offered Constable Weaver a new job.

"Mrs. Whitney," thus turned from her lodgings, is seeking another home and she may be obliged to leave town.

Republican County Committee Has Completed Arrangements to Have Court Convene for Naturalization.

In accordance with action taken by Chairman Hamilton Kean, of the Republican County Committee, arrangements have been completed since the committee meeting at Elizabeth last week, for the County Clerk's office is to be open on Wednesday evening of this and next week, also on Saturday afternoon, August 27. At these times opportunity will be presented for naturalization.

The naturalization committee from this city consists of Horace Adams, John Keely, Charles Foster and James Morrison and these men plan to take to Elizabeth any and all who wish to apply for their papers. The names and addresses of candidates for naturalization should be handed to a member of this committee or to William Newcorn, clerk of the committee, as soon as possible.

"Tom" Fay Returns Home.

Loaded down with souvenir shillelahs and Mottling humorists tale stories, Thomas Fay, of North avenue, returned Sunday from his trip to England, the first in thirty-two years. He came back on the Cedric and reports an excellent voyage and a very good time all the while he was away. While in London he was the guest of "Neil" Loughlin, formerly of this city, who is now prefessenting the Campbell Machine Company abroad.

Marriage of George A. Horne.

The wedding and reception of Miss Edith Hoyt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Shelley Dyer, and George Augustus Horne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Horne, of Willow avenue, will take place on Wednesday afternoon, August 31, at the home of the bride, Mr. Harrison, Cincinnatti, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Horne will reside after October 1 at Clinton place, Hackensack, N. J.

GERMANIA LODGE OUTING.

The Members and Their Wives Spend Pleasant Day on a Farm.

Germania Lodge, of this city, spent Sunday at Kessler's Farm, New Market, on the occasion of the regular annual outing of the organization. Nearly a hundred members, accompanied by their wives, were in the party. The day's pleasure included all sorts of contests, games and races for men, women and children.

The committee in charge comprised William Gardner, August Wolf, Charles Schanz and Anton Stonnenberger.

Warren Travell, of Staten Island, will take up his residence in the fall at the new home of his brother, Principal Ira W. Travell, on Third place. Mr. Travell is a civil engineer.

LIKENS LOCAL SITUATION TO KENTUCKY FEUD

Newark News Says Some Sharp Things About Borough Higher Licensa Matter.

FAVORS AN INCREASE

MAINTAINS GOOD REASONS EXIST WHY SALOON MEN SHOULD PAY MORE.

Declares North Plainfield is Undergoing One of the Worst Political Quarrels in the History of the State.

Through the determination of the North Plainfield Council to again take up the higher liquor licenes fee agitation, the matter has attracted attention outside the city and borough. During the original agitation, the Newark Evening News devoted considerable time and space to the question and with its revival had the following to say in its issue of yesterday:

"After waiting nearly four months the Somerset County Court has decided that the license fees in North Plainfield shall not be increased; they will remain at the old figure, $500 per year for retail liquor dealers and $400 for wholesale dealers. This is not the end, however, of the latest phase of the unnecessary, long drawn out, undignified, disadvantageous and discreditable political fight between the annexationists, led by Mayor Smalley and former Senator Charles A. Reed, and the anti-annexationists, led by A. V. D. Honeyman and others, for the Borough Council has again voted unanimously to file another petition for the increase in the license fee and to keep up the battle until successful.

"The decision of Judge Schenck is against Mayor Smalley's party, and at least one of the Plainfield papers boldly declares that nothing else is to be expected when North Plainfield's Mayor applies to Judge Schenck for anything in the way of the borough's best interests. Judge Schenck has ever been an opponent to annexation, and, while it may have afforded him satisfaction to render the decision which he and Justice Garretson agreed upon after a thorough study of the case, there is no warrant for the assumption that either of the judges permitted any consideration of the local squabble to influence them.

"This whole North Plainfield situation is one of the worse political quarrels that has ever occurred in this State. Like a Kentucky feud, it divides families, makes enemies of friends, imperils the welfare of the place, and extends far beyond the question which originated the trouble. Plainfield and North Plainfield, in Union and Somerset counties, respectively, are as close together as the Second and Fourth wards of the city of Newark. Nothing separates them but a brook and an imaginary line, neither of which can be seen, for the brook is bridged and built over a good part of the way along the dividing line.

"They are essentially one city—one in location, one in interests, one in sociability, in banks, in water supply, in church attendance, in postoffice, in railroad accommodations, in trolley system, in growth, in progress and in future development. Left to themselves the people would have united in due time, but several years ago bungling politicians tried to hasten the process by untimely legislation. Instantly the borough was split over the question of annexation, and since then whatever the annexationists want the anti-annexationists will fight against, even if it is public school accommodations for their own children or a perfected fire department to protect their own property.

"Plainfield's license fee is $700, and all saloons closed at 11 p. m. North Plainfield's was $350, saloons open all night. It is very handy to make half a night of it in Plainfield and fill out the other half just across the brook. Last fall the anti-annexationists won the council, and that old body, thinking to put the new one "in a hole," voted, just before retiring, to increase the license fees to $600. The new council refused to be bluffed or to be driven into the position of friends of the saloon interests, and promptly indorsed the old council's final act in this matter. Then the case went before Justice Garretson and Judge Schenck, with the result stated, after weary arguments and long delay.

"Though the movement to raise the license fees seemed to be highly moral and to have the interests of order, good government and the welfare of the borough, it was chiefly a retaliatory plot and a political scheme. It had its origin in the bitter fight still going on between the annexationists and the anti-annexationists, and moral sentiments were only secondary. There is good reason for holding that the fees in North Plainfield ought to be increased, notwithstanding the court's contention that the liquor business there is less remunerative than in Plainfield, and that the license fees in the former are greater than anywhere else in Somerset County. So long as any ugly political feud taints, distorts or defeats every municipal movement is that devoted borough, even those that are for the public welfare and born of public necessity, it will be impossible to render any decision satisfactory to both parties, but if the court had fixed the fee at the figure recommended by both councils, representing both factions, it would have defeated the vindictive political purposes of both, while securing moral results which could only have been beneficial to the borough."

THOMAS TERRELL'S FUNERAL

SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF WELL-KNOWN CHATHAM MAN.

Thomas Terrell, of Chatham, Morris county, who was very well-known here, where he visited many times, died of apoplexy on Thursday last at his home in Chatham. He was at his place of business that day as usual, but complained of not feeling well. His condition became serious and a physician was summoned. All efforts were unavailing and he passed away in less than an hour. He was 72 years of age.

Mr. Terrell was born at Mt. Bethel, but for the last forty-five years resided at his farm in Millington, removing to Chatham about four months ago. Since then he had been interested with his son in the grocery business. His kindly disposition and genial manner made for him many warm friends. He was a staunch Democrat and loyal supporter of the party.

Mr. Terrell took a prominent part in politics, having held the office of assessor, freeholder and collector in Bernard's township. He was also prominent in Masonic circles. One son, Walter S. Terrell, and a daughter, Miss Anna Terrell, survive him.

The funeral services were held from the Mt. Bethel Baptist church on Sunday and were largely attended. Rev. Mr. Gibb officiated, taking for his text "The Master Hath Come and Calleth for Thee." A quartette composed of Mrs. H. G. Toney, Miss Stella Runyon and D. B. and H. B. Runyon sang "Nearer, Still Nearer," and "No Night There." The interment was in the family plot in the old cemetery.

DEATH OF MRS. HARNED.

Well-Known Friend Passes Away After a Short Illness.

Mrs. Maria S. Harned, widow of John Harned, died Sunday at her home in East Front street, after a week's illness. She was in her eighty-third year, and had been a resident of this city for about twenty years. Mrs. Harned was born at Green Brook, Somerset County, and was a prominent member of the Hecksite Society of Friends. She leaves two sons, Walter and Howard Harned, of Trenton, and three daughters, the Misses Margaret and Caroline Harned, with whom she lived, and Mrs. Horace Reeder, of Bordentown.

The funeral were held from her late home Tuesday afternoon at 2:30.

Trolley Passenger Badly Hurt.

Harry Shannon, twenty years old, of West Third street, was thrown on his face and badly hurt in alighting from a trolley car at Front street and Lafayette place, Saturday night. His nose was broken and he received other injuries that necessitated his removal to Dr. Cregar's office. The young man claims he asked the conductor to stop but that he failed to do so.

Miss Mamie Huntington, of this city, is spending two weeks with her grandmother, Mrs. Ellen Burke, of High Bridge.

PLAINFIELD AGAIN DELUGED WITH RAIN

Electrical Storm Passes Over the City and Adds to Damage Done Friday.

RESIDENCES STRUCK

TWO VALUABLE COWS KILLED IN PECULIAR MANNER.

Downpour Accompanied by Hail and Incessant Thunder and Lightning—Street Car Traffic Delayed.

As if suffering mortals had not undergone enough in the way of flood and water in the past week, Jupiter Pluvius let himself loose again Wednesday afternoon, and deluged the earth with rain. For nearly an hour there was a terrific downpour accompanied by one of the most violent electrical displays of the season. Lightning flashed incessantly and the continual crash of thunder was terrifying to the timid. By way of variety hail stones as big as hickory nuts fell in every part of the city, smashing window panes and frightening horses.

While the lightning bolts seemed to be everywhere, only two buildings, the residences of John Stanton on South Second street, and Edward Conshee on Duer street, and the flag pole in the Bryant school yard, were struck. The chimney on the former was demolished and several holes were torn in the roof. No harm was done the inmates. The flag pole was shattered during the height of the storm, the upper part breaking off and falling to the ground. Morris Kadensky and Edward Strausenbach, who were walking near it on West Fifth street, at the time, were stunned by the bolt and Kadensky was left in a serious condition. He was assisted to a wagon by Strausenbach and taken to his home at South Second street and Muhlenberg place. He was forced to take to his bed and Dr. Oregar was summoned. The physician found him suffering from the shock and in a high nervous state but he will be all right in a day or two.

One of the peculiar freaks of the storm was the killing of two valuable Jersey cows belonging to William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue. They had been grazing in the pasture on Highland avenue and when it began to rain, moved to the gate leading out. Fifty yards from where they stood is a tree around which the wire fencing had been passed. A lightning bolt struck this tree, passed down the trunk to the wire along which it ran shattering one post after another until it reached the gate. The cows were leaning against the wire and as it passed along both received the full force of the bolt and dropped dead. A portion of the bolt buried itself in the ground at the gate but the remainder passed on along the wire as far as Mr. Smith's barn and knocked several bricks out of one corner.

During the worse part of the storm at about 4 o'clock, the front motor fuse in a closed car on the Netherwood line burned out on Richmond street. An especially vivid flash of lightning caused a current to descend from the feed wire, and in an instant the motorman was surrounded by a sputtering mass of blue flames. There were about a dozen passengers in the car at the time but every individual man and woman started for the rear door and soon piled out in the pouring rain. The suddenness of the whole affair did not give the motorman an opportunity to leave his position, but after the flash he discovered that he was uninjured. The car was stalled for some time and was eventually run backwards to the North avenue station by means of the rear motor. The next car over the same line had the rear motor box burned out in exactly the same way on East Fifth street.

The local telephone and telegraph people, barely recovered from the turmoil of last Friday, again suffered badly from the lightning. As two "phone exchange men of these were burned out and circuits in every part of the city were rendered useless. Linemen were immediately set to work and by today the greater part of the trouble had been cleared. Chief Deane was in readiness for breaks in the fire alarm circuits but the system was not hurt in any way.

Stony brook was unable to care for the rush of water and like it did last Friday, overflowed its banks in many places, flooding the lowlands. A few fences that withstood the previous onslaught gave way and were lost and several cows grazing in a field near the Stine place were swept off their feet and carried to Green brook. There they managed to secure a foothold and escaped drowning.

During the storm yesterday afternoon, lightning struck the house occupied by Mrs. Edward Conshee, of Duer street. Mrs. Conshee and her daughter were in the house at the time, but felt no shock. The north corner of the house was almost entirely destroyed by the lightning, and the timbers were torn and scattered over the ground, resulting in considerable damage.

An unusually sharp flash of lightning struck the Jersey Central Railroad bridge at Grant avenue, splintering the woodwork and setting the tiers afire. Several men at the station were momentarily stunned by the flash. The flames were extinguished by the rain before any damage resulted.

A large shade tree at Sixth and Liberty streets was shattered by a bolt of lightning and the entire top torn away and leaves stripped off.

CARRIERS SEEK INCREASE PAY

NEW LAW MAY GIVE RURAL FREE DELIVERY EMPLOYES MORE MONEY.

There is every possibility that in the course of a few months the local mail-carriers will receive the maximum salary of $730 a year, in accordance with the new Constitutional law affecting the salaries of rural carriers. The men are now receiving the salary of $684, which is an increase in their former pay, but which is not equal to the salaries of letter-carriers in other rural districts whose routes exceed theirs by only one mile.

The Constitutional law provides that all carriers shall receive the maximum salary of $780, "subject to the discretion of the department." Mr. Bristow, in whose bureau the special administration of this branch lies, has decided to grant maximum pay to those only whose routes exceed twenty-four miles. By this decision about 12,000 carriers are shut off as not being entitled to the increased rate, among them the local carriers.

It is not believed that this was the intent of Congress in passing this law. The technical construction of the law may warrant the present interpretation, but it is hoped by the carriers that the spirit of the law will be the guide. It is said that a compromise will be made, whereby the old carriers will receive the full benefit of the law, and in this case the local men will come in for a raise.

AS PHYSICAL DIRECTOR.

Frank N. Marcley, of This City, to Fill That Position at the Summit Y. M. C. A.

Frank N. Marcley, of this city, has been engaged by the Summit Y. M. C. A. as physical director of that association. He will enter upon his duties the first of September.

Mr. Marcley has for a long tim been connected with the local Y. M. C. A., where he received much of his training as an athlete. He is acknowledged to be one of the strongest men in the city, and the medals which he has captured in the local athletic and gymnastic contests speak well for his proficiency in that line. Before coming to this association, Mr. Marcley was a member of the leaders' corps in the Buffalo Y. M. C. A., where he proved an valuable assistant.

Mr. Marcley will be missed in the gymnasium work in the Y. M. C. A., where he has been one of the assistants for a long time.

QUEER JAPANESE CUSTOM.

How the Boy Liars of the Flowery Kingdom Wash Away Their Transgressions.

Yokohama (Japan) Special.

Among the many curious customs that offer such an endless source of interesting study to the westerner traveling in Japan perhaps there is none that arouses his interest so much as that which obtains throughout the Flowery Kingdom, among the rich and poor alike, of washing away their children's lies by a species of shower bath that is a cleanser of the physical as well as of the moral being.

Ablutions play a large part in every form of Japanese worship. Before the shrine which is to be found in almost every home there is a sort of crude bathtub made in the stone floor. The water for these is supplied from pipes which send a heavy stream down from the roof. Seated before the altar in the middle of the "tub" the prevaricating culprit is made to suffer the penalty of his many lies. The volume of water comes dashing down upon his defenseless head with a force that would make a robust American lad "see stars." But the Japanese liar knows that there is no other way to appease the wrath of the injured god of truth, so he succumbs to the inevitable with a much better grace than that with which his western brother takes his whipping, and sits before the shrine of his family divinity, reading aloud for the benefit of a number of bystanders the long list of lies that has brought him to this uncomfortable pass.

The shrine before which this moral water-cure takes place resembles those which are so common in the houses of Catholic countries. The decoration of flowers and numerous candles is much like that with which the pious Italian adorns the altar of the Virgin or his patron saint. Only the hideous little squatting figure of the Japanese god shows that this is an infidel shrine. In the morning the reverent head of the house puts a cake, a little heap of rice and a sprig of green upon the altar, an offering intended to propitiate the god and draw down his blessing upon the family. When drakness comes a lighted lamp is placed before the idol to cheer him in the long hours of the night, during which, according to Japanese belief, he faithfully guards the household from all harm.

NEMESIS OF PORT ARTHUR

Gen. Nogi, Jap General, Who Is Besieging the Fortress, Known by This Sobriquet.

Tokio (Japan) Special.

Gen. Nogi, who is in command of the forces that are attacking the Port Arthur forts from the land side, has under his command a force that is variously estimated by the Russians and Chinese at from 30,000 to 60,000. He is one of the ten Japanese officers who hold the rank of general. He was promoted to this rank a month ago. In the Chinese war he was in command of one of the divisions that took Port Arthur, and later in the same war was commander in chief of the army that invaded Formosa. After the Chinese war he was governor general of Formosa.

Had a Dream Worth Having.

John Stonebrunner, of Springfield, O., is a believer in dreams. He dreamed that at a certain spot, near Beatty, he saw a settler burying gold. The repetition of the dream, two days later, caused him deep reflection. He went to the spot indicated, and there unearthed gold coins to the value of $1,500. The treasure is supposed to have been concealed there in the year 1745, by a French settler.

SYMPATHY IS MISAPPLIED.

President of Yale University Plays Samaritan and Is Taken for a Daring Robber.

New Haven (Conn.) Special.

No matter who a man is, there is usually one subject upon which he dislikes to converse, and in the case of President Hadley, of Yale university, it is the setting of dislocated jaws.

Mr. Hadley has been given just how to do it by a physician of his acquaintance. That was months before his knowledge was unexpectedly called into service. On a Fall river steamer the head of the New Haven college was sharing the stateroom of a gentleman who had taken pity upon the late-comer, who could get no room for himself. Mr. Hadley, of course, had the upper berth.

In the middle of the night from the lower berth came GAGGING sounds, gurgles and low moans. Mr. Hadley jumped down and snapped on the light. There lay his benefactor, his chin tight against his breast, his mouth open, and his lips drawn rigid. President Hadley recognized the signs.

"Be calm, sir," he said, excitedly. "I know just what to do."

Wrapping a towel about his thumbs to prevent their being caught when the jaws should fly into place, he climbed into the berth and kneeling by the man's shoulders took the ends of the jaw firmly in his hands and began to work it into place.

The rest of the story is merely this. That President Hadley had to spend practically all the rest of the night trying to explain to his cabin mate, the ship's captain and surgeon, and half the other officers that he was merely endeavoring to do a kindness and had no thought of assaulting a peaceful citizen who happened to have a nightmare.

PRECIOUS VASE OF COINS.

It Is the Work of 25 Years and Is Covered with Ancient and Modern Money Pieces.

Philadelphia (Pa.) Special.

The fruits of 25 years of labor and saving are visible in a curious vase made by Edward Rausch. The vase is over five feet high and 32 inches in its largest diameter. Its exterior, from top to bottom, is composed of coins, ancient and modern, great and small, representing the money tokens of all peoples, which have been carefully made fast to a surface of copper. Some of the coins are extremely rare. Among them are crude bars, rings and bolts, which were once used as the medium of exchange by African and other savage tribes. Spanish coins of early date are seen in abundance, and some early Greek coins are there. Silician spoon money, early Japanese bars and forks, African horseshoes, shell money of sea coast savages, as well as the most modern coins, are to be seen.

The value of the vase Mr. Rausch places at $75,000. Its makers, who lives at No. 2331 North Twenty-seventh street, is a cornicemaker, and by birth a German. He says the vase is the only one of its kind in the world. He began to collect the coins in 1879, and, though not possessed of wealth and dependent for his living on his daily toil, he collected so rapidly that he soon conceived the idea of making the vase. He found, however, that what looked like an immense pile of coins when loose covered only a small patch on the vase, and then he devoted his life to finishing the article.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF STATE ENDEAVORERS

Will Be Held in the City of Elizabeth on October 6 and 7.

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

REV. T. E. DAVIS WILL REPORT A LARGE INCREASE IN FINANCES.

Prominent Divines Will Address the Young People on Helpful Topics —Facts About the Great Gathering.

Arrangements have been practically completed for the eighteenth annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Societies to be held at Elizabeth, October 6 and 7. Because of the fact that the United Society of Christian Endeavorers will hold no meeting this year, the committee in charge of this State convention believes that the convention will be largely attended, and with this fact in view, they have secured one of the larger Elizabeth churches, the Central Baptist church, as the place of convention. The Third Presbyterian church will be used for over-flow meetings.

The convention topic will be "The Spiritual Life" and this will be developed in its various phases by six or seven of the leading Endeavorers of the State. Among the other speakers of the convention are to be Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions; Rev. Walter Thorpe, chairman of the convention committee and pastor of the convention church; John T. Sproul, of Arlington, president of State societies; VonOgden Vogt, general secretary of the Endeavorers; George Horton, Junior State Superintendent; Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tompkins, of Philadelphia, and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, of Brooklyn, who will deliver the *convention sermon at the closing ses*sion on the second day.

As treasurer of the State societies, Rev. Theo. L. Davis, of East Fifth street, this city, will attend and will *make his report at the business meet*ing on the opening day. The finances of the organization show an increase over previous years and the number of societies organized during the past year is also gratifying, there being nearly 100 founded since the last convention.

The programme of exercises will consist of services of welcome and a business session on the first day in the morning. A song service, conducted by H. T. Jacobs, the singing evangelist, will open the afternoon session, when further routine business and reports of various officers and committees will come up. At the night session, President Sproul will deliver his annual address. An early morning prayer meeting will begin the second day, which will be devoted to the receiving of various reports from the different departments of work. The Junior exercises, including a parade of the societies will take place in the afternoon. The closing session Friday evening will include the convention sermon, singing, and finally the election of officers for the coming year.

APPOINTED FOREMAN.

John P. Thompson, of Essex Street, Has Secured Responsible Position at the Rushmore Dynamo Works.

John P. Thompson, of Essex street, has been appointed foreman of the Rushmore Dynamo Works, on South avenue, which is now undergoing a very busy season. A large force of hands is employed and there are orders enough on hand to keep all departments working for a long time. The company makes automobile, locomotive and various kinds of electric search lights.

A new modern gas engine was installed in the plant last week and other improvements have been made to keep pace with the work. Mr. Thompson entered on his new duties the first of the week and being a man of wide experience will assume charge of the mechanical departments.

State Road Improvements.

Some of the extensive improvements being planned by Henry I. Budd, commissioner of public roads in New Jersey, is the New Brunswick turnpike. Roads are also building in Somerset, Middlesex and Warren Counties. In Hunterdon County the Flemington boards have been mandamused to force the building of roads. From every section of New Jersey compliments for well built roads are being received.

September Wedding.

Invitations have been sent out by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliott Bowen, of Watchung avenue, for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Plummer, to Doctor Franklin Warren White, of Boston, on Thursday afternoon, September 1, at 5 o'clock in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to borrowers upon application a list of its books on a given subject.

GATHERING OF COLORED CLERGY.

Afro-American Baptist State Convention to be Held Here.

Representative colored clergy from Virginia, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and neighboring cities will visit this city on September 8, on the occasion of the Afro-American Baptist State Convention to be held at the Mount Olive Baptist church. Rev. E. E. Jackson, the pastor of the church, is corresponding secretary of the organization, and Rev. George M. Mosley, of Morristown, is president. Much business of interest to the colored church will come up before the convention, and important State work will be considered.

Elaborate plans for the reception of delegates are under way, and Mrs. S. M. Fields, Mrs. P. H. Brown, Mrs. Lulu Dempsey and Mrs. Rhoda Hancock have been chosen chairmen of the various committees of entertainment.

Alfred Lacey of East Seventh street, who has been spending his vacation at Stony Point, N. Y., has returned.

ANOTHER DEATH IN THE MADEN FAMILY

The Third Child to Pass Away Within a Month From the Same Cause.

ONLY ONE SON LEFT

PECULIAR FORM OF STOMACH TROUBLE THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

Physicians Baffled by the Disease—Another Family Similarly Stricken About a Year Ago.

Fraser Maden, the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Maden, of West Third street, died Thursday afternoon, making the third child she family has lost within a month. The boy was taken with a peculiar form of stomach tuberculosis which baffled physicians and which produced partial paralysis. A daughter was first seized and died after a few days' illness, then a young son became ill. He was in the last stages of the malady when Fraser fell a victim and his life was despaired of when the other boy passed away. There is but one boy left and so far he has been free from the trouble.

The Maden deaths mark the second local family which has been afflicted in this manner. Last summer the children of John Corrigan, a resident in the West End, became affected and within a short time four of them died. A third was in a serious condition for several weeks but finally recovered at Muhlenberg Hospital, to which place it was taken early in the attack. There were many who believed the trouble was due to poisoning of some sort but this was disproved by the physicians.

LOCKJAW PROVES FATAL

MISS LIDA ACKERMAN SUCCUMBS TO MYSTERIOUS ATTACK.

Baffling the efforts of physicians to arrest its effect, the case of lockjaw which attacked Miss Lida Ackerman, of Clinton avenue, five weeks ago, terminated fatally Wednesday afternoon. She passed away at 2 o'clock after enduring great suffering, yet bearing it patiently. What caused the attack remains a mystery, yet it was evidently due to a cut or a slight wound of some kind as up to the time of its commencement she had enjoyed excellent health.

Miss Ackerman was the daughter of Cornelius J. Ackerman and was well known throughout the city. She was connected for many years with the Monroe Avenue church, where she was a Sunday-school teacher and faithful worker. Surviving her are three brothers, Archibald Ackerman, of Irvington; Cornelius, of this city, and William, of New Market, and four sisters, Mrs. John P. Thompson, of Essex street; Mrs. Edward Vail, of Elmwood place; Mrs. Walter F. Manning, of West Seventh street and Mrs. Frank Martin, who resides with her father.

LITERARY.

We would not desecrate the American flag. Was it right to have the "flag law" so interpreted in Boston? Other chiefs of police throughout Massachusetts decided that there was no violation of the law, so the event was local with Boston. The law has already been decided to be unconstitutional in New York, the Judge stating that the question of using the flag was one that could be passed upon only by Congress, as it was a case of Federal sovereignty and not of State sovereignty.—Everybody's Magazine, August, 1904.

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCHING OF THE ELIZABETH

Miss Helen Besler Christens the New Jersey Central's Ferryboat.

PROMINENT GUESTS

SEVERAL PLAINFIELDERS AMONG THOSE WHO WITNESSED THE EVENT.

The New Boat a Sister to the Wilkesbarre—Details About Her Construction.

Under favorable circumstances the new ferryboat "Elizabeth," of the New Jersey Central, was launched at Wilmington, Del., yesterday afternoon. The launching was successful in every respect and the delightful weather added to the pleasure of the large number of guests present, including Vice President W. G. Besler, Mrs. Besler and Miss Helen Besler, Freight Traffic Manager T. B. Keenan, and Mrs. Keenan, General Passenger Agent C. M. Burt, Superintendent of Motive Power William Molnston and Mrs. Molnston, of this city. They made the trip to Wilmington, with the party of officials and invited guests, on a special train.

Miss Besler dashed over the bow of the boat as it left the ways, a shower of champagne and formally gave the boat its name. Floating proudly in the breeze as the hull parted into the water, it was taken in tow by some tugs and moored alongside of the new Central Railroad ferryboat "Wilkesbarre," which will be ready for delivery in a few days.

The christener of the boat was dressed in pink and wore in her hair pink ribbons. The bottle of champagne was enveloped in red, white and blue ribbons.

Mr. Besler looked after the personal comfort of the guests of the company, seeing that they secured seats where they could witness the ceremony to advantage. A dinner followed the launching, seats being provided for about 200 guests. The place was suitably decorated and at the table where sat Mrs. Besler, wife of the vice president, was a beautiful bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The "Elizabeth" is the sixth of the fast modern double-decked ferryboats recently built by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and with her sister ship, the "Wilkesbarre," will ply between Communipaw and the Central Railroad of New Jersey's new station at foot of West Twenty-third street, New York.

The boat is 307 feet in length, 68 feet beam, and has a load draft of 10½ feet. The hull is constructed of the best quality of ship steel, and has five bulkheads, four of which are watertight. She is propelled by a four-cylinder triple expansion engine, having a high pressure cylinder 19 inches in diameter; and intermediate cylinder 30 inches in diameter, with a stroke of 30 inches. The high and intermediate cylinders are fitted with piston valves, and the low pressure cylinders have double ported slide valves, while the engine drives a continuous shaft, having an eight-foot, ten-inch, propeller at either end. Steam is supplied by three cylindrical boilers of the gunboat type, each being eight feet, nine inches in diameter by twenty feet long, and constructed to pass inspection for a steam pressure of 170 pounds.

There are two cabins on the main deck, and from these wide stairways lead to a large saloon on the upper deck, outside of which is a spacious deck extending continuously around the boat, affording an excellent promenade and view of the river and shipping. The cabins are finished in quartered oak, floored with tiled linoleum and have an extra allotment of windows, yielding good light and ventilation, which, in connection with the elaborate system of steam heating assures comfort in all weather.

The main fire fighting equipment consists of a large fire pump in the engine room connected to eight lines of hose located at convenient points in the cabins, and this augmented by the usual auxiliary outfit of fire buckets, axes, and portable extinguishers. There are four lifeboats, four life ring buoys, and an ample supply of cork jackets life preservers. The boat is expected to be ready for delivery to her owners, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in about six weeks.

Iron Replaces Wood.

Large iron girders are being put in the roof of the old Saengerbund Hall, which was destroyed by fire last winter. Formerly there were only wooden supports for the roof, which were of insufficient strength and which allowed the roof to fall in when the building burned. The work is being done by William Hand & Son, of this city.

"LAW-MAKERS AND LAW-BREAKERS" MEET

Mr. and Mrs. William Newcorn Entertain "The Get-Together-Club" at Their Home.

INTERESTING SPEECHES

PRESENTATION OF A SILVER BOWL AND LADLE TO THE HOSTESS.

Many Guests Prominent in City and County Affairs Present at the "House Warming"—Mrs. Newcorn Joins the Club.

"The Get-Together Club," a local social political organization which its members say, is composed of "the law-makers and law-breakers of Plainfield," "got together" Thursday at the new home of William Newcorn, Esq., on West Front street. The occasion was an informal reception tendered by Mr. and Mrs. William Newcorn to their friends in the organization.

About forty members of the club assembled, among whom were Mayor Otto F. Jenkins, President Ralph I. Tolles, of the Common Council, and Councilmen "Col." Frank Randolph, J. S. Higham, William L. Glenk, Robert L. Lee, Former President James F. Runkle, of the Common Council, City Collector Frank H. Smith, Andrew MacCardell, Francis J. Blatz, Esq., Chief of Police Patrick Kiely, City Judge William N. Runyon, Postmaster Elias H. Bird, School Trustee Floyd T. Woodhull, George T. Greenleaf, Harry Dumont, Henry T. Dunbar, George Tobin, Harry McDonald, Sheriff B. Frank Cortiell, James Morrison, Samuel Fristella Tabita Wilbur, John Traynor, John Bowman, Overseer of the Poor Alexander Ayres, Thomas Hanna, County Freeholder William A. Wentphal, Harry Dreier, David Dreier, James Stewart and Charles Dunham. Out of town guests were James Calvert, candidate for county clerk, Former Assemblyman Edward S. Coyne and Assistant Postmaster James White, of Elizabeth. Hon. Hmilton Kean, chairman of the county committee, expected to be present, but word was received that he would be unable to attend because of important business.

The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Newcorn and the evening was passed informally. Soon after assembling, the "Club" held a special meeting at which Mrs. Newcorn was elected a member of the organization. In the name of the club, City Judge Runyon presented to Mr. and Mrs. Newcorn, a handsome twenty-inch silver punch bowl, gold lined, and a heavy silver punch ladle. Mr. Newcorn responded to Judge Runyon's address, tendering the thanks of himself and his wife.

The subsequent time was taken up largely with a musical programme. Edward Goldberg, of Philadelphia, rendered several selections on the piano, and David Dreier's accompanying violin obligato was well performed. Later Mr. Dreier gave solo selections, and some trick playing. City Judge Runyon, James Traynor and James Stewart also rendered popular vocal selections.

An elaborate buffet lunch was served in the course of the evening in the dining room, which was handsomely decorated with palms, ferns and roses, as were the parlor and hall.

CENTRAL TRAFFIC SUSPENDED

A BAD MIXUP OF COAL AND FREIGHT AT ANNANDALE.

All traffic on the New Jersey Central between Somerville and Easton was suspended for four hours, Wednesday night, because of a bad freight and coal wreck which occurred at Annandale shortly after 6 o'clock. Both tracks were completely blocked and it took three wrecking crews until 10 o'clock before one of them was cleared.

A mixed train of freight and coal cars, westbound, parted as it was emerging from the "Sand Hill" cut. The engineer was signalled of the fact and as the rear end was not in sight he brought the forward part to a stop and started to back up. Before he realized its nearness the detached part came over the summit of the grade and dashed into the forward part with terrific force. Cars were piled up in all directions while six of the largest ones were thrown down the embankment.

Wreckers were sent to the scene from Elizabethport, Phillipsburg and Manch Chunk, trains in the meantime being sent over the Lehigh Valley tracks between Phillipsburg and Bound Brook. The Harrisburg flyer was one of the expresses delayed.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 21.

Topic—Standing alone for God.—Rom. viii, 31-39.

There are various occasions in life when we stand alone. The psalmist once said, "I am as a sparrow alone upon the house top" (Ps. cii, 7). The sparrow is supposed to be the blue thrush, a very solitary bird of Palestine. So we often stand alone in life. It may be alone in adversity. "When we laugh, the world laughs with us; when we weep, we weep alone." The friends of prosperity usually vanish when adversity comes; and we are left alone. Again, we may stand alone with God, as is suggested in the poem "I Stood Alone With My Conscience," conscience being God within us. Then, as the topic suggests, we stand alone for God.

Every Christian must expect at times to stand practically alone for God, or at least we should be ready and willing to do so if the occasion should arise. If faithful to God, we must expect at times to be in a very small minority. Abraham in an age of great idolatry found it necessary to stand alone for the faith—one man against his age! When Moses denounced Israel's sin of idolatry in the wilderness and called upon those who were on the Lord's side to stand forth, only one tribe stepped forward, the tribe of Levi. The majority clung to their sins. When Israel later on was overrun by the prophets of Baal, Elijah was the only public defender of the faith, and in despair he cried unto God, "Lord, they have killed Thy prophets and digged down Thine altars, and I am left alone, and they seek my life." True, there were 7,000 in Israel who had not bowed the knee to Baal, but they were keeping very quiet about it. On more than one occasion Daniel stood alone for God, and can we expect a different experience from that of these ancient saints of God? Not at all. We may be called to stand alone for God, alone for faith in God, alone for the confession of faith in God or alone for the work of God, and if called upon to perform such duties let us stand "steadfast and immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

"If God be for us, who can be against us?" What is human opposition, scoff or persecution if God be for us? One with God is always a majority. God and one man will form a majority that will stand for Him and they have won. Abraham won against the world. Moses, Elijah, Paul, Athanasius, all men who have stood out for God, have come off "more than conquerors through Him that loved us," and gave Himself for us." Let us always stand for God, though we stand alone, for He will stand with us.

BIBLE READINGS.

A Foreign Field Secretary.

The Rev. F. S. Hatch, D. D., has been for three years field secretary for India, Burma and Ceylon under the direction of the World's Christian Endeavor union. He has done an inestimable service for the cause and is just now enjoying a bit of a vacation in America. Since landing he has been in large demand as speaker at state and local conventions. Dr. Hatch was formerly a New England pastor.

A Chinese Idea.

There are seven subsocieties in the Honan Y. P. S. C. E. in China. These are: (1) Gospel Preaching society, the members of which have been quite diligent in study and earnest in preaching the gospel in the outstations and in the street chapel at night. (2) Lookout committee has done good service in looking up irregulars and teaching the inquirers throughout their respective districts. (3) The Christian Marriage society has at last aided in managing four engagements between Christian children, and there have been six Christian weddings this year. (4) The Passage of Scripture society which has memorized 375 chapters of Scripture have been repeated, which represents a considerable amount of teaching by its members. (5) The Anti Foot Binding society has enrolled only seven members, but in the case of one especially this society has been taken up bravely and borne consistently for Christ's sake. (6) The Christian Purity society has thirty-seven members and has helped many to abstain from intoxicating wine, tobacco and bad literature. (7) The Band Seekers' society has nine members, who have led not a few to come to the meetings, some of whom are now bright inquirers.—Irish Endeavorer.

A Novel Idea.

In an Australian society the membership is split up into little groups of seven, who agree to make their number ten by obtaining new members. When the number is gained a new combination is formed, still completing seven, and so on. The plan has been very successful and has added materially to the membership of the society.

Egyptian Endeavor.

Egypt has five societies and they are decidedly cosmopolitan. One of them has among its members Italians, Syrians, Armenians, Copts, Hindoos, Germans, English and Americans.

TREES TABLE ORNAMENTS.

Japanese Gardeners Starve Forest Giants in Youth to Make Lilliputians.

The Japanese propensity for "miniaturizing" has of late led to experiments with many plants not native to the Flowery kingdom, and as a result there are shown heliotropes, impatiens, cacti, etc., from one and a half to four inches in height, which are not merely small examples of these different families, but wizened growths, of mature habits and proportion, perfect duplicates of the plants nature planned on a scale several hundred times larger.

The method by which this end is reached is nothing more nor less than starvation, says an authority. Poor soil, little water, and a ceaseless slipping of all new growth constitute the Spartan treatment to which the plants are subjected. As in sheer desperation at such thwarting of their natural growth, they flower profusely, doubly, continually.

The sturdy American oak, even, is undergoing the same process that makes the Japanese spruce or chabo a boudoir or dinner table ornament. In a few years at most the acorns that are now subjected to this treatment will doubtless be sold as drawing-room decorations. Imagine a mountain oak or an arching elm, perfect, identical in outline with the giants of forest or college campus, and yet only six or 12 inches in height! And this is what Japanese nurserymen are experimenting with today. Tiny trays, pans of pebbles and miniature trees will then doubtless represent famous American gardens and homestead grounds, while miniature model gardens now sold by the dishful, one might say, represent historied gardens in Japan.

Besides the dwarfing of American plants and forest trees, Japanese ingenuity is at work on training them at the same time into the contortions so dear to the almond-eyed aesthete. Thus the miniature elm, a century old, which will form the center piece of a twenty-first renewal flower show, can occasionally show its drooping branches in long ringlets and inverted spirals, or the 50-year-old spruce in its thimble-like pot may display twigs trained in all the twists and curves of a Greek scroll.

Plum, peach and cherry trees for this purpose. The branch under training is held in the desired position by one workman, while the other threads its bonds back and forth like a network. And so it stands until years of starvation have robbed the frail tissues of its desire or ability to regain a normal shape. The acme of exquisite artificiality is the ideal of the Japanese horticulturist, and simple, luxurious, natural growth has small merit in his eyes.

Though the term "interesting age," there are, nevertheless, already some samples of this particular grafting in oriental ways on American growths, and those who are interested in the curious departure in the whole realm of nature's any collection of Japanese plants, or the stock of any progressive nurseryman.

This profession—for the native of Japan dignifies the work to that rank—is becoming a rapidly increasing number of the mikado's subjects in this country. No other people have such patience with the slowness or the vagaries of the vegetable world. Not only has the number of country places and even small city gardens of Japanese landscape design grown astonishingly in the last few years, but Japanese gardeners for American grounds treated in American style are greatly in demand. These people, indeed, seem to have some secret understanding with the vegetable world, and to be peculiarly adapted to ferret out its unsuspected possibilities.

NEWSPAPER FOR A KING.

Emperor of Austria First Monarch to Introduce the Custom in Europe.

The emperor of Austria was the first royal personage to have a newspaper published for his own private perusal. About 30 years ago he thought it would be a nice idea to have each important article condensed by a competent writer, and the results written out in large type on the finest paper, which are then slipped into a binding cover and laid on his majesty's breakfast table.

Nothing that concerns him, agreeable or disagreeable, is ever omitted, and to make certain nobody is fooling him he occasionally orders a fresh bundle of papers to see if his orders are obeyed. True, the emperor loses a lot of amusing things, as everyone does who cannot read a newspaper for himself, but he is spared all mere spicy stuff and doesn't like to try his eyes too long at a time.

His royal newspaper was likewise adopted by other European monarchs, until the more modern kingships found it too old fashioned to install the news, and then they took to doing their own "condensing" and skimming. King Edward is an indefatigable newspaper reader, despite his "busy day" programme.

Old Chapel's Position.

The old chapel-of-ease at Tunbridge Wells stands partly in Kent and partly in Sussex; but, more than that, it also stands in two parishes. When the clergyman leaves the vestry he comes out of the parish of Frant, in Sussex; and if he is going to officiate at the altar he walks into the parish of Tunbridge, in Kent. If, on the other hand, he is going to preach the sermon he walks from Frant into the parish of Speldhurst.—London Tit-Bits.

California Beekeepers.

The greatest beekeepers in the world are to be found in this country. There are men in California, for instance, who own from 5,000 to 12,000 swarms of bees and during the flowering season they farm out these swarms to the owners of orchards.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Aug. 21: "Standing Alone For God."—Rom. viii, 31-39.—Company In Trial.

The sense of isolation is one of the most depressing experiences we can suffer. To be sent on a forlorn hope to rescue some one in extreme danger may only stimulate our courage, for in such a case we know that some one waits our coming with keen anxiety and others follow us with fervent prayers and good wishes. But to be placed in opposition to men is a far different thing from being asked to overcome natural dangers. To be conscious that we stand alone is sufficient to raise doubts as to the reasonableness of our position and make the boldest hesitate to go ahead. To know that the great mass of our fellows are ranged in opposition to our plans ought to make the most confident pause and consider, first, if they are all in the wrong and we alone have the truth, and, secondly, what prospect there is of final success for ourselves single handed against the multitude.

*To cut oneself off from companion*ship in good society with his fellows is one of the greatest sacrifices a person can make. To stand in opposition to the majority requires either high courage or stupidest obstinacy. So one may well be cautious when he finds himself out of harmony and sympathy with others.

But, when any one of us does awake to the realization that we hold some truth or see some principle at stake that we must maintain, then comes the supreme test of our worth. Then indeed has our hour struck for heroic action, and happy shall be he who sees and dares do his work regardless of help from others.

Misconception and isolation he shall feel such as he had never before imagined. Bitterness and malignity he may have poured out to him beyond all measure. If only no bitterness gets inside him and he keeps his eye clear to the sole reward of truth, he will be well. He will overcome. Men will be drawn to him and to his truth. This is written in the nature of things.

This struggle will draw deeper on the soul powers than any conflict with the forces of the natural world can possibly do. But it will also develop the spirit as no other experience in life is able to do.

In actual fact no one of us ever is or will be called to stand alone. This phase touches no small part of life. It emphasizes the exact opposite. We are not alone!

If we are in suffering and feel as if *our lot is singular and no one is so af*flicted as we, all that is necessary to correct this false view is a little error, and we will see not only that many others are in pain, but that the whole creation groaneth together in pain. We have plenty of company in trial. This might not bring much consolation, but when we read the further statement that the Spirit intercedes for us we find hope awakening. We are also assured that the whole is actually working together for our good. Even sufferings are not harm, but small forms of benefit to us in the end. To know that the Spirit is interceding for us gives new fortitude, and we become patient.

Beyond this we read that Christ is actually a companion with us in all our experience. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" "We are workers together with God." What companionship!

Let us stand steadfast and true here, and we shall not stand alone when before the great white throne in the day when the secrets of men's hearts are revealed.

An Unsolvable Enigma.

Man is to man the only unsolvable enigma in the universe. Here is something no chemist can reveal the exact acids or put successfully into his crucible or pass through his spectroscope. But Jesus Christ needs not that any should bear witness of man, for He knows what is in man, as St. John says. That fact was not only true, but drew the weeping woman, who was a sinner, too, to His feet. It is the height of genius to know some men as a great commander knows whom to select for his campaigns or a great dramatist knows what words to assign to what characters, but it takes more than genius to know all men. That God only does. And in the divine knowledge of all men are the sinner's torture and the saint's rest.—Interior.

Be on the Lookout.

Be on the lookout for mercies. The more we look for them the more of them will we see. Blessings brighten when we count them, and the final determination of the heart the eyes see. If you want to be gloomy, there's room enough to keep you glum; if you want to be glad, there's gleam enough to make you glad. Say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." Better lose count in enumerating your blessings than lose your blessings in telling over your troubles. "Be thankful unto Him, and bless His name."—Matthe D. Babcock, D. D.

The Makers of Our Destinies.

Our judgment tests confirm manhood. We are all drifting out and on toward our final places. Some go down early in the strife, others fight on and overcome. There is no decree more certain than character. Our destinies are ourselves.—Presbyterian Journal.

It Often Proves Insufficient.

Even the offer of becoming sons of God often proves insufficient to induce men to abandon the world, with the pleasures and delights they have learned to love.—Christian Herald.

Not God's Refinement.

Refinement that carries us away from our fellow men is not God's refinement. —Bowker.

THE ALIS CLUB'S MANAGER

SKETCH OF G. H. JOHNSTON, THE POPULAR BASEBALL FAN.

While the baseball season is at its height and the local fans are rooting for the home team in the series against Westfield, a brief sketch of the man who has been instrumental in getting together a team, that could make Manager Denman's cohts "bite the dust" for the first time on a local diamond, is interesting to the cranks.

George H. Johnston was well-known to the local lovers of the game when he accepted the position of manager of the Alis team. As manager of the Scotch Plains nine he proved his ability to get more work out of the players for less money than any other person through this section of the State. It was for this reason that early in the spring he was sought as a member of the Alis Club and the manager of its ball team. Manager Johnston, himself as old player, knows that one game does not make a player. This has always been his policy and the wisdom of it has been shown in a number of cases, especially while manager of the 'Plains team. The first game Brogan played with that team was one of the poorest exhibitions he ever put up. So it was with "Billy" Williams, who played third base, but Manager Johnston knew that the game was in them and held them, although many thought he was making a mistake. Both players remained with the team for several seasons.

Mr. Johnston, an old ball tosser, began playing the game at Scotch Plains during his school days. When these were over he was instrumental in organizing the old Twilight ball team, one of the strongest amateur teams at that time in this part of the State. It was about this time that the curve ball was introduced. Johnston at this time was doing the pitching for his team. Taking hold of the new idea, he soon mastered it and was one of the first to introduce it at Scotch Plains.

His fame soon spread as one of the best twirlers in this part of the State, and before long the home team lost him, as he entered the New York State League as change pitcher and outfielder for Kingston. The disbanding of his club brought him back again to the 'Plains and for a while he played an outfield position for the famous West Ends, of Somerville. Baseball at the time took a local slump, but several years later the sport was revived and in 1901 he was one of the organizers of the Scotch Plains ball team. As player and manager of the team he continued in the game that season and part of the next, during which time the 'Plains nine was strengthened so that it was one of the best in this section. In 1903, he was again made manager and given full swing by the club in signing the players. When the season opened he had gotten together an aggregation that could give any thing along the line a run for their money. People marvelled at Scotch Plains supporting a semi-professional nine, but Manager Johnston believed that the fastest game was sure to draw the crowd and he was not mistaken, as the club finished the season $300 to the good. His work since coming to this city is well-known, and proves that he is an able manager.

A HUMAN BAROMETER.

Mrs. J. S. Higham Can Predict Any Kind of a Storm.

Following a shock received from lightning about two months ago, Mrs. J. S. Higham, of West Sixth street, has become a human barometer. Twelve hours before a thunder storm her nervous system takes on a high tension, and she has a trembling condition of the muscles until the storm comes. With an ordinary rain she is almost equally sensitive, and can predict it like a barometer. The members of her family put complete faith in her prophesies and find them correct.

CHANGE THE DATE.

Republican Party Practically Decides to Hold State Convention in Trenton on September 20.

It was announced Thursday that the Republicans of New Jersey had intended holding their State convention in Trenton September 15, but that as the Democratic State Convention is to be held there on that date, and two conventions in one city on the same day are not regarded as advisable, the plan will have to be changed. It has practically been agreed to have the Republican convention in Trenton on September 20, as Taylor's Opera House can be had for the purpose on that date, or one of the two following days.

WEST END RESIDENTS HEAR EXCITING RUMORS

Stories That Apple Stealers Had Been Shot Draws a Big Crowd of People.

ORIGIN A MYSTERY

HALSTEAD C. COMPTON THE VICTIM OF THE WIERD REPORTS.

Meyer Sacher Supposed to Have Been One of the Injured, and His Mother Has Hysterics.

Wild rumors to the effect that one boy, then two and finally three, had been shot by Halstead C. Compton, while robbing his orchard, threw a big part of the West End into a high degree of excitement late yesterday afternoon. The vicinity of Mr. Compton's home on West Front street was soon the scene of a big gathering and people were hurrying that way from every direction before the stories afloat were found to be untrue.

Mr. Compton's orchard is one of the best in the city limits and for years has been looked upon by boys as a legitimate place from which to help themselves to everything in sight. Some years ago their depredations became so annoying to the owner that in exasperation one day he discharged a shotgun toward some pilferers and Victor Houston, a small boy, was struck by scattering shots. His father brought suit against Mr. Compton and was awarded damages. The occurrence and the litigation circumstances are well known to everyone consequently when the report of another shooting went about it was generally believed.

The matter was reported to police headquarters and Roundsman John Flynn went to Mr. Compton's home to investigate. The latter was completely ignorant of the excitement abroad in connection with his name and was dumfounded when informed that he "had shot some boys." He declared that he had not even chased any of them out of his orchard during the afternoon as he usually has to and he was at a loss to know what caused the rumors. Mr. Compton was greatly concerned over the wild reports and asked that an investigation be made. The officer scoured the neighborhood but failed to get clue that will throw some light on the origin, but without success.

One of the boys who was supposed to have been shot is Meyer Sacher, of West Third street, and his mother was so informed by a neighbor. The woman immediately ran into the street wringing her hands and was in a state of collapse when her son appeared. He had not been near Mr. Compton's place and was as much mystified as the orchard owner over the begging of the story.

GILBERT LOVELL A BENEDICT

HE IS MARRIED TO MISS FLORENCE E. BELL, OF MERCER, PA.

Rev. Gilbert Lovell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leander M. Lovell, of Crescent avenue, and for the past year assistant pastor at the City Park Branch Presbyterian Mission in South Brooklyn, near the Navy Yard, was married to Miss Florence Ellen Bell at Mercer, Pa., Wednesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McConkey, of the Presbyterian church at Grove City, Pa. Miss Bell was married at the home of her sister, Mrs. Gordon Smith. She is the daughter of William L. Bell, a prominent California business man.

Mr. Lovell is a graduate of Yale College, and prepared for the ministry at the Hartford Theological Seminary, several years ago. He and his wife will go to Fall River, Mass., for their honeymoon, and will leave this country from San Francisco on October 1 to go to China, where Mr. Lovell will be a missionary under the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions in Hunyan Province.

PLAINFIELD A. C. PLANS SOME CHANGES

Movement on Foot to Make the Organization a More Representative Body.

TO RETAIN JOHNSTON

MEMBERS IN ARREARS FOR DUES WILL HAVE TO PAY UP NOW.

Effort to be Made to Secure Permanent First-Class Battery —Some of the Various Schemes.

Now that the Alis Club has changed its name to Plainfield A. C., several other matters are under consideration in making the club a thoroughly representative one. It is proposed to make some changes in the rules which will work to the club's advantage. All members in arrears for dues or season ball tickets will be expected to pay up and a better method of keeping the accounts will be introduced.

As the season is now late, little in the way of certain improvements can be made this year, but by another season these will be followed up. The plans include the erection of a fence about Crescent Oval, if another lease can be secured on the grounds, and the entire left field will be fixed to prevent a repetition of the trouble a week ago when that part of the field was all under water.

There will also be a change in the baseball management, the idea being to have one person assume this position and to be held responsible for the results. This person will undoubtedly be the present manager, George H. Johnston. While the team is considered exceptionally strong now, with the exception of a pitcher and catcher, plans will be made to strengthen every weak point and especial pains will be taken to secure a first-class battery. Farmer's present condition makes it impossible to tell when he can return to the game, and this will necessitate getting another catcher. Efforts are being made to get a strong twirler. With the assistance of Nat. Strong, Manager Johnston is sure he will be able to land the kind of a man he wants for the box, as well as behind the bat until Farmer recovers.

There is now a feeling among the club members, as well as the other supporters of the team, that "Lefty" Davis is not strong enough as a pitcher, considering the strong aggregations that are on the schedule, and there is a general feeling in favor of a change in a stronger man.

A little earlier in the season it would have been possible to secure a first-class pitcher, but the one in mind is now with another strong team. No doubt arrangements will be made before next season opens to get a good slab artist.

SOMERVILLE WORRIED.

West Ends Recall the Old Days With Considerable Pride.

The Plainfield papers seem very much worried over the fact that Somerville has a baseball team that would like a chance to make a few "0" on the Alis side of a score board. They even (without looking for facts) remarked about the times that the Crescents and the old West Ends of this place. They did win four out of fourteen games, a record that they could well feel proud of in those days. But this one might better recall one of the games they did not win. We speak of the time the Crescents had a band hired to play after the game. The band was under the grandstand, out of sight, and after the game they were paid off without playing a note, (a shame to take the money), but they did. The poor old boys didn't need music after the game—they needed some good advice. We mean no offence by these reminders, but just want to impress a few of the facts on the minds of the newspaper men, as they appear on the records. — Somerset Democrat.

The August Suburbanite.

The August number of The Suburbanite, a monthly magazine published by the passenger department of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is of unusual value to those interested in suburban life. The pleasures of boosts, of which there are about 200 moored each summer in the streams around New York, are well described by William E. McCormick. Another article treats of the lower tier of Jersey coast resorts from Ocean Grove to Point Pleasant.

Gas for Dunellen.

A representative of the Public Service Corporation is making a canvass of Dunellen to ascertain whether any encouragement would be given the company if they should decide to lay their gas mains through the streets. If the users of gasolene would signify their willingness to burn gas instead there is no doubt that mains will be the next thing in order.

NEW RULING FOR PRIMARIES

ATTORNEY - GENERAL M'CARTER INTERPRETS THE LAW.

In response to a request from Republican State Chairman Frank O. Briggs, Attorney-General McCarter, gave an opinion yesterday in which he decides that hereafter all elections for delegates to primary conventions under the primary election law must be made by wards.

The custom has heretofore been to select delegates by election districts, but an amendment to the general election law, passed last winter, changed the method, according to the Attorney-General's ruling.

The result will be that is will be necessary for local municipal officers to run on the same ticket in the coming primaries the names of all the delegates of a party nominated for the State, Congressional, county and city conventions, together with the names of all the party nominees for minor offices, such as Alderman, School Commissioner, Justice of the Peace and Constable.

The decision is the outcome of a controversy due to a difference of opinion between City Clerks Connely, of Newark, and O'Donnell, of Jersey City, the latter maintaining that the law did not change the old method of electing delegates by districts.

The effect of the decision will be that the voters of each party at the primaries in the city wards will be compelled to vote for from seventy to eighty candidates each, and the ballots will have to be printed in a form resembling the blanket ballot.

TWO YOUTHFUL FARMERS

SONS OF MR. AND MRS. WOODHULL SUCCESSFUL IN RAISING PRODUCE.

Two of the most successful farmers to be found in this part of the State are Roy and Edson Woodhull, the young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, of West Front street. Although having but a limited experience, they have succeeded in raising a large crop of potatoes, sweet corn, egg plants and other vegetables. Mr. Woodhull has a strong fancy for farming and the ability shown in his sons is undoubtedly inherited. Mr. Woodhull has plenty of land at his home and last season he decided to have a garden. He employed an experienced man to start it and it was at this time that the boys became interested. So successful was the work of raising produce, that there was enough for the Woodhull household and to spare. Then the boys conceived the idea of branching out and their suggestion that they be allowed the privilege of selling all that was not needed at home, was willingly agreed to by the parents, who said that they could have all the money thus made. The lads now take full charge of the garden. Last season a substantial sum was collected by the young farmers, and this year the crops have been so good that even a larger amount will be made through their industry. The parents are much pleased with the results attained by their sons, believing it to be an excellent method whereby they may early begin to learn something of business matters. The produce is easily sold to neighbors and friends who are glad to help the farmers along.

Couple Will Live Here.

The marriage of Miss Agnes Merrick Ely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ely, to George Frederick Hawkins, of New York, will take place on August 24, in St. Luke's church, Denver, Col., where the parents of the bride-elect are living. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins will reside in Plainfield.

SENTENCED TO JAIL; SMILES

MRS. CUNNINGHAM SAYS SHE PREFERS IT TO INDUSTRIAL HOME.

Vowing that a six by four cell and prison fare were far preferable to her than living at the City Industrial Home, Bridget Cunningham smilingly received a sentence of sixty days at Elizabeth from Judge Runyon, last Thursday.

Mrs. Cunningham is one of the old residenters at the Home, likewise she is one of the most choleric and she is never happier than when pitting her wits and strength against Superintendent TenEyck and Overseer Ayers. Yesterday morning she was displeased with the breakfast menu and after refusing her portion, called upon the other inmates to assert their rights. The greater part of them rallied about her and a good-sized mutiny was in progress when Superintendent TenEyck sent a hurry call for the police patrol.

Overseer Ayers, who was at the headquarters, went along in his capacity as special officer and at sight of him Mrs. Cunningham became furious and made a determined attempt to attack him. She continued to berate him in court and when sentence was pronounced, she expressed the wish that it was for life instead of two months. The officials have always had a great deal of trouble with her and because of her leadership it is probable that she will be sent somewhere else instead of returned to the home at the expiration of her term.

WATERMELON CONTEST.

Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A M., Provide a Pleasant Evening for the Members and Friends.

A social time followed the business meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held Thursday when an informal programme was presented consisting of these numbers: Violin solo, B. A. Paroubek; vocal solo, Elmer D. Cutting; mandolin and zither duet, Misses Johnson and Jensen; recitation, Frank Platts. Andrew Carpenter was the accompanist, and David Bodine acted as master of ceremonies.

After the entertainment there was a novel watermelon contest. The two contestants had their hands tied behind their backs and they were supposed to eat the melon without touching it with their hands. The one who succeeded in devouring his portion first was declared the winner. The contestants were John Bickhell and Ephraim Compton, and the latter won the prize, a handsome pair of gold cuff buttons.

After the contest the members were allowed their just share of watermelon without the exertion of as much effort. The committee in charge was composed of William Harispence, C. J. Newman, Frank Platts, R. O. Marsh and George M. Townley.

The Misses Peck Retire.

The Misses Peck, of Crescent avenue, who have for several years conducted a boarding house at their home, have sold the property through the Mulford Real Estate Agency to Mrs. E. V. Waldorf, who is proprietor of the United States Hotel, at Ocean Grove. Mrs. Waldorf formerly lived here.

Aid Society Disbands.

By consent of all the parties interested, the Aluminum Press Works Employes' Aid Society has disbanded. The money in the treasury was divided equally among the members, the share of each amounting to about $10. The association was formed when the shop first started and provided sick and death benefits among the employes through a small payment each week. So many of the men had left the shop through the slackness, it was deemed advisable not to continue it longer.

DAVIS IS NOTIFIED

Vice Presidential Nominee Hears Formal News.

AT WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va.

Announcement Made by Chairman Williams—Senator's Speech In Reply Deals Largely With the Labor Situation.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 17.—Henry G. Davis was formally notified that he is the Democratic nominee for vice president of the United States on the lawn in front of the White Sulphur Springs hotel here, Representative John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, chairman of the notification committee of the national Democratic convention, made the announcement to the nominee as follows:

"We have been appointed by a most notable convention as a committee to notify you of your nomination by the Democracy as their choice for vice president of the United States. We desire to express the pleasure we feel in having been selected to perform this duty and our confidence in you, your ability and your fitness to preside in the high office, resulting in self dependance, freedom to develop as one's own master, and not merely as the well trained and well managed industrial servant of another. They see in you what Wendell Holmes said is a rare thing, 'a self made man who is not not proud of his maker.'

"Just before leaving home I said that I was going to West Virginia, with some others, to notify you of your nomination. One of my brother's little boys, standing by, said, 'Uncle John, he must be a mighty big goose if he hasn't heard of it already.' In a certain way the notification with which we are charged is perfunctory and unnecessary, and yet it is well to maintain by some degree of formality that respectable observance which is due to great events. The nomination by a great party to the great office to which we call you, the vice presidency, involves, in the event of your presiding over the senate of the United States and the possibility of succession to the presidency, is a great event."

Mr. Davis, in accepting the nomination, discussed the political situation briefly. He said:

"The official notification which you bring of my nomination for the vice presidency of the United States by the national Democracy gives me a feeling of the sincerest gratitude to my party for this distinguished honor. At the same time it brings to me a deep sense of my responsibility to my party as a candidate and to my country in case of my election.

"A spirit of determination to succeed in the campaign before us appears to pervade the rank and file of our party in all sections of the country. Of that rank and file I have for many years been a member and have at all times devoted my humble powers to party success, believing that success to be for the country's good. Unexpectedly called as I am now to the forefront, I am impelled to an acceptance of the obligation by a sense of gratitude to my fellow workers and the hope that I may be able the better to assist in restoring to power that party whose principles and past history guarantee a safe, wise, economical and constitutional administration of the government.

"And it, therefore, a great pleasure, standing here upon the borderland of the two Virginias, to receive and accept the commission you bear and to send greetings through you to the Democracy of the entire country. Is it not significant of a closer and truer brotherhood now that for the first time since the civil war a nominee on the national ticket has been taken from that section of our common country that lies south of Mason and Dixon's line—a happy recognition of the obliteration of all sectional differences which led to and followed that unhappy struggle?

"In the campaign preceding the last election much stress was laid by Republican speakers upon the prosperous condition of the country, and forebodings were heard of the ill results, especially to the laboring man, which would follow any change in the political complexion of the government. It is true that the times then were good, but it is no less a fact that, while there has been no change in the party in power, many of the evils prophesied have come under Republican rule.

"In the language of our platform, 'The rights of labor are certainly not less vested, or less sacred and no less inalienable than the rights of capital.' The time is opportune to emphasize the truth of this utterance. The most sacred right of property is the right to possess and own oneself and the labor of one's own hands, capital itself being but stored up labor. For years I worked in the ranks as a wage earner, and I know what it is to earn my living in the sweat of my brow. I have always believed, and my convictions came from the hard school of experience, that, measured by the character of work he does and the cost of living, a man is entitled to full compensation for his services. My experience as a wage earner and my association with labor have alike taught me the value of Democratic principles, for in them the humblest has the strongest security for individual right and the highest stimulus to that independence of spirit and love of self help which produce the finest characters and form the base of the best possible government.

"Four years ago factories, mills, mines and furnaces were in active operation, unable to supply the demand, but now many are closed, and those that are open are being operated with reduced force on short hours. Then wages were high, labor was scarce, and there was work for all. Now work is scarce, many wage earners unemployed and wages reduced. The apprehension which now prevails in business circles and the present unsatisfactory industrial conditions of the country seem to demand a political change.

"The Republicans now claim great consistency in their attitude upon the currency question, and the president in his recent speech of acceptance said that they know what they mean when they speak of a stable currency, 'the same thing from year to year,' and yet in the platforms of their party in 1884, 1888 and 1892 they favored the double standard of value. In the platform of 1888 they said, 'The Republican party is in favor of the use of both gold and silver as money and condemns the policy of the Democratic administration in its efforts to demonetize silver.'

"With a candidate whose personality appeals to the good sense and sound judgment of the American people, a platform whose principles are for the greatest good to the greatest number and a reunited party earnest for the restoration of good and economical government, we should succeed and the principles of Democracy again triumph.

"I beg my countrymen as they value their liberty to guard with great care the sacred right of local self government and to watch with a jealous eye the tendency of the times to centralize power in the hands of the few.

"Mr. Chairman, it is an added pleasure to receive this notification at your hands. You have been conservative and courageous as leader of our party in the house of representatives, a position which few men have filled with the signal ability that you have displayed.

"It will be my pleasure and duty at a time not far hence to accept more formally in writing the nomination which you have extended in such graceful and complimentary terms and to give my views upon some of the important questions commanding the attention of the country."

The ceremonies took place in a natural amphitheater on the lawn under the oaks in front of White Sulphur Springs hotel. The two-step-swing music by the old Stonewall Brigade band of Staunton, Va., constituted the programme.

Senator Davis was heartily congratulated on all sides at the close of the ceremony.

Perry Belmont of New York was one of the first morning arrivals, as was Senator Daniel of Virginia.

Special trains arrived before the ceremonies from Richmond, Baltimore and Charleston. A notification ball, arranged by the guests of the hotel in honor of Mr. Davis, will take place tonight.

Cretans Complain of Prince George.

ROME, Aug. 17.—Inhabitants of the island of Crete have addressed a strong petition to the Italian government asking to be freed from the government of Prince George of Greece, the high commissioner of the protective powers, whom they accuse of all manner of misrule. They ask that the island be annexed to Greece and threaten should their request not be granted to start a revolution. The petition is addressed to Italy because Cretan affairs are under the supervision of the Italian foreign minister. Prince George, it is reported, is about to start on a visit to the capitals of the protective powers.

Andree Report a Hoax.

TROMSO, Norway, Aug. 17.—The report recently circulated that a Norwegian whaler had found, north of Spitzbergen, a message from Andree, in a letter from Professor Andree, dated in 1898, proves to be a hoax. Professor S. A. Andree started from Spitzbergen in a balloon in 1807 with the intention of finding the north pole. Since his departure nothing definite has been heard from him, but a number of reports regarding him, which have proved to be unfounded, have been put in circulation.

Ex-Governor Lounsbury Dead.

RIDGEFIELD, Conn., Aug. 17.—Hon. George E. Lounsbury, who was governor of Connecticut in 1899 and 1900 and who for many years was one of the most distinguished men in this state, died at his home in Farmingville. He had been ill for a considerable period of time, and during the past fortnight his death had been hourly expected.

Tod Sloan Had Narrow Escape.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Tod Sloan, the jockey, and two other turfmen, Charles Dwyer and Victor Williams of New York, narrowly escaped drowning yesterday afternoon at Saratoga lake. Their sailboat was capsized by a squall, and they were rescued a mile from shore.

Odell Sprained His Ankle.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Governor Odell sprained his left ankle here at the railroad station. As he was leaving his carriage his foot slipped, and he fell. Dr. Townsend, who attended him, said he would probably be able to leave for New York city this morning.

A Consul General From Colombia.

PANAMA, Aug. 17.—Luis Enrique Bonilla has been appointed consul general of the republic of Colombia at New York and will leave today for his post.

MEAT NO LONGER SCARCE

LOCAL BEEF HOUSES REPORT LARGE SUPPLIES.

Despite the fact that the meat strike is still on and there is likely to be trouble for some time between the packers and the employes, there is plenty of meat in this city, the local beef houses being well stocked with the best quality of beef. As for the prices, they are now about the same as before the strike. There is no doubt but that the strike has affected local trade considerably. There are many families who have stopped eating meat entirely, and this action has caused a decided falling off in the trade at the retail markets, as well as at the wholesale places.

In the larger cities the higher prices have been maintained and in many instances it has been impossible to get anything but home dressed meat. Plainfield has been especially fortunate in this respect. While other places were not receiving meat from the West, fair shipments was coming here at frequent intervals and neither the wholesalers or retailers had any cause to jump the prices to a prohibitive basis. Early in the strike some butchers did raise the prices a little, but they have returned to the old prices, maintained by the other dealers.

TO RESUME WITH FULL FORCE

LEVERING & GARRIGUES' CO., WILL COMMENCE WORK ON MONDAY.

Manager Coyle, of the Levering & Garrigues' Company at West Dunellen, announced this morning that owing to the unsettled condition of affairs at the factory as well as the troublesome labor conditions in New York city, it would be impossible to re-open the factory this week as previously announced.

Despite strikes among the steel workers in New York city, which has greatly lessened the demand for structural steel work extensively manufactured by the local firm, Manager Coyle has announced that metropolitan labor troubles will in no way interfere with the work at the plant and that the full force of men will be taken back, at full time, on Monday.

Because of the New York strike the entire force, numbering about seventy-five men, was thrown out of employment two weeks ago. The firm closed the factory because of the lack of demand for structural iron work.

SCARCITY OF BRICK.

Recent Wet Weather Has Increased the Price to $7.50 a Thousand.

As the result of the recent bad weather, the scarcity and expense of brick has lately increased, and brick manufacturers all over the northern part of the State are finding difficulty in supplying the demands of builders.

The reason for this dearth in the manufacture of artificial stone is very easily accounted for when it is considered that the process of making brick, in nearly all yards, is carried on in the open air. When the clay used is moulded into the form of bricks, the latter are laid in rows to allow the superfluous moisture to evaporate under the action of the sun, before the baking process. It can thus be seen that the wet weather has been far from desirable for the brick makers and the result is that the price has gone up $1.50 in six weeks. The present price is $7.50 a thousand. The shortage of stock is due to the fact that the manufacturers have stopped making brick until fair dry weather, and the reserved stock is about exhausted.

This condition of affairs makes itself felt in the ranks of the builders as well as the makers, for the demand for building material is not decreasing. The builders' estimates are necessarily made on the chance that they will be able to get material. Therefore they are unable to make close bids, and the owners of the property has to pay the extra cost.

Motuchen to Have a Saving's Bank.

Motuchen will soon be able to boast of a new savings bank, with a capitalization of $25,000. This week the matter was brought before the Common Council, by a number of boroughites who have Charles G. Nelson, a prominent Philadelphia capitalist, behind them. He has offered to take $10,000 worth of stock if the bank is capitalized at $25,000. Mr. Nelson is vice president of the Williamsport, Pa., bank, and is prominent in several other financial institutions. A law passed by the Legislature allows banks to be incorporated in small towns at a capitalization of $25,000. The shares will be sold at par.

Permit Granted.

Permits has been granted for the erection of a one story extension in the rear of the residence of D. Kinsman, of West Third street. Peter C. Thompson has been awarded the carpenter work. The extension will measure 10x12.

NEGRO SLASHES WHITE MAN WITH KNIFE BLADE

Phillip Sheridan is Badly Cut About the Face by Richard Scudder.

OFFENDER ESCAPES

ARRESTED SUNDAY NIGHT BY PATROLMAN HAMILTON.

Held for the Grand Jury—Counsel Secures Permission to Have the Case Reopened This Morning.

Angered because Phillip Sheridan, white, told him to move away from the corner at Liberty and West Third streets, Saturday night, Richard Scudder, a one-legged colored man, drew a knife and slashed the former across the face. The fact that the blade was dull is perhaps all that saved Sheridan's life as it was drawn across his neck with force enough to have severed his head from his body if it had been in anyway sharp. A bad gash was inflicted several inches in length and another sweep of the knife placed a deep cut across his cheekbone.

The two men were seized by onlookers as Patrolman Hamilton appeared on the scene and in the excitement of caring for Sheridan, Scudder bobbed off. The injured man was taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon and his wounds were dressed by Dr. Lefburrow. The physician declared that Sheridan's escape from death was miraculous as the knife thrust in the neck just escaped the jugular vein and important arteries.

Scudder remained in hiding all day Sunday, but ventured out at night only to fall into Patrolman Hamilton's hands. When arraigned in court next morning, Scudder claimed that Sheridan had spoken to him aggressively and ordered him to move along, at the same time shoving him. Sheridan, with his face and head swathed in bandages was present and denied shoving, saying that he only asked Scudder to get out of the way. The colored man was held to await the action of the Grand Jury, but late today his counsel, William G. DeMeza, secured the consent of Judge Runyon to re-open the case and it will be heard again this morning at 9 o'clock. No complaint was preferred against Sheridan.

THOUSANDS ENJOY MUSIC

WEEKLY BAND CONCERTS CONTINUE TO BE AS POPULAR AS EVER.

LaVere's band concerts in Concert Park, continue to remain as popular as when the series was first started as was attested by the large gathering last Friday. Fully 5,000 people were in attendance and the grandstand was filled to its capacity. The programme was an exceptionally good one, popular selections having the preference, and their rendition was highly enjoyed.

The soloists of the evening were William Redmond, who sang effectively "Don't Cry, Katie Dear" and "Just for the Sake of Society," both catchy ballads, and Edward Hubman, giving another of his popular xylophone selections. John J. Nestor was also to have rendered solos but through a misunderstanding was unable to be present. The soloists next week will be William Corcoran and George Offerman.

"The Castle" Struck.

During the heavy electrical storm Thursday night, a bolt descended upon the tower of Richard Moldenke's Castle, of Watchung, and crashed into the sitting room in which the family were having their usual evening devotions. The lightning rod had not yet been placed in position, and the bolt followed the corner of the tower, down through the partition between the two rooms and tore up the floor about the group. It is remarkable that the family escaped injury.

In Honor of Miss Porter.

Miss Mabel Firstbrook, of West Fifth street, entertained a number of friends Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Marion Porter, of New York. Refreshments were served and games played on the porch. The event was a delightful one in every respect, there being fifteen guests present. Mrs. William W. St. John rendered several piano selections.

Horse Show and Races.

The Somerville Horse Show and Driving Association will hold the second matinee meet on the new speedway Saturday, August 26. The best racing events of the season will take place on that date. Many out-of-town horses will compete. After the races the members of the association will hold a banquet.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A PROCTOR THEATRE HERE?

Plainfield Likely to be Added to Circuit of Famous Vaudeville Proprietor's Attractions.

TO BUILD A HOUSE

Representatives of Mr. Proctor Have Been Spending Several Weeks Here Looking for a Desirable Site—Suggested Locations.

The fact that Plainfield is without a first-class amusement place of any kind, has been brought to the attention of F. F. Proctor, the owner of many theatres throughout the country, and for several weeks his representatives have been looking for a suitable site or place to open one of his popular amusement houses. Mr. Proctor has become convinced that such an institution would be a paying investment here and if it is possible to secure a desirable place he will give Plainfielders an amusement house equal to the best.

Mr. Proctor is impressed with the convenience of the town to Newark, New York and Philadelphia, realizing that it would be an excellent place for his stock companies to stop off on their way back and forth between the larger cities and it would also furnish a good place to start new plays before giving them in his other theatres.

One of the sites considered for the theatre is the Hotel Rossil, the location being thought an ideal one, owing to its nearness to the railroad station and its convenience to trolley cars and all sections of the city. In negotiating for this site, the owners, it is said, jumped the price so high that Mr. Proctor's representatives would not consider it at the figures named. Other sites are now being investigated on East and West Front street with the hope of securing something that will answer the purpose. Another location looked upon with favor is at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, where Chris. Glosecker conducts a saloon. Several attempts have been made to purchase this property, but in each instance the price has been too high for the intended purchaser.

It is said that Mr. Proctor's representatives have looked over Stillman Music Hall, but that there are some things about this building that does not impress them favorably, one being that it would cost a considerable sum to arrange it according to Mr. Proctor's ideas. It is thought that if such a large sum has to be expended in alterations, it would be better to build an entirely new place according to the Proctor style of architecture.

While the enterprise is entirely backed by outside people, several local men are interesting themselves in the matter in the hope of securing for the town an attractive amusement place. It is argued that if such towns as Elizabeth and New Brunswick can support theatres there is no reason why Plainfield cannot, providing such a place is of the right sort and is properly managed. The Proctor enterprises have a well established reputation, only first-class shows being given, and Plainfielders are assured that if an amusement place is opened here the same standard of excellence maintained in other cities by Proctor will be found here.

New York, Aug. 31.—A representative of Mr. Proctor said to a reporter today that he knew nothing about the story of a vaudeville house for Plainfield and did not think that Mr. Proctor would go into a city the size of Plainfield.

MICHAEL J. M'CARTHY DEAD.

Passed Away Yesterday After Long Illness With Lingering Complaint.

Michael J. McCarthy, for many years employed as a compositor on local papers, died yesterday afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs. Robert Skinner, of West Fourth street. He had been ill for a long time with a lingering complaint. McCarthy was thirty-eight years old and had resided in Plainfield practically all his life. He was volunteer fireman and a member of old Gazelle Engine Co. He is survived by his mother, two sisters and two brothers, residents of this city, a widow and daughter.

Funeral services over the remains will be held from St. Mary's church Friday morning and interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

A PARKER AND DAVIS CLUB

FIRST ONE IN SOMERSET COUNTY FORMED AT BERNARDSVILLE.

An enthusiastic ratification meeting took place last night in the interest of Parker and Davis at Bernardsville. The gathering was the largest ever held in the county outside of Somerville. Senator S. S. Childs was chairman of the meeting.

Assemblyman Hamill, of Hudson County, the leader of the minority in the last Legislature, made a telling speech in favor of equal taxation, followed by Assemblyman Hawkshaw. There was a large outdoor meeting on account of the hall not being large enough to accommodate the assemblage. In the indoor meeting, W. H. Page, Jr., gave a stirring argument in behalf of the Democratic candidates. Telegrams were forwarded to both Parker and Davis, informing them of the organization of the first Parker and Davis Club in Somerset County.

Among those present, occupying seats on the stage were R. V. Lindabury, William Brodhead, Sheriff McMurtry, N. Y. Dungan, D. J. Carney.

Former Prosecutor R. Y. Dungan, of Somerset, addressed the outdoor meeting.

MARA DIDN'T INTERFERE

WITNESSES SAY HE ONLY MEANT TO HELP THE OFFICER.

Willingness on the part of witnesses to tell "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," made it easy for Judge Runyon to dispose of the charges against John Mara and James Brown, in the city court this morning.

The former was accused of interfering with Patrolman McKeon in the discharge of his duty, but Mara and three bystanders, Thomas Sherlock, Patrick Ryan and Leonard Bunn, told the court he went to help the officer, the witnesses ending up with "Honest Judge, he only laid his hand on McKeon's arm." The entire testimony seemed to bear them out and the complaint against Mara was dismissed.

Brown pleaded non vult for resisting arrest, explaining to the court that he was too drunk to know just what he had done. He was fined $10 with an alternative of twenty days.

Temperance Advocate.

The Plainfield Press editor objects to this newspaper's expression of fear that the Elizabeth sports go to Plainfield for their drinks. "Liquor laws are rigidly enforced here," he says, "but as for Elizabeth, you can get all you want there. Sundays included." The Plainfield editor is a great friend to the temperance cause. Commenting upon the reported "temporary aberration of the mind" that led a Pinckneyin man to steal a Peapack man's horse at Somerville, he says: "The place to get that sort of an 'aberration,' is in a Somerville saloon."—Newark Evening News.

Improving a Busy Mart.

In order to provide more floor space, Neuman Brothers have commenced quite extensive alterations to the interior of their store. A large order desk in the center has been removed and the present large wooden columns are to be replaced by small iron ones and fewer in number. Display tables near the Watchung avenue entrance are to be either removed entirely or rearranged. The shelving and fixtures are also to be altered. When completed the improvements will add greatly to the comfort and convenience of the firm's patrons.

Insurance Men's Outing.

Superintendent O. H. Ball, of the Prudential Insurance Company, will give his staff a day's outing on Labor Day, the objective point being Manch Chunk. Through the courtesy of C. M. Burt, general passenger agent of the New Jersey Central, a special car will be attached to the regular excursion train that day. There are thirty-five men on Mr. Ball's staff and they will be accompanied by their wives. This is an annual event given by Mr. Ball.

Broke a Blood Vessel.

While at work as mason on a new house, Saturday, John Britton, of Orange place, in some way slipped and fell down a flight of stone steps, breaking a blood vessel. Dr. Albert Pittis was summoned and the injured man removed to his home, where he is still confined. Britton is in the employ of Titus H. Leary, the mason.

EXTENSION OF RURAL FREE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Postmaster Bird Believes That Petition of Mt. Bethel and Vicinity Will be Granted.

TO COVER 22 MILES

ROUTES COVERING 44 MILES SERVED FROM LOCAL OFFICE.

Plan is to Include Whole of North Plainfield Township — Petition Now in Washington.

While there is every reason to believe that sooner or later another rural free delivery route will be established between this city and Warrenville, Mt. Bethel, Smalleytown and other nearby places, in compliance with the petition, the people living in this part of Somerset will have a long coming anxious. Some time ago they prepared and signed a petition to have the service extended to their section of the county and it was forwarded to Washington. Since then nothing has been heard from it. Postmaster R. H. Bird, who is interested in the adoption of another route to cover the territory mentioned, believes that the petition will receive official sanction in the near future.

The route proposed in this district will cover about twenty-two miles. For years the people have not been able to have a satisfactory mail service under existing conditions, but with the extension of the rural free service, it is believed they will be able to get their mail regularly. For several years there has been a post-office at Washingtonville, now known as Watchung, and this has served as a distributing point for a few miles in this vicinity, but persons living farther up in the mountains have not been taken care of as well. It was this that brought about the desire for the rural free delivery and subsequently the petition for it.

During the past year the growth of this service in this part of the State has been gratifying. There are two routes operating from the Plainfield office, each covering about twenty-two miles. One route covers the territory in the direction of Dog Corner and Allen and the other is in the direction of South Plainfield. A third route has just been established which operates from the Bound Brook post-office and takes in a portion of North Plainfield township. William Polhemus, of Lincoln, has received the appointment of carrier, and he will commence his duties within a few days.

With the establishment of the fourth route petitioned for, North Plainfield township will be thoroughly covered and a majority of the inhabitants will have an up-to-date mail service, equal almost to that of persons living in larger towns and cities.

Since the adoption of two routes in this district, Postmaster Bird has become an enthusiastic advocate of this part of the mail service and it is a source of gratification to him that he has been instrumental in improving the service since entering upon the duties of his office.

DIED AT FOUR SCORE YEARS

MRS. BARBARA LEESON'S FUNERAL TO TAKE PLACE TOMORROW.

Mrs. Barbara Leeson, whose death occurred Monday night at the home of her daughters, Mrs. Isaac Irving and Mrs. Melissa Coon, at 507 Watchung avenue, in the eighteenth year of her age, was born in Scotland. She came to this country at the age of sixteen years and the remainder of her life she spent at Millington, with the exception of the past four years during which time she lived with her daughters.

Mrs. Leeson's husband, William Leeson, died at Millington thirteen years ago. She was a sister-in-law of the late Ayers Leeson, who was an undertaker here many years ago. Besides the two daughters, Mrs. Leeson leaves a son, Ayers Leeson, of Santa Fe, N. M. The funeral services will be held from the home of the daughters tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, and the interment will be at Millington.

Got Off With Reprimand.

LIKELY CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS

William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth, is Said to be the Choice of Minority Party.

FORMER PROSECUTOR

SKETCH OF CAREER OF MAN WHO IS SAID TO BE SLATED.

Flanagan and Martine Decline to Enter the Lists—No Others Are Mentioned Yet.

There doesn't appear to be much doubt in some Democratic circles of Union County that the party's Congressional candidate in the Fifth district at the approaching election will be former Prosecutor of the Pleas William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth. It became known yesterday that one of the county leaders of that party had called on Mr. Wilson and made it plain to him that it was up to him to stand for the nomination. It isn't known exactly what the lawyer's reply was, but when a reporter asked about it Mr. Wilson said he "might see it that way when he had had some time to do a little more thinking."

As a Democratic leader put it, there isn't any opposition in Union to Mr. Wilson's becoming the candidate and as far as has been indicated, Morris will indorse the selection if Irving R. Salmon withdraws from the race. At the recent Union Democrats' outing, there were three Congressional possibilities talked of and Mr. Wilson was one of them. The others were former Representative DeWitt C. Flanagan, of Morristown, and James M. Martine, of Plainfield.

It has since developed that the Morris millionaire doesn't care for the nomination, at least, so intimate friends declare, while Mr. Martine declines to accept the honor.

At all events, the friends of Mr. Wilson, and they are many, have started his boom with a vengance and they say that the only thing that will deter its sailing right through the convention to success would be Mr. Wilson's backing out. It is Union's turn to receive the nomination, and with no Morris aspirant as a factor, the Wilson boomers feel that the convention's choice is sure to be theirs.

BEATEN AND ROBBED BY THREE HIGHWAYMEN

James McCarthy, Formerly of This City, Waylaid at Fanwood Last Night.

VICTIM BADLY HURT

SUSPECTING HE WOULD BE ROBBED, HID HIS MONEY IN HIS SHOE.

James McCarthy, a Westfield hackman who formerly resided in this city, was held up by three men on Park avenue, Fanwood, last night, pulled from his wagon, robbed of all his small change and then left unconscious from a terrible beating which they gave him. He remained in the road nearly an hour afterward and then recovered sufficiently to get back to the vehicle and drive to his home. Arriving there he collapsed and is now confined to his bed in a serious condition. His body is a mass of bruises where he was struck repeatedly with a heavy stick and his face is hardly recognizable for deep cuts. McCarthy claims to know who his assailants were and the police of this city, Westfield, and Fanwood are looking for them.

McCarthy had been driving several people about the Plains and Fanwood during the afternoon and when he finished, stopped at a hotel in the latter place. Several men were in the bar room at the time and he says they watched him as he was counting the money paid him by his fares. Just before he started out, three of the men went ahead of him and having a suspicion they might intend something wrong, placed $20 in his shoe, which was all the change Park avenue, opposite the "Homestead," three men supposed to be the same who had left the hotel, sprang from behind trees and caught his horse. The next moment he was jerked into the road and while two of the men beat him about the head, the other went through his pockets. When they could find no money beyond the small change they fell upon him until he lost consciousness.

TRUST CO.'S PLANS FOR ITS NEW BUILDING

Block It Has Purchased Includes 160 Feet on Park Ave. and 120 on Second St.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT

NEW STRUCTURE TO BE OF MARBLE AND GRANITE.

Home of Banking Concern to be Occupied by It Exclusively—Auxiliary to Begin Work.

In connection with the story regarding the purchase of the valuable property on Park avenue from Second street to the Boice estate by the Plainfield Trust Company, published yesterday, it should be stated that the purchase includes the Force property on West Second street. It was reported in various quarters last night that the land and buildings in the block were secured for a figure close to $60,000, and it is said that the Force property was purchased for $6,500.

According to proposed plans the trust company will have about 150 feet on West Second street and 160 feet on Park avenue. The building is to be one story and will be of marble and granite. The main entrance will be on Park avenue, but a novel arrangement is to be provided for the entrance on Second street. This will be intended for women and a drive-way will be provided with a porte-cochere. The space to be provided in the rear and on the side will permit persons in carriages to drive in off the street while transacting business in the bank. One great advantage of this will be that women will not be obliged to mingle with the business men who usually engage the attention of bank officials more or less and keep them waiting.

The company will have large and improved vaults of the most approved pattern and every convenience will be provided for the quick dispatch of business. The idea in having the structure one story in height is that the company prefers to occupy it alone and they do not want other tenants in the building.

As stated yesterday it is quite likely that arrangements will be made to demolish the property at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street as soon as possible, for the directors of the Plainfield Trust Company are anxious to commence the work on the new structure. As for the other old buildings they will probably be allowed to stand for the present.

The realty deal, as told in The Daily Press, was the talk of the town yesterday, everyone expressing gratification over the proposed improvement. One prominent business man remarked last night that it is sure to enhance the value of adjacent properties and improve the general character of the neighborhood.

It is understood that the deals for the various properties were negotiated by John G. McLaughlin, of Somerset street, who is connected with the realty department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York.

THE WHITE-BOWEN WEDDING

ARRANGEMENTS FOR NUPTIAL EVENT IN THE CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

The wedding of Miss Ethel Plumer Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliott Bowen, to Dr. Franklin Warren White, of Boston, will take place this afternoon at 5 o'clock, in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, the Rev. Louis Burton Crane, of Chicago, officiating.

Miss Marion Plummer Bowen will be maid-of-honor. The bridesmaids are Miss Helen Dunbar Talmadge, Miss Elsie Burke, Miss Marion A. Fuller and Miss Constance Holt. The best man is Dr. Robert H. Voss and the ushers are Dr. Frederic G. Colton, Louis K. Morse, Harrison C. Hall, Edward E. Blodgett, L. Maxwell Brigham and Pierrepont B. Foster.

After the wedding ceremony a reception will be given at the home of the bride's parents to relatives and a few intimate friends of the bride and groom.

A luncheon was given today at the home of Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue, in honor of Miss Bowen and the women of the bridal party. Tomorrow morning, Dr. White will entertain his best man and the ushers at a luncheon at the Hillside Golf Club.

BUILDING TRADES' OUTING

PLAINFIELD UNIONS SPENT EVENING AT RIVERSIDE PARK.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Building Trades Council, a most successful outing was held at Riverside Park, last night. Members of the Council, together with their wives and friends, to the number of 150, made the trip from here by trolley, leaving the Watchung avenue stand at 7:30 o'clock. The car was attractively decorated with flags and bunting.

The party was a little late in arriving at the Park, but the management held the performance in the theatre until they got there. After enjoying a fine performance, the remaining part of the evening was devoted to dancing and at late hour the party returned home.

This committee was in charge of the outing: J. D. McAleer, M. V. Lorton, James Motley, Nimrod Horton, C. Sutton and P. Neylon. These are the officers of the Council: President, P. Neylon; vice president, James Motley; recording secretary, J. D. McAleer; treasurer, Nimrod Horton; sergeant-at-arms, A. L. Brown; trustees, Morgan Turton, M. V. Lorton and C. Sutton.

KEAN HASN'T ASKED FOWLER

U. S. SENATOR DENIES STORY THAT HE WROTE THE REPRESENTATIVE.

Senator John Kean was seen at Elizabeth yesterday by a reporter, who spoke to him about a story printed in a Trenton paper, which set forth that he had written to Congressman Fowler to know if he would be a candidate for re-election this fall.

"I never wrote a line on the subject to Representative Fowler," replied the Senator, "and know absolutely nothing about any such matter. The Union County executive committee may, however, have communicated with Mr. Fowler, in reference to the subject, as it is time to issue a call for the holding of the Congressional convention.

"I do not know whether my brother Hamilton, who is chairman of the committee, has had any communication with Mr. Fowler about it. He perhaps may have written to him in behalf of the county committee."

The reporter learned afterward from a member of the county committee that while it, as a body, did not communicate with Representative Fowler, still its chairman, Hamilton Fish Kean, had written a letter to the Congressman.

What its contents were this committeeman was unable to say. He did not think, however, under the circumstances, there was anything improper in writing to Representative Fowler to get his opinion as to when and where the convention should be held if he desired a renomination.

FIFTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The members of the Republican Congressional committee for the Fifth District, representing the counties of Morris, Union and Warren, met at Republican headquarters at Morristown on Monday and determined to call the convention for Tuesday, Sept. 27, at 12 o'clock noon, in Lyceum Hall, Morristown.

Petit Jurors Drawn.

Judge Schenck was present at the drawing of the petit jurors for the September term of the Somerset courts yesterday by Sheriff McMurtry. Those selected from North Plainfield are Howard Meeker, Albert Johnson, Charles Miles, Peter Bower, Jr., John A. Whitenack and Otto Ebel. Warren township will be represented by Edward C. Spencer and Anton Ammon.

Hurt Running for Train.

In running to catch a train at the North Avenue station, Sunday, Raymond Guinn, of Carlson avenue, fell against the Watchung avenue bridge. A bad gash was inflicted in his right leg from the knee down and he received severe bruises that in time kept him at work today. It required nine stitches to close the gash. Dr. Wanser Love was the physician called.

Greatest Excursion Yet.

If you have not yet planned for a place to spend Labor Day, arrange to go to Coney Island with the Plainfield Grocers' Association, and you will not regret it. The train will leave here at 7:55 in the morning and returning leave Coney Island at 8:40 at night. You will have no trouble in spending a pleasant day at this popular resort.

—A fine new lot of peaches, yellow and white fruit, suitable for table or canning, go on sale at Neuman Bros.' tomorrow. Special prices now.

TWO MEN ARE MISSING

Mysterious Disappearances Worry Relatives and Friends in This City.

UNEXPLAINABLE

Daniel Galbraith Missing for Several Days—William Benton Gone a Week—No Reasons Given in Either Case.

The local police were called upon today to begin search for an elderly Plainfielder who has disappeared mysteriously while relatives of another are preparing to send out a general alarm. The first named is Daniel Galbraith, of West Second street, who left his home early Monday morning to go to New York but who has not been seen since. The other man is William S. Benton, of Central avenue, bookkeeper for A. M. Griffen, who went away suddenly one week ago Tuesday and despite a diligent search on the part of relatives and friends not the slightest trace of him has been discovered. In the event of his not being found today the local and New York police are to be asked to join in the search.

Galbraith's disappearance was reported to the police by his son, Joseph Galbraith, who said that he started from the house Monday to visit a daughter, Mrs. Mercuir, of 94 West One Hundred and Fourth street, New York. She was to have met him at the ferry but he did not arrive on the train indicated. The family has since been looking for him but without any success. Galbraith is described as being sixty-five years old, black hair, sandy beard and carried a cane. He wore a black corkscrew coat, black trousers and a soft hat. The New York police have been looking for him since yesterday.

William Benton, the other man, whose whereabouts are unknown, went away quietly last week and it was supposed at the time he had decided to visit his daughter who is spending the summer in New York State. Word was sent to her at the reptied that she had not seen him. Other relatives were informed only to get the same word back and his friends are now seriously alarmed. They refrained from asking police aid because of the anxiety it would cause his relatives, but it is possible a general alarm will be sent out today.

Mrs. Lynne Walpole, of Scotch Plains, came to the city this afternoon, and reported to the police that her husband had failed to return home last night from the Elizabeth Elks' excursion. Plainfielders who attended the affair, when questioned, said they had noticed him on the boat on the return trip, but they could not tell whether he had left it or not. Walpole has always been known as a man who carried a roll of money and wore valuable diamonds and his wife fears he has met with foul play. She stated that he had never been away from home over night without telegraphing her.

Fighting Brother-in-Laws Fined.

Frank Conger and William Folou, the brothers-in-law who fought each other until all College place was aroused, were fined $8 and $5 in the city court this morning. Their counsel, William G. DeMeza, made a strong plea for dismissal but Judge Runyon failed to see any mitigating circumstances.

Their Wedding Date Set.

Mr. and Mrs. Christian Fredericksen, of 871 Leland avenue, announce the date for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Christena Fredericksen, to Walter Spering Ashenfelter. The event will be celebrated at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday night, September 14, at 8:30.

Surprised Miss Werring.

A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Miss Emma Werring, of Watchung, at her home last evening. About a dozen of her friends dropped in unexpectedly for spend the evening and the time was passed with music, games and phonograph selections.

Delegates to Convention.

John H. Ooos, William T. Newman and William Addis have been elected local delegates to the State Firemen's Association convention at Atlantic City, September 14. Chief Dunne will also be in attendance.

MARRIED PRISONERS.

REAL ROMANCES THAT ARE AS STRANGE AS FICTION.

New York Policeman Fell in Love with Girl He Had Arrested for Murder — English "Cop" Weds Shop Lifter.

Some years ago a well known author wrote an interesting "shilling shocker" in which the beautiful heroine is accused of murder. The official who arrests her falls desperately in love with his pretty prisoner, and later the young lady had been found guilty, sentenced to death, reprieved at the last moment, and finally, through the timely remorse and confession of the real culprit, is set free "without a stain on her character," the courteous detective (really a man of high family who has joined the "force" as a cure for ennui) pops the question, is accepted, and the two are made one in the last paragraph. This delightful romance has recently had its prototype in real life, proving the correctness of the old adage that truth, minus the embroidery, is every bit as strange as fiction.

The lady in the present instance is, or rather was, Miss Lilian Thomasch, of New York, who last July had a terrible experience in the Bronx, outlying district of the city. She was walking one evening near One Hundred and Sixty-third street with Mr. Charles Roxbury, whom she had known for 15 years, when a negro stole up behind them and, with a heavy club, felled Mr. Roxbury to the ground. Miss Thomasch fled screaming and sought refuge in a house three streets away.

As soon as the murder became known Luke F. Gordon, a policeman attached to the Tremont station, was sent to arrest Miss Thomasch, and during the week following he kept the young lady under surveillance, taking her many times to court to give evidence before the coroner and District Attorney Jerome. Gordon appears to have been immediately struck by Miss Thomasch's refinement.

When ultimately Jackson, the negro who had assaulted Mr. Roxbury, was caught, Gordon was again chosen as the one to conduct Miss Thomasch to and from the court house for the purpose of giving further evidence. Jackson was found guilty, sentenced to death, and finally electrocuted at Sing Sing. At the time of the murder Gordon's wife was living, but she died soon after the trial and subsequently the policeman proposed to Miss Thomasch and was accepted.

Mrs. Gordon was "interviewed" soon after the wedding, when she informed a reporter that until she met her husband she had always disliked policemen. "I never had a high opinion of police officers," she said, "and, in fact, was more or less prejudiced against them. Mr. Gordon was the most polite policeman I ever met, and he treated me with such unusual courtesy that I naturally fell in love with him, and now we are very happy."

There is at the present time in the British police force in the north an officer who first met his wife under circumstances which one would hardly expect to lead to the altar. This official was one day on duty outside a big department store, when a salesman dashed out and informed him that his presence was required in a case of shop-lifting. The young officer entered the shop, where he was commanded to arrest a modestly-attired young woman, who was accused of stealing a small piece of lace. She had been searched and the property found on her, so there was nothing to be done but take her to the station. She looked very young, and appeared so frightened that the officer kindly dispatched a messenger for a cab, and into this he quietly bundled the young woman and conveyed her to the police court, where she was duly "charged." It was conclusively proved that she had undoubtedly stolen the lace; indeed, she pleaded "guilty," but as it was a first offense she was given the "option" of a fine of £2 or a week's imprisonment. As the money was not forthcoming the girl was taken below, but half an hour later it was paid and the girl liberated with a caution.

It afterwards transpired that the policeman who had arrested her had paid the money and had, in the course of his inquiries, found out where he lived, wrote him a letter of grateful thanks, and returned the money. In this way the acquaintance, begun under such adverse circumstances, ripened into friendship, and in less than three months the two were married—the alliance proving an unusually happy one.

ROBS TO HELP HIS MOTHER

Four Children Were Starving and Tommy Could Get Support in No Other Way.

Tommy Clifford, at ten years, is next to the eldest of a family of eight children, who live with their mother in three little rooms at No. 555 Eleventh avenue, New York. Tommy sells papers, and Mary, who is 14, works in a soap factory at four dollars a week.

It wasn't a hard matter for Tommy to overcome his scruples early the other morning when he saw a chance to get into a printing shop at No. 565 Eleventh avenue. He carried off $30 worth of lead and brass and was driving a bargain with a junk dealer when the police took him to the West Forty-seventh street station as a bold, bad burglar.

"Mother just had a baby and can't work," was the only explanation of Tommy, and Detectives Tunny and Hayes went around to see if he was telling the truth.

These old detectives were deeply touched when they went back to the station house and told all about it. There was Mrs. Clifford in bed, caring for a baby two days old and trying to give attention to another 16 months old. In the room, all weak from hunger and in rags, were the other children, three, four, five and eight years old. There wasn't a morsel of food in the house. The mother had no medical attendance.

Capt. Hayes dropped a five-dollar bill into his hat. In five minutes there was $80 in it. Tunny and Hayes told Tommy they were going to play a trick on him. They bought groceries and clothing and got Dr. William E. Young, of No. 46 West Sixty-fifth street, to go to the house with them.

The mother cried, and all the children ate and ate. The detectives turned housekeepers and slicked up the poor furniture, brought in flowers, and then went away chuckling.

WITNESS HAD GOOD MEMORY

Story of a Fresh Philadelphia Lawyer Who Didn't Know When to Stop an Examination.

A story is told by the Philadelphia Ledger of an eminent lawyer receiving a severe reprimand from a witness whom he was trying to browbeat. It was an important issue, and in order to save his cause from defeat it was necessary that the lawyer should impeach the witness. He endeavored to do so on the ground of age, in the following manner:

"How old are you?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two years," replied the witness.

"Your memory, of course, is not so brilliant and vivid as it was 20 years ago, is it?" asked the lawyer.

"I do not know but it is," answered the witness.

"State some circumstance which occurred, say 12 years ago," said the lawyer, "and we shall be able to see how well you can remember."

"I appeal to your honor," said the witness, "if I am to be interrogated in this manner; it is insolent!"

"You had better answer the question," replied the judge.

"Yes, sir, if you compel me to do it, I will. About 12 years ago you studied in Judge ——'s office, and you got"

"Yes," answered the lawyer.

"Well, sir, I remember your father coming into my office and saying to me: 'Mr. D——, my son is to be examined tomorrow, and I wish you would lend me $15 to buy him a suit of clothes.' I remember, also, that from that day to this he has never paid me that sum. That, sir, I remember as though it were yesterday."

Widows in Korean never remarry, no matter how young they may be. Even though they had been married only a month, they never take a second husband.

WAS IT TELEPATHY?

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER CONVERSE IN THOUGHT WAVES.

Bond of Sympathy Is So Strong Between Them That Distance and Other Obstacles Are Annihilated Completely.

"Of course I believe in telepathy," said the psychic woman to a New York Sun reporter. "Let me tell you about my little girl.

"Some five or six years ago we were thrown on the world together, two waifs. I came to New York to work and left her in the south at a boarding school. I used to watch the postman coming around the corner, thinking, 'Now, he has a letter for me from Cis. She wants shoes or something.' And sure enough up the stoop he would come, bringing me such a letter.

"Later I took her abroad. In London she met a young Englishman who fell desperately in love with her. As she was only a little over 16 and he was quite as desperately fond of card playing, I took her to Paris.

"Like magnets his letters drew her back to him. In London she had a girl friend who had asked her to visit her. She begged me to let her go, which I did. It was a disastrous thing to do. In three weeks she wrote me that she was married.

"Before the waning of the moon she came wandering into my dreams, walking about in them with tears thick on her dear eyelashes. Then one night she came and sat by my bed and said to me:

" 'I am miserable.'

"What mattered water and distance. She had telegraphed her unhappiness to me across land and sea as if she had opened the door out of the next room and whispered it to me.

"A stranger thing happened. In my unhappiness and anxiety I thought aloud as I sometimes, though not frequently do, it being generally considered a sign of insanity. As I wrote to her I said aloud:

"OH! CIS! CIS!"

" 'Oh, Cis! Cis!'

"That was four o'clock of a Friday afternoon. On the following day I had this letter her:

" 'What were you doing yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, dearest,' she asked. 'I was sitting in my room reading when I heard you call me. "Oh, Cis! Cis!" you said, and your voice was sad as sad could be. Oh, I was so glad to hear you call me! I threw down my book and ran from the room to the head of the stairs, thinking every moment to see you rush up and hold out your arms for me. And you were not there!'

"In another day I held her in my arms. I took her from him for a time and brought her back home with me to America.

"We had no sooner arrived than letters came imploring her to return. At length they became so urgent that even I began to suspect them of containing a spark of truth. And so Cis, they were all truth. By and by, as I knew she would, she put in a plea to be sent back to him, and I consented to let her go.

"I shall not speak of the agony I endured when the gangplank swung from the dock.

"Marconi was on board. I knew from his messages that the ship had landed safely, though if any accident had happened to the girl I should have known it instantly through this strange bond of our sympathy.

From his messages I also knew at what time the ship landed. She arrived at Southampton at one o'clock on a Monday afternoon.

"That Thursday night! I hope I may never be forced to go through such another.

"Terror took possession of my soul. I walked the floor. I lay down and tried to sleep. I got up and wrung my hands. I tried sedatives without result. Impossible to coax myself into anything in the least resembling sleep. Widewake I lay the livelong night, and in the morning, white and haggard, the ghost of myself, I sped to the office and cabled to know the truth.

"An awful six hours passed before I had her answer.

"He was not in town,' she cabled. 'I couldn't find him.'

"Then later she wrote how she had thought he was dead or had deserted her, but he had come to her at last. She was happy. He loved her. But the horror of that night! She had thought that she must die of it.

"She had no need to cable me that horror. The sympathy between us, the strong magnetic union of soul and heart and spirit, had sent me up as a die the news of her unhappiness.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

A tour of the world is in store for the New York and Chicago National league ball teams at the end of their present season. John T. Brush and James A. Hart, owners of the two teams, are making arrangements for the trip, and a large part of their itinerary has been worked out. Accounts to hand recently announced the two clubs will travel together and play games at all of the large cities visited, which will include cities of Australia and Europe and possibly Asia. The start will be made from Chicago about October 15. From here the teams will travel west. Stops may be made at Kansas City, Omaha and Denver, but San Francisco will be the west coast goal. From San Francisco the teams will go to Honolulu, and then to Australia. The direct route of travel after the stop in Australia has not been determined, but it is probable that before they return the cubs and giants will have played in almost every European city of any consequence and in some parts of Africa and Asia. Ten men from each team will comprise the list of players. In addition to these McGraw, Selee, Brush, Hart and several baseball officials will make the journey. Most of the men are enthusiastic over the plans, as the trip will offer them an excellent opportunity to see the world. It is said that there are a few of the players who do not particularly favor the jaunt. These are the married members of the teams who do not wish to be away from their families for so long a time. The only objection from the fans is that the trip would be likely to make the ball tossers grow stale as a result of too much playing. Six months' steady work on the diamond, it is believed, is about all that a player can stand without losing some of the color of the game. Selee believes there is no danger of staleness, as the plans are not to play every day. The trip has been patterned after the successful tour that A. G. Spalding headed in 1888 to celebrate Chicago's victory in the pennant race. Those who represented Chicago on that memorable trip were A. C. Anson, Mark Sullivan, "Tommy" Burns, John Tenney, "Jimmy" Ryan, Fred Pfeffer, Tom Daly, "Bob" Petit, Eddy Williamson and Marc Baldwin. The all-American team which opposed them consisted of Ward, Manning, Wood, Earl, Crane, Healy, Carroll, Brown and Fogarty.

By his defeat of A. D. Cloutte, of the London Rowing club, at the recent Henley regatta, L. F. Scholes, of the Dan Rowing club, of Toronto, is now the holder of the diamond sculls and for the third time the trophy, which has been in competition since 1857, has been won by an outsider. E. H. Ten Eyck, of Worcester, Mass., carried it away in 1897, while the following year E. B. Howell, another American, who was attending Oxford college at the time, won. Scholes competed in the 1902 Henley, but was defeated early in the trials by Titus, another American. Scholes won the trophy in the final heat, after winning his way there through his victory over F. S. Kelley, who had won the diamond sculls two years in succession and who fought hard to make it three straight. Scholes won by a length and a quarter and created a new time record—eight minutes and 23 seconds—beating the record of R. H. Howell, of New York, in 1898 by six seconds. Scholes is 22 years of age, and first became prominent in rowing circles in 1902, when he defeated C. S. Titus on the Harlem prior to the pair leaving for Henley. This was the first year C. S. Kelly won the diamonds. At the time the English critics were unanimous in the future possibilities of Scholes, but said at that time he was rough and lacked finish. Scholes last year won the association single vase at the national regatta at Worcester, Mass., and the "doubles" with Smith. Scholes comes of a family of athletes. He and his brother, Jack Scholes, who was the amateur featherweight champion of Canada and Great Britain, are the sons of John F. Scholes, at one time champion heavyweight boxer of Canada. The father is now living in Toronto, where he keeps a hotel. L. F. Scholes for a number of years figured prominently in the rowing circles of Canada and later went to Europe and also traveled extensively throughout the United States, competing in rowing events. He is said to be a clever man in his line of sport and his peculiar style of hanging from the knees by his endurance have won numerous medals for him. The father when he boxed with Mace was considered one of the best in the business. Harry Gilmore, who, when he was 16 years old, took boxing lessons from Scholes, says that the Canadian could have had the world's championship had he chosen to work harder for it. He was also a runner and jumper and was always considered one of the Canadian Indians.

FEAST OF KALOGERO.

OBSERVED IN NEW YORK CITY WITH SIMPLE CEREMONIES.

Sicilians in New York, Believing in the Healing Powers of Their Patron Saint, Seek His Humble Shrine.

New York Special.

As the Irish honor St. Patrick so the inhabitants of Sicily pay to San Kalogero. In whatever land the Sicilian wanders, the feast days of the year for him are those devoted to the memory of Kalogero, who discovered the healing spring of Sciacca in Sicily, and by the virtue of its waters banished disease and even in prosaic Manhattan, the little colony of Sicilians wedged in between the Bowery and Broadway still celebrate with all the ancient rites and ceremonies the festal days of San Kalogero.

Annually, when the time of the three days' feast arrives, dreary Elizabeth street tenement houses are festooned with brilliant lines of bunting, white and red, white and green of Italy, surmounted by the arms of the house of Savoy, mingle with the red, white and blue of America. Long arches of many colored lights are flung across the narrow street, and hundreds of Sicilians, wearing uniforms of every description, national costumes and also Garibaldi shirts, throng out to pay their annual homage. National bands play familiar Sicilian airs, and for the time this corner of New York is transformed into a semblance of the fair Island of the Mediterranean.

This year, perhaps as a mark of especial gratitude, San Kalogero was honored the other day with a huge shrine, built against the wall of a tenement, its gilt magnificence covered by a fringed canopy. On the shrine was placed a portrait of the ancient saint healing a Crusader, who knelt before him, accoutred in full armor. The altar was ablaze with tinsel glory and covered with pink and white decorations of paper and thin muslin, and before it a hundred candles, the offerings of grateful Sicilians, burned steadily.

The New York Tribune states that before the original shrine in Sciacca, the home of the saint, pilgrims for generations have deposited their crutches and canes, having been healed by the aging. Through the intercession of San Kalogero. There, as at Lourdes or the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, huge heaps of discarded crutches are eloquent testimony to the efficacy of the saint. But in this improvised Elizabeth street shrine there were no crutches, but instead of number of wax models of broken legs and arms and bruised heads, realistically colored to show evidences of disease. There were, also, two wax models of babies, contributed by grateful parents, whose little ones owed their recovery to San Kalogero, and not a few one and two-dollar bills, the expressions of more practical gratitude.

To the Sicilian San Kalogero is a most potent saint. When illness visits home he first prays to San Kalogero and then summons a physician. If the invalid recovers, the praise is to San Kalogero and only part of the fee for the doctor. When the feast days of the saint come around again the grateful votary pays homage at some shrine erected in the saint's honor, and there deposits some financial expression of his gratitude.

The Italian of the mainland has nothing to do with the Sicilian saint or his feast. San Rocco, the wandering French priest of jolly memories who banished the plague from Italy and returned to France to be executed as a spy, is his patron saint. The feast comes in August, when most of the buildings of the Italian district are decorated. There was great fear and trembling in Little Italy last year because the shrine erected to San Rocco's honor took fire and burned.

Fish Coughed Up a Ring.

Henry Walter, of Jamaica, Long Island, a hotel man, has a new diamond ring, which came to him in an extraordinary manner. Walter was fishing in Jamaica bay when he felt a fierce tug at his line. He landed a weakfish weighing six pounds. The fish gave him a hard fight before he landed it. As Walter swung the fish over the gunwale into the boat it spit the hook from its mouth, and with it a diamond ring. When later seen by a jeweler the ring was valued at $35.

Planning Future Forests.

A bill now before the Ohio legislature provides for the payment of a premium or bounty of $2 an acre for a period of ten years to any land owner of the state who will plant and care for forest trees in compliance with the rules laid down by the state board of forestry.

Henry Walter, of Jamaica, Long Island, a hotel man, has a new diamond ring, which came to him in an extraordinary manner. Walter was fishing in Jamaica bay when he felt a fierce tug at his line. He landed a weakfish weighing six pounds. The fish gave him a hard fight before he landed it. As Walter swung the fish over the gunwale into the boat it spit the hook from its mouth, and with it a diamond ring. When later seen by a jeweler the ring was valued at $35.

HAS BRIGHT FUTURE

SENOR CORRAL WHO IS TO BE MEXICO'S VICE PRESIDENT.

Was Himself the Author of the Bill Which Created the Office—Highly Praised by President Porfirio Diaz.

City of Mexico Special.

"President in reserve" is the designation employed by Gen. Porfirio Diaz in referring to his secretary of the interior, chosen by the nationalists as their candidate for the vice presidency.

"I congratulate you," said the president, addressing a delegation from the convention, "on having nominated as a candidate for the vice presidency a citizen who, in addition to his upright character, enlightenment and public spirit, demonstrated by admirable service in various important posts, possesses the moral and physical energies which are proper to his relatively youthful age, and for which not even a career of patriotic abnegation and honorable service can afford a substitute."

Little did Ramon Corral think when he drew up and presented to the chamber of deputies the bill creating the vice presidency and extending the presidential term to four to six years, that he would be the man selected to fill the vice presidential post and later become, in all probability the successor of Gen. Diaz, the great soldier who has earned the title of "peace president."

The question of the retirement of Gen. Diaz was settled a year ago, when both the nationalists and liberals nominated the president to succeed himself.

The amendments to the constitution as finally adopted provide that in the event of the death, disability or absence from the republic of the president, the vice president shall immediately assume the duties of the presidency without the necessity of taking a new oath. Neither can he resign except for very grave reasons, which must be passed upon by the congress, and neither can he leave the republic without the permission of congress.

The law authorizing the amendments makes the vice president ex-officio president of the senate, but leaves the incumbent free to accept other offices

SENOR RAMON CORRAL.
(Minister of the Interior and Future Vice President of Mexico.)

and perform the duties for which he may be selected by the president, the bill declaring that it is not expedient that the vice president be condemned to be a mere passive spectator of the public affairs which at any time he may be called upon to direct. Probably Corral will retain the portfolio of interior affairs.

It has long been the desire of the president to lay down, at least temporarily, the reins of government, rest from his arduous duties and make a tour of the principal cities of the United States and Europe. The clause in the amendment allowing leave of absence, the vice president serving ad interim, gives him the opportunity, though whether Gen. Diaz will embrace it cannot now be stated.

Ramon Corral was born in Alamos, State of Sonora, January 10, 1854. He made his appearance in the political world as the editor of two newspapers, El Fantasmas and the Voz de Alamos. Both of these publications were opposed to the administration of Gen. Ignacio Pesqueira, who controlled the local government of Sonora for 20 years. In 1875 he exchanged the pen for the sword, and when the revolution of August 11 of the same year began, with Gen. Francisco Serna at its head, Corral took an active part in it, maintaining on the battle field the same principles he had proclaimed in the columns of the press.

Elected to the legislature and afterward appointed secretary of state, Corral assisted in the elaboration of many of the laws that are to-day in force in the state, more especially those pertaining to fiscal regulations.

In the assembly of 1887 he was elevated to the vice governorship of Sonora, and he virtually had charge of the executive power during most of the term by reason of leave of absence granted to the constitutional governor. Corral retired from the position in 1891, acted as secretary of state until 1895, and was then unanimously elected governor for two terms. One of the results of his efforts in the College of Sonora, in the capital of the state. Numerous schools and a multitude of industrial enterprises throughout the state owe their existence to his initiative.

Corral became governor of the federal district of Mexico on December 19, 1900, and on January 16, 1903, was sworn in as minister of interior in the cabinet of President Diaz. His capacity for government has been demonstrated. His personality is very attractive. He possesses a rare combination of affability and authority. Being a native of a frontier state he has come into frequent contact with Americans and understands and appreciates the character of the American people.

LIVELY GRAND DUKE

BORIS INVITED CHORUS GIRLS TO SEE A REAL WAR.

His Conduct Angered Gen. Kuropatkin and Led to Personal Encounter—Czar Said to Be in Hot Fury.

St. Petersburg (Russia) Special.

Just what will be the punishment meted out to Grand Duke Boris for his remarkable ideas of war, which, after slashing Gen. Kuropatkin across the nose, resulted in his being recalled from the far east, is interesting high official and social circles.

The consensus of opinion seems to be that Boris will be exiled to the southern Russian estates of his father, Grand Duke Vladimir.

The czar is furious at the escapades of the dashing but profligate young Boris.

The full details of the war career of the grand duke have leaked out and have created the greatest indignation.

As soon as Boris received his orders to proceed to the front he gave a dinner to his friends in the operatic chorus, and there are few pretty St. Petersburg chorus girls that do not know Boris. As the dinner rolled along, Boris waxed enthusiastic in talk about the glories of war.

"Dear Boris," said a tall, divinely built girl, raising a wine glass, "how we shall miss you. Won't we, girls?"

There was a clatter from the wine glasses and a chorus of "Yes, yes. Poor dear Boris, we shall miss you, indeed!"

Staggering slightly from the effects of the wine, but his eyes sparkling with good fellowship, the dashing, handsome and reckless young aristocrat waved his champagne glass in the air and cried:

"Why miss me, girls, at all? Come along, all of you. I invite you to be the guests of Boris in the far east. Matters are dull here in St. Petersburg. I promise you a royal good time."

The girls were enthusiastic, and the next day announced to their friends that they were going to 'Port Arthur to view the war as the specially invited guests of the royal family.

A few days later Grand Duke Boris boarded a luxuriously fitted-up train of special cars with a few officers. With them were the several girls and a small army of maids. The slow trip over the wild, desolate route in Siberia seemed to pass only too quickly.

One entire car was stocked with champagne and so great was the demand that it was exhausted before the end of the journey.

Arriving at headquarters the royal party and its girl attendants created a sensation. Kuropatkin was shocked. He did not say anything for a time, however, and night after night there were orgies in the camp.

Word came to Boris that a small army of Geisha women were traveling not far from the Japanese army.

"We will introduce them to Russian cigarettes," said Boris, and he proposed an expedition to capture the pretty Japanese women. All the officers present agreed to take part in it, but the next morning it was forgotten.

Another brilliant thought occurred to the champagne-muddled Boris. At one of his dinners he arose and proposed this toast:

"To the devil with the God of War. Let us drink three bumpers to the Goddess of Love."

They were drunk with a cheer. And it was the straw that broke the commanding general's patience. He commanded Boris to appear before him. Boris staggered into Kuropatkin's headquarters drunk.

"You must ship those women back to St. Petersburg," the old general said, sternly.

"How brutal you are," leered Boris.

"No; I mean it," said Kuropatkin, losing patience. "They are demoralizing the entire camp. This is not an opera bouffe, but a real war."

"You beast," shouted Boris, beside himself with rage, and drawing his sword he made a lunge at the general, who, if he had not stepped back nimbly, would have been killed. As it was, he was wounded in the nose.

The czar was informed by telegraph all the particulars and recalled Boris. The St. Petersburg girls returned on an ordinary soldiers' train, in marked contrast to the manner in which they had departed for the seat of war.

In Kuropatkin's headquarters the Goddess of Love was buried for once and all, and the God of War was again placed on his pedestal.

OUR PAPERS AND GOODS.

American Periodicals and Canned Foods Are Sent All Over the World.

Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German ambassador, told a Washington audience recently of a convention which he once had with a native Samoan, reports an exchange of that city. He asked the Pacific islander if his tribe had any literature. "No," was the reply, "because our ancestors couldn't write; nevertheless we have a full account of our past, which we value highly."

Straightway the Samoan brought out from a chest a carefully cherished copy of an American magazine, which contained an article describing his people. "This," said he, "is the only history we have."

"But is it complete?" the German asked.

"Oh, yes!" was the enthusiastic answer. "It tells much that our own people had entirely forgotten!"

This playful anecdote was cited as showing something of the stretch of influence of American periodical literature. It is doubtful if any other American export of to-day reaches the distant corners of the earth in better condition or gives more real comfort than the American standard weekly and monthly publications. They have subscribers wherever the English language is spoken. In surprisingly remote places magazine clubs have been formed. The daily newspapers because of their bulkiness, foreign postage, and the fact that they would come in batches, are not so generally taken as publications which are issued less frequently.

Articles of food which are served fresh at home reach Americans in China in cans; various kinds of merchandise do not stand a long journey well. But the product of the printing press, when its wrapper is broken, seems perfectly fresh and crisp on the equator or in the land of the midnight sun.

This is the one home thing which our people living at isolated stations insist most on having. The familiarity which they in consequence exhibit with the events of the world is a constant surprise to the casual traveler who chances upon them. "Young Englishmen in Singapore are more familiar with the work of the younger American writers than I am," was the comment of an American who recently visited there.

It is no wonder that the Samoan learned his history via the United States.

WORK OF STORE MODEL.

Looseness of Fashionable Costumes Makes Requirements in Form Easier.

"There has been a great change in the last few years in the requirements of the store model," said the manager of the suit department in a fashionable shop the other day, reports the Chicago Tribune. "Formerly certain correct proportions were required which if not after the Venus standard were as near after that of Praxiteles. But now the main thing necessary in the model is that she shall have 'style' and 'carriage,' and of course average size and roundness of contour without strict regard to proportions.

"The elaborateness and looseness of costumes has brought about this result. The trimming and hiding of the figure in the present day tailor-made suit is so complete that a particularly good 'line' is no longer required. The fact that a trifle too large is selected than formerly is the best indication of the change in woman's measurements, due to the straight front corset and partly to the change of sentiment which demands broad shoulders, and selects clothes accordingly.

"The model now in demand has usually a 25-inch waist, where it was formerly absolutely necessary that it should be under 24. A 37-inch bust is preferred, where 36 used to be considered the ideal. Thirteen inches across the shoulders is now considered none too broad, though the hip measure accomplished by the model who adjusts herself strictly to the new average is a couple of inches smaller than formerly, being about 41½.

"These measurements are the average ones of the gowns that are sold even more than of the wearers themselves. The plan of buying a large size to be fitted down so as to obtain the broad shouldered effect is almost universal, and while the greatest mistake a saleswoman could make formerly was to suggest that a customer take a size larger than she thought necessary, now it is often received as a compliment."

No Coffee or Dessert in Japan.

Coffee is not popular in Japan. When guests arrive for a dinner party, they are received in an anteroom and immediately served with tea and cakes before entering the banquet hall. The cups in which the tea is served are very small and of the finest porcelain. They have no handles, but are passed on metal trays, which, with the form of a leaf. The tea is brewed directly in the little cups, and served without sugar or cream. Dessert, so dear to the occidental housewife, is also unknown in Japan. At formal dinners rice forms the last course. It would be a breach of etiquette to serve the little cakes which come before dinner with the tea during this final course.

PARIS NOTES.

Embroidered Silks and Silk Muslins, Dainty Hats.

Some of the silk muslins and embroidered silks are very lovely. They are ultra smart for evening wear.

The marquise hat is finding renewed favor in chips and panamas. There is a new hat also which in shape resembles a curious butterfly bow of straw. It is quite small and turned up abruptly at the back, where it is adorned with scarlet poppies, the rest of the hat being of scarlet and white straw draped with a lace veil.

Very popular are the linens in duck's egg blue embroidered in white. Some of these are made with a very high plain linen collar and a black crepe de chine stock. With this sort of costume is worn a flat double brimmed plateau hat trimmed with a black velvet bow.

Checks still continue popular. Some of the most striking frocks of the season have been worn in checked fabrics of pale colors trimmed with plain silk of a little darker shade.

The newest motor or dust cloaks are trimmed with medallions of contrasting silk or motifs of lace, but the lace is lined with chiffon to exclude the dust. These coats are seldom lined. Unlined taffeta coats or half and three-quarter length are used for summer wraps. These come in the palest tints and are much adorned with frills of lace or chiffon.

The picture shows a tailor made suit with a three-quarter coat and a novel shoulder cape. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A NEW TAILOR MAID.

FASHION'S DICTATES.

Coral Tints Combined With Brown. Black Not Worn So Much.

Many mohair costumes are being worn this season, but they are only pretty when made by a good tailor or dressmaker, as the fit depends greatly on the way the grain of the goods is handled.

Cloth of gold is used instead of pongee for coats and costumes. It is slightly heavier and not quite so apt to wrinkle and grow stringy.

Coral tints in foulards and other silks are all the rage. Coral is particularly pretty in checked materials.

Black is not worn so much this season as formerly. The same is true of black hats and shoes, as the tendency is to match the gown in the accessories.

Brown will be worn again this fall, combined with orange and coral red tints.

The new hats have higher crowns and are smaller in circumference.

When on board a yacht a coat of dark blue pilot cloth lined with scarlet is very useful; also a heavy cream serge lined with pale blue. It is well, in fact, to have two wraps, a white one and a dark one for stormy occasions.

PINK WAIST.

Embroidered silk linens make up beautifully with cream embroideries and heavy yak lace. These are charming and useful for house and street toilets. The fashion in blouses elects that they shall be very sheer and much trimmed. A favorite mode is to combine tan and white lace on the same blouse. It can then be worn either with a white or an ecru skirt.

In the cut we have a pale pink silk waist with a cape effect, enriched with tucking. The double sleeve has an under puff of pink muli.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

ARTISTIC MODES.

Elbow Sleeves Are Very Elaborate. Voile Increases in Popularity.

A frock of pure white muli seen recently had real valenciennes lace inserted all the way down the plain pouched bodice and flowing skirt, which was cut somewhat in umbrella fashion over a multitude of ruffles from the knees down. Two rows of quaint old buttons and loops of black velvet baby ribbon also decorated the bodice and skirt, and the belt was wide and made of black velvet caught up high at the back with a curious old

BLACK CHIFFON HAT.

French enamel buckle. To be worn with this there was a black hat with a sweeping white ostrich plume.

Elbow sleeves of the most frivolous description figure largely on summer gowns. They are designed in such a manner that they show the prettiness of the arms, while preserving the full outlines fashion demands.

Voile increases in popularity, and the closer and silkier makes are extremely smart when trimmed with good lace.

The eighteenth century modes are still holding their own.

Belts are quite an important item of dress at present, and the latest is the wide shaded belt finished with two lines of ruching back and front. All these belts are made on a boned and fitted lining so that they fit like corselets. A pink belt seen recently was finished with small butterfly bows.

The picture shows a black chiffon hat trimmed with an ostrich feather and velvet ribbon.

Gray For Day and Evening Wear. Revival of Taffeta.

Gray is always an attractive color for tailor made suits whether in cloth or mixtures.

In direct contrast to some of the large picture hats we have small three cornered and toque shapes. One of the prettiest of the latter is of shirred red silk of two shades trimmed with two curved red quills.

In a few weeks birds and wings will take the place of flowers on the tailor made hat.

Simplicity is the order of the hour for picture hats, and the high crowned model with its one long ostrich plume or single costly flower blends admirably with the dressy gown and chiffon stole.

Taffeta has enjoyed a great revival and is employed for entire gowns, which are much ruched and frilled and trimmed with handsome laces. Old fashioned tints are the smart thing for these silk gowns, and cigar and snuff brown makes up very well in silk of the taffeta order.

Gray is a smart color even for evening wear, and exquisite gowns of gray tulle, chiffon and net have been seen at smart evening functions this summer. They promise to be even more popular in the fall.

Embroidered linens have proved costly and unsatisfactory, as they launder badly as a rule.

A new weave of coarse woolen lace looks well on pale rose or deep cream cloth. Light cloth gowns, by the way, are excessively useful for cool days in summer. The cream white dresses in particular are very smart when they are enriched with laces and embroideries worked in with gold thread.

The picture shows a tailor made costume of gray cloth. It has the long shouldered effect. The revers are of green silk, and the cuffs and girdle are of the same.

THE WORLD OF DRESS.

Novelties In Waistcoats—A Rose Shade Is Favorite.

Novelties in waistcoats include pique, velvet, suede and silk. They are, however, only worn with the severe type of tailor made and particularly with the basque coat. White suede or kid is perhaps more chic than any other.

Among the season's novelties designed to wear with black gowns is the petticoat of black batiste. It is made exactly similar to other petticoats, and the flounces are trimmed with black, white or cream colored Calais lace, the petticoat being made very full with many frills.

Little girls' frocks for the warmer days are very pretty made of white linen gathered full into a linen yoke embroidered with scarlet or pale blue. They are caught far below the waist with belts of scarlet or blue leather, below which there are a couple of full embroidered frills, and the little sleeves are likewise gathered into bands of embroidered linen. Other frocks of scarlet linen are fashioned in the same manner. The same material is used for the Russian blouse costumes worn by the little boys. These last are usually trimmed with a row of large pearl buttons down the front and a large white linen collar.

There is a new shade of brown, known as onion color, which we are told will have a great vogue during the coming season. A dress in this particular tone was carried out in voile. It had a very short bolero coat over a slip of silencon lace. The skirt was simply trimmed with two deep frills.

A pretty hat of the directoire type seen recently was carried out in pink straw, the brim bound with little kilted frills of champagne colored tulle, while the only trimming was a large bird of paradise in black and pink.

The picture shows a taffeta coat trimmed with frills and English embroidery. This is worn with a checked plaited skirt and a black and white hat.

FASHION'S MIRROR.

Lightweight Serges and Linens Worn at This Time of the Year.

Some of the lace used on linen and cambric gowns is of the heavy Paraguay or Irish crochet type. In a deep ecru or string color it is very attractive on red, deep blue or the pastel tint of cotton.

Linen in its natural shade is always popular for tailor mades, and the greater number are made in coatee or bolero style. The most chic gowns of this description are also embroidered.

A DAINTY WAIST.

Flat tucks, bands of lace and stitched strappings of different colorings, not to speak of spotted ones, glorify the plain linens and even the lightweight serges worn at this time of the year. Cotton, canvas and voile or mercerized hopsack are also favored, and the last named is made up Eton fashion and worn with blouses of muslin de soie. Full styles prevail, and the slip like line is hidden by the all round fullness at the waist. The height is unfortunately in this fashion materially decreased.

Old rose linen, spotted with a mercerised dot, which gives a silky effect, is very becoming to young people. This material is charming when trimmed with oriental embroideries and a touch of white.

The picture shows a costume of plaid silk trimmed with pipings of darker silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

DRESS AND MILLINERY.

A New Material—The Vogue of Lace—Embroidery in Colors.

There is a new material belonging to the voile family, but which is even cooler if possible. It is very similar to voile, but much finer, and so glossy that its appearance in certain lights gives the effect of spun glass. Light shades are almost always used, and dresses of this description are generally trimmed with the coarser varieties of lace, which set off the pretty gloss to its best advantage.

A great deal of white is still used, but pink and rose shades are fast coming into favor. For evening wear trains are growing longer, and the Marie Antoinette bodice of silk, satin or mousseline is draped with priceless lace. Rose petals and sparkling paillettes are pressed into service for trimming evening frocks.

White jewelled lace forms a beautiful evening trimming. It is used on transparent black frocks. This lace also appears on black satin souple. A great deal of lavender is being worn in Paris, chiefly in crepe de chine, satin and brocades. It is trimmed with deep purple embroideries. There are also some very magnificent panne embroideries in this shade on groundwork of lace, the edges being appliqued with gold and silver thread.

The chief feature of smart Parisian millinery is the touch of black velvet.

The heavily embroidered blouse of ecru batiste is very smart if appliqued with figures of ecru lace and little figures done in heavy white silk. A dressy waist of this description is usually worn with a veiling skirt in a white or cream shade.

In the cut we have a picture hat of shirred pink tulle trimmed with a cluster of black tips.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

CHIC MODES.

Becoming Veils For Seashore Wear. Mushroom Hats.

The most becoming veils for seashore wear include veils of brown or black chiffon decorated with dots quite large and far apart.

The mushroom hat is to be seen made of many dainty materials. The smart milliner, however, raises this style of headgear on a bandeau so as to obviate any chance of its assuming a flat, dowdy appearance. It is quite becoming to most faces, and to give it added quaintness it is lined with delicate tinted effects. One of the prettiest of these mushroom hats is trimmed with ribbon of a faded turquoise shade and a flat bow in front caught with a long velvet buckle.

PLAID SILK COSTUME.

The paradise plume is once again in favor, and it is seen in charming tints of yellow shading into orange and brown or pink growing by subtle gradations to claret. Hitherto it has always been placed in a drooping position, but now it is shortened and placed a little erect to one side of the hat.

Painted lace is coming once more into fashion. On one or two handsome Parisian coats it made its appearance recently and created a very smart effect in one instance it was introduced on a beautiful coat of pompadour silk with a bead of real valenciennes, the pattern of which was picked out in pink and pale blue.

The picture shows a costume of plaid silk trimmed with pipings of darker silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Smart French Millinery—New Shades and Combinations.

Among the most popular hat shapes in Paris are those known as Varennes. They have been worn, it is true, during the summer, but with lower crowns than those now appearing. In many cases the crown is conical or funnel shaped, and the trimming almost invariably consists in a double band of velvet in two shades, leaving the upper part of the crown visible, while a plume of three feathers or even a single large feather is placed in the center of the front and caught with a high narrow buckle.

Another hat which presents a decided novelty is that of which the brim is very much broader on the left side than on the right. It is lifted at the edge, and trimming is apt to consist of a band of ribbon with a flat bow or a long sweeping plume caught with a buckle.

One of the popular shades is called jonquil. It is a cross between coral and cherry or between amber and orange, the same name being used for both tints. It is appearing on many of the new hats for autumn wear.

As a general rule, trimmings will be designed to harmonize rather than to contrast with the gowns, although pompadour effects are still in evidence.

Buttons of a costly description form a very charming trimming on many an inexpensive frock. A very smart tailor made gown recently imported from Vienna was of blue serge, trimmed with sapphire buttons set in gun metal. This is to be worn with a smart blue toque, trimmed with a large black and blue bird.

The picture shows a mountain costume of checked material. The jacket is of Norfolk cut. The skirt has a full plaited flounce. JUDIC CHOLLET.

DAINTY EFFECTS.

Louis XVI. Models Worn Charmingly by Young Girls—Smart Hats.

Some of the best gowns both for day and evening wear are exact copies of Louis XVI. models. Many debutantes have been wearing girlish frocks of that period—transparent yokes, high pointed waistbands, dainty elbow sleeves, many billowy flounces and much valenciennes lace, surmounted with hats trimmed with flowers and tied by means of ribbons under the chin. White satin, embroidered muslins, linens embroidered and trimmed with valenciennes, curious quiltings and puffings all play their part in the picture toilet.

One of the prettiest hats seen in Paris lately was on the Napoleonic shape of fine white lace, the inner brim being lined with bands of black chiffon velvet edged with ivy leaves. Across the crown was a big black velvet bow, and it was finished with an exquisite cluster of white ostrich plumes. It was worn with a white muslin frock and a white fluffy chiffon parasol.

A great deal of Limerick lace is being used as well as a quantity of Irish crochet. Irish lace mixes charmingly with linon de soie, crepe de chine and similar thin fabrics. It gives the necessary touch of solidity to thin materials.

Painted muslins form the loveliest of summer gowns, and they are suited to the most dressy occasions. The lining as a rule matches the background.

In the picture we have a tailor made silk shirt waist of red taffeta trimmed with bands of darker red silk.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

STATELY SILKS AGAIN.

The Rich Materials of Other Days Coming Back.

It is a matter for genuine rejoicing to those who like rich and stately robes and handsome garments that at last fashion has determined to call forth the beautiful and standard silks of yore and the splendid costumes made thereof. Not only do the young look well in these fine materials, but the middle aged may consider them a boon. It is when one has lost the first freshness of youth that rich garments become almost necessary to recompense the woman for all that she has lost. It seems that stately silks, satins and velvets belong by right to those women so that the eye may not rest too long or critically on the faded face.

For the matrons, then, fashion says there must be superb silks of the old kind, rich, thick and durable, silks which give the impression of value from far away. Black, dark blue and other colors, all of them on the order of plum, heliotrope, browns and some dark grays, are seen. But the preference is decidedly for black, for there are so many ways to trim and ornament black which cannot be applied with equal benefit to any other color, no matter what.

The *castle braids are being manufactured with a special view to trimming the rich and heavy black silks now making for the coming season. Many of them are of silk with crocheted work between, which raises them to the dignity of fine guipure lace, and some are surrounded on all the places possible by beads. Others have velvet designs wrought over taffeta and these edged with embroidered work. It is cut out so that it becomes virtually a lace. When this is applied over the rich black silks it is simply beautiful.

In the illustration is shown a heavy and close cheney black taffeta, which is this season woven with a new firmness and body, and the skirt is cut on large lines. The front breadth is laid like a fold at the seam, and the other seams are treated in the same manner. At the back the entire fullness is shirred deeply, and thus the demitrain falls smoothly and gracefully. The waist is much on the order of the blouse. There is a folded belt of the silk, which fastens in front with a shirred piece. The sleeves are really bishop, but they look like flowing sleeves on account of the way in which the trimming is applied, and this trimming consists of fancy braid, with a fall of lace which covers the cuffs. At the shoulders is worn a cape made of the silk, trimmed richly with the braid and finished at the bottom with deep knotted chenille fringe. This cape can be left off, and the waist is then finished with trimming of the braid around the shoulders more or less elaborate.

The skirt in this particular instance is superbly trimmed with the fancy braid applied in an elaborate design, the braid being edged with a beading of white silk. It makes a costume worth much more extended and perfect description, and it stands for the model of the handsomest of the fall dresses.

Toque bonnets are undoubtedly the favorites for middle aged ladies, especially for dress occasions, and in spite of protest the aigret plume is absolutely necessary to finish such a bonnet properly.

Very many of the silk suits, especially those for the young ladies, will be made in strictly tailor style and will show much white stitching as well as other ways of trimming. But the fine fancy silk braids will be the preferred trimming.

Among the new things for ordinary wear for fall, mohair will still be the preferred material in one or the other of its various grades and colors. This excellent material will be largely worn for ordinary street suits.

The newest of the fall suits, which are, however, not on exhibition yet, show long coats in regular Prince Albert shape. These are made of the dress material and look very stylish on a good figure. Some of the suits show tight waists with white vests and other snug effects. All waists are longer in the back and shorter in proportion in the front.

Pretty effects are produced by the use of very narrow ruffles made of ribbon of the dress material. Small shoulder capes and dolmans will be seen. Capes of various shapes and sizes will be largely worn, and so will be the fancy Mount Carlo coats.

"A Liberty Corner man who died a few days ago was "an intimate friend of Lincoln." Personal friends of Lincoln and Washington chairs are both plentiful.

An advertisement of food ought to be so appetising that it actually leaves a flavor in the reader's mouth. There is a restaurant in New York which has the idea. I can read its advertisements twenty minutes after a hearty meal and feel a robust hunger growing in me as a result of its wholesome suggestiveness.—Ex.

Doubtless there are mysteries in advertising, but they are being gradually uncovered. Among the discoveries which experience has made is this: "In advertising it is not a question of selecting many medicines which are good, but rather the few which are best."—Ex.

In an effort to know what the political complexion of the next House of Representatives is doubtful, the New York Herald dwells at length on the situation in New Jersey. The defeat of the Republican ticket in Union County is attributed to race prejudice, Dr. Jefferson Anderson being the majority party's candidate for coroner. It does not even mention the factional fight between the Kean and Fowler forces, which was the cause of the county being thrown into the Democratic column.

Public safety demands that some action be taken to prevent any more accidents at the trolley station, that section of a public thoroughfare known as Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Second street. On Sunday an automobilist ran down a woman at that spot while the street was crowded with stalled trolley cars. Many similar accidents have occurred there in the past and the warning has not been heeded. Sooner or later some one is bound to meet with a fatal accident. The thoroughfare should be open at all times and there is no reason why the trolley company, or any other concern, should be allowed to occupy it. The trolley company should be compelled to have its station on private property.

LITERARY.

Collier's Weekly, in the issue of August 20, editorially says: "We are reading every day speculations on whether 'Mr. Murphy' is to be allowed by Judge Parker to name the Democratic nominee for Governor of New York. As long as this system of selecting the people's servants continues in vogue, the principles of a man like La Follette will be the most living issues."

AMUSEMENTS.

Henry Lee, who has lately returned from Europe, will make his first appearance in New York at Keith's during the coming week, and head the bill, which is another of those advanced vaudeville entertainments, for which the Union Square Theatre is noted. Lee has been abroad studying some new characters, which he will present in his celebrated act, "Famous Men Past and Present." In addition to his new creations he will of course, give his wonderful impersonations of the Czar, Mikado, Pope Leo XIII, Emperor William, "Mark Twain," Presidents Roosevelt, General Grant and General Robert E. Lee.

More than 100,000 people passed the entrance gates at Dreamland last Sunday. Fully 50,000 of this number were brought to this seaside resort by Dreamland's own line of steamboats, the only line running direct from New York—starting at Harlem—and Newark to Coney Island's famous amusement park. The attractions at Dreamland are so many and diversified that entertainment is provided to the liking of every taste and fancy. "Fighting the Flames" has drawn the greatest crowds because of the novelty presented of a genuine fire with fire apparatus and firemen working to control the conflagration and their methods of saving life. "The Fall of Pompeii" has also drawn crowds. The historical interest of this wonderful spectacle appeals to students and those interested solely in a fire display, from the graphic and accurate picture story of one of the most terrible calamities the world has ever known.

The New York season is opening this year as suddenly as a Jack Pot seems to open from the view-point of the man who has waited long for the requisite cards. Last week five Broadway theatres began business, among them one of the only two houses managed by Sam S. Shubert that closed for the summer. This house was the Princess, in which on Thursday evening James K. Hackett produced a farce, entitled "Jack's Little Surprise," with a cast including Arthur Byron. The Lyric enters the field and its second season next Thursday with a musical comedy, yclept "The Royal Chef." The Casino, the place of amusement referred to as having been open through the hot weather, continues with "Piff, Paff, Pouf." It is a notable fact, by the way, that the Casino has not been "dark" one night, except Sundays, in seven years. The wide-spread reputation of the theatre makes it an object of curiosity to visitors from out-of-town, and of these alone there are a sufficient number to tide the management over the dog days.

Criterion Theatre—"The Dictator," a farce in three acts, by Richard Harding Davis. Brooke Travers, William Collier; Simpson, his valet, Charles Jackson; Charley Hyde, John Barrymore; Col. John T. Bowie, George Nash; Duffy, Thomas Mc Grath; Rev. Arthur Bostick, Henry J. West; Lieutenant Perry, Howard Estabrook; Samuel Codman, Emmet Whitney; General Santos Campos, Brigham Royce; Dr. Waaquez, Francis Sedgwick; Senor Jose Bravo, Louis Egan; Corporal Manuel, Wallace Mc Cutcheon; Col. Garcia, Harry Seaton; Smoking Room Steward, Augustus Goodson; Lucy Sheridan, Rose Flynn; Mrs. John T. Bowie, Lida Hall; Senora Juanita Arguilla, Louise Allen. "The Dictator," which successfully brought last season to a close at the Criterion Theatre, reopened that playhouse Monday night. William Collier was again the star in Richard Harding Davis' merry farce, and in the role of Brooke Travers he gave another welcome back to the Criterion stage. John Barrymore resumed his old part of the overworked telegraph operator for the Red Cuine, and repeated his success in the part. Miss Louise Allen once more played the part of the jealous senora, and many others of the original company were welcomed back. Newcomers in the cast were Charles Jackson, who succeeded Edward Abeles as the valet of Brooke Travers, and Miss Lida Hall was seen in the part originally played by Miss Nanette Comstock. The popular play, well staged and acted, auspiciously opened the season at the Criterion, which had been made bright and fresh within by painters and decorator for the opening of another theatrical year.

Mr. Weightman's Will.

Mrs. Robert J. C. Walker, of Germantown, is made probably the richest woman in the world by the terms of the will of her father, William Weightman, who is the grandfather of Aubrey Weightman. Mr. Weightman was the richest man in Pennsylvania, his estate being estimated at more than $50,000,000. Every penny is given to Mrs. Walker, his only surviving child. While no provision is made in the will for the grandchildren and great-grandchildren of Mr. Weightman, it is the general impression that they were liberally endowed prior to his death. Aubrey Weightman married Miss Pamela Cox, of this city, a year ago.

INCENDIARIES DESTROY BARN ON COTTRELL PLACE

Structure Back of the City Fired After Two Unsuccessful Attempts.

PLAINS FIREMEN THERE

BUILDING A MASS OF FLAMES ON THEIR ARRIVAL AND BEYOND SAVING.

Property Owned by Mrs. Cottrell, of Bayonne, and One Time Worth Many Thousands of Dollars—Residents Fear Other Blazes.

After meeting with failure on two previous occasions, incendiaries succeeded Monday in setting fire to and destroying the big barn on the Cottrell property, situated in Washington Valley just back of this city. The structure was a mass of flames when the discovery was made, and though the South Plains department hurried to the scene in response to an alarm it was powerless to save anything. The reflection from the fire extended a great distance across the sky, as the property is located on one of the highest points on the mountain, and plainly lighted up the East End of town.

The first attempt to destroy the property was made last winter but was discovered by neighbors in time to prevent a conflagration. Last Thursday, the incendiaries again visited the big barn and all but succeeded in firing it. Robert Murphy and John Archbold were passing by when they noticed a small flame flickering through the weatherboards. They investigated and found that a candle had been placed in a box saturated with kerosene and the latter was just igniting when they discovered it. The fire was put out and a close watch was kept on the structure by the interested parties, probably believing that this would be done, failed to return until last night. The watch had been withdrawn then and the third attempt ended in the structure being destroyed.

Mrs. Cottrell, the owner of the property, removed to Bayonne a few years ago and the place has since been unoccupied. At one time it was the handsomest and best kept of the many estates along the Valley road and was worth many thousands of dollars. Nearby residents are highly alarmed over the firing and many of them fear that the incendiarism will extend to other buildings.

W. D. MURRAY'S BIBLICAL WORK

PLAINFIELDER THE AUTHOR OF THE MESSAGE OF THE TWELVE PROPHETS.

In a recently published Bible prospectus, which quotes the names of the best books on Bible study, considerable space is given to the description of a new Biblical text book written by William D. Murray, of this city. The volume will be published by January 1 and is entitled "The Messages of the Twelve Prophets."

Mr. Murray is considered one of the best Bible students in the country as he has made a thorough study of the Bible from a historical as well as a spiritual point of view. He has written several books on Bible study, but the last work is said to be the most complete.

The book, as the name would suggests deals with the lives of the minor prophets, and its object is to provide interesting and instructive topics for daily study. The aim of the author, as stated by himself, is to make the messages which were spoken to the men of old become real and timely to the men of the present day. The work is remarkable for the combination of simplicity and scholarliness, while naught but the fundamental features are brought out.

ENTERED FOR TOURNAMENT

REINHART, GLENNEY AND ABBOTT TO BE IN GOLF CONTEST.

New Jersey golfers are likely to cut quite a figure in the National amateur golf championship to be started at Baltusrol on Tuesday, September 6. Frank O. Reinhart, of Salvidere avenue, the intercollegiate champion and a member of the Baltusrol Club, has made the round of the course in 78, which is the amateur record for the course.

Reinhart's long game compares favorably with any in the amateur ranks, and the fact that he has twice defeated Travis at match play tends to make him one of the favorites at Baltusrol. It is also probable that Robert Abbott and W. L. Glenney will enter the tournament and they are sure to give a good account of themselves.

Harry K. Lister, of Grant avenue, spent Saturday and Sunday at Asbury Park with his family.

FARMER LAMBERT IS AFTER THE 'PHONE CO.

Says the Northeastern People Must Pay Him Another $200 for Using His Ground.

A FRANCHISE GRAFT

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP PROPERTY OWNERS FOLLOWING OFFICIALS' ACTION.

Corporation Meeting With Many Obstacles in Getting Its Line Along Raritan Road—Case in Plains Court.

Reasoning within themselves that if the Northeastern Telephone and Telegraph Company is rich enough to pay Fanwood township $1,000 for the privilege of running its line along Raritan road, the farmers owning property on the route are of the opinion that its treasury will stand further demands. Many of them have already been paid as high as $200 for a three-foot right of way over their ground on which to set anchor posts to support poles and now Isaac Lambert believes he should have $200 more because he found the construction gang taking five feet in some places.

Lambert was one of many who signed a contract giving the privilege before it was made public that the township had secured $1,000 for a small franchise and when this became known the farmers "kicked themselves" because they had not gotten more. When Lambert discovered the men were putting the anchor posts two feet beyond where the contract called for, he asked for further payment from the supervisor but his request was refused. He then threatened suit but this had no effect on the company, the officials claiming that they had to go over in some instances on account of the manner in which the fences were built and that it was no fault of theirs. Finding that threats had no effect, Lambert went before Justice Clark, of Scotch Plains, Saturday, and preferred complaint in tort against the company for $300 damages. Summons was issued at once and the case will be heard Friday afternoon unless the Northeastern people secure a non-suit or an adjournment. Should Lambert be successful in his action, it is declared his neighbors who have signed the three-foot franchise and found the company going over the mark, will earn similar suits.

Since it became widely known that Fanwood township was paid a good sum for allowing wires to be strung over two miles of its road, the company has met with opposition right and left in the territory it had mapped out. In some instances the same franchise as given them for nothing and now the authorities are seeking any possible way to go back on their agreement and get something for it. The property owners heard of the money being paid their wise Fanwood brethren after they had said "go ahead" to a request for the anchor post privilege gratis and they too, are wondering how to get the better of the contract which they signed.

AT LAST DEFEATED DUNELLEN

NEW MARKET NINE WON THE FOURTH GAME IN THE SERIES.

New Market defeated Dunellen Saturday for the first time, winning the fourth game of the series. In the first inning Dunellen scored. Giles made a three base hit, followed by Craig's single, which brought in the only run. In the fifth inning the infield made a series of errors and Smith was hit freely, which gave New Market four runs.

After that Dunellen settled down and only gave New Market a run in the seventh inning, but could not score. A feature of the game was four double plays, Dunellen's three base hits in the first inning.

The line up:

Dunellen—Matthews, c; Smith, p; Garvey, 1b; Fletcher, 2b; Craig, ss; Hill, rf; Alberts, cf; Monahan, lf; Giles, ss.

New Market—A. Nelson, c; Squiers, p; Martin, 1b; W. Nelson, 2b; Conover, 3b; S. Nelson, rf; Peddington, cf; Vaglow, lf; Mace, ss.

Scored by innings:

New Market..0 0 0 0 4 0 1 0 x—5

Base on balls—Smith, 1; Squiers, 1. Struck out—Smith, 5; Squiers, 4. Two base hits—Mack, Conover. Three base hits—Giles. Safe hits—Off Smith, 9; off Squiers, 5. Double plays—4.

Riley's Farm Sold.

William H. Riley's farm of fifty acres, between Berkley Heights and Scotch Plains, was sold today to Horace Roberson, of Bayonne. W. H. Rogers, of Washingtonville, negotiated the sale.

CHILDREN OF ISRAEL DEDICATE THEIR TEMPLE

Handsome New Edifice on New Street Formally Taken Possession of Sunday.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

SAMUEL DREIER OPENS DOORS WITH SOLID SILVER KEY.

Exercises Continue Until Late at Night—Principal Address of the Day Was Made by William Newcorn.

In the presence of nearly 1,000 people, many of whom were from various religious denominations throughout the city, the handsome new Temple of the Congregation of the Children of Israel, located on New street, was Sunday formally dedicated and taken possession of by the band of worshippers. The exercises were of decided interest to both participants and observers and were carried out in a highly satisfactory manner.

Beginning at 3 o'clock with the formal opening of the Temple doors by a silver key in the hands of Samuel Dreier, the congregation and its friends took possession of the building. Kalman Rothberg, the president, called the gathering to order and in his official capacity introduced the various speakers. Prayer was offered by Rev. H. L. Weinberg, of Boston, in opening, and was followed by Rev. M. A. Bernstein, of Elizabeth, who made an address in which he congratulated the people on their success in securing so beautiful a home.

As he concluded Assemblyman William Newcorn was introduced and made the address of the day in English. Although his remarks were extemporaneous they were fraught with salient religious points in keeping with the occasion. He traced the history of Judaism from its inception to the present day, dwelling upon the fact that it was the beginning of all religious faiths wherein there is a belief in the Supreme Being. He pictured the obstacles which have beset the path of the Hebrew race for thousands of years, yet while its numbers have been scattered over the earth its religion is as firm and everlasting as when the tribes were together. He paid a tribute to the man's religion as having elevated mankind, promoted art, science and laws. Directing his remarks toward the congregation he pointed out the duty that lies before the members in order so upbuild their Temple, care for their needy and establish Sabbath classes for the children.

A short address in German was given by Rev. M. A. Wondrowski, of Elizabeth, and another in English by Rev. Weinburg. As the latter concluded, Mr. Newcorn arose and in behalf of L. A. Congress, of New York, who has been greatly interested in the growth of the local congregation, presented it with a silver pointer, handsomely engraved, which is used in reading the Holy Scroll. It was accepted by President Rothberg with an able response and then a second presentation of a Scroll was made by Samuel Dreier. The latter is a costly work of art containing the Five Books of Moses, in hand lettering. Mr. Compass has been one of the warmest supporters of the Temple movement and at the corner stone laying ceremonies he paid $100 for the privilege of setting the first brick in place.

The church exercises concluded at 6 o'clock, adjournment being taken at that time for one our. Reassembling at 7 o'clock the congregation members and visitors adjourned to the lower part of the building where nine long tables had been arranged for the serving of a banquet. Fully 600 people sat down to the feast and in all progressed many impressive addresses were made by leading members of the congregation. It was 11 o'clock before the last one was given and the exercises were declared at an end.

The building will now be occupied regularly for services and meetings and in course of time other branches of church work will be established. Yesterday's exercises were arranged and in charge of the building committee composed of Morris Abrams, Samuel Dreier, Harry Dreier, Kalman Rothberg, Julius Shrager and Jacob Sacher.

Mr. Adams Buried.

The funeral services of William Fuller Adams were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late residence on West Birch street, where a large number of relatives and friends were present. Rev. T. Logan Murphy, formerly rector of the Holy Cross church, conducted the services. The interment took place in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were U. B. Crane, R. S. Braider, Stephen Enos, A. G. Thorn, Charles McGinley and William Morse.

PLAINFIELD, TWO; WESTFIELD, NOTHING

By Playing an Errorless Game the Local Team Wins the Seventh Contest in Series.

BASSFORD'S 3-BAGGER

PUTNAM STRIKES OUT THIRTEEN MEN AND ALLOWS BUT FIVE HITS.

"Al" Farmer Receives An Ovation Westfield Is Hard Luck —The Scores in Detail.

For the third time this season the Plainfield A. C. whitewashed Westfield in the seventh contest in the series on Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, and the local fans were happy. The score was 2 to 0. Putnam, of the New York Americans, who has been pitching for Providence, twirled for the local team. He struck out thirteen men and allowed but five hits. He was caught in fine style by "Al." Farmer, whose return to the game here was the occasion for a great ovation. The Plainfield boys played a perfect game, not an error being charged to them. Bassford formed the cranks in the eighth inning by making a corking three bagger and coming home on a wild throw by Quinby.

Westfield was somewhat in hard luck. Cotter, the regular catcher, did not show up and Rochford went behind the bat for several innings when he injured his hand. Patience then caught and Rochford went to first base.

There was more or less kicking about Mertly's decisions, but the opinion of the crowd was that he was generally fair. His work was a decided improvement over that of Watt, the Westfield man. A fast double play by Courtney and Smith concluded the contest in the ninth.

The score in detail:

RED MEN PLAN BIG TIME

MIANTONOMO TRIBE ARRANGES TO CELEBRATE ITS ANNIVERSARY.

In the course of arrangements for the fifteenth anniversary of the establishment of Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men to be held in this city in October, a committee of three was appointed last Friday at the regular meeting of their tribesmen to take up the programme for the occasion and to arrange all details. It will take place Friday evening, Oct 7. The men appointed were Charles Holstein, chairman, Andrew J. Stiglitz and Peter Sheridan.

The anniversary exercises of the occasion are to be open to the public and will include a full assemblage of the tribesmen in war paint. The local tribe will be visited by the complete delegation of fifteen members of the State Board of Great Chiefs. At the conclusion of the anniversary ceremonies red men and pale faces will join in the war dance; a special orchestra is to be engaged to furnish the dance music.

Publicity Editor Visits Martine.

Louis Post, editor of The Publist, of Chicago, Ill., has returned from a visit to James E. Martine, the farmer orator of Cedar Brook. Mr. Post is a lecturer and writer of National repute. He was much impressed with Plainfield, which he said was "a most attractive and beautiful city."

MANY GOLF EVENTS ATTRACT ENTHUSIASTS

W. L. Glenney, F. O. Reinhart and C. E. Halsted Win Points for Golf Committee Cup.

LOW SCORES RETURNED

HAROLD ROBERT AND HENRY L. HALL TIE FOR GASTON CUP HONORS.

Rev. Dr. H. H. Carroll and Gus W. Faber Win First Honors at Park Golf Club—Results at Westfield Golf Club.

The number of players on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course on Saturday showed that many are returning from their summer outing and are once more engaging in their favorite exercise. While the course was well filled with players, only a small number returned their scores in competition for the Golf Committee and Gaston cups. The course was in excellent condition.

W. L. Glenney won first honors for the Golf Committee cup, while Frank O. Reinhart and C. E. Halsted finished second and third. These scores were posted:

W. L. Glenney, 73, plus 1—74; Frank O. Reinhart, 73, plus 4—76; C. E. Halsted, 84, 6—78; Leighton Calkins, 83, 1—81; R. B. Ironmonger, 93, 11—81; Henry L. Hall, 101, 19—82.

Henry L. Hall and Harold Robert tied for first honors for the Gaston cup, each making an 101 net and each receiving two and one-half points. T. W. T. Maxwell won the one remaining point. These scores were returned:

Henry L. Hall, 101, 0—101; Harold Robert, 101, 0—101; T. W. T. Maxwell, 107, 2—105; Evarts Tracy, 108, 1—107; G. H. Condict, 194, 47—90.

Not many members of the Park Golf Club have as yet returned from their vacations and Saturday's play for the President's and Park Golf Club cups was marked by a limited number of contestants. Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, Gus. W. Faber and Raymond B. Carroll won the points for the President's cup, while Gus. W. Faber won first honors for the scratch cup and Raymond B. Carroll and G. O. Faber were tieing the remaining honors with a gross score of 97. These scores were returned:

Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 108, 33—81; Gus. W. Faber, 96, 0—96; Raymond B. Carroll, 97, 7—90; C. O. Faber, 97, 3—94; George T. Rogers, 110, 15—95.

At the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday there was the concluding qualifying play in the Governors competition, R. H. Middledtich and J. A. Woodward were successful. Next Saturday there will be the first round at match play in this event. These scores were returned on Saturday:

R. H. Middledtich, 99, 22—76; J. A. Woodward, 97, 10—77; H. E. Knight, 105, 27—78; R. L. VanDyke, 104, 24—80; W. M. Townley, 92, 11—81; H. M. Wilcox, 106, 25—81; John Platt, 102, 18—84; E. H. Clear, 110, 26—84; H. W. Gladwin, 111, 25—86; J. A. Worth, 108, 13—94; W. M. Bastable, 135, 30—95.

On Wednesday there will be a women's competition, 18 holes, the lowest scores on nine holes to count.

LIGHTED LAMP FALLS ON BED

MERLE TODD'S CARELESS ACTION ALL BUT COSTS HIM HIS LIFE.

Reading in bed with a lighted lamp by his side but cost Merle Todd, of Orchard place, his life, Saturday night. Falling asleep his head was unconsciously thrown outward and the lamp was knocked from the table on which it stood and dropped on the bedclothes. Before Todd was thoroughly awake they were in flames and several parts of his body were singed.

His cries brought his brother, John Todd, to the room and the latter seized the blazing covers and threw them out of a window. By that time they were a mass of flames and he was also slightly burned. Had he not responded quickly when his brother first called a conflagration and a fatality would undoubtedly have been the result of the younger Todd's action.

Death of Mrs. Leeson.

Mrs. Barbara Leeson, widow of William Leeson, died at her home on Watchung avenue, yesterday, after an extended illness. She was in her eightieth year and had lived a long time in Plainfield. Funeral services over the body will be held from her late home Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be made at Millington.

Good service was given Sunday by the trolley company. Cars were run regularly during the afternoon under an eight minute schedule. This gave the travelling public care enough to accommodate all.

TRUST CO.'S BIG PURCHASE

Banking Concern Buys a Block of Business Houses in Central Section.

INTEND TO BUILD

On Park Avenue, From Second Street to the Boice Estate—What is Included in the Deal—The Plans.

One of the most important real estate transactions in local business property has just been completed, whereby the Plainfield Trust Company has acquired through purchase the land and buildings situated on Park avenue and extending from the Boice, Runyon & Co. coal and lumber yard to the George W. Force property on West Second street. The deal takes in all of the buildings in this block, many of which are among the oldest in the city.

The purchase was made chiefly for the purpose of giving the Plainfield Trust Company a permanent home. This will be located at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street. It is proposed to erect one of the finest buildings in the city. It will be one story high and will have a marble front. It will be provided with every modern improvement and will be modelled after the more recent structures of the kind in New York city.

Besides giving the company a handsome home, it will be the means of improving that corner which has been occupied for years with old buildings, not in keeping with the progressive spirit of the town. The new structure will extend back as far as the Force property on West Second street, and for a considerable distance south on Park avenue.

It is also proposed to erect on the remainder of the property two or three handsome buildings, the first floor being used for stores and the upper part for offices and suite of rooms, suitable for various kinds of business. These buildings will be modern in every respect and will include the very latest improvements.

Negotiations have been underway for some time for the purchase of the valuable property and the fact that there are several owners has some what delayed the consummation of the deal. Among the owners of this property were Mrs. G. W. F. Randolph, Ira F. Randolph, I. H. Beehm and Clifton & Campbell. Various real estate dealers held option on it and the work of getting them all together required considerable time. The money consideration in the deal is not stated, but it is known to aggregate thousands of dollars.

While, according to law, the present tenants must be given three months notice of removal, it is believed that efforts will be made to start the work of demolition as soon as possible, especially at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, where the Plainfield Trust Company will be anxious to commence the work of building its new home. This company since its organization here has steadily grown until today it is recognized as one of the leading banking institutions in the State. While the directors of this company are chiefly interested in this deal, there are a few outside business men who also have interest in it.

The properties affected by the deal include those occupied by Mafford Giles, butcher; William Rando ph, barber; Mrs. F. A. VanNest, a restaurant; A. W. Johnston and E. H. Meander, plumbers and tinners; Charles Schantz, saloon; Mrs. Carbone, fruit dealer; Thomas Walsh, fruit dealer; M. D. Dobbins, cigar manufacturer, besides those who have living quarters in the upper part of some of these buildings.

In nearly every case these buildings were erected over twenty-five years ago and they have long been considered landmarks in the city. Ownerships have changed occasionally in one or two instances, but most of the property has been held continuously by the original owners. Sometime ago Sigmund Frankt acquired the property occupied by M. D. Dobbins, Thomas Walsh and Mrs. Carbone, but later he sold it out to I. H. Beehm, who in turn sold it to the Plainfied Trust Company together with the other owners.

Funeral at Mt. Bethel.

LIVELY CHASE AFTER SUPPOSED MURDERER

Police Surround a Central Freight Train and An Exciting Time Follows.

CONROY — HE FALLS

PISTOL DISCHARGES ACCIDENTALLY AND UPROAR IS WORSE THAN EVER.

Patrolman Higgins Finally Corners Henry Big, Who Proves to be Only a Thoroughly Frightened German.

Messages received at police headquarters, Sunday afternoon from Newark and Elizabeth announcing the fact that an Italian who had committed a murder in the former place was approaching Plainfield on a New Jersey Central freight train, led to one of the most exciting chases in the local authorities have taken part in but all for naught.

Dropping the telephone receiver as soon as the word came, Chief Kiely summoned Patrolmen Higgins and Overhaugh, Patrol Driver O'Gorman and Special Officer Conroy, he hurried them to the railroad near the station and had them spread out on both sides of the track. The freight train on which the supposed murderer was on board soon came in view and at the chief's request, the operator held it up. As it came to a stop four men jumped off and fled in all directions but there were quickly captured. A glance sufficed to show they were not wanted and the fourth man who was streaking it down the tracks answered the description of the Italian as near as they could make out.

Conroy, who had been hiding behind a pile of ties, suddenly sprang in front of him and called upon him to halt but the fellow only swung over and started on another track. Conroy attempted to follow but his foot caught in a rail and he was thrown several feet with great force. As he landed his revolver was accidentally discharged and with a yell the fleeing man sprang down the embankment and ran with the speed of a race horse into East Fifth street. His move had been anticipated by Patrolman Higgins and as he reached Franklin place, "Murder" headed him off and brought him to bay. Almost exhausted and practically frightened to death, the prisoner was marched to police headquarters and there described himself as Henry Big, of Elizabethport, a German out of work and on the way to Bound Brook to secure a position.

Further word came from Newark later in the afternoon that the murderer had not continued to Plainfield but had boarded a Lehigh Valley train at Aldene and evidently goes through South Plainfield. This proved that Big was not the man wanted and when arraigned in the city court, the next day, still quaking and shivering with fear, Judge Runyon suspended sentence, advising him to remain away from the railroad in the future. Big explained to Chief Kiely that he ran simply because he did not want to get arrested for stealing the freight train ride.

OLD RAILROADERS' OUTING

CENTRAL'S VETERAN EMPLOYES ENJOYED A CLAMBAKE SATURDAY.

About forty railroad men, including John Rowland, J. A. Haynes and Charles H. Sobermerhorn, of this city, representing the Veteran Employes' Association, of the New Jersey Central, were entertained at a clam-bake at Green Gables, Monmouth County, on Saturday, in honor of the second anniversary of the founding of the organization.

Vice President and General Manager W. G. Besler, in a brief address, congratulated the members upon the growth of the organization. In conclusion he promised to arrange matters next year so that every member of the association could attend.

Miss Kane to Wed.

Invitations have been issued for the marriage of Miss Sarah E. Kane, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Krane, formerly of this city, now of North Plainfield street, Philadelphia, to James J. O'Donnell, also of Philadelphia. The ceremony will take place at St. Edward's R. C. church, Wednesday, September 14, at 5 o'clock.

Next Saturday's Game.

Instead of Plainfield playing Acolian on Saturday, the local team will meet Westfield at Recreation Park in another contest in the series of ten games. If Plainfield wins the series will be tie, four and four, and every effort will be made to get another one on Westfield. Saturday's contest makes the third shutout for the Westfield team at the hands of Plainfield.

POLITICAL POT IS BOILING IN SOMERSET

Booms for Congressional, Assembly and Shrievalty Nominations in the County.

IN BOTH PARTIES

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRATS MENTIONED FOR OFFICE.

F. F. Pope Wants to Go to the Legislature As Does Horace Codington—The Shrievalty Fight.

While there has been a great deal of talk about the political outlook in both sides of the house in Somerset county and a free mentioning of candidates for the different offices nothing has as yet been definitely decided upon, although some of those already mentioned have stated that they do not wish a nomination for any of the positions.

The outlook was gone over a few days ago by several prominent politicians, who are on the inside track and knew what men are out in earnest for the nominations.

In the Democratic ranks for Congress in the Fourth district Major Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville, has come prominently forward and it would not surprise his admirers if he secured the prize. It is said many prominent men in Mercer favor his candidacy. "Senator" Joseph S. Frelinghuysen is the only man Somerset is booming for the Republican nomination.

There are candidates galore in both parties for the nomination for sheriff. Prominent in the Democratic files are Deputy Sheriff John L. Anderson, who is regarded as a very strong man. He hails originally from Bernards township and the voters almost to a man there always back John L. Anderson et is Chairman Jacob Sharts, of the County Democratic Executive Committee. He is very popular with the voters and it is believed he would make a great run. From Montgomery way comes former Freeholder Eugene V. Orasey, who has a big following in that section as well as in other parts of the county. David Carney, of Plainfield, is a general favorite for the office.

The Republicans are considering the booms of former Assemblyman Edward E. Cooper, of Warren, who is very much liked by a large following. Thomas Douglas, of Bernards, and Charles P. Sebring, of North Plainfield, are also in the running with many friends, who are backing them with a will.

Both parties have many favorites for the Assembly, but Lawyer Frederick A. Pope, of Somerville, seems to have the Republican nomination tucked away in his vest pocket he thinks. Among the Democrats who are in line for the office is Lawyer Horace Codington, of Somerville, whose home is in Warren. It is believed he would be a strong candidate.

CHOOSING COUNTY COMMITTEE

NEW PLAN TO BE INAUGERATED BY SOMERSET'S DEMOCRATS.

The Somerset County Democratic committee met at Somerville and the important feature of the session was the adoption of a new plan for electing members of the county committee. Heretofore the members of this committee have been elected at the primaries held in the various polling districts.

It was decided by a majority vote that the county committee will in the future be elected by the delegates to the county convention.

This plan was vigorously opposed by Walter Limbarger, of North Plainfield, a staunch supporter of Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, for the Gubernatorial nomination, and M. Mount Corle, of Neshanic, one of the signers of the recent manifesto addressed to the public under the caption of "An Outraged Democracy."

These two members constituted a helpless minority and were voted down.

Henry Pound, of East Second street, has returned from a cruising trip in New York State.

CHURCH JUBILEE LASTS SIXTY DAYS

Father Miller Receives Important Circular Letter From Bishop McFaul, of Trenton.

BEGINS SEPTEMBER 8

FATHER EGAN ALSO RECEIVES SIMILIAR ORDER FROM BISHOP O'CONNOR.

Conditions of Plenary Indulgences —Other Favors—Full Text of the Episcopal Message.

A circular letter has been received by the pastors of the different Catholic churches in the Trenton diocese, including Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, instructing them to notify their people of the promulgation of the encyclical of his holiness Pius X, which announces the jubilee that will be held from September 8, the feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, until December 8, the feast of the Immaculate Conception, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the day on which Pius IX dogmatically defined the mystery of the virgin mother's immaculate conception. The letter which is dated August 1, states among other things:

"We hereby declare St. Mary's cathedral the jubilee church for this our episcopal city; the oldest church in other cities or towns where there is more than one church, and in those places where there is but one church that church is designated."

The conditions required by the sovereign pontiff to gain the plenary indulgence and other favors of the jubilee are:

First—To visit three times the cathedral and in other places the parish church, or, if there are two or more churches in the place, the church designated by the ordinary. The three visits may be made on one day or on different days.

Second—Devout prayers are to be recited at each visit for the liberty and the exaltation of the church and the apostolic see, the extirpation of error and heresies, the conversion of sinners, the concord of Christian rulers and the peace, unity and salvation of the faithful.

Third—To fast one day. The fast means that no food is to be taken before noon. At the one full meal fish, eggs, milk, butter or the like. Only bread, fruit and vegetables are permitted at the collation.

Fourth—A worthy confession and communion. This obligation is distinct from the annual or Easter duty. One confession and communion will not satisfy for both.

Travelers on land or sea who return to their homes after December 8, if by traveling they have been prevented from making the exercises within the time prescribed, may gain the indulgence by visiting the church designated for the place they live, or have as temporary domicile, and complying with the other conditions prescribed within one week after their arrival.

After setting forth these conditions, the letter continues:

"During the above specified three months we, by these presents, grant all diocesan confessors, designated by the encyclical, such faculties as it may be lawful for us to grant them by its tenor, and we remind these confessors that the powers mentioned, the dispensations and commutations enumerated therein are to be used in accordance with the prescriptions of the same, and the rules laid down by approved authors.

"The jubilee may be gained by every rightly disposed Catholic, young or old, sick or well, cloistered or secular, since the conditions may be commuted by confessors.

"Let the reverend rectors read this letter to their people, exhort them from time to time to profit by the favors of the jubilee, explain the conditions required and remind them of complying with the loving invitation of the venerable head of the church. May the jubilee in honor of heaven's queen give to mother church and this diocese many blessings; may the almighty our out upon all these entrusted to our charge the abundance of his tender mercies and may they remember the supreme pontiff and their bishop in their petitions to the most high."

The Right Rev. Bishop John J. O'Connor has given to the printer a circular letter to be issued to the priests of the Roman Catholic diocese of Newark, calling for a fitting celebration of the golden jubilee of the Dogma of the Immaculate Conception, in accordance with the recent encyclical of Pope Pius X, in which he announces a jubilee from September 8, the Feast of the Blessed Virgin, to December 8, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. The jubilee is in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the day on which Pope Pius IX dogmatically declared the mystery of the Immaculate Conception, and Pope Pius X desires a universal observance of the event by priests and people. Bishop O'Connor will himself pontificate at a high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, on September 8. The priests who will assist him have not yet been selected. There will be special music for the occasion. The services will be conducted with all the solemnity and pomp usual to Catholic churches on such important and historical occasions.

SERMONS PUBLISHED.

Pulpit Gleanings by Rev. George B. Shaw.

A collection of sixteen sermons given by Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, has recently been published in book form, entitled "Pulpit Gleanings." The sermons are published exactly as given before the church congregation, and have been selected with a view to universal interest.

The book is duodecimo size, neatly bound in green boards, ornamented in gilt, with gilt topped pages. Seven half-tones are distributed through the book, one, the frontispiece, an excellent likeness of Dr. Shaw, and the others reproductions of various Baptist churches, among which is an excellent cut of the Seventh-day Baptist church of this city.

Says Shattle Is Influential.

Frank J. Shattle, the Union County Democrat, whose name was signed to the address entitled "An Outraged Democracy," is a Plainfield man, and a member of the Union County Democratic Committee. He was active in the campaign of the Hearstites four months ago, and was one of the delegates from this county who bolted the State convention and participated in the proceedings of the rump affair which was held after it was found that the Smith-Gourley, Thompson faction intended to ignore the Hearst men. He is well known and influential among the Democrats in the county.—Elizabeth Journal.

Undertakers' Convention.

The annual convention of the New Jersey Undertakers' Association will be held at Trenton on September 14 and 15. It is the intention of the Legislative Committee of the State body to get authority to submit to the next Legislature a retaliatory measure against the New York undertakers, who succeeded in getting a law passed to prohibit undertakers from other States conducting funerals in New York.

Vote of Freeholders' Abolition.

The voters of Middlesex County will have another opportunity this fall to vote upon the question of whether the Board of Freeholders should be abolished and a business-like commission substituted in their place. The question was voted upon here once before, but it was defeated. That was soon after the Strong act became a law, and the public was not fully awakened to the meaning of the act.

Quietly Married.

Richard Harris, of Madison, and Miss Pearl Riley, of North Plainfield, were quietly married Wednesday evening, by Judge Clark at his home in Scotch Plains. Only the necessary witness were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Harris will reside at Madison.

PHTHISIS MICROBE FOUND.

Advances That Have Lately Been Made in the Investigation of Cancer and Consumption.

Widespread attention has been directed to the distinct advances in the investigation of the greatest scourges of humanity, consumption and cancer, which Koch has chronicled, says a recent London report.

Thus the discoveries of Prof. Schroen, of Naples, as the result of 16 years study of the microbe of phthisis, are of far greater importance than Dr. Koch's investigation. He has been able to show, by means of 16,000 micro-photographic negatives and other evidences, that phthisis and tuberculosis are two entirely distinct diseases. The well known Koch bacillus is comparatively harmless.

The phthisis microbe is in the form of spiral or twisted threads. It is a parasite of enormous volume, rapid extension and unheard of virulence and energy. Schroen demonstrates not only the germ itself, but its development down to the fourth secretive product, which is a prism, while that of tuberculosis is a rhomb.

It was likewise discovered by him that it is possible by the detection of the latter in expectoration to diagnose a tubercular disease before the appearance of Koch's bacillus. The new phthisis microbe is of a nature heretofore unknown in tuberculosis. It can remain latent for years and is relatively curable, while phthisis is fatal.

Further study and report of the cancer investigation shows little encouragement beyond the fact that there is no danger of infection. A false diagnosis, however, is the explanation of most of the reported cures. Thus the Cancer Research institution examined this year 1,736 cases which the medical faculty had pronounced to be cancer and found that there were mistakes, although in each case was every evidence of the disease according to the tests available to ordinary physicians.

The presence of the disease in the remotest corner of the earth and among all vertebrate animals tends to show that diet and the methods of modern life do not account for the disease. While the committee is strongly of the opinion that the apparent increase of the scourge is due to closer and truer diagnosis, the only practical advice offered as the result of the investigation thus far is that all growths which are even possibly cancerous should be removed by an operation without delay. The removal of the parasite furnishes the only hope of a cure, and every day it is suffered to remain increases the probability of its passage into some other portion of the body.

FISHING FOR COMPLIMENTS

As Herein Instanced It Sometimes Results in Something Besides Gratification.

In a North Highland car the other day was a sweet-faced old lady who seemed the very personification of kindness, her black bonnet shading eyes that fairly beamed with cheerfulness. At Penn avenue a young woman boarded the car and took a seat beside the older, relates the Pittsburg Gazette.

"My, I am so glad to see you, auntie," exclaimed the girlish-looking one, as she bestowed a kiss on her relative.

From the conversation that followed I gathered that the younger woman was a bride of about two weeks. She was chock full of news, and began to dilate on the glories of housekeeping. As she paused for a moment the old lady said:

"Now, Mary, let me give you a little advice that may be helpful to you. When your Uncle George and I were married, oh! so many years ago, I made the natural mistake of all women. I began to apologize for my cooking. Not that it was really bad, but just because I wanted him to say that it was good.

"One day I made some bread, and that evening when your uncle came home to supper we called our evening meal supper in those long-ago days—we were hardly seated at the table when I told him that the bread was not so good as I had hoped it to be, and was going to say that the flour was not up to the standard. But through the meal I noticed that Uncle George gave his bread a wide berth, and by the time dessert was served I felt so badly that I just broke down and cried.

"He asked me what was the matter, and I said: 'George, you haven't eaten any of my new bread.'

"'Well, Mary, you told me that it wasn't good, and I didn't want to eat bad bread,' said he.

"After that I never fished for compliments, and as trusting husbands have not changed a bit in the last 50 years, I wish, dear, that you would always remember this little story. It may save many a heartache."

Never Too Late.

It is never too late to learn. Harvard university summer school has one pupil at least who is 90 years old. He is Edward Robie, a doctor of divinity of Greenland, N. H. Dr. Robie graduated from Bowdoin college in 1840. At the present term of the summer school the energetic old gentleman is taking a course in the preparation and theory of sermons at the divinity school. He says his parishioners, to whom he has preached for 52 years, are particular as to the quality of sermons they have to listen to; just as particular as any of the Boston congregations.—Boston Globe.

Couldn't Fool Him.

"What do you know about the destruction of Jerusalem?" asked the teacher at the night school.

"It hasn't been destroyed," responded the young man who had been visiting relatives in St. Louis. "It's only gone into the hands of a receiver."—Chicago Tribune.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Tuesday of each week items of literary news. This will frequently take the form of lists of books soon to be published, lists on special subjects and the topics. Occasionally the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make them selective of most interest to the reader by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The friends of Public Library will furnish to express making application a list of its books on a given subject.

FANWOOD ACTRESS MARRIED

MISS BEARDSLEY SECRETLY WEDDED TO A NEW YORK PHYSICIAN.

Miss Marions Temple Beardsley, daughter of Charles Beardsley, of Fanwood, and Dr. Aspinwall Judd, of West Sixty-ninth street, New York, were quietly married on August 16, but only their closest friends knew it.

Dr. Judd and Miss Beardsley, with two friends, drove to Grace church, Tenth street and Broadway, New York, where, after a consultation with the Rev. C. B. Ackley, they were married. So secretly was the marriage planned that no member of either family was present. In fact, the mother of Dr. Judd's family were surprised to learn that he had taken a wife.

Mrs. Judd was a member of Mrs. Fiske's company for a season and also played with John Drew. It was said last night that Dr. Judd was attracted to Miss Beardsley when she was appearing with Mrs. Fiske. Dr. Judd and his bride are in the mountains on their honeymoon.

A. M. Vanderbeek has resumed his position with A. M. Griffen after a short vacation.

Kenneth Phillips, of Madison avenue, has left for Long Island, where he will spend a few weeks.

PRETTY GIRL BREAKS ARM.

Victim of 1904 Silk Shirt Waist That, According to Late Edict, Buttoned in Back.

Miss Littlestone, daughter of Josephine Littlestone, a tailor of 321 Sixth street, Braddock, Pa., will not bow in the future to the dictates of fashion, as she has in the past. She has suffered more physical pain from fashion's decree than most young women of her age, and her mother has come to the conclusion that Miss Pauline must allow fashion's mandates to go by the board.

Miss Littlestone was dressing for an afternoon party. She was trying to fasten a silk shirt waist, which fashion has said must again button up the back. Miss Littlestone did not have much time to spare and the refractory button at the top of the waist would not go into the button hole.

Miss Littlestone struggled with the button. Suddenly she fell to the floor with a cry of pain. Her mother heard her cry, and at once recognized the symptoms. Miss Littlestone's right arm hung limp by her side, and the bone of the forearm protruded through the flesh in an ugly manner. A physician found that the arm had been dislocated and also that there was a fracture of the "funny bone" which covers the nerve at the elbow.

Mrs. Littlestone decided that her daughter must hereafter make her toilet with the aid of a maid, especially as there are few less fashionably dangerous methods to pursue, as in the case of buttoning waists up the back.

CHOKES ON A PIG'S FOOT.

Brooklyn Man Tackles Free Lunch Too Strenuously and Winds Up in a Hospital.

Pigs' feet came near sending Thomas Corrigan, 48 years old, of No. 17 Main street, Brooklyn, N. Y., to the land from which no man returns, the other afternoon.

Corrigan wandered into the saloon at the corner of Jay and High streets. He saw a dish of pigs' feet on the free lunch counter. Selecting a foot that seemed to be the biggest, Corrigan tackled it, but not in football style. The foot slipped down his throat. Then a struggle ensued between the pig's foot and Corrigan. The latter was getting the worst of it, when assistance arrived. He jammed his fingers down his throat in an effort to dislodge the foot, but his attempts were futile. Some men in the place banged him on the back until his spinal column was almost severed, while a few tried to hold him by the feet in the hope that the laws of gravitation would operate.

The foot was stubborn. It didn't exactly cut off Corrigan's breath, but he was hurried to the Adams street station, and a surgeon from the Brooklyn hospital was summoned. Corrigan was removed to that institution, where physicians fished out the foot.

Paper Hosiery Now on Sale.

Paper gloves and stockings have appeared in the dry goods stores in the leading European cities. It is said the stockings are durable, and will last almost as long as the ordinary articles. The paper of which they are made is, during the process of manufacture, rendered into a substance closely resembling wool, and is then woven and treated as ordinary wool.

The Kind of Stuff We Buy.

TWO PROPOSITIONS

NEW YORK ARCHITECTS ARE INTERESTED IN A COLOSEUM.

Men Looking at Hotel Rosell As a Site—Another Location Also in View by the Promoters.

Several rumors are afloat today concerning the erection of a theatre in this city, but the reports are vague to a great extent. One is that a movement is on foot to establish an open-air show house, on lines similar to the great amphitheatre at the University of California. Another is that New York and Philadelphia capitalists propose to build a model opera house in the heart of the business section.

At a dinner recently held in Washington, D. C., plans were discussed by leading architects of the country for the erection of a colosseum, or open air theatre, near Plainfield, the venture to be in the nature of an experiment. If successful the scheme is to build similar attractions in other localities. Mr. Crowley, of New York, was selected as supervising architect, and Edward Shinn, another New York architect, was designer. William R. Hearst, editor of a syndicate of well-known papers, donated the open-air theatre which has been so successful in California and which is said to be the incentive to the New Yorkers.

An unconfirmed report comes from Philadelphia that a $200,000 theatre is planned by capitalists for this city and that it will be erected in the business section. The cost of the structure, as given, appears to be absurd to the average person. Such an outlay is considered far above a reasonable figure. During the last two weeks, several New Yorkers, one of whom is a Mr. Laughlin, have visited the Hotel Rosell to examine the property. They gave it out that it was their intention to erect a model hotel and a theatre in this city. These men claimed that they already had an option on one site, but wished to get some figure on the hotel property, at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, before taking definite action. Mr. Rosell has a ten years' lease on the premises and when he furnished them with an estimate of the amount he would take to relinquish his lease, the New Yorkers declared that there was "nothing doing."

LITERARY.

Edith Wynne Matthison, whose performances in "Everyman," the fine old morality play, and in standard comedy, have given her an enviable position in two seasons, will probably branch out this season, and it is not impossible that she may be seen in a great role. The last twenty years have seen the development of no other actress who has impressed the thoughtful with a belief in her tragic genius as has this young Englishwoman, whose training in this country has been so warm, that she is disposed to remain here always.—The Players, Everybody's Magazine for September.

New Jersey Gets $703,301.

By a decision of Federal Comptroller Tracewell, the State of New Jersey will be a beneficiary to the extent of $703,301. It was shown that the State expended that amount for interest on bonds issued by the State in aid of the United States Government during the Civil War. It was decided by the auditor having charge of the claim that the amount due was $479,683. Comptroller Tracewell, in revising the claim, added $223,418

Improving a Store.

J. H. Case, agent for Mrs. W. H. Brower, owner of the building on Park avenue, one of the stores of which is occupied by F. Casey & Son, has made a decided improvement to Messrs. Casey's store by painting and papering and wainscoting the ceiling. Miss Casey, who has charge of the store, has draped the interior of the windows and the store now looks very neat.

To Remodel Jail.

A remodelled jail will cost Middlesex county from $23,000 to $34,000, according to the plans that were submitted to the Board of Freeholders yesterday. The Board received plans and bids but did not take any action, referring the matter to the County Buildings Committee for a decision.

PLAINFIELD GIRL'S ACCIDENTAL FATAL SHOT

Sadie Mesler Kills Young Italian in New York, While Examining a Revolver.

SHE IS PROSTRATED

HELD IN $1,000 BAIL TO AWAIT THE CORONER'S ACTION.

Daughter of Charles Mesler, of This City—Pasquale Aquino, of Staten Island, the Victim.

Pasquale Aquino, a young Italian who resided on Staten Island, was instantly killed on East Fourteenth street, New York, Wednesday afternoon, by a pistol bullet accidentally fired by Miss Sadie Mesler, a fifteen-year-old girl, a former resident of this city. The shooting occurred in front of the home of her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Montfort, where she has been living since leaving Plainfield, and for a time the neighborhood was in great excitement, a report spreading that the young man was a victim of the notorious "black hand" which has been terrorizing the Metropolis.

With another sister, Florence, Sadie was wandering about the Montfort home when she discovered a small pistol lying on a bureau in the front room.

"I wonder how it works," she said, and taking it to a window she started to examine it more closely.

"Look out, it will go off," screamed her sister.

The words were hardly spoken when there was a report and Sadie threw the weapon from her. Looking in the direction which the bullet took, the girls saw a figure lying upon the sidewalk opposite and people standing about it. Sadie flew upstairs with the revolver and hid it. Florence went across the street and learned that a boy had been shot dead and she returned with this information to her sister.

Mrs. Montfort was not home at the time and when she returned she found Sadie lying upon a bed as though dead. The girl passed from one fainting spell to another and was very weak when the police, after a long search, learned that she was responsible for the accident and placed her under arrest. She was taken to the Fifth street police station in a cab and was held in $1,000 bail to await the coroner's investigation. The bail was furnished later in the day.

The girl is the daughter of Charles Mesler, a local painter, and formerly lived with her sister, Mrs. Edward Smith, at Allen place. She also resided with another sister, Mrs. Harry Montrose, of East Third street. The family lived at Scotch Plains before coming to Plainfield.

Aquino was sixteen years old and was employed by a tailor at 236 East Eleventh street. He was on his way to an establishment in Fifth avenue when the bullet killed him.

BUILT A LAUNCH.

Plainfielders Ready to Dip Their Craft at New Market.

The gasolene launch which Chester Briggs and William Williams, both of Albert street, have been building, is at last ready for use. The young men had the boat completed sometime ago, but through some faults in the machinery have been unable to launch it. The builders originally intended to place the launch on Raritan Bay, but on account of the fact that it is so late in the season they have decided to take the craft to New Market. It is equipped with a three horse power engine.

Harvey Fisk & Sons Get Bonds.

Colonel Edwards, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, at Washington, D. C., has been informed by M. L. Turner, of Oklahoma City, who was the successful bidder for the recent issue of $3,000,000 of Philippine bonds, that he has transferred these bonds to Harvey Fisk & Sons, of New York, and requests that the department recognize the latter firm as his agents.

To Renew Bank's Charter.

The charter of the National Bank of New Jersey, of New Brunswick, which has a life of twenty years from Nov. 21, 1884, will expire on Nov. 21 of this year. The board of directors has issued circulars to the stockholders asking their consent to the renewal of the charter, a formal procedure. The National Bank of New Jersey was organized in 1854 as the Bank of New Jersey. In 1864 it was chartered as the First National Bank of New Brunswick, and in 1884 was chartered again as the National Bank of New Jersey.

Miss Clara Long, of Park avenue, has returned from Asbury Park, where she has been spending a few weeks.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS REOPEN ON SEPT. 13

New Faces to be Seen Among the Teaching Corps in the City and Borough.

BUILDINGS RENOVATED

MISS NILES TO RETURN AFTER A LONG LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The Schoolhouses Repainted and Repaired—Many Changes in the Faculties This Fall.

Refreshed by their long vacation spent at seashore and mountain, Plainfield's corps of public school teachers is beginning to return in expectancy of resuming work at last week's spring. September 13 is the date set for the opening and when the pupils assemble in their respective buildings, made fresh and bright by paint and varnish during their absence, they will find many familiar faces missing. By appointments to other positions and from other causes the faculties have been greatly changed.

At the High School there will be several new faces. Samuel B. Howe, Jr., formerly a principal at Saugerties, N. Y., will succeed Miss Grace E. Burroughs. Miss Eloise Santoo, who had charge of the work in German, resigned her place to enter a New York High School and her place will be taken by Miss Mary Ethel Perry, a graduate of the New York State Normal School. Miss Ariadne Gilbert, of this city, has been appointed teacher in English. Miss Ellen S. Niles, refreshed after a year's trip abroad, will assume her place with the Junior class and Mr. Best, Miss Ball and Miss Cummings will return also. Principal Travell is at present at Bradley Beach, where he has been all summer, but expects to return to the city early next month.

Four new teachers will be at the Franklin School; Miss Caroline M. Hoover, Miss Alice C. Milner, Miss Mary Bannister and Miss Mary L. Lucie, the latter three graduates of Westfield, N. J., Normal School. Several changes have been made at the Washington, Irving and Lincoln buildings through transfers and resignations but at the Whittier the faculty will remain the same.

The Stillman High and Irving buildings have received the greater part of attention in the repairs and are now in excellent condition. The interiors and exteriors have been painted and the plumbing and heating systems have been gone over thoroughly. At the others many small repairs were attended to and the final touches are being rushed to completion.

The North Plainfield schools will open on the same date and everything is already prepared for a smooth beginning for the term's work. No changes or improvements of great account have been made during the summer. New desks and chairs have been installed in the fifth and sixth grade rooms, the ones replaced being sent to the upper grades and obsolete furniture on the main floor.

More important are the changes in the faculty where a number of familiar faces will be missed, and there will be some new teachers. Miss Glass will be succeeded in the department of German and French by Miss Helen C. Stahlberger, A. B., a graduate of Syracuse University, who comes from Stamford, N. Y. The place of Miss Marian Hall, as instructress in English, will be filled by Miss McKendree Bradley, an A. B. of Elmira College, who last year was an preceptress at the Windsor, N. Y., High School. Margaret S. Hallock, who holds a B. S. degree from Mount Holyoke and who spent last year at Linden Hall School, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., preparing pupils for Vassar College, takes charge of the courses in Latin and history, formerly the province of Miss Hortia Snodgrass. Miss Genevieve Hansen, of South Orange, takes charge of the instruction in cooking, sewing and dress-making, while Prof. F. Edmund Skiff, who succeeded Miss Maxfield last year when the latter resigned to go to fill a similar position in the city schools of Paterson, will be a member of the teachers corps. For the rest, the faculty will be made up as before, consisting of Bertha E. Beatrice King, Mary A. Yoran, Alberta F. Waterbury, Mary C. Weller, Maude L. Bateman, Verona M. Carpenter, Ruth C. Hill, Sarah Hackley, Elizabeth M. Powers, Ruth VerPlanck, Lizzie Boutinreuth, May Potter, Edna French, Emma Tantum, Sally M. Starkweat, Clara L. Aiken, Mabel Hare, Catherine S. Buell, Linda Morris, Elizabeth Kiernan, Pearl A. Williams, Edna M. Richards, Rose P. Lyndon, Myrtle M. Montague, Emma M. Brdenham, Miss L. Hotchkiss and M. E. W. Belcher and Robert M. Sander.

NEWARK'S COPPERS WON BURLESQUE GAME

Plainfield's "Finest" Defeated on Crescent Oval by Score of 17 to 5.

VISITORS ENTERTAINED

JOLLY TIME AT THE HOTEL WALDORF FOLLOWS CONTEST.

"Rue" Daily Made Twelve Errors —City Officials Witness the Slaughter—The Lineups.

A certain New York character who makes the East Side his particular stamping ground was once asked if his father had been hung for stealing sheep and he languidly replied, "Aw, forget it." The same expression might be used inelegantly and yet to the point with respect to all queries about Thursday's so-called baseball game between teams representing the local police and the Newark Fourth precinct on the Plainfield A. C. grounds. Five hundred fans who gave up a quarter each to hold down the hard side of a board are trying to "forget it" but it will long linger in their memories as one of the worst burlesques on the national sport they ever looked over. The score? Well, yes, it was 17 to 5, in favor of the Newarkers but if the game hadn't been called in the seventh inning they might have been at it yet.

Just who is responsible for the allegation that Plainfield's finest could play ball will never be known as the rascal took care to cover his tracks. He evidently got confused and meant to say ping pong or checkers but baseball—never. There is one exception, Peter Hamilton, who held down the initial bag in a manner that made his brother coppers look like the proverbial thirty cents half spent. He played ball while the others looked wise and handled the sphere as if it were composed of the same material the outside of eels are covered with. The men from Essex county openly walked from base to base and the Plainfielders simply got in each other's way when they tried to get them out. Manager Charlie Flynn, but sh—let it be said only that he failed to be regular at rehearsals.

Fred Winn did the slab work for the locals and stood good for one inning. After that the ball was cut in deep center oftener than it was anywhere else, two and three baggers being common in the fourteen hits that the scorer recorded. "Rue" Daily was behind the bat but he had evidently left his glasses home and felt around for the ball as a rule, two minutes after it had passed him He was credited with a large portion of the twelve errors that Plainfield made.

Newark's playing was nothing exceptional but it was steady throughout and there were no great bungles. They were checked up with one error and their pitcher held the locals down to three hits, one of them a "homer" made by Daily in the second when the bases were filled, netting four runs. The other was actually given Plainfield in the seventh. The slaughter was witnessed by Chief Kiely and many other officials and the former has promised that eight-ninths of his colts will be farmed out for a spell before they get back in uniform.

The line-up of the two teams was as follows:

Plainfield—Daily, c; Hamilton, 1b; Helmer, 2b; McGinley, ss; C. Flynn, 3b; Higgins, rf; Winn, p; J. Flynn, cf; Mosier, lf.

Newark—Hertier, rf; Watts, 3b; Schroeder, ss; Bonnett, c; Hock, 2b; Ratkely, p; Carr, 1b; Meier, cf; Jeromius, lf.

Following the game, victor and vanquished adjourned to the Waldorf Hotel where the visitors were entertained in a royal manner. After an address of welcome by Otty Judge Hoagan to which a response was made by Captain Brown, of Newark, an excellent supper was served. Good-natured, dry parsifage floated around its disposal and there were numerous cheers and songs in conclusion. A return game will be played at Newark on September 6.

LITERARY.

The collection of photographic reproductions in the September Burr McIntosh Monthly are even a trifle better than the magnificent and truly artistic master works in previous numbers. This magazine stands alone in a field which none but such a man as Mr. McIntosh would dare to enter and it's success is best demonstrated by the large sales each month at the various news agencies and stationery stores in Plainfield. Everyone of the portraits are worthy of a handsome frame and in a year's time it is easy to obtain a collection that would challenge comparison anywhere.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 4: "New Courage For New Work."—Ps. cxiii, 1-25; Acts xxvii, 35.

When a difficult work has been brought to a successful termination there is often an inclination to rest and not undertake any new task. We feel that we have earned a right to rest and others may do the new work. This is a difficult impulse to resist. But unless overcome it will prove fatal to all advancement in the outer world of work and also put an end to all the inner spirit of progress.

As soon as one thing is finished another is ready to be begun. New courage is needed for this fresh task. Experience has been gained by what we have done and skill for future doing. But, singular as it may seem, it is nevertheless true that the courage often fails at just this critical point. We feel a hesitation, almost a timidity, in the face of the unfamiliar and untried experience. We shrink from the new undertaking. This is a most critical time.

At such times the kindly interest of friendly hearts may avert disaster and inspire us to fresh achievements. Here lies much of the value of Christian fellowship. The intimacies of Christian friendship give us rich opportunity to know the peculiarities of each one of us and we can often detect the danger of discouragement to which another is exposed almost before he has become aware of it himself. If we are sympathetic in the right sort we may by timely and judicious suggestion help to prevent the disaster which lies so close at hand.

No one is free from the danger of failing courage. This is not cowardice, but it may easily end in fatal panic unless it be checked in time. No greater service can be done for us by one another than to put heart into one who is on the verge of being disheartened.

The brethren from Rome who met Paul at the Three Taverns and the market of Appius did a favor to the whole Christian world in cheering the apostle to the gentiles to meet the new trials which awaited him in the city of the Caesars. The dangers and trials through which he had passed were enough to break any but the stoutest spirit. Severe as they had been they were less severe than those he must still meet. For long years he had looked ahead to the time when he could make the journey to Rome, expecting to secure a patient and favorable hearing for the gospel in that center which was tolerant of all varieties of opinion and forms of worship.

He was at last almost at the long desired goal, but under a different condition from what he had hoped to come! Instead of appearing as an honored teacher with a message of importance he comes as a prisoner chained to the arm of a Roman soldier and accused by his countrymen of a crime punishable with death.

If ever a man needed friends he did at that time. They appeared and he took fresh courage.

But the supreme and unfailing source of encouragement is to found not in chance meetings with friends of like ideas and tastes. There is a fountain of sure refreshment to weary and burdened souls accessible to all who feel the need of it. It is to the Christ-seeker's heart to which the Bible invariably refers. The fact that we may hold communion with God here and now is the most momentous fact in human life. The actual union of a soul with God is the most profound secret yet discovered. It is the explanation of all hope and the foundation of invincible courage.

Have you found Him? Has He found you?

The Most Ignoble Way.

The worst kind of lie is the insinuated one. It does the most damage. After it has assumed positive form it is difficult to trace its authorship. Most people who practice that form of lying eschew the it in an expression of pity for the victim of it. They cloak their manner in a garb of conscientiousness that has the effect of a pious act upon the public eye, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us," as though God did not know, nor the Almighty consider. Their self deception is such that they actually insist, "If I am anything, I am frank, bold and open." Beware of the man who has to profess that he is bold to prove his courage, or that he is ingenuous to establish his honesty.

A Prayer.

O Lord, let me not henceforth desire health or life, except to spend them for Thee, with Thee and in Thee. Thou alone knowest what is good for me; do, therefore, what seemeth to Thee best. Give to me or take from me; conform my will to Thine, and grant that, with humble and perfect submission and in holy confidence, I may receive the orders of Thine eternal providence and may equally adore all that comes to me from Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Blaise Pascal.

Worry a Disease.

Worry is the most popular form of suicide. Worry impairs appetite, disturbs sleep, makes respiration irregular, spoils digestion, irritates circulation, warps character, weakens mind, stimulates disease and saps bodily health. It is the real cause of death in thousands of instances where some other disease is named in the death certificate. Worry is a mental poison; work is mental food.—Religious Leader.

Service and Pay.

Little children loved Jesus for the luxury of loving Him. Their love was its own reward. They loved the lovable and were happy. But are not older people prone to think that devotion to Jesus ought to be returned in the shape of temporal prosperity? Do we not half expect material payment for spiritual service?—Rev. J. H. Jowett.

THEIR LIVES ARE NARROW.

Women of Spain Do But Little to Identify Themselves as Bread Winners.

Although I see much to admire in the women of my country, I am frequently saddened by their lack of education, says Lieut. Col. Tarayre, in Lady's Pictorial. I ask myself, what could we not expect of Spain if the mothers of our men were versed in the great history of humanity, and capable, like the women of other lands, of feeling an interest in the affairs of state and of conversing with men on the sacrifices necessary for the welfare of the nation!

I regret that my countrywomen are so little inclined to travel, for, being very appreciative and imitative, they would learn much that would beautify their lives. But with the inertia peculiar to our land they always continue in the same groove, visit year after year the same watering places of the peninsula, where they always meet the same people. My countrywomen would be astonished if they saw the ladies' clubs in London and the fields of activity open to women in England. What might they not learn from the maxims engraved on the walls of the ladies' club in London: "In small things liberty, in great things unity, in all things charity!"

The simple, somewhat fantastic way in which some Spanish women seek in their limited way to identify themselves with the broad current of work is seen in a photograph of the wife of Senor A. Palacio Valdes, the eminent novelist, whose translated works, "The Grandee," "The Fourth Estate," etc., are well known in England and America. Here we see the young Castilian lady, for she is not 22 years old, with her doll Mara, dressed for the carnival in the costume of Demetria, the heroine of her husband's last book called "The Lost Hamlet."

THE BEARD MAY COME BACK

Clean Shaven Faces Have About Had Their Run and Men May Change.

Barbers are seriously considering the question whether the present custom of men being clean shaven has not almost had its run, says a metropolitan paper. In the last five years one after another of their customers with desperate resolve ordered his mustache or his beard removed, looked at himself a little doubtfully in the glass after the operation, and then went about his business, sometimes having to introduce himself to old friends.

The result has been that the shaving area of humanity has largely increased, naturally cutting into the profits, as it takes a little longer to shave each customer. But a thing that is causing real alarm among the thoughtful tonsorial artists is the evidence that not a few of their customers have recently raised beards.

It would be well if they simply let their mustaches grow again, but the real thing in the way of hairy faces is to be dreaded by the trade. Of course these must be trimmed, but that is not like the daily shave with the daily rip. The worst of it, according to the barbers, is that the doctors, who were largely responsible for the clean-shaved face as a matter of hygiene, have now taken the other view and are advising patients with weak throats to let their beards grow.

The barbers are fully aware that men are as subject to fashions as women, and that if the beard comes in vogue they will be seriously affected.

CLERGYMEN GAIN CONTROL.

Scotch Ministers Given Power Over Free Church by the House of Lords.

Ecclesiastical history affords no parallel to the state of affairs produced by the decision of the house of lords in connection with the Scottish Presbyterian church. That judgment places $30,000,000 worth of property in the undisputed control of 34 obscure clergymen, and gives them authority to cleanse every other Free church minister in Scotland, says a recent Edinburgh report.

After many years of negotiation a great fusion was effected in 1900 between the Free church of Scotland and the United Presbyterian church under the name of the United Free Church of Scotland.

Eleven hundred clergymen were concerned. Twenty-four Free church ministers in remote parts of the highlands and the islands of Scotland refused to assent to the fusion scheme. They contended that the union was not in accord with the tenets of the ancient Free church, and, further, that the fusionist church has no legal control over the trust funds of the Free church.

The suit they brought was fought through every Scottish court, and the decision just rendered by the house of lords is final, the house being the ultimate court of appeal.

The judges held that nothing could exempt the Free church from the rule that funds given for one purpose could not be diverted to another. Therefore, the Free church property remained in trust with the 24 ministers who dissented from the fusion.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 4.

Topic—New Courage for new work.—Ps. cxiii, 1-25; Acts xxvii, 35.

The secret of perpetual motion has never been discovered. With all man's progress he has never yet discovered a power that can be perpetually sustained. Sooner or later it must be renewed if work is to be continued. The locomotive needs power steam each day for its work. The electric dynamo must constantly generate new electricity if the work for which it furnishes the power is to be continued. For each new day our physical bodies must have their strength renewed in order to perform the work of life. So also it is in the religious world new courage and strength are needed for each new work. The courage of last week will not sustain us for this week's work. As we need bread day by day, so daily we need the courage that strengthens us for the work of life.

1. The necessity of new courage for new work is divinely recognized. When God calls men to important advancing places He encourages them to be strong and promises to be with them to encourage and strengthen them. To Joshua, when he was called upon to take up the work of Moses, He said, "Be strong and of good courage." And again, "only be thou strong and very courageous that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses, my servant, commanded thee." And even again he said, "Be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." God thus recognizes our need for new courage and enjoins us to be courageous and strong in Him.

2. New courage for new work is divinely promised, and this promise is fulfilled. "As thy strengthen thee" is the promise of God to us. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." Daily strength for daily need is God's promise. He does not promise strength today for tomorrow, or this year for next year. This is unnecessary. We live in moments, not in years, and the promise of renewed strength for each new moment is all that is necessary. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." Let us therefore wait upon Him that we may be able to say with the psalmist, "Blessed be the Lord, my strength."

But men may be of great encouragement to each other. Visited by brethren belle on the way to Rome, Paul "thanked God and took courage." Human sympathy and co-operation in the work of the Lord are no small factors in our success. This being so, we should more often take advantage of the opportunity of sympathizing with one another and to speak words of good cheer as we journey and labor together along the pathway of life.

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. xxxi, 1-8; Josh. i, 1-7; x, 25; II Sam. x, 12; II Chron. xix, 11; Ex. x, 1-4; Ps. xxvii, 14; xxxi, 24; Isa. xl, 27-31; Eph. vi, 10-20.

Not a "Picnic."

If any one is inclined to regard Dr. Clark's Christian Endeavor journeys as anything but arduous and laborious enterprises which they really are we commend him to some figures which we venture to extract from one of Dr. Clark's private letters just received.

On the present journey he will have traveled during the 195 days of his absence 23,000 miles by sea and 10,700 miles by land, a total of 33,700 miles.

He has made 175 addresses and conducted 50 conferences.

His audiences have ranged from 100 in the smaller conferences to 10,000, and they have aggregated 250,000 souls.

He has written 58 articles, containing a total of 85,000 words. His letters have been numberless.

And this is part of the journey, as any convention worker understands, is the need of keeping at high tension all the time, ready to give out in any chance conversation the inspiration that may plant the seed of Christian Endeavor in new and large region.

If any one thinks all this to be easy and pure fun let him try it.—Christian Endeavor World.

A Unique Button Badge.

The Broome county (N. Y.) union for one of its annual conventions conceived the idea of this unique button badge. The kindly face of the founder of Christian Endeavor looking out from it gave it a large value as a souvenir, and every delegate was careful to register in order to secure the button, which could not be had in any other way. This mention may suggest to other unions to "go and do likewise."

Three Briefs.

There are over 300,000 Endeavorers in Great Britain and Ireland.

In the early days of the Endeavor society in Ceylon the Endeavorers marked certain cocoanut trees whose fruit should be devoted entirely to the Lord.

Four hundred and sixty new societies is the record of the United Kingdom since January, 1903, or more than one new society formed every day; 125 of these societies were Juniors. Of the denominations represented, Primitive Methodists lead the way with more than 130 new societies.

Australian Endeavor.

The Australasian union was formed in 1895 and is a very active organization, holding conventions that are acknowledged to be the greatest religious gatherings ever held in the southern hemisphere.—Irish Endeavorer.

THREATENED WOMAN SEEKS AID OF POLICE

Mrs. Ida M. Strauss Causes the Arrest of Maynard Lanyon, An Elizabethan.

COMMITTED TO JAIL

SHE SAYS HE VOWED TO KILL HER AND HIMSELF.

Formerly Resided in Plainfield and Attained Notoriety Through Charge of Bigamy Preferred Against Her Husband.

Mrs. Ida M. Strauss, a former well known resident of this city who gained wide publicity through the matrimonial tangles of her husband, Baldwin F. Strauss, has attracted attention to herself in Elizabeth by causing the arrest of Maynard Lanyon, who resides at 26 West Grand street, that city.

The Elizabeth police took him in custody Monday, Aug. 22, Mrs. Strauss declaring that he had threatened to shoot her and kill himself unless she left her home on Chestnut street and lived with him. He was arraigned before Judge Mahon the next morning and held in bonds to keep the peace. He could not furnish the amount and was committed to the county jail.

Lanyon is very well known in Elizabeth and according to the police of that place he and Mrs. Strauss have been in each other's company a great deal of the time since she moved there from Plainfield last fall. For some reason they had a disagreement and becoming incensed Lanyon went to Mrs. Strauss' home and so terrified her by his declarations of contemplated murder and suicide that she was compelled to make the charge against him.

The troubles of the Strauss's are familiar to Plainfielders through the arrest of the husband for bigamy. Through a demand made upon him for unpaid alimony, it was learned that he had another wife living in Brooklyn beside the one in this city. He was arrested and locked up in Raymond street jail but eventually was released. The bigamy charge was never proven against him in court and though the local Mrs. Strauss forgave him on his release, she refused to live with him again. She removed with her one son daughter to Elizabeth and the husband has since been residing in Brooklyn.

PLAINFIELD MACHINE IN HAWAII

HANDSOME MAGAZINE IN DISTANT TERRITORY PRINTED ON A SCOTT PRESS.

The "Paradise of the Pacific," a twenty-eight page monthly magazine issued at Honolulu, Hawaiian territory, is now being printed on a modern Walter Scott two-revolution press. In it's August issue it gives a cut of the handsome machine and a detail account of its paris. The working speed of the press is up to 2,400 impressions an hour and it embraces the latest improvements applied to its style of make. The machine is similar to the one in use in The Daily Press office.

This is only one of the presses sent by the Scott Company to the Pacific territory and there are dozens of newspaper offices in that section which have big and large machines, turned out at the local factory. Western manufacturers nearer the shipping points have made strong bids for the orders but the Plainfield concern has so far distanced all competitors. The "Paradise of the Pacific" is one of the most important publications in Hawaii and the fact that its management selected the Scott machine speaks well for its construction.

DEMOCRATS ISSUE CALL FOR CONVENTION

The State Chairman Formally Announces That the Party Will Meet September 15.

PRIMARIES, SEPT. 13

MEETING IN THE STATE STREET THEATRE, TRENTON, AT NOON.

Basis of Representation — Fractional Votes—State Headquarters in Newark Are Open.

The call for delegates to the Democratic State convention to be held in Trenton Sept. 15, was issued today by the State Executive Committee.

State headquarters have already been opened in the Jefferson Club on West Park street, Newark, and Chairman Gourley and Secretary William K. Devereux, of Asbury Park, will be in attendance with a corps of clerks and helpers. The headquarters will remain open until the close of the campaign.

The convention call follows:

The Democratic State Convention will be held on Thursday, Sept. 15, 1904, at the State Street Theatre, in the city of Trenton at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor and candidates for electors for President and Vice President of the United States.

Primaries for the selection of delegates to the convention will be held in pursuance of law on the thirteenth day of September, 1904. The basis of representation as fixed by law is one delegate for every 200 votes cast for the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1901, and one delegates for each fraction there of over 100, provided that each ward or township or borough without wards shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

Each delegate from a ward, township or borough without wards which cast for the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1901, less than the number of votes aforesaid required for one delegate, shall have in the convention a full vote.

William B. Gourley,
Chairman Democratic State Committee.
William K. Devereux, Secretary.
Dated Aug. 20, 1904.

DEMOCRATS ENJOYED THE DAY

UNION COUNTY POLITICIANS SPENT THE TIME ON LONG ISLAND.

The seventh annual outing of the Elizabeth City Democratic Committee, held Thursday at Point View Grove, Long Island, was one of the most successful in the history of the organization. It was attended by 800 of the faithful, among whom were many from this city. Everybody had a thoroughly good time and while politics were discussed at every opportunity somewhere in the crowd, there was "lots doing" in the way of athletic games, music and hand-shaking. The return to Elizabeth was made at 10 o'clock last night without a single accident having occurred to mar the day.

Among some of the Plainfielders who were conspicuous in the crowd were James E. Martine, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., Franz J. Shattle, J. V. F. Ditts and Justice H. K. Hand. DeWitt Clinton Flanagan, of Morristown, who is said to be grooming himself for the congressional nomination in the Fifth district, was one of the first to arrive at the dock and he put in a busy day giving and getting the "jolly" not.

T. J. WEARREN & CO. FAIL

FIRM ASKS U. S. COURT TO BE DECLARED A BANKRUPT.

Thomas J. Wearren and Patrick M. Wearren, of Rock avenue, trading as Thomas J. Wearren & Co., yesterday filed a petition in the United States District Court at Trenton, asking that the firm be adjudicated as bankrupt. Inspection of the schedule showed the company's assets to be but $1,830, while the liabilities amount to $9,491.

The firm has been in business in this city for over a year, coming here from New Market, where they are well known. The cause of the failure is said to be the recent increased price in lumber and building materials and the loss of money through several contracts.

Irving S. Darnell, of Delaware Water Gap, is the guest of Ralph S. Bingamin, at his home on East Ninth street. Darnell, who graduated from Hackettstown with the class of 1904, was a schoolmate of Bingamin's, who is a student at the same institution.

WHAT PLAINFIELD WAS LIKE FIFTY YEARS AGO

Lewis E. Barkalow Discovers a Map of the Town Published in 1852.

THEN IN ESSEX COUNTY

ONLY FOUR OF ONE HUNDRED SUBSCRIBERS ARE LIVING.

Interesting Facts About the Streets and Buildings—Some of Those Indicated and Pictured on the Map.

After it had lain unnoticed in a dark corner of an attic for nearly three decades, Lewis E. Barkalow, of Lincoln place, recently brought to light a Plainfield relic of fifty years ago. It is a map of the town as it then existed and after looking it over and comparing it with those of today, the owner is inclined to believe that he has been living in a municipality that has certainly grown.

The map, which is still in an excellent state of preservation despite rough usage, contains the announcement that it was "lithographed and printed by Bevan & Bouli, Commercial building, Jersey City," and also that it was "published in 1852 by John Bevan, city surveyor." In one corner is a list of 100 subscribers to it and a glance over the names shows that but four of them are living today: John B. Brown, James M. Dunn, S. Vermeule and Mr. Barkalow, all of whom were local business men at the time. Still another printed notice in one corner says it is "a map of Plainfield, Essex county, New Jersey," and two crude pictures represent the general grocery building of Webster & Marsh, now the Courier-News building, and the residence of Stephen Vail at "Fifth and Center streets," but which today is Fifth street and Central avenue, where the Seventh Day Baptist church stands.

According to the map the town's western boundary line was "William street," at Plainfield avenue, and on the east it was evidently Richmond street, although the thoroughfare indicated contains no name. The present day Tier's lake is designated as "Green pond" and the city's only park on West Eighth street is labelled "Stillman Park." Another part which has no name is marked off as what is now East Front and Richmond streets, running back to Second. East and West Front is shown when these plain, unpretentious "Main street" and from the number of buildings marked on both sides, it was then what it is now, the principal business thoroughfare. Other streets which are indicated are "Cherry street," now Park avenue; "Mechanic street," now Madison avenue; New and Liberty streets; Second to Ninth streets, the latter being the southern boundary; "Peace street," now Watchung avenue; "Water street," now Elm place; "Union street," now Arlington avenue; "Dunham street," now College place, and "South street," now Prospect avenue. The Third and Second places of today were "West" and "Washington" streets.

At the extreme western end, "Main" street is marked as being "The road to Somerville and Easton" and on the East as "The Road to Elizabethtown." All that is shown of North Plainfield is a section of Somerset street, Pearl and Chatham streets. Beyond these the borough seems to have consisted of nothing more than apple orchards and woods. The "Central Railroad of New Jersey" entered the town by way of Third street and followed it up to a point near Arlington avenue, where it curved to the south W. End of the station it curves to the right and then to the left toward Scotch Plains.

Among some of the business houses and residences indicated are those of the following: Robert Anderson, J. V. Arrowsmith, Joseph Anuis, T. S. Alberti, George N. Angleman, John B. Brown, Daniel Bullman, Cornelius Bolos, Rev. Louis Bond, William Burt, John Y. Burt, John Briant, L. E. Barkalow, Bolos & Thickstun, H. A. Dorr, J. H. Coward, Milton F. Cushing, Wm. HE NEARLY LOST HIS LIFE

M'NAUGHTON'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE WHILE ATTEMPTING A RESCUE.

While on a trip to Woodmont, near New Haven, Conn., last week, Walter M. McNaughton, the well known athlete, of this city, nearly lost his life in endeavoring to rescue two men whose boat was adrift in a choppy sea stirred up in New Haven harbor by a heavy gale. The men to whose assistance he went were beat on the recovery of a small boat which was drifting about two hundred yards from shore. They were not to in and climbed aboard when they discovered there were no oars in it and as they were too tired to swim back immediately the tide was carrying them out when McNaughton appeared in a yarf-boat, having run a quarter of a mile along shore to procure it on seeing their predicament.

When still too far to throw the men a line however, McNaughton's boat capsized and he had a hard swim to make the shore. By the best possible good fortune the two men drifted near the rain of an old breakwater, whence a rope was thrown and they were brought in safely. Residents at Woodmont state that he put up a most creditable fight against the currents which make the waters at that point the most treacherous in bad weather.

TYGARD ENGINE A SUCCESS

INVENTOR TO HAVE THEM MADE AT THE RATE OF TWENTY-FIVE A WEEK.

The Tygard double-acting gasoline engine, exhibited at the automobile show in Madison Square Garden, last winter, had successfully stood a three months' test at the home of the inventor on South avenue, this city, and others will shortly be ready for immediate delivery, arrangements having been made with a large manufacturer to build them at the rate of twenty-five a week.

Mr. Tygard is having a shop constructed on his South avenue property, which will have a concrete floor will be laid and the proper machinery and tools installed to enable the engines to be quickly and reasonably placed in motor vehicles, whether new or simply changed by taking out the engine originally furnished with them.

The engine has shown an increase of practically four-fold power for a given weight in comparison with ordinary automobile motors and in addition is practically noiseless as well as being air-cooled without the use of even a fan. The many good points of the motor have so impressed numerous New York autoists, that I. W. Lyon, the tooth-powder manufacturer, one of the founders of the Automobile Club of America, together with a dozen or more other prominent members, have already placed orders for engines to supercede the ones now in their cars.

Scotch Plains Won.

A baseball game between the Plainfield Colored Giants played the team at Scotch Plains on Saturday, and was easily defeated by a score of 27 to 3. Frantz and MacCauley formed the battery for the home nine.

OLDEST PAINTER DIED FRIDAY NIGHT

William Fuller Adams Passed Away After Long Illness at Age of 78 Years.

STORY OF HIS CAREER

HE RESIDED HERE FOR THE LAST THIRTY YEARS.

Survived by a Wife and Two Children — Funeral Services on Monday Afternoon.

William Fuller Adams, aged seventy-eight years, of 145 East Sixth street, died Friday at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been during the past three weeks under treatment for a form of Bright's disease which has given him more or less trouble during the past two years.

Mr. Adams was probably the oldest painter in the city, being one of the first to locate here. He was born in Newton, Mass., and after a short residence in South Jersey he moved to this city about thirty years ago and continued his residence here until his death. He had two paint shops during his active business career, one on Park avenue and the other on East Front street. Among those who were employed by him in the early days and afterward became successful are J. F. Buckle and I. B. Woolston, who are now in partnership on North avenue. Mr. Adams was successful while conducting his stores and when advanced in years he gave up business on a large scale and worked for him self. He was a resident of Deer street for many years. About two years ago he moved to East Sixth street, this city. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M.

He is survived by a wife, a daughter, Miss Emma L. Adams, who is librarian at the Plainfield Public Library; a son, Oscar Fay Adams, of Boston; also a brother, Bentley F. Adams, of South Orange, and two sisters, who live at Brighton, Mass.

Permit to Erect House.

Plans have been filed and a building permit granted for a two story frame house to be erected by Philip Brockmeyer, of Monroe place, Monroe avenue, near Fourth street. The building will measure 30x32x20. H. H. Bussey, of Westfield, is the architect and carpenter, and Walter Wikoff, of Richmond street, has secured the contract for mason work. Ground will be broken immediately.

Mr. Webb Was Badly Hurt.

The injuries which E. H. Webb, of Westervelt avenue, sustained as a result of the carelessness of S. W. Frucht in running his auto into him, are more serious than was at first supposed. Dr. Buchanan has been attending Mr. Webb and says that he is in a bad nervous condition. Mr. Webb declares that as soon as present whether he will bring action against Frucht.

New Class for Local Lines.

The Public Service Corporation has announced that ten new cars will be placed on the Plainfield lines as soon as the present open ones are withdrawn at the approach of cool weather. They will be twenty-two feet in length, which is slightly larger than those now in use, and will be equipped with up-to-date heating apparatus.

Borough Firemen Recognized.

The North Plainfield Paid Firemen's Relief Association has been recognized by the state organization and recently the officers were instructed to have representatives at the convention to be held in Atlantic City, September 14. The delegates to go are Frank Schoch, Jerry Foss and Edward Terry.

SULTAN'S FEAR ENDS

Turkish Sovereign's Brother Dead at Golden Horn.

SAID TO BE INSANE; WAS DETHRONED

Real History of Cruel Imprisonment Will Probably Never Be Known. Claimed by the Young Turks Faction That He Was Sane.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 31.—Ex-Sultan Murad V, is dead here of diabetes, from which he had long suffered.

The remains of the former sultan were interred in the Yenidjami mausoleum at Stamboul, where his mother is buried.

It was reported last May from Vienna that Murad V., the thirty-third sovereign of the house of Osman, was dying. At the same time it was reported from the same source that his adherents all over Turkey, known as the Young Turks, were secretly arming and only awaited the signal to rise in insurrection.

Murad V. was born in 1840 and ascended the throne after the murder of the Sultan Abdul Aziz, May, 1876. In 1907 for that year Murad was placed under the supervision of his brother, the present sultan, Abdul Hamid II., and on Aug. 31 he was dethroned.

Outwardly this act was performed legally by the council of ministers on the ground that he was insane. The real facts in the case, however, will probably never be known, but it has been claimed that Murad was a good deal more sane than his brother, and one of the greatest terrors of Abdul Hamid's existence was the fear that this Turkish "man with the iron mask," as he has been termed, might escape from his place of confinement in the Cheragan palace. About six years ago he was removed to the Malta Kiosk in the grounds of the Yildiz palace, which is surrounded by lofty walls.

In spite of the secrecy of Murad's removal, he was seen by several foreigners as he passed, who declared that though he had aged and was haggard in appearance he had not lost his majestic bearing and preserved the appearance of a man in the full possession of his mental faculties.

The confinement of Murad has been the cause of many rumors. Only his jailers were allowed to see him, and every precaution was taken to prevent any intelligence of what was going on in the outside world from reaching him. Recently, however, he was put under the charge of General Riza Pasha, son of the old field marshal of that name, who had known Murad from childhood and was deeply attached to him.

This removed his reason Abdul Hamid's tenure of the throne would have ended. The Young Turk party has persistently claimed that Murad was sane and that he was kept in confinement to prevent the latter's rightful possession of the throne. No European specialists had seen Murad since 1876.

Trade In Canal Zone.

PANAMA, Aug. 31.—Minister of Foreign Relations Arias and Mr. Barrett, the American minister, have held a conference in connection with the appointment of negotiators looking to the establishment of trade relations between Panama and the canal zone. Minister Arias will wait until he hears from General Gorgas, the Panama minister at Washington, before formally entering upon negotiations, but it is believed that a tentative agreement will be made before the departure of the canal commission.

Hamburg Liner Drifting.

BREMEN, Aug. 31.—The North German Lloyd steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm, which has arrived here, reports sighting on Aug. 27 the Hamburg-American line steamer Phoenicia, which left New York Aug. 20, in latitude 46, longitude 34, apparently drifting. It is probable that the Phoenicia's engines were out of order when the Kronprinz Wilhelm came within hailing distance. The Phoenicia is a twin screw steamer of 7,412 tons burden.

Alaska-Seattle Cable Opened.

SKAGWAY, Alaska, Aug. 31.—The Alaska-Seattle cable has been opened for business after an exchange of congratulations. The people of Seattle and Alaska were allowed the free use of the cable to express their congratulations on the opening of communications. The new cable makes a substantial reduction in the cost of transmitting commercial matter, but does not affect the press rates.

On the Way Home From Circus.

JELLICO, Tenn., Aug. 31.—While on their way home from attending a circus Floyd Hilton of Halsey, Ky., shot and killed Will and Ed Hilton of Mud Creek, Ky., and dangerously wounded their father. Hilton claims that during an altercation the fray boys threw him from their wagon, and the shooting followed.

Robbed the Postoffice.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 31.—A special from Enfield, N. C., says: "The postoffice here was robbed about 1 o'clock this morning of about $1,000 in stamps and money, of which $200 belonged to the postmaster. The robbers escaped. Bloodhounds are now on the scent."

Less County Goes Dry.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Aug. 31.—The wet or dry election was held in this (Leon) county. Returns received up to this hour show a majority against the sale of intoxicants of 62. This is believed to insure the closing of barrooms.

DOLPHIN STAKES.

Bedouin Won the Feature at Sheepshead Bay.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Bedouin, at 1 to 7 in the betting, and with 126 pounds up, won the Dolphin stakes, for three-year-olds, one mile and a furlong, at Sheepshead bay. The Octagon filly was giving away big weight to her field and was not extended during any part of the journey, winning easily by four lengths. Ormonde's Right was second, with Auramaster third. The mile and a furlong was run in 1:53.

St. Bellane, carrying 126 pounds and conceding weight to his field, captured the Partridge stakes, for six furlongs on the turf, by two lengths from the favorite, Bedouin. Glencebo was third. Bedouin was an added starter and was heavily played, being backed from 5 to 2 to 8 to 5.

First Mason easily defeated the odds-on favorite Delhi in the fifth race. Letola, favorite, won the first race and also broke the track record for the full Futurity course by covering the seven furlongs in 1:22 4-5.

Hicks Won Marathon Race.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—The Olympic Marathon race at the world's fair stadium, the third Cost race contest of the kind, and the first ever held on American soil, participated in by thirty-one men classed among the fleetest runners of the world, was won by Thomas J. Hicks of Cambridge, Mass., the first American to win this event celebrated in the revival of Olympic games. Albert J. Corey of Chicago, a native born Frenchman, crossed the goal line second, and A. L. Newton of New York city crossed third. The distance of the race was forty kilometers, equal to 24 miles and 1,500 yards. This distance was run by Hicks in the official announced time of 3 hours, 28 minutes and 53 seconds.

Surprise at Highland Park.

DETROIT, Aug. 31.—Surprises were plentiful and complete at Highland park, the greatest coming out of the running of the free for all handicap of a mile and seventy yards. In a field of five Autolight was held an even money favorite, but he finished a bad last, while Aden, an outsider in the betting, won the decision in a driving finish with Pretension and Spencerian, and in doing so broke the track record. Kilts, heavily played at a long price, was an easy winner in the fourth. Jade, the winner of the second race, was the only favorite to score brackets.

Six Lee Won All the Way.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Fossil was heavily backed in the second race at Harlem, the odds being pounded down from 15 to 1 to 3½ to 1, and the bets were still going in when the horses were at the post. Fossil looked to have the race, but in the last furlong Bragg came very fast and took first place by a narrow margin. The victory of Six Lee in the first race was something of a surprise, but she had the speed and the lot of maidens that faced the barrier and won all the way.

Seventy Drowned In Poland.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—A dispatch to a news agency from Berlin says a telegram has been received there from Lodz, Poland, announcing that a ferry-boat capsized on the river Kamlen, resulting in seventy persons being drowned. Thirty of the passengers were saved. It is added that the boat was licensed to carry only thirty passengers.

The March of Electricity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 31.—It has been announced that four expresses on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad between New York and Boston will be hauled by electricity in place of was within short time. The change will be installed.

PHYSICIAL DIRECTOR TAKES CHARGE TODAY

Fred A. Henckel to Assume His Duties as Mr. Heywood's Successor at the Y. M. C. A.

SKETCH OF THE MAN

SOME OF HIS PLANS ARE ALREADY ANNOUNCED.

Gymnasium Opens October 2—Exhibition to be Held as Usual by the Classes.

Fred A. Henckel, who has been chosen physical director of the local Y. M. C. A. to succeed C. E. A. Heywood, has arrived in town and will assume his duties today. Mr. Henckel was selected in the latter part of June by the committee composed of William D. Murray, John Valiant and Stephen Caboone. He is a present a resident of Albany, N. Y., where he has lived for the last five years. Mr. Henckel is a graduate of the Eastern Training School of the Y. M. C. A. at Springfield, Mass., where he became acquainted with Kenneth Robbie, the boys' secretary at the association. He has served as physical director for two years and has assisted his brother, who is in charge of the Y. M. C. A. at Montclair.

Mr. Henckel is already well known to a few of the members of the local association, with whom he was associated at Camp Caboone this summer. He was one of the leaders' corps at Lake Hopatcong, and made many friends among the boys as well as the assistant leaders.

As yet the plans for the gymnasium work for next year have not been definitely decided upon, as the directors are waiting for the new physical instructor to outline his own methods. It is known, however, that there will be several new and important features introduced into the work, which have heretofore proved impracticable. In all probability a women's class will be formed, while regular class days for the local high schools will be provided. Mr. Henckel has in mind the formation of a league between the local schools similar to the one which existed in the northern section of the State several years ago.

The date set for the opening of the gymnasium is October 2, though it may yet be changed. According to the present plans the usual exhibition will be held as the gymnasium, which will mark the beginning of the fall classes.

LITTLE CRIPPLES' OUTING.

Netherwood Home Children Entertained by Miss Wagstaff.

Fifteen of the little cripples included in Miss Sara Cuzzy's colony at the Netherwood home, enjoyed a delightful time Thursday afternoon as the guests of Miss Lou K. Wagstaff on the lawn about her home on Crescent avenue. They had ice cream and cake in abundance and in various ways Miss Wagstaff entertained them so that not a moment lagged. The little party was the result of a visit which she paid the camp when she was touched by the keen enjoyment the children derived from a simple stroll on the lawns and in the grass.

The little cripples in the party were unable to get to the trolley cars to reach her home and the transportation problem was solved by Walter Thompson, a big hearted local expressman. Filling his wagon with straw he placed all fifteen in it, carried them to Miss Wagstaff's home and after they were thoroughly tired out, called around and carried them back to the camp.

Mr. Wharton Captured Golf Cup.

Playing in championship form, J. E. P. Wharton, formerly of this city, scored three points for first place in the weekly competition for the August cup at Baltusrol on Saturday, and won first prize in the ball sweepstakes.

Gave a Luncheon.

The Misses Shreve, of Grove street, gave a luncheon at the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon. Covers were laid for fifteen, several guests being present from out of town.

J. WHITNEY BAKER WINS GOLF TROPHY

Local Man Captures the Sylvester Cup in Tournament at Shelter Island.

HE IS AN EXPERT

DEFEATS OPPONENT BY 6 UP AND 5 TO PLAY.

Enters From the Maidstone Golf Club, of East Hampton—Is a Member of the Hillside Club Here.

More honors on the golf course has come to J. Whitney Baker, of Stelle avenue, a Princeton student, who has gradually won his way to the front ranks among the leading players in the East. Friday he won the silver trophy, the Sylvester cup at Shelter Island. He entered from the Maidstone Golf Club, of East Hampton, and was matched against Walter Kobbe, of Shinnecock Hills Golf Club.

Baker, who is regarded as the most expert player in the tournament, was looked on as an easy winner, but Kobbe gave all hands a complete surprise by his brilliant play in the morning rounds, when he showed himself in every respect to be the equal of his opponent. He started off by winning the first hole in par golf, and he retained the lead until the fifth hole, which Baker won in a par 3, and the match remained all square as the turn, seven of the nine holes being halved. He played equally as well on the homeward journey. Baker won the tenth and thirteenth holes and Kobbe the eleventh and fourteenth. The twelfth, fifteen, sixteenth and seventeenth holes were halved. It was only by winning the eighteenth hole by 4 to 5 that Baker secured the lead by 1 up on the first half of the match. Their cards were:

Baker	4	5	4	4	3	4	6	5	—41
Kobbe	3	5	4	4	4	4	6	5	—41
Baker	5	6	2	4	5	5	5	4	—41—82
Kobbe	4	5	5	2	4	4	5	5	—48—84

There was a great gathering in the afternoon to witness the last half of the match, but the gallery was partially doomed to disappointment, as the pace set by Baker was a trifle too fast for Kobbe. The bogie for the first nine holes is 41, but Baker went out in the par golf of 38, while Kobbe, who also played good golf, took two strokes under bogie. Baker won the first three holes in succession, and at the fifth he was 5 up. Kobbe won the seventh and eighth in par golf, the bogie for the seventh being 4. Baker still led by 3 up at the turn, and by winning three of the next four holes, won the match by 6 up and 5 to play. Their cards were:

Baker	4	4	3	5	5	5	5	5	—39
Kobbe	5	4	5	5	5	4	4	5	—40
Baker	5	5	4	5					—19—57
Kobbe	6	5	5	7					—23—63

DOMINIE BOOMED A. A. CLARK

REV. J. B. CLEAVER ADVOCATED THAT HE BE NOMINATED.

In reporting the farmers' picnic at Flemington, The Newark Evening News says:

"Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, who had been sitting patiently on one of the trying benches all of both days, waiting for his turn to come, was the next speaker. He declared he was a Republican, but it was difficult to make out what particular party he was speaking for. The one entertained the audience most when he did for he had a seemingly inexhaustible fund of funny stories and he told them well.

"After holding the platform for some time he said he had the ideal candidate for Governor for the Democrats. 'A man who will run like a scared dog and who would kick up the dust in Hudson so that not a single Populist could be seen. He would run well and is such a votegetter that he would get the independent Republican vote and the vote of every well meaning Populist. He was born right over here and is one of you. He was the candidate of the Democratic party for United States Senator and he is Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville.'"

Acelians, 4; West End, 1.

The West End baseball team, of Somerville, was defeated by the Acelians, of Garwood, Saturday afternoon, in an interesting game. Montross, the West End pitcher, struck out nine men, while Drew, of the Acelians, only struck out five. The latter, however, prevented the West End batters from bunching their hits. D. Pool, of the Acelians, scored three of the runs made and got four hits of the six made off Montross. The score:

Acelians	0	0	0	0	1	0	1	1	0	—4

FOWLER SAYS HE WILL RUN

Will Accept Renomination If Tendered by His Party's Congressional Convention.

REPLY TO MR. KEAN

Dignified Answer to County Chairman's Curious Letter, Which Sets at Rest a Newspaper Yarn—The Communications.

The current newspaper story that Hon. Charles N. Fowler had failed to answer a letter from Hamilton F. Kean, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, asking whether he was a candidate for renomination, has caused a feeling of uncertainty in the Fifth Congressional district as to Mr. Fowler's candidacy.

A representative of The Daily Press, in the interest of truth, brought the prevailing rumors to Mr. Fowler's attention, this morning, and asked him whether he would not state his position.

Mr. Fowler said:

"I did receive such an inquiry from Mr. Kean. It arrived during my absence from town, and, on my return, was duly answered. Out of justice, both to Mr. Kean and myself, and as the best way of complying with the many courteous suggestions of The Daily Press, I will furnish you with copies of these letters."

Mr. Kean's letter to Mr. Fowler, and Mr. Fowler's reply thereto are as follows:

"New York, August 19, 1904.

"Hon. Charles N. Fowler,
"Elizabeth, N. J.

"Dear Sir:

"Some people have told me that you have decided not to run this year for Congress from the Fifth District; others of your friends assure me that this is a mistake, that you expect to be nominated and elected. I would like very much to hear from you if you are a candidate for re-nomination, as I desire to know whether the 22d of September would be a satisfactory day to hold the Congressional Convention.

"Yours very truly,
"Hamilton F. Kean."

"Aug. 24, 1904.

"Hamilton F. Kean, Esq.,
"New York City.

"Dear Sir:

"Replying to your favor of Aug. 19, I desire to say, as I have said in answer to other inquiries as to whether I was a candidate this year for the office of Representative from the Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey, that if the Republican party of that district, through its regularly constituted delegates, do me the honor to nominate me, I shall accept such nomination.

"I had supposed that the setting of a date for the Congressional Convention was a matter that rested entirely with the Republican Congressional Committee. At all events, I shall be satisfied with whatever date is agreed upon by that Committee.

"Very truly yours,
"Charles N. Fowler."

Congressman Charles N. Fowler.

SCHOOL PLANS REVISED

BOARD OF EDUCATION MAKES MINOR ALTERATIONS IN ARRANGEMENTS.

Further consideration of the plans for the new High School occupied the attention of the Board of Education at its meeting last evening. In company with Architect Morse, representing Mr. Hale, the designer of the building, the members went over the heating and lighting arrangements and made a number of changes. The number of lights was reduced from 900 to 450 and the positions were changed. No decision was made relative to the heating as the system has not yet been decided upon.

Acting on suggestions made by Building Inspector Deane, some slight alterations were made in the auditorium to insure the safety of pupils. Fire escapes will also be placed on all sides but in front. Bids for the electrical work will be advertised for and they will be opened on Thursday, September 15.

The building committee reported that the work of excavating for the foundation of the structure had been commenced and that satisfactory progress is being made.

FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT

ORDINANCE ADOPTED AFTER LEE PLACE RESIDENT ENTERS PROTEST.

Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, at the September meeting of the Common Council held last night, called up the ordinance providing for the permanent improvement of certain streets, which have heretofore been published in The Daily Press, and it was adopted, after a public hearing was granted.

J. F. Walsh, of Lee place, was present to enter a protest against the macadamising of his street this year. He stated that he represented nearly every property-owner on the street and all were in favor of the matter being laid over until next fall. He said that those affected were not able to stand the expense of the work.

Mr. Gloak assured Mr. Walsh that it would probably be next fall before the work on that street is done and that the improvement would not call for any money from the property-owners there before that time. With this explanation Mr. Walsh seemed satisfied and he expressed the opinion that the other residents on Lee place would be also. It will be some time before this work is completed.

Wife Beater Gets Sixty Days.

In the city court yesterday morning, John Totzioff, of Webster place, who finds diversion in beating his wife, was sent to jail for sixty days. He was before the court for this offense a short time ago but escaped punishment at the time.

Ordinance for Vitrified Brick Experiment at Watchung Trolley Station Passes on Third Reading.

The most important matter to come before the Common Council at the September meeting held last night was that in relation to the proposed laying of a double track for the trolley between the corner of Front and Somerset streets to Watchung avenue and Fourth street. The Council received several petitions on the subject, the first of which was from Woodhull & Martin and many other property-owners along the line prescribed, asking that in return for the privilege of laying double tracks, the Public Service Corporation be required to pave the street its entire width with vitrified brick.

Two petitions, signed by some of the same property-owners and others, and evidently prepared in advance of the first one, asked that the trolley company pave with brick between the tracks and eighteen inches outside.

Another petition was received from J. Fred MacDonald, Dr. J. B. Probasco, Powlison & Jones, A. B. Summers, A. M. Griffen, Peter B. Hodge and others, protesting against the laying of double tracks. They argued that the improvement would not relieve the present condition and that it would be a detriment inasmuch as more of the street would be occupied. All of the petitions were referred to the street committee for further consideration. The petitioners with the exception of the last one presented asked that the trolley company be allowed to lay the double tracks, believing that it would be the means of obviating the present difficulty complained of. It is thought that the majority of the Council is of the same opinion. An early report is expected in the matter.

Mr. Gloak called up on third reading the ordinance providing for the paving of Watchung avenue, between Second street and North avenue, with vitrified brick, and it was unanimously adopted. The Public Service Corporation, according to the terms of the agreement with the city, must deposit $1,100 with the city treasurer before the work be commenced, and the corporation is not anxious to start the work until the question of a double track is decided one way or the other. This will probably be settled within a short time.

JEFFERY'S SUCCESS.

Plainfield Man Continues His Efforts for Tax Reform.

William Jeffery, the real estate agent, who is engaged in tax reform work in New York State, left yesterday for Port Jervis. From there he will go to Monticello. From reports gathered, Mr. Jeffery has been successful to a remarkable degree in his work. The New York Tax Reform Association of New York city, by whom Mr. Jeffery is employed, has been quick to recognize his energy and capacity for organizing.

Being a student of economics in addition to almost twenty years' experience in the real estate business gives Mr. Jeffery qualifications needed for this important work. Among the subscribers of this association are such well known persons as J. Pierpont Morgan and A. D. Juliard. Wm. G. Low, brother of Seth Low, former Mayor of New York, is president of the association.

Police Recover Stolen Horse.

A horse stolen from the barn of James Wheeler, a hay carter living on Clinton avenue, was recovered by the Newark police Monday. Word was sent to local headquarters and in company with Patrolman McCarthy, Wheeler went to the Bladen metropolis and identified the animal. It was taken on the night of August 26 and was left by the thief in a Newark stable.

Twenty-Eight Suits Involved.

Announcement is made that the remaining twenty-eight suits in the celebrated Pangborn case at Williamsport, Pa., will be called for trial on Monday, October 10, in the Lycoming County court.

PROGRESS OF BOARD OF HEALTH INSPECTIONS

Thus Far 779 Premises Have Been Examined in the House-to-House Canvass.

NO CONTAGIOUS DISEASE

MANY NUISANCES ARE ABATED BY THE HEALTH OFFICIALS.

Formaldhyde Discovered in One Supply of Milk—Several Milk Permits Granted.

Twenty-seven dairies were inspected during August by Health Officer L. R. Thurlow, five being new ones, and all were found to be in good condition. On August 26 and 27 samples were taken of every milk sold in Plainfield to test for formaldehyde. But one sample out of thirty-five was found to contain formaldehyde and the necessary steps were taken to prevent the use of this connection. These facts were presented at the September meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday afternoon.

Numerous communications were received regarding the very unsanitary condition of the Italian settlement on East Front street and the Board ordered notices to be served to have the place cleaned up.

It was reported that the work of house-to-house inspection had been pushed with as much energy as possible. The total number of house inspections during August were 373 and there were found about 143 cases of violations of the ordinances. This inspection was stopped for the year on September 1. In the two months and a half that this work has been carried on, 779 premises have been inspected on, expense of about eleven cents per house. The results obtained have shown the great need of this work and the Board hopes to complete it next year. The results of the inspection from June 20 to September 1 are as follows:

Total number of premises inspected, 779; defective plumbing systems found, 33; accumulation of ashes and garbage, 27; accumulation of garbage, 15; accumulation of ashes, 10; privy vaults which required cleaning, 195; cesspools which required cleaning, 15; abandoned privy vaults not properly filled, 85; abandoned cesspools not properly filled, 1; cesspools too near house, 4; privy vaults too near well, 1.

These notices have been served in connection with the above:

Notices to abate nuisance, 90; to abolish vaults, 144; to abolish cesspools, 50; to connect with sewer, 76. There still remains over one hundred notices yet to be served. These have been delayed because of the great amount of work of the plumbers and scavengers. They will, however, be served shortly. Milk permits were granted to Charles E. Williams, Harry H. Smith, John C. Cooper and Fred W. Dunn.

At the present time the city is free from contagious disease and there were but few cases reported during the month.

There were reported fifteen marriages, fifty-three births, two stillbirths and a total of thirty-seven deaths.

QUIETLY MARRIED.

Miss Nellie Larew Becomes the Wife of David M. Gugel, of Long Branch.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Nellie Larew, daughter of Mrs. Lydia Larew, of West Fourth street, to David M. Gugel, of Long Branch. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. J. Yerkes at his home in West Seventh street, Aug. 20. Miss Emma Gugel, sister of the groom, and Theodore Lorew, brother of the bride, acted as attendants.

A quiet reception followed at the home of the bride's mother and Mr. and Mrs. Gugel are now residing at Elizabeth, where the former is employed.

Dr. Brown's Wife Dead.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lydia Brown, wife of the late Rev. Theodore S. Brown, formerly of this city, died Friday evening at her home in Chatham, N. Y. She was 79 years of age. The funeral was held Monday afternoon and the interment was in the family plot at Chatham. Rev. Theodore S. Brown was pastor of the Second Presbyterian church (now the Crescent Avenue church) for nearly twenty years previous to the accession of Dr. William M. Richards.

Elston Leonard, of Madison avenue, is home from a stay at Asbury Park.

PLAINFIELD'S COPS ARE AGAIN DEFEATED

This Time Newark's First Precinct Men Show the Locals How to Play Ball.

ON CRESCENT OVAL

VISITORS' PITCHER STRIKES OUT NINETEEN MEN.

McCarthy and McGinley Each Fan Four Times—The Newark Nine a Fast Aggregation.

The local police nine went down to defeat yesterday on Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon, the team from the First Precinct, of Newark, winning by a score of 7 to 5. The visiting blue coats are considered very fast, having defeated many of the best semi-professional teams in the Metropolitan district. The local team was strengthened by the addition of Montross and Allen, the West End's battery.

A feature of the contest was the pitching of Goodwin for the Newarkers. He struck out a total of nineteen men, McCarthy and McGinley each fanning four times. Dailey, formerly of the Dunellen team, covered first base in good style, and Winn, formerly of the St. Mary team, put up a good game at short.

The Newark nine started the ball a-rolling in the first inning by scoring two runs. McCabe and Sobott, the first two men at the bat, singled and were advanced a base when Montross dropped Steele's easy pop fly. Jimmie then hit Hummell forcing a run in. Allen threw to second to catch Hummell and Sobott reached home, being safe by a small margin. In the mix-up Steele started for third and was thrown out by Allen. Goodwin and Jackson were easily retired.

After two strikes were called on Hamilton, he secured a clashing two base hit in left-field, but was left on second, the next three batters being easy outs. Plainfield scored in the third inning. Montross was given a free pass, stole second when Hummell rolled the ball to Goodwin. He scored on Hamilton's hot grounder.

A single, a doubled, three-base hit and four errors netted the Newark team four runs in the fifth inning. Plainfield scored in the eighth on two base on balls. Montross was hit by a pitched ball, a run by Winn and an error by Troy netted the locals four runs. Goodwin got a two base hit and scored on an error.

MIDDLEKAUFF MUST FACE GRAVE CHARGE

Vineland Woman Declares Her Father Was Defrauded of $11,882 by Plainfielder.

ARREST MADE TODAY

A MAN'S DEATH SAID TO HAVE BEEN CAUSED FROM GRIEF OVER MATTER.

Middlekauff Taken to Millville for Hearing—Bail to be $10,000—The Alleged Crooked Deals.

As he stepped from his front door this morning, E. D. Middlekauff, of Watchung avenue, was placed under arrest by Detective McCarthy, of the local police force, on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. Ellen VanEvra Opdyke, of Vineland, who alleges that he defrauded her father, Theodore Van Evra, out of $11,882. He was taken to police headquarters and turned over to Chief of Police Bullock, of Millville, who came on here with the warrant last night. The prisoner said that he would accompany the officer to Millville, telegraphing in advance for friends there to secure $10,000 bail for him.

Theodore VanEvra, Mrs. Opdyke's father, died three months ago as a result, it is alleged, of worrying over the investments made by Middlekauff for him. A short time Middlekauff removed to this city from Millville, where he has since resided with his wife and three children. When placed under arrest he denied any wrongdoing. It is said that he succeeded in getting VanEvra to buy 100,000 shares of stock in the National Oil and Development Company upon false representations of dividends, and this was followed by other alleged poor investments.

"SPITE HOUSE" OWNER IN JAIL

ANTONIA MARRO TO ANSWER FOR VIOLATING CITY'S ORDINANCES.

Antonia Marro, who owns and occupies the alleged "spite house" property in East Front street, was arrested this morning on four separate charges, each of which is for an alleged violation of several city ordinances. Two of the complaints are made by former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, who occupies a large estate in the neighborhood, and two by Health Officer Leon Thurlow.

One complaint is that he has a dog that disturbs neighbors, another is that he throws swill on his premises, a third that he erected an outhouse without a permit and the fourth that filthy odors come from the premises. At the request of Walter Heifield, Jr., Marro's counsel, the trial was postponed this morning until September 19.

MARRIAGE IN MARCONNIER

MISS LENORA VAN COURT BECOMES WIFE OF JAMES B. RANDOLPH.

Miss Lenora VanCourt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene VanCourt, of Oak Tree, and James Bryan Randolph, of Piscataway, were married Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Marconnier chapel in the presence of a large number of guests from this city, Oak Tree, Newark, New York and other places. The chapel was decorated with golden rod, palms and ferns. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, performed the ceremony.

Miss Amy McKuen, of Woodbridge, was maid-of-honor, and Miss Elizabeth Schenck, of Metuchen, and Miss Matilda Bennett, of this city, bridesmaids. The best man was John Dayton, of Perth Amboy, and the ushers were Herbert Moore and William Olsen.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. They will reside at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Hyde's Funeral.

The funeral services of Mrs. Edith Godfrey Hyde, wife of Charles Livingston Hyde, who died in Vienna, Switzerland, on July 24 last, will be held at St. Thomas' church, Fifth avenue and Fifty-third street, New York, tomorrow at 12 o'clock noon. Interment will be private.

Fraternal Order Petition City Fathers to Let the People See the National Emblem.

CALL MAN APPOINTED

ROUTINE BUSINESS BEFORE THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Decide to Borrow $5,000 for Sewer Extension Work—Clerk for Tax Collector.

Matters of more or less importance were transacted at the monthly meeting of the Common Council held last night. A communication was received from the members of Franklin, Somerset and Benevolent Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., asking the Common Council to see that an American flag is displayed every day but Sunday from the city flag pole. The communication stated that there are about seven hundred members in the three councils, and asks for favorable consideration. The petition was referred to the finance committee with power.

A communication was received from Peter V. Weaver and others asking that the fire limits be changed from New to Liberty street. The matter was referred to the fire committee.

William M. Stillman petitioned the Council to install an eight inch sanitary sewer in Madison avenue to provide for the new building erected on that avenue between Front street and the brook. The petition was referred to the street committee.

The resignation of Sydney E. Frazee as a regular fireman was received and accepted, and the Board of Engineers recommended the appointment of William Jaeger, a call man, to fill the vacancy. Mayor Jenkins then appointed Mr. Jaeger to the position and the appointment was confirmed. This, it is believed, will cause some changes among the regular firemen in the various houses.

Building Inspector T. C. Doane reported that during August sixteen building permits were granted. City Physician Lufberrow in submitting his report for May, June, July and August, stated that he had made 120 visits and that two deaths had occurred. The report was referred to the alms committee.

Mr. Daniel reported on the petition of Watson Whittlesey, who owned property in Netherwood, and who asked for an adjustment of taxes on the same. Mr. Daniel stated that the corporation counsel had informed him that the request could not be granted as the property had been sold for taxes. He advised Mr. Whittlesey to redeem the property soon or else he would lose the title to it.

In response to a petition from Elston M. French and others asking for the location of a fire hydrant on Evergreen avenue, near Hillside avenue, Mr. Lee moved that the same be granted. This will be a two-way hydrant. Mr. Lee also reported on the petition for a fire alarm box near the new Morgan Fresh Air Home. He stated that as the season is late he did not believe an alarm box at that point a necessity at present, besides there is a telephone in the Home which can be used in case of fire. Later on he thought the committee might see its way clear to locate a box at the point mentioned.

Under the head of new business Mr. Daniel offered a resolution which called for the borrowing of $5,000 for the improvements of the present system of sanitary sewers, the loan to be secured by city notes. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Daniel asked that a gas not to exceed $100 be allowed for the employment of help in the tax collectors' office to assist Mr. Smith in getting the books in shape for the year. He stated that the sums now allowed for preparing the bills before the Commissioners of Appeal meet is much shorter than usual, and with the present help it would be impossible to get them out as required. The request was granted.

Mr. Gloak called up on third reading the ordinance which establishes the building line between Central avenue and Evans thirty feet from the centre line and the same was adopted.

President Tellis appointed George H. Frost a member of the Park Commission in place of Jas. vanHarwerden, who is away from the city most of the time. T. Buckle is chairman of the commission and it is the intention to hold a meeting tomorrow night. For that reason a new member was substituted in place of Mr. vanHerwerden. It is the intention of the commission to get together and formulate plans for work.

After the auditing of the usual batch of bills the Council adjourned.

FOR STREET WEAR.

Blouse Costumes Are the Smartest For Voile and Silk.

The glorified blouse costume is perhaps the prettiest of all street dresses. A costume of this description seen recently was of royal blue voile trimmed with black and white braid and sage green velvet. Another very smart suit was of lavender voile over silk of a slightly darker shade. The very full blouse jacket had a yoke worked in buttonhole embroidery and two flat revers of purple panne edged with gold cord. The high belt was laid in perpendicular tucks. The skirt was very full, with embroidery applications around the bottom.

Some of the new coats are of the short sack description, but these, as a rule, are only becoming to tall women.

After the weather is too cool for linens, silk costumes of every weave and pattern will take their place. A good deal of dull red and dull green silk will be worn this fall.

Black china silk dresses relieved in white are very chic and useful at this time of the year.

The old fashioned flowered muslin frock, whether the muslin be silk or otherwise, is all the rage. Blue and white and pink and white are especially dainty, although some very smart models have been shown in black silk muslin decorated with blurred-in flowers of two tones of reddish pink. The particular dress I have in mind was trimmed with bittiework of narrow velvet ribbon in tones of black and pink, and it was further embellished with black fagoting.

The picture shows a toque of deep red chiffon with a border of shaded roses.

FALL FASHIONS.

The Burnoose Shape Revived—A Good Deal of Red to Be Worn.

The burnoose shape is revived as a mantle for the matron, or there are cape shapes with shawl and wing sleeves which are graceful and comfortable.

Much frilled mantles of crystalline, silk grenadine and other semitransparent textures are shown, and these are mostly unlined, but would be ample protection for autumn wear if finished with a lining of glace silk.

The collarless bodice is passing away, but yokes, collars and cuffs have been unlined this summer.

The envelope hat promises to be continued in felt. It is almost universally becoming, especially when trimmed with soft plumage.

A good deal of dark red in all shades will be worn this fall, and red shaded hats will be ultra chic.

There are two kinds of linen costumes. One is heavily embroidered by hand, with a short skirt and wide plaited ruffles. This is suitable for afternoon wear and even sometimes evening function. Then for outdoor life and morning wear there is the tailor made linen, with its skirt clearing the ground and its jaunty mannish jacket.

Speaking of white linen, Frenchwomen seem to prefer suits of this shade made up with coarse lace of the same tint. There is a silky linen which is most attractive mixed with Irish or with torchon lace. The finer varieties of linen come in a variety of dainty shades and are made up very simply in little Eton or blouse coat models.

The picture shows a deep red blouse costume trimmed with white braid.

Husbands And Wives

Just a Few of the Well Known Types

"NO matrimony for me!" exclaimed the very eligible bachelor of forty-five. In order to rob this remark of sensationalism I must add that the subject was being discussed in general.

"Were you ever in love?" soulfully inquired the woman who scented a romance.

"Yes, when I was twenty-four I was engaged," replied the bachelor, "and I'm thankful enough to say I broke it off while there was yet time."

"Why, what was the trouble? Didn't she love you?"

"She loved me too much, according to those who maintain that jealousy is a sign of true love. She felt from the moment I told her I loved her as if she owned me body and soul. She ordered me right and left. Woe to me if I was not on hand at all hours! And if I was five minutes late she never rested until she found out with what girl I had spent those five minutes while she was having the most frightful time waiting for me! Each time we met it was one perpetual catechism, one perpetual recrimination and 'do you love me?' Finally my common sense came to the rescue, and I said to her: 'My dear, we are both young but we begin all over again and forget this unpleasant episode. If this is hell before marriage, what will it be afterward?' So that was the end. The girl's friends cut me dead, but I didn't care. I felt I had done a service as well as myself and had prevented one more addition to the ranks of jealous married couples."

"Are there many of those?"

"Are there many? My dear child, jealousy is the bane of married life. The wife believes she owns her husband body and soul and that he mustn't even bat his eyelids save in her direction. The husband is equally sure that he ought to hold a first mortgage on his wife's private thoughts even. Hence trouble in the shape of continual bickerings."

"What about the husband who believes in the right to flirt, but who would send bag his wife if she attempted the same?"

"Every town, every district, every summer resort, is full of his kind. 'I am my own master. I refuse to give an account of myself to any woman. If she chooses to object to anything that I do she can leave me.'"

"Have you any type of married woman sufficiently bad to offset this?"

"Yes, the neurotic wife. We are having a good deal of her in literature just now. She is modeled on that supersensitive creature Marna in 'The Confessions of a Wife.' Marna, with her perpetual nervous tickings and feeling dissections, nearly drives her husband distracted and finally pretty nearly estranges him for good and all."

"Don't forget the married woman flirt, and also the stupidly virtuous woman who shows no interest in her husband's affairs?"

"To tell you the truth, I'm not so against the married woman flirt as I might be. She is pretty, interesting and clever, and more often than not her flirtations are harmless and they serve the purpose of engrossing her husband's attention and keeping him out of mischief himself. In fact, I want to tell you that one of the most congenial married couples I have ever met were both pronounced flirts and flirted even in the presence of each other with the most amicable understanding for their little weakness. But don't ask me to talk about the bundle of clothes and prim virtue, if virtue consists in being morally and physically a blank, that so many women become after marriage. We all know the sort of woman. Her husband can only talk to her about three things—the children, the kitchen and herself. Give, oh, give me the married people who are good chums, who avoid a quarrel as they would fire, who know how to forgive as they know how to be forgiven and who have enough respect for each other's individuality never to bore but to agree and disagree on certain subjects as men friends do, and on all the other subjects to be enthusiastic together like children."

HOW TO BE POPULAR.

Unsatisfactory Is at the Bottom of It All.

"I wonder why people don't like me any better?" sighed the girl who always had a grievance. "I'm sure we have money enough! I dress well. I am good at games and sports and all that sort of thing, and yet here is that girl who is a dufter at almost everything, who is homely and badly dressed and yet is invited everywhere!"

"I think I can tell you the secret of her popularity," remarked Mrs. Wise-Her, "and, indeed, of the popularity of almost all popular women. They give in exchange for what they are given."

"But the girl I speak of can't give anything; she hasn't anything to give."

"No material things perhaps, but did you ever notice what a cheerful disposition she has, how she always has something pleasant to say, how she cheers up every party to which she is invited and creates a sunny atmosphere and a laugh on every occasion?"

"The trouble with you, my dear," she went on, "is that you are too self conscious. You are always thinking of how you feel and how you are dressed and how you look. The thing to do if you want to be popular is to think of how other people feel and are dressed and look, and to tell them when they look pretty and to cheer them when they are not feeling up to the mark. If you want to be popular you simply can't be the least bit selfish. You should share all of the nice things you have, from your kind thoughts and sympathy to your box of chocolates. Share things, don't keep them to yourself and you will wake up one of these days simply astonished to find the number of friends you have."

RENOVATING FURNITURE.

A Hint For the Woman With a Small Income.

I visited a while ago the home of a friend of mine in reduced circumstances, and I was struck with the coziness of her furnishings. These were all the more remarkable in view of the fact that she had no very little money to spend on them.

"Where did you get such very prettily upholstered chairs?" I asked her. "Upholstered chairs cost money!"

Back came the answer. "I wish you could have seen them before I rescued them from the secondhand shop and reupholstered them!"

It is not half as difficult as it looks. The picture shows you two kinds of chair coverings, the fitted and the loose kind. The latter is made to measure and neatly bound with bias strips of the material; the former is done by stretching the material very carefully on two opposite sides of the space to be covered and then stretching the other two opposite sides to correspond. By managing things this way the pattern cannot avoid being straight. Tufted chairs are harder to manage, but they can be brought to a successful issue with a little long upholsterer's needle and coarse linen twine. Flowered cretonne, the heavy linen ribbed kind, is perhaps the best material for recovering old chairs at a small expense.

It seems hardly necessary to add that the old covering is not removed. It gives thickness and firmness to the new covering which is put over it.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 4.

Topic—How Courage for new work. Ps. cxliv, 1-15; Acts xxviii, 15.

The secret of perpetual motion has never been discovered. With all man's progress he has never yet discovered a power that can be perpetually sustained. Sooner or later it must be renewed if work is to be continued. The locomotive needs new steam each day for its work. The electric dynamo must constantly generate new electricity if the work for which it furnishes the power is to be continued. For each new day our physical bodies must have their strength renewed in order to perform the work of life. So also it is in the religious world new courage and strength are needed for each new work. The courage of last week will not sustain us for this week's work. As we need bread day by day, so daily we need the courage that strengthens us for the work of life.

1. The necessity of new courage for new work is divinely recognized. When God calls men to important advanced places, He encourages them to be strong and promises to be with them to encourage and strengthen them. To Joshua, when he was called upon to take up the work of Moses, He said, "Be strong and of good courage." And again, "Only be thou strong and very courageous that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses, my servant, commanded thee." And even again he said, "Be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed, for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest." God thus recognizes our need for new courage and enjoins us to be courageous and strong in Him.

2. So courage for new work is divinely promised, and this promise is fulfilled. "I will strengthen thee" is the promise of God to us. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." Daily strength for daily need is God's promise. He does not promise strength to-day for tomorrow, or this year for next year. This is unnecessary. We live in moments, not in years, and the promise of renewed strength for each new moment is all that is necessary. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." Let us therefore wait upon Him that we may be able to say with the psalmist, "Blessed be the Lord, my strength."

But men may be of great encouragement to one another. Visited by brethren while on the way to Rome, Paul "thanked God and took courage." Human sympathy and co-operation in the work of the Lord are no small benefits in our struggles. Being so, we should more often take advantage of the opportunity to sympathise with one another and to speak words of good cheer as we journey and labor together along the pathway of life.

BIBLE READINGS.

Deut. xxxiii, 25; Josh. i, 7; x, 25; II Sam. x, 12; II Chron. xix, 11; Ez. x 1-4; Ps. xxvii, 14; xxxi, 24; Isa. xl, 27, 31; Eph. vi, 10-20.

Not a "Picnic."

If any one is inclined to regard Dr. Clark's Christian Endeavor journeys as anything but the strenuous and arduous enterprises which they really are we commend him to some figures which we venture to extract from one of Dr. Clark's private letters just received.

On the present journey he will have traveled during the 195 days of his absence 23,000 miles by sea and 10,700 miles by land, a total of 33,700 miles.

He has made 125 addresses and conducted 50 conferences.

His audiences have ranged from 100 in the smaller conferences to 10,000, and they have aggregated 250,000 souls.

He has written 58 articles, containing a total of 85,000 words. His letters have been numberless.

And the hardest part of the journey, as any convention worker understands, is the need of keeping at high tension all the time, ready to give out in any change of conversation the inspiration that may plant the seeds of Christian Endeavor in a new and large region.

If any one thinks all this to be easy and pure fun let him try it.—Christian Endeavor World.

A Unique Button Badge.

The Broome county (N. Y.) union for one of its annual conventions conceived the idea of this unique button badge. The kindly face of the founder of Christian Endeavor looking out from it gave it a large value as a souvenir, and every delegate was careful to register in order to secure the button, which could not be had in any other way. The invention may suggest to other unions to "go and do likewise."

Three Briefs.

There are over 300,000 Endeavorers in Great Britain and Ireland.

In the early days of the Endeavor society in Ceylon the Endeavorers marked certain cocoanut trees whose fruit should be devoted entirely to the Lord.

Four hundred and sixty new societies is the record of the United Kingdom since January, 1903, or more than one new society formed every day; 125 of these societies were Juniors. Of the denominations represented, Primitive Methodists lead the way with more than 130 new societies.

Australian Endeavor.

The Australasian union was formed in 1893 and is a very active organization, holding conventions that are acknowledged to be the greatest religious gatherings ever held in the southern hemisphere.—Christian Endeavorer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 4: "Get Courage For New Work."—Ps. xxiii, 1-15; Acts xxviii, 15.

When a difficult work has been brought to a successful termination there is often an inclination to rest and not undertake any new task. We feel that we have earned a right to rest and others may do the new work. This is a difficult impulse to resist. But unless overcome it will prove fatal to all advancement in the outer world of work and also put an end to all the inner spirit of progress.

As soon as one thing is finished another is ready to be begun. New courage is needed for this fresh task. Experience has been gained by what we have done and skill for future doing. But, singular as it may seem, it is nevertheless true that the courage often fails at just this critical point. We feel a hesitation, almost a timidity, in the face of the unfamiliar and untried experience. We shrink from the new undertaking. This is a most critical time.

At such times the kindly interest of friendly hearts may avert disaster and inspire us to fresh achievements. Here lies much of the value of Christian fellowship. In the intimacies of Christian life give us the opportunity to know the peculiarities of each other, and we can often detect the danger of discouragement to which another is exposed almost before he has become aware of it himself. If we are sympathetic in the right sort we may by timely and judicious encouragement help to avert the disaster which lies so close at hand.

No one is free from the danger of failing courage. This is not cowardice, but it may easily end in fatal panic unless it is checked in time. No greater service is possible for us to render one another than to put heart into one who is on the verge of being disheartened.

The brethren from Rome who met Paul at the Three Taverns and the market of Appius did a favor to the whole Christian world in cheering the apostle to the gentiles to meet the new trials which awaited him in the city of the Caesars. The dangers and trials through which he had passed were enough to break any but the stoutest spirit. Severe as they had been they were less severe than those he must still meet. For two years he had looked ahead to the time when he could make the journey to Rome, expecting to secure a patient and favorable hearing for the gospel in that center which was tolerant of all varieties of opinion and of worship.

He was at last almost at the long desired goal, but in what a different condition from what he had hoped to come! Instead of appearing as an honored teacher with a message of importance he comes as a prisoner chained to the arm of a Roman soldier and accused by his countrymen of a crime punishable with death.

If ever a man needed friends he did at that time. They appeared and he took fresh courage.

But the supreme and unfailing source of encouragement is to found not in chance meetings with friends or like ideas and tastes. There is a fountain of sure refreshment to weary and burdened souls accessible to all who feel their need. It is to this that the psalmist refers. The fact that we may hold communion with God here and now is the most momentous fact in human life. The actual union of a soul with God is the most profound secret yet discovered. It is the explanation of all hope and the foundation of invincible courage.

Have you found Him? Has He found you?

The Most Ignoble Way.

The worst kind of lie is the insinuated one. It does the greatest harm. After it has assumed positive form it is difficult to trace its authorship. Most people who practice that form of lying enswathe it in an expression of pity for the victim of it. They cloak their manner in a garb of solicitude and sorrow that has the effect of a pious act upon themselves, and pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us," as though God did not know, nor the Almighty consider. Their self deception is such that they actually insist, "If I am anything, I am frank and open." Beware of the man who has to profess that he is bold to prove his courage, or that he is ingenuous to establish his honesty.

A Prayer.

O Lord, let me not henceforth desire health or life, except to spend them for Thee, with Thee and in Thee. Then alone do we want it good for me; do, therefore, what seemeth to Thee best. Give to me or take from me; conform my will to Thine, and grant that, with humble and perfect submission and in holy confidence, I may receive the or ders of Thine eternal providence and may equally adore all that comes to me from Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Blaise Pascal.

Worry a Disease.

Worry is the most popular form of suicide. Worry ruins appetite, disturbs sleep, makes respiration irregular, spoils digestion, irritates disposition, warps character, weakens mind, stimulates disease and saps bodily health. It is the real cause of death in thousands of instances where some other disease is named in the death certificate. Worry is mental poison: work is mental food.—Religious Leader.

Service and Pay.

Little children loved Jesus for the luxury of loving Him. Their love was its own reward. They loved the lovable and were happy. But are not older people prone to think that devotion to Jesus ought to be returned in the shape of temporal prosperity? Do we not half expect material payment for spiritual service?—Rev. J. H. Jowett.

The New Woman

Her Influence Is Felt Everywhere For Good

SARAH GRAND has said that the new woman has come to overthrow the old one. In truth, wherever she appears this strong, wise new woman not only overthrows the old conditions of her sex, but even the old order, politically and socially, when that is wrong. She does it, too, so gently and fusslessly that nobody knows it is done till suddenly a new and better order appears. Have you noticed the result of the last general election in New South Wales, where women have had full suffrage the past two years? We in America heard nothing concerning the political campaign there until the recent election was over. Then came the word that the women's vote had overthrown the ministry previously in power. The opposition party entered the contest on the issue of extravagance in public administration. It demanded that expenses be cut down and the government be run more economically. This appealed strongly to the women voters. Men, unprepared to weigh, know not the A B C of economy. Woman is a natural economist where her instincts have not been perverted by ignorance and vanity. So the women voters of New South Wales, not being shackled by party name, as they are, lose in their independent strength and throw their ballots on the side of economy and reform. A great victory for the opposition party resulted. That was result enough, but there is a point or two besides quite notable in this first general election since all the citizens of New South Wales have had suffrage. The first point was a great and sudden addition to the labor party, showing that the woman voter is on the side of the toiler. Very few labor unions of men indorse woman suffrage! The next notable point is the very large number of women who voted. What does this show? That woman does want the ballot and will use it when she gets it.

Mrs. Hugo Mulertt has recently written a charming and dainty little book in the German language. It is called "Der Dackel auf Reisen" ("The Dachshund on His Travels"). Mr. and Mrs. Mulertt made a trip from New York to Vienna by steamer, and took the little dog with them. The dog is supposed to tell in his own words what he saw on his travels. Though we are to consider it only dog talk, the story is told in a pure and simple German that is charming. The little volume is specially adapted to the use of either grown persons or children who are beginning to read German. The proceeds of the sale of "Der Dackel auf Reisen" go to the maintenance of a home for aged and invalided women teachers.

An authority says that at present more progress is being made in the processes of educating girls than boys. Well, isn't it about time? Girls have 5,000 years' back time to make up.

⁂

Economical people can afford to be generous. The extravagant cannot.

⁂

Rev. Dr. James Martineau once spoke of a place in the country whose summer breezes "blew away at once all the care for health and gave the thing itself without the thought of it." "Under its influence," he wrote, "we find ourselves soon engaged to hear and to enjoy what we should decline to venture on at home." I like to think there are hundreds of thousands of working women this summer enjoying a vacation, even though it be a brief one, in that kind of a place.

⁂

The present summer New York city has for the first time in its history a woman hired by the municipal authorities to sing at the open air concerts in the parks. She is Miss Kitty Rampose. She has a remarkably sweet, powerful soprano voice, peculiarly adapted to the popular ballads she sings. It is a voice, too, that open air singing does not injure. Miss Rampose's songs alternate with the music of the park bands.

⁂

Considerable space on the society page of a newspaper was recently filled by the description of a fashionable dog's luggage when it goes on its travels with its mistress. It has to have a trunk all its own to contain its various decorated collars, its different blankets and ribbon bows for morning and afternoon wear. And babies—real human babies with immortal souls—are dying and being murdered every day by the score. Oh, my country!

⁂

London women are ahead of Americans in at least one respect. Society women there have a Ladies' Automobile club, whose members are not satisfied merely to sit in their seats and let a man steer their vehicles for them. Not they! They learn about the machine's management and steer it themselves. The president of the club is the Duchess of Sutherland, and its vice president is also a titled woman. The numerous titles among its members cause the club to be regarded by the British public with admiration not unmingled with awe. This feminine automobile club had recently a meet in London in which sixty-one vehicles joined in the procession, which was led by its president in an eighteen horsepower machine.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

SHE WAS TOO PREVIOUS.

Thought a Proposal of Marriage Was Coming, But It Failed to Come.

A few months ago a gentleman had the misfortune to lose his wife, a literary lady of some reputation. After grieving for a number of weeks a bright idea entered the head of the widower. He thought, relates London Tit-Bits, he could do something to lessen his sorrow, and for that purpose he called upon a lady of his acquaintance and requested to speak a word with her in private. Thinking she was about to receive a proposal, the lady prepared to listen with becoming resignation.

"Myrrha," said he, with downcast eyes, as he took her by the hand, "you knew my wife?"

"Yes."

"It is not good for man to be alone?"

"Perhaps not."

"Did you ever reflect upon that part of the marriage service which requires couples to cleave unto each other until death parts them?"

"I have."

"I have often reflected upon itmyself. Now death has parted me from my wife and I feel very lonely."

"I should think it likely."

"I think I must do something to restore to me her kind consolations and the memory of her many virtues."

He pressed the lady's hand and sighed.

She returned the pressure, and also suffered a sigh to escape her.

"My dear," he said, after a long pause, "I'll come to the point at once. I have a proposal to make."

"A proposal?"

"Yes."

"Ah!" she said, blushing, and covering her face with her hands.

"I have concluded to write my wife's biography. Now, I have but little skill in literary exercises, and if you will correct my manuscript and write the headings of the chapters I will give you two guineas."

She sprang from his side, and her eyes flashed with anger.

"I'll see you hanged first, and then I won't, you—you—"

She left the room, not being able to express her rage. The widower sighed, took his hat and went home.

HOUSE WITHOUT STAIRWAY.

Ladder Was Used in Fine Mansion of an Eccentric Washington Man.

Years ago a story was told of a naval officer who wanted a house built to please his own taste in every detail.—He drew plans himself, and the Washington Star, placed them in the hands of a builder and instructed him to see that they were carried out in every detail. Then he went to sea for a year's cruise. When he returned home the house had been completed with the utmost regard for the plans and specifications left by the officer. He was taken through the first floor and expressed the utmost pleasure in everything he saw.

"Now," he said, "we will go upstairs and see the second floor."

"Come right out this way, where we have a ladder," replied the builder.

The seafaring man was astonished. He had planned the house with the greatest care, but forgot to provide a stairway.

The story of the naval officer has never had a certificate of genuineness attached to it. But an actual case in which a house had been built without a stairway is on record in this city. It finally became the home of the late John Boyle, who was for many years chief clerk of the navy department, and died in 1854, leaving a very large estate. The house in question stood until ten years ago on the site now occupied by a brewery, below the naval observatory. It was a pretentious old mansion, located in what was a very stylish section during the days of the elder John Boyle, who came to this country in the early years of the nineteenth century. The record is not as clear as to why the house was constructed without a staircase, but there is no doubt about the fact.

Eventually and before it was purchased by Mr. Boyle a staircase was added to it by a side construction in such form that to the casual observer there was nothing to indicate that the entire structure had not been put up at the same time. Mr. Boyle had many devotees in this city, and they often refer to the house built without any means for ascending to the upper floors except by the use of a ladder.

Officers Set Chronicle.

In the Japan of 30 years ago all classes except the officials adhered strictly to the old dress of Japan. It was as much the exception then to see a man wearing his hair in the European fashion as it is now to see the shaved front of the head with the carefully tended cue lying upon it. The government, however, reshot with western notions, not only insisted that all officials should appear with heads like bleaching bones, and their bodies arrayed in western evening dress, but, in order to encourage the fashion among the country people, erected at the entrance of every considerable village a board displaying tailor's patterns of coats, waistcoats and trousers, every stitch and every seam in its place, which the local tailors were often to be seen copying with stern exactitude into notebooks.

An the Judge Underatood It.

A lawyer, addressing a jury in a Billville justice court, quoted, in defense of his client: "Homi quiminal y pease," whereupon the justice, striking the desk a thundering blow with his fist, shouted:

"You'll never do it, sir—not in this court!"

"Do what, your honor?" asked the surprised attorney.

"Why 'em and 'em' pitch 'em over the fence, sir!" replied the justice.—Atlanta Constitution.

KANSAS CYCLONE STORIES.

Traveler from the East Declares That the Tales He Heard Bordered on the Marvelous.

"A fish story," here in the east is your epithalum for an incredible lie," said a traveler. "But if you should go to Kansas you would probably begin to tell her cyclone stories."

"Marvelous, truly marvelous, are the cyclone stories that the Kansans tell. A cousin of mine declared to me that on his Kansas farm a cyclone had once shot hundreds of straws against a telegraph pole with such velocity that, like steel darts, they had penetrated the wood to a depth of several inches.

"Another Kansan said that a cyclone once threatened to blow away a load of wood that lay in his yard. His father threw himself on the wood in order to hold it to the ground with his weight, but the cyclone was too strong for the old man. It bore away him and the wood together, and astraddle of logs, he rode like a horseman slowly through the air. He would, no doubt, have disappeared forever, but his three sons rushed forth and overtook him, and their combined strength brought the old chap safely down.

"A third Kansan told me that one summer such a steady and strong wind blew from the south that a pitchfork of hay thrown against a southward facing wall would remain suspended against the wall as though glued there. The wind held the hay in place with a pressure like that of a mighty hand.

"I suppose all most cyclone stories are untrue. Those concerning straws that penetrate wood are, however, true enough. To prove them straws have been shot from guns at blocks of wood, and at a velocity of 175 miles they have penetrated the wood like darts of steel."

BABY PLAYED WITH SNAKE.

Reptile Crawled Into Eva's Clothes Basket and Both Seemed to Have a Good Time.

Undismayed by a blacksnake that crept into a clothes basket in which she lay in the yard, Eva Buelah, three years old, daughter of Peter Buelah, a River Hill (Pa.) farmer, hailed the intruder as a new pet and caressed it as she would a kitten until rescued from her dangerous position by her frightened father.

Her years were too few for knowledge of the scrape her prototype had got into in connection with a serpent, but little Eva, perhaps, was wiser than Eve, for, whereas the mother of the race let the constrictor do most of the talking, the baby kept up an uninterrupted flow of prattle to the snake. From the moment in which it dragged its four feet of length into her wicker paradise she was the most delighted youngster in those parts. She cooed the sable playmate, rapped it over the head with her rattle and laughed with delight when it wriggled over her. Her parents heard and saw her, but they didn't perceive the snake until the father walked from the door of the house toward the basket. Then he dashed to her side.

Beulah snatched the little one from the basket and gave her a fling that sent her rolling over the grass. Then he raised a clothes pole and swung it on the snake until he had beaten the reptile to a pulp. He was astonished to find Eva unharmed. There was no danger of poison, but the snake, being of the constrictor species, might easily have choked the child in its folds.

Cheap Production of Coal.

The American firm of Clarkson & Co., in Vladivostok, have substituted Russian laborers for Chinamen in their coal mines. The Russians are working cooperatively, by the job, and producing coal for two cents a ton. With Chinese cheap labor the cost was five cents a ton.

PULSE OF NEW YORK

GLIMPSE OF THROBBING LIFE OF THE METROPOLIS.

POTTER'S MODEL SALOON

Still Continues to Call Forth Comment —New York Policeman as Heroes —The Old "Camp Meeting" a Thing of the Past.

NEW YORK.—Bishop Potter gave New York its greatest summer sensation, and the sensation is still in working order. Not that the bishop actually started the Subway saloon —which is not in the subway, but on the surface of things, just like any other saloon. The New moral or reform tavern was opened a little while before the service at which the bishop blessed it, but the enterprise first claimed the attention of New York and of the world after the bishop's consecrating act. Mr. Johnson, the shrewd president of this new saloon association —who says that stockholders will get no more than five per cent., and that the markets are to be closed to open new saloons of this kind—had scarcely accomplished the diplomacy by which the bishop in person gave his blessing, when a sign was hung at the door:

YES, THIS IS THE SALOON
DEDICATED BY BISHOP POTTER YESTERDAY.
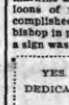
YOU ARE WELCOME.

The result was a great rush to the blessed saloon. There is an annex devoted to the sale of "soft" drinks. It bears a sign announcing that "This is the way to the 'Water Wagon.'" But the rush was chiefly to the hard drink bar. Perhaps the investigating customers wished to convince themselves that it was really true that cocktails could be bought in a consecrated tavern. If this was their object they were fully convinced. The saloon is doing a landoffice business. And the air of New York is full of loud cries. Nearly every clergyman who has remained in town has expressed an opinion one way or the other on this inovation, and the chorus rises from all parts of the country. Many of the clerical criticisms are exceedingly bitter. A few testify to the kindness of heart shown in a purely modern experiment with a benevolent purpose whose outcome should be awaited with reasonable patience. The W. C. T. U. women have called special meetings, and there is lively discussion very in many quarters. The newspapers are still giving more space to the discussion than to the war. It must be admitted that up to date the majority opinion runs against Bishop Potter. "Going too far," is the judgment even of the liberals. Perhaps it would have been better if Mr. Johnson hadn't put out the sign. And, by the way, I have omitted to mention that all the other saloonkeepers in New York, who are selling on the same goods, are profoundly disgusted.

Is "Society" Wicked.



NEWPORT clergyman speaking gently but truly of Bishop Potter's inovation, remarks that if the bishop had any sensibility about carousing he would object to the Sunday noises he hears from the Casino near his summer cottage at Newport. There are many indications that the Newport society—which is New York society removed for the summer—is a somewhat godless institution. The searchlight has not been turned on society with a large "S" for some time, and when the thing happens again there will be novel revelations. Yet here is an apologist in Mrs Cornwallis-West, who says society is not so black as it is painted. Mrs. Cornwallis-West, who used to be Lady Randolph Churchill, and before that Jennie Jerome, of New York, and who is a sister of New York's lively district attorney, says that the "smart set" has been described for the most part by folks who don't know very much about it; that an evil construction is put upon relatively harmless matters; that society women are hard driven by "duties" the number and nature of which people who are not in society can scarcely imagine.

In New York, and in the places visited and populated by New Yorkers in summer, there is less bridge than there was a year ago. This is not because sermons have been preached against it, but because, like ping-pong, it has had its day. Cards will stay, but the card player will turn to the next fashionable phase of it.

Popularity of the "Finest."

THE individual New Yorker may follow the occasional example of a writing critic and fling a sneer at the police. Every time there is a crusade against "graft" the title of "finest police force in the world" may be quoted with derision. Nevertheless the average New Yorker likes his policeman. Part of the remarkable efficiency of the metropolitan police rests in the fact that the police are admired, respected, liked. The recent bestowal of "Slocum Medals," one of the echoes of the steamboat disaster, was a typical incident. Police bravery in any American city is likely to elicit a "bravo" and perhaps a substantial recognition. But in New York there is something like sentimentalism about the bravery medals presented by the East Side association bear this inscription: "For humane conduct, sympathetic zeal and kindness in relieving distress."

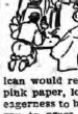
The popular zeal in praising police bravery has just resulted in a police "Board of Honor" which is to look into the claims of policemen for medals and commendation. "Seldom a day passes," says the chief of police, "in which three or four policemen do not receive commendation. Medals are getting common. I think it would be well to know that we have a real hero when a medal is given." The policeman who jumps off a pier and saves a small boy is no longer to be in the way of a medal. This sort of thing is to be regarded as part of his job. But for special or extraordinary acts of bravery there is to be recognition, and it is this new board of honor that is to draw the line between mere duty and special heroism.

Passing of "Camp Meetings."

NEARLY all the camp meetings immediately around New York are the successors of the old-time "camp meeting." There was no break in the chain of programmes. At Ocean Grove, for instance, there have just been holding their thirty-fifth annual meeting. These meetings, held under the jurisdiction of the Methodist church, were true old-time camp meetings when they began, and they so remained for many—at least a score—seasons. Then modifications crept in, partly because a change had crept into the Methodism of the city and its suburbs. The change extended to other camp meetings—at Newark, for instance, and at Sea Cliff—and these places all became more like permanent summer colonies than like camp meetings. The meeting, lasting for a week or ten days, became an incident, and an incident less and less spectacular. The "shouting" days are over, and with those days have passed the habit of going to camp meeting out of curiosity. The church people tell me that the religious spirit is as strong as ever, and that the fruits of these meetings, which draw together audiences of immense size, are as rich and as gratifying as they ever were.

It is notable that a strong liberal movement has entered these summer meetings in and about New York. Denominational lines are much relaxed, and the whole effort is of a summer church info which it is hoped that all evangelical Christians may be drawn.

The Strenuous Barber Shop.



MODERN phases of the strenuous life may be looked for in many places, but I know of no place where it seems more of a contra*diction than at the* barbers. In the "tonsorial parlor" it used to be the tradition that even the hustling Aamrican would relax, take his time, read a pink paper, loll in the far chair without any exertion. Dr. Johnson had time before to press. To read and be shaved, was possible. Then to read and smoke and be shaved was possible. Then came the official boot-black who, by the cooperation of the barber, and by means of a moved chair, polished shoes while the bearer read, smoked and was shaved. This seemed like the limit. But the other day I saw a case that added a new element. The barber was cutting the "patient's" hair. The patient had readjusted his cigar. His right hand rested on the tablet of a manicurist. She was a pretty manicurist, and she bent her blond head over the right hand until it was polished. Then she moved around to the other side of the chair, with her stand and tablet, and manicured the left hand, thereby enforcing the use of the right hand to hold the newspaper.

I can't see how the complexity of life in a barber's shop can be carried much further. But you never can tell. All the fashionable barbers, and some that are not fashionable, have manicurists. They, at least, have come to stay.

OWEN LANGDON.

Another Sermon Spoiled.

He was a very thin man, and undoubtedly he believed his mission in life to be that of reforming the universe. He was death on all bad habits, from smoking to eating hard-boiled eggs, and fishing was down on his list as one of the things likely to encourage laziness.

"Science, art," he sneered, "in fishing! Why, where is it? Why, great big fellows like you spend days sometimes without catching a fish!"

"Quite right," said the fisherman; "and unless you move I shan't get a bite, either!"

"Why should my presence make any difference, to the ignorant fish?"

"Well, you see, that thin black line on the top of the water is your shadow, and the fish think it's another fishing rod and won't come near."—Stray Stories.

As He Thought.

"Ah, professor!" exclaimed the conceited young man; "I wish I knew as much as you do."

"You would know more than I," replied the cruel old professor, "if you only knew as much as you think you know."—Town Topics.

MICROBES KILL RATS

GERMS PITTED AGAINST VERMIN SCORE A VICTORY.

Experts of Pasteur Institute in France Test Efficacy of Novel Means of Protecting Vineyards.

In certain portions of the agricultural districts of France the depredations of rats and mice have been so extensive that the losses arising therefrom have been little less than a plague. The attention of the officials in charge of the Pasteur institute was called to the matter, and they were induced to attack the problem, which they did with such excellent success that a medal in recognition of their services has been awarded to the institute by the government through the minister of agriculture. This recognition took the form of the award of a much prized decoration to the president of the institute and another to his assistant.

These rodents swarmed the fields and invaded the barns of the farmers. In many cases smaller specimens of the domestic animals were attacked and killed and partially devoured by the overwhelming hordes. It was a common experience for a farmer to find an entire field of truck ruined by the animals which sometimes ate the roots of the plant and at other times selected the stalk.

The problem which confronted the experts of the Pasteur institute was to devise some method of killing the rats without injuring the other domestic animals which might be found around the farms. They have apparently succeeded in finding the means of wiping out the rodents, says a Paris report, but there is some doubt yet whether the poison will not have some serious effect on other animals which might devour the soup.

Having made up his mind to try a dose of microbes, Dr. Roux prepared for a battle royal with the rats. The ground selected for this mortal combat covered a space of 2,965 acres, and extended over the territory of the communes of Meaux and More. Here various kinds of cereals, vines and trees abound, and here also the sowing of various kinds of grain last autumn had been completely destroyed by these rodents. This peer of the destruction of fodder for cattle—such as lucern —hence butter and milk production was seriously affected. The ground throughout the district was literally perforated with holes, which seemed to be connected underground with little passages. Such was the condition of the scene of operation of Dr. Roux, which certainly seemed to offer a severe test for the efficacy of his discovery.

Dr. Roux succeeded in interesting the farmers of the district in these very important experiments, and soon the celebrated scientist had organized a corps of assistants on the spot. These assistants, under the direction of Dr. Roux, dipped quantities of wheat, oats and pieces of bread into the bouillon, and which consequently became immediately impregnated with the microbes which the bouillon, or soup, contained.

Then the poisoned grain, etc., was placed in and about the holes where the rats and mice were known to be. The total quantity of poisoned "paste" distributed amounted in all to 4.8 metric tons of bread and 9.2 metric tons of cereals, while the "nourrissant parlor" it used to be the tradition that even the hustling Aamr-

To determine the effect of this poisoned paste on there destructive little enemies Dr. Roux decided that there had been microbe treated plowed up in order to see the condition of the rodents after they had eaten the paste and to fix approximately the number of rats and mice that had succumbed to the poison. The results obtained surpassed all expectations on the part of the simple farmer. Rats and mice were dead in almost alarming quantities and became quite as much of a pest when dead and putrefying as when they had been alive, but happily, in another sense of the word. Dr. Roux estimates that be destroyed no less than 95 per cent. of the rodents by these experiments. As many as 10 to 20 rats were sometimes found in one hole.

Not satisfied with this ocular demonstration of the success of his paste, Dr. Roux proceeded to a field of an area of about two and one-half acres and surrounded by vines. Here he had a number of rat holes counted, this number being fixed at 12,486, which were carefully closed. Two days later the holes were again visited, and it was found that 1,304 had been reopened by the rats. The poisoned paste was again brought into requisition. Eight days afterward the field was again visited and the holes which had been opened counted, the process being again repeated two days later. The holes that had been opened by them were found to be 37.

The minister of agriculture, on being satisfied with the results thus obtained by Dr. Roux and acting on the advice of the eminent scientist, proposes to introduce into the chamber of deputies a bill for the purpose of compelling farmers in rat infested districts to coöperate in using the above described paste.

The First White Man.

The first white man to visit what is now the site of the city of St. Paul, Minn., was Louis Hennepin, a native of Belgium and a friar of the order of St. Francis, who came in 1680 and named the falls above the city in honor of his patron saint.

Home Health Club

By DAVID H. KEEDER, Ph. D., M. D.
La Porte, Ind.

I one time described quite briefly the sweat glands of the skin, and their functions, showing the importance of these little organs in the human system, their effect on the heat of the body and in throwing off the toxins produced in the ordinary physiological process.

There are nearly a dozen ways that the secretions of the sweat glands of the skin may be increased, many of which are very familiar, such as increase of temperature of the air surrounding the body, increased heart action, rise of the temperature of the blood, or a combination of the two latter, due to exercise, a filthy condition of the blood due to excessive drinking of water is well known to affect perspiration, while friction or percussion of the skin has been observed by many as stimulating to the sweat glands. Many drugs known as diaphoretics, and electric stimulation of the secretory nerves, will cause increased activity of the glands, while mental excitement and morbid conditions of the system, such as fever, rhumatism, etc., cause local or general perspiration. The increased perspiring in a damp atmosphere is probably more apparent than real, a person being more conscious of the activity of the glands because the evaporation of the secretions is retarded by the moisture in the air.

There are not nearly so many ways of checking or decreasing the activity of the sweat glands, but the one cold applications to the skin is known to all. Certain drugs are known to check the activity, and in some forms of disease, as paralysis and diabetes, the same results are observed. The layman is not so familiar with the fact that the sweat glands work in a sort of complementary manner with the kidneys and bowels, being active when these organs are relatively passive and vice versa.

During the warm summer months, when perspiration is freely exuded, the function of the kidneys is comparatively light, the urine secreted being very much less than during the cold winter months, and the skin is found to perform the greater part of many cases of kidney troubles in a better manner than those affections can be otherwise handled.

In the skin are found also the sebaceous glands which secrete the oily matter which keeps the hair and skin in good condition. The secretions of these glands are much affected by heat, as applied through water.

In the treatment of all maladies by the use of water, one of the most important effects is that directly produced on the nervous system. The skin in that part of the body which first comes in contact with the external world and imbedded in it are an enormous number of small nerves that extend from the brain and are a part of the central and sympathetic nervous systems. Through these small nerves the sensations of touch and temperature are received, while through others the motor impulses are enforced, the glands made active, and the ordinary responses to external stimuli effected. Now the tactile sense, that of touch, is variable, at different places on the body, the variation being due to location of the nerves. For instance, there is very different in different areas, the forehead, lips, cheeks, temples, back of fingers and forearm, front of legs being more sensitive than other parts of the body. Hence it will be seen that the same pressure applied to one area of the body surface will not produce the same effect that it will if applied to another, and the consequent reaction from the same stimulation will be different when the force is applied to different parts of the body.

In the sensation of temperature, two different sets of nerves are involved; one that receives impressions of heat and one that receives impressions of cold. These nerves are so distributed in the skin that there are certain spots where cold sensations only are perceptible, and others where hot sensations only are sensed. Some of the most interesting effects that can be produced in the human machine are the sensations or stimulations of these different spots, and it is with these reactions that hydrotherapy mostly deals. While these spots are not sensitive to pain or pressure impressions, they may be physically felt and the cold skin responding to the stimulation from menthol, while the hot spots respond from carbon dioxid. Thus it will be seen that an application of these substances to the skin will produce effects similar to those of changes in temperature of the air.

Like the pressure sense, that of temperature varies in different parts of the body, the most sensitive areas being the tips of the fingers, eyelids, forehead, lips, the backs of hands, palms, legs and back. Some of these will sense variations in temperature as slight as one-tenth of a degree, and when large areas are subjected to thermal changes the sensation is of greater intensity than when small areas are stimulated. Thus, water in which the whole arm is immersed feels several degrees warmer than water of the same temperature in which only one finger is immersed. Another curious effect directly opposed to this, is the one produced by suddenly plunging the whole body into cold water. Here the result is less shocking to the nervous system than where the body is slowly immersed, the effect being due probably to the fact that there is a limit of sensibility to all cold impressions. Another peculiar effect is due to the combination of pressure and temperature, cold water producing a greater sensation of pressure than hot water. The stimulation of cold is much more readily sensed than that of heat, as may be felt almost instantly, while the latter must act for a certain period of time before it is perceptible, and then is gradually felt, although, of course, the time employed in the sensation is extremely short.

Water is one of the very best media for conveying temperature to the body, as the nerves are much more affected by good conductors of heat than by poor ones. Different sensations of temperature are produced by different substances that are of the same temperature, the impressions from good conductors of heat being much more intense.

Painful impressions of heat are not appreciated until a temperature of 109 degrees is reached, and the body is more sensitive to slighter changes of heat and cold near the temperature of the blood, namely from 80 to 90 degrees. Sudden changes from heat to cold everyone knows the story well, affect the nervous system than the constant application of either one, because the temperature sense may become fatigued in the latter case. Like all other senses this one may be cultivated to distinguish finer variations, as experts may learn with a little practice.

Now when it is remembered that the nerves that produce the temperature sensation are connected with the brain and spinal cord centers that control the heat of the body, it will be readily seen how important is a line of treatment that acts directly on the temperature sense as does hydrotherapy. When it is considered that the arteries of veins are controlled by nerves that dilate and contract those vessels when properly stimulated, it will be seen that any stimulation from the surface of the body will have a wonderful effect on any part that may not be performing its normal functions. Thus it is at once apparent that by changes in pressure or temperature at the surface, some most remarkable physiological results may be produced, and it is with these that hydrotherapy deals.

CLUB NOTES.

Hayesville, O.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Sir: Please give in the Home Health Club department the indications and treatment for trouble in the legs when so weak, and I am so lean in flesh. You gave in your lecture on June 22 directions for reducing flesh; please give directions for gaining flesh.

I am a club member, and, as I have been absent, I have not heard number six the other end of the line. A. N.

It is by no means clear from your letter that you have locomotor ataxia, as simply a weakness of the legs and loss of flesh would not be enough evidence. Locomotor ataxia is a disease that is commonly due to an affection of the spinal cord, and while unsteadiness of gait is the most common symptom of all, yet merely a weakness in the lower extremities does not indicate the disease. It is not possible for me to give a full description of the malady in so short a space as I am here allotted, but if you will write me more fully regarding your symptoms I will be able to give you other directions which will be more satisfactory.

In regard to gaining flesh I will state that I have intended to write something about this subject for a long time, and probably will do so one long. Loss of flesh may be due to so many causes that it offers quite a field for writing. In your case let me suggest as the first requisite for the gain of flesh, the injunction: Do Not Worry.

You probably never saw a large, heavy person, of a nervous, excitable temperament, and nearly every individual you have ever seen with that kind of temperament has been thin. In this world of many cares we permit ourselves to be easily worried, and expend a very large part of the nutrition that comes into our stomach in nervous waste.

Do Not Worry.

All communications for the Home Health club must be addressed to Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind., and inclose full name and address with four cents in postage.

Compote of Peaches.

Peel, halve and remove pits from 12 ripe peaches. Put into a clean saucepan, two cupfuls of cold water, one of sugar and the kernels of half the peaches, scalded and blanched. Boil and skim, add the peaches and cook from six to eight minutes. Remove carefully and pile in a glass dish. Boil the syrup down to about one-half its original bulk, then pour over the peaches, chill and serve.—Washington Star.

Potato Puffs.

Easy Potato puffs for breakfast are made by previously boiling 12 or more good size potatoes. Drain, mash perfectly and lightly. Beat two eggs, melt some butter and stir it into the eggs; heat this mixture into the mashed potatoes, salt and pepper to taste. Shape into little balls, or put in pans parts half full of the mixture, and only brown them delicately. Serve hot.—Boston Globe.

Cherry Tapioca Pudding.

Soak one small cupful of tapioca in water over night in the morning add a pinch of salt and cook until clear; then add butter the size of an egg, one cupful of sour cherries, half a cupful of sherry wine and sugar enough to sweeten. Flavor with vanilla, turn into an earthen dish, grate nutmeg over the top and bake until it bubbles up; serve cold with cream.—Household.

TALK ON MANCHURIA.

HISTORY OF THE COUNTRY IS ONE OF RAPID GROWTH.

Now, However, the Hardy Courage of the Past Has Degenerated Into Lazy Parasitism and Lack of Patriotism.

New York Special.

The most interesting article in the July Century is one on "Manchuria," from the pen of James W. Davidson. From it we learn that Manchuria though a part of China, is considered distinct from the empire proper in much the same way that Americans regard Alaska, though there is no similarity in their respective positions with regard to administration. Three or four centuries ago the southern part of what is now known as Manchuria was occupied by Koreans and was a portion of their territory. It is not known how far north their rule extended, but there are traces of Korean architecture as far as Liaoyang, which is 130 miles from the present Korean boundaries. At this early period the Manchu element consisted of a few powerful tribes, who, though of the same general Mongolian stock, possessed many ethnological points sufficient to distinguish them from the great Chinese race which occupied China proper. The roving life in a wild country where young braves thought it no extraordinary achievement to kill with bow and arrow, single handed, the fierce northern tiger, developed the Manchu into a hardy, fearless warrior, with a love for courageous deeds.

The history of the Manchus is one of continued and rapid growth. From a small tribe their influence spread over the great plains of western Manchuria until they became a force which even great China deemed it advisable to conciliate. Their ambitions knew no limit, and early in the sixteenth century they began an invasion of China. A century later, by methods which at times gave evidence of the most crafty and skillful diplomacy, and again were those of a most cruel tyrant, the greatest empire that the world has known was acquired by a race of half savage nomads.

A MANCHURIAN COLONEL.
(He Is Quite a Fighter, Although Not Much to Look Upon.)

As the home of the Manchu dynasty, Manchuria, in the eyes of the emperor, deserved honored treatment, and the followers of the standard—there was scarcely a Manchu who had not seen service—were specially cared for. It was declared by special decree that all *Manchus for time unending should be*long to one of the eight banner corps and receive a small monthly stipend. The great home country should remain the exclusive property of all Manchus, and Chinese were forbidden to hold land in it. The Koreans had now been driven to the south, and Manchuria extended virtually to the banks of the Yalu on the south and to the sea on the east.

The Manchu policy, which, in its conception, provided for the continuance and development of a great race of pure Manchus, who would always be at the beck and call of the Manchu dynasty and would be a safeguard against the restoration of Chinese rule, brought on results quite the reverse of those desired. The Manchu found his small wage sufficient at first to provide food, and there was little or no necessity to live the arduous life of a hunter or herdsman. In a generation or two the race had degenerated into a lazy band of parasites who, in the absence of a strenuous life, had lost all the qualities of the warlike spirit which had brought to them a great empire. They maintained a reputation for fierceness, however, and at the time of the late war with Japan it was predicted that the Japanese would find the Manchu a formidable enemy. This *first engagement between the two dis*played forever this illusion.

Has Third Set of Teeth.

Sixty-year-old Miss Maria Williamson, of Owingsville, Ky., is attracting much attention because of a third set of teeth she is cutting. Two teeth have already made their appearance. She lost her second set of teeth several years ago and has since used false ones. Recently on adjusting the plate she found that the new teeth interfered with the plate. Her grandfather, who died many years ago, cut a third set of teeth after he had passed his sixtieth year, and it is said that other members of the family had similar experiences.

Electric Boots for Brokers.

Electric boots are worn by six members of the London Stock Exchange. Each man goes to business every day with a piece of copper in one boot and a piece of zinc in the other. The idea is that if a man is always standing on the zinc a little electricity will pass through his body continually, with beneficial results to his health.

If it wasn't for that much abused Constitution what a tame thing a Presidential campaign speaker's "oration" would be.

The New York Herald man who figures out there will be possibly a 1,500 Democratic majority in this State, is a very poor bookkeeper.

Judging from the way his vote showed up at the primaries, Dovery will not have to go to a great expense to take all his followers to Esopus.

An exchange explains why Texas lawyers are not generally addicted to the smoking habit. It has all along been supposed that the true reason was that it would be time enough in the next world.

A village merchant some years ago invariably started his advertisement in the country weekly paper with the sentence: "It's the well dressed man who gets along in this world." However false his assertion may have been there will be an exception when "Tim" Woodruff is nominated for governor of New York. Those vests of his will have won the day.

Exposure to a sudden climatic change produces cold in the head and catarrh is apt to follow. Provident with Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh. Price 50 cents at druggists or Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York, will mail it. The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses and cures. Cream Balm quickly cures the cold.

—T. N. Currin, of the First National Bank, has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

—John Aston, clerk at the Hotel Kensington, will take his vacation this week.

—Harry Blimm, of Somerset street, has taken a position at Woodhull & Martin's store.

—Robert Schreiner, of L. W Randolph's drug store, is spending his vacation at Cape May.

—The New Jersey State Firemen's Association will hold its annual convention at Atlantic City on September 26.

—It was the opinion of many Plainfielders who witnessed the Plainfield-Westfield game at Westfield on Saturday that Umpire Watt was too severe in calling balls and strikes, especially on Pitcher Garvin, of the locals. That he was partial to the home team in this respect seemed apparent.

AMUSEMENTS.

Professor's pretentions are always the best on the boards of Broadway and Plainfielders will find a great variety of good boys among his attractions. Miss May, just returned from a cocqueen in England, is at Daly's, where she is playing to crowded houses in "The School Girl." "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" opens tomorrow night at the Savoy and Lee Dittrobstein's new comedy "Military Maid" is running at the Garrick. Sam Bernard and Hattie Williams close tomorrow night after a second run of "The Girl from Kay's," which had a record breaking season last season. William Collier is still a favorite at the Criterion, where Richard Harding Davis' "The Dictator" is making the hit that might be expected of it.

"Pif, Paff, Pouf" continues merrily at the Casino Theatre, New York, undisturbed, except once last week by a vandal whose politician partisanship created quite a commotion in the peaceful mind of Manager Fred G. Whitney. Outside of the Casino is a large sign on which are painted the names of the musical numbers in the production and the hour at which they are rendered. One of these songs is "The Ghost That Never Walked," a ditty which is most laughably sung by Eddie Foy. Originally, the number was mentioned on the sign as follows: "9.17. Eddie Foy. 'The Ghost That Never Walked.'" When Mr. Whitney reached the theatre last Tuesday a humorist of Republican persuasion had changed the line to read: "9.17. Judge Parker. 'The Ghost That Never Talked.'" "For Heaven's sake, get the painter!" exclaimed Mr Whitney. "We'll antagonize all the Democrats in New York." And so the sign was restored, though not until early stirrers on Broadway had enjoyed many laughs at the turn that had been given it.

After Labor Day, next Monday, and continuing until the close of the Luna Park on September 25, the management will inaugurate a series of fete or carnival days, throwing open the Streets of Delhi to the public and giving the Durbar parade and other features free. On special carnival days confetti and other missiles that are conducive to fun and harmlessness will be sold on the grounds for the use of the visitors, who will be invited to enjoy themselves. It is the avowed intention of the management to have the season close with a burrah and a flash of light and crash of brass bands that will be heard and realised all over the country. Fire and Flames, which drew larger crowds last week than ever before, on Sunday last played to crowded houses at every performance, and on one occasion the sign "standing room only" had to be put on the front. Miss Rose Sonderman, the sixteen-year-old cornetist who has been giving free concerts at the entrance to the Streets of Delhi, will continue during the week. Her playing has been highly commended by many musicians who have heard her during the last two weeks.

Edwin Holt, who has been engaged by Henry W. Savage to play one of the leading roles in George Ade's new comedy, "The College Widow," which will be produced September 12 in Washington, had just signed the contract when he met a stranger, who rushed toward the actor and shook hands with him. "Isn't this Edwin Holt?" asked the stranger. "I am so glad to see you again. I saw you play Dick Deadeye in 'Pinafore' at an open-air performance at Washington Park Lake near Kansas City. You were a poor actor, but the way you swam ashore from the good ship Pinafore at every performance was the finest feat of swimming I ever saw." Mr. Holt thanked the stranger, but neglected to inform him that the man who swam from the ship to the shore of the lake was a professional swimmer hired for the purpose. Mr. Holt gave a realistic performance of Dick Deadeye, but was compelled to hire a substitute when the management insisted on throwing Deadeye overboard every night.

George A. Chapman and family, of Stella avenue, returned Saturday from Broadleaf, Va., where they have been spending the summer.

Mrs. G. Q Packer and daughter, Miss Lulu Packer, of East Sixth street, have returned from a week's vacation spent at Asbury Park.

Civil Engineer Frank J. Hubbard and wife, of East Fifth street, have returned home after a month's vacation, spent at Long Lake, in the Adirondacks.

Rev. Dr. H. A. Griesmer, of Baltimore, who preached at the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening, was the guest of Walter M. McGee, of Rockview avenue.

John Hiscox, manager of the Sabbath Recorder, is expected home in a few days with his family. He attended the Seventh-Day Baptist Conference in the West and on his way home will stop for his family, who has been spending the summer in New York State.

NEW MARKET SCHOOL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Flames Threaten Adjoining Buildings and Plainfield is Called Upon for Help.

LOSS WILL REACH $6,000

BLAZE DISCOVERED AT 8:30 AND EVIDENTLY OF INCENDIARY ORIGIN.

Structure Was Erected Thirteen Years Ago and Had Up-to-Date Equipments—"Mayor" Bill Offers New Building.

For the second time within a few months, New Market again underwent a fire scare early Friday night and the Plainfield departments was called upon for aid. Evidently of incendiary origin, flames broke out in the village's brick school house, which provides accommodation for pupils from all over Piscataway township, and within a short time the structure was a heap of smoldering ruins. Composed of inflammable material, the interior burned fiercely and on several occasions the residence and barn of John Sheppard and the residence of Mayor Bill Smith were threatened. Residents of the village formed a bucket brigade and their efforts were all that prevented a general conflagration. The loss aggregates $6,000 with half that amount of insurance.

The fire was first noticed by several boys at 8:30 and before they could give the alarm at Hotel Nelson the interior was all ablaze. When it was seen how dangerous the flames were becoming telephone messages were sent to Dunellen and Plainfield for help and both departments responded. Dunellen was unable to do anything as it has no steamer and there is no water pressure in the village. The members of the department joined the bucket brigade and helped keep the flames from spreading. Chief Doane sent No. 3 engine and hose wagon from local headquarters in charge of Captain Townley, and the run to the village by way of Dunellen was made in twenty minutes. Water was secured from the brook which forms the lake's outlet and that was left of the fire was soon put out.

The school was a one and-a-half story building and was erected thirteen years ago. An addition was put on two years ago and it was made into one of the most modern structures in Plainfield's suburbs, with large classrooms and up-to-date equipment. The fall session was to have commenced next Tuesday and it is probable that the township Hall will be rented until provision can be made for a new building. The school was insured for $2,000 and the contents for $400, the policies being placed by Howard Bird, of Dunellen. Included in the destruction was thirty tons of coal just put in the bins.

An investigation as to the cause of the blaze has been started by the township authorities but there is practically no clue to follow up. Several men were working in the building during the day but it is not believed that they had anything to do with its starting.

"Mayor" Bill informed the school authorities this morning that he would bear the expense of a new building provided a statue of himself would be placed in the front yard as a memorial. His offer is to be acted upon at once and will probably be accepted.

PERSONAL.

E. H. Booth and family, of Central avenue, are home from their summer outing.

Miss Anna Finnigan, of Newark, is the guest of the Misses Hibbitts, of West Fifth street.

Stanley Conover, of High Bridge, is visiting his brother, Charles Conover, of Elmwood place.

Miss Anna Butler, of this city, is spending her vacation at Junction, Hunterdon County.

Miss Shreve, of Grove street, has returned from Bryn Mawr, Pa., where she has been visiting friends.

Mrs. Asa Collier, of East Sixth street, has returned after spending two weeks at Baltimore, visiting relatives.

The Misses May and Anna Stafford, of Essex street, have gone to Rutherford for a two weeks' stay with relatives.

Miss Nellie Mosny, of this city, who has been spending six weeks at her former home in High Bridge, has returned.

Rev. George B. Shaw and family, of Central avenue, are home from Wisconsin, where they have been enjoying their vacation.

Miss Kate Bigiow, of Central avenue and Miss Anna Day, principal of a Plainfield school, have been spending a delightful summer in Canada and the New England States.

MOURNED AS DEAD, HUSBAND REAPPEARS

Plainfield Woman Finds That Body Interred in Family Plot is Not That of Her Spouse.

INSURANCE COLLECTED

SHE IS A NIECE OF JUSTICE OF THE PEACE HEZEKIAH HAND.

Mrs. Frank Holborn Believed Man She Wedded Had Been Drowned —He is Back in Brooklyn Now.

Legally dead and buried for more than four years, Frank Holborn, whose wife, formerly Miss Mary Hand, is now living in Brooklyn, has again turned up again as Brooklyn and called on his "widow" this week for the first time. Mrs. Frank Holborn is the daughter of Henry Hand, one of the five Hand brothers, four of whom live in this city. They are Capt. William Hand, David Hand, Justice Hezekiah Hand and Thomas Hand. Henry Hand, who is a resident of Sandford, Florida, was among those present at the Hand family reunion in July at Scotch Plains.

Holborn married Miss Mary Hand in this city when he was twenty-one years of age. They had four children, two of whom, both boys, are still living. The couple lived for many years in Brooklyn, but in 1900 Mr. Holborn disappeared. His wife notified the metropolitan police, but no trace could be found of the missing man. In March of that year, Mrs. Holborn saw in a daily paper a picture of a body that day discovered in the ice of the Hackensack river. She recognized the features as those of her husband. Together with her cousin, Edward Hand, of Scotch Plains, and the family physician, Mrs. Holborn went at once to the morgue where the body was being retained, and identified it as that of her husband from a peculiar scar on the left shoulder.

She took possession of the body, and it was subsequently buried in the family plot in Cypress Hill cemetery. The supposed dead man's affairs were adjusted by executors and $2,000 life insurance was paid by the American Legion of Honor.

What possessed Holborn to desert his wife as he did is not definitely known. His story shows that he had travelled abroad and had been living in China, the Philippine Islands, and various other countries. About three years ago, Mr. Holborn wrote to his wife in Brooklyn and told her he intended to settle in San Jose, California, and wished her to come on with the children. Thinking, as she did, that he husband was certainly dead, Mrs. Holborn supposed that the letter was bogus.

About a month ago, Holborn, who thought his wife had turned against him by her refusal to live with him, returned to Brooklyn to look her up. After two weeks' search, he located her Tuesday at her home on Glenada place, Brooklyn. Mrs. Holborn believes her husband's story now, and sees the mistake she made in burying a stranger in the family cemetery. It is understood that she will make an effort to pay back the life insurance awarded her by the false identification at the morgue.

GETS ANOTHER MANAGER

BOROUGH NOW HAS TWO PROMINENT RAILROAD MEN AS RESIDENTS.

Through the efforts of Mayor N. B. Smalley, George H. Campbell, general manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, yesterday leased the Thorn property on Grove street, next to Charles Matthews' residence and will take possession October 1. This will give the borough the unique distinction of numbering among its residents two railroad managers, the other being W. G. Besler who directs the affairs of the New Jersey Central and who first introduced Mr. Campbell to Plainfield. The latter has been living in Baltimore but as his offices have been transferred to New York he wished to locate in this vicinity. His family consists of his wife and four children.

Within the past few days several other important residential leases have been effected in the borough, among them being three of the largest houses in its limits. Mayor Smalley has devoted much personal attention to them and he is greatly pleased with the boom property has taken.

Lodge Social.

Friendship Lodge, Daughters of Rebecca, held a successful sociable at the home of George Lodgate, of Clinton avenue, last Friday. A good sized delegation from the lodge attended, together with several friends, and a most enjoyable evening was passed.

STRONG OPPOSITION TO DOUBLE TRACK LINE

Majority of Property Owners on East Front Street and Watchung Ave. Protest.

TROLLEY CO.'S PLANS

IF SCHEME IS FUSTRATED, IT WILL PRESENT ANOTHER PROPOSITION.

P. S. C.'s Idea is to Run a Spur Through Central Avenue From Fourth to Front Streets.

In opposition to the petition being circulated by Charles H. Hand to gain the consent of property owners for the laying of an additional street car track on Watchung avenue and East Front street, another one was started Friday by J. Fred MacDonald. Mr. Hand's asks that the necessary permission be given the Public Service Corporation, the only stipulation being that it pave inside the double tracks and for a distance of eighteen inches each side with vitrified brick. He had secured a large number of signers when Mr. MacDonald placed his in circulation and by many of the property owners it is believed to be the better of the two.

It urges the property owners not to act in favor of a double track and the signatures of every affected person on Watchung avenue, between Front and Second streets, with the exception of Mr. Hand, and several of those on Front street, were secured. Some of the signers favor consenting for two tracks providing the company pave the streets from curb to curb with vitrified brick.

The company has announced that if it is not allowed to get through with the two tracks as planned, it will continue its effort to gain consent for a single spur through Central avenue from Fourth to Front streets. Counsellor Harry C. Runyon has been securing the necessary permits and has met with ready response. Application will then be made to the Common Council and if it gets the franchise, the Dunellen and through line cars will diverge at Watchung avenue and Fourth street and follow the new loop through to Front street. This would make it inconvenient for people in the business district to get cars on the main line east or west, but the Public Service officials maintain it will relieve the Watchung avenue terminus congestion.

The petition being circulated by Charles H. Hand has been signed by the following property owners and merchants: Woodhull & Martin, H. W. Marshall, Horace M. Sherwin, H. E. Gayle, H. B. MacDonald, Dr. Albert Pittis, James Hansen, Louis Becker, Henry Windham, John I. Brokaw, Sobwed Brothers, Frank H. Smith, J. O. Pope, John J. Kenney, M. C. VanArsdale and Robert Gardner.

'PHONE CO. GETS NON-SUIT

ISAAC LAMBERT LOOSES HIS SUIT AGAINST THE CORPORATION.

In the suit brought against the Northeastern Telegraph and Telephone Company by Isaac Lambert, of Fanwood, a non-suit was granted the company Friday by Justice of the Peace Clark, at South Plainfield. Harry C. Runyon, Esq., counsel for the defendant company, asked for the non-suit on the grounds of a defective summons. In bringing the action the plaintiff named the defendants as the Philadelphia and New York Telephone Company.

The action was brought against the company for the alleged cutting down of several trees on Mr. Lambert's property, although it is said the company has paid the privilege of setting its poles. Immediately after the non-suit was granted, a new suit was started by the plaintiff and he now says that he will engage a lawyer to look after his interests. The summons are returnable Saturday, Sept. 10.

The Northeastern Telegraph and Telephone Company is a part of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and it is now establishing a through trunk line service. The company will give no local service.

WESTFIELD WINS IN ELEVENTH INNING, 1-0

Plainfield A. C. is Defeated in One of the Greatest Games of Ball in Local History.

NOT AN EARNED RUN

BIG CROWD ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PITCHERS' BATTLE.

Plainfield's Fine Double Play in the Sixth—Westfield's Errorless Work—The Score in Detail.

Following a nip and tuck battle which lasted for eleven innings, during which not a single man on either team was able to score, Westfield finally won the eighth contest in the series of ten with Plainfield, at Recreation Park, Saturday afternoon. In the eleventh, after Waller went out on a fly to Walton, Seward got a pass, Quinby got a single, Smithson reached first on Walton's error and on Roohford's single, Seward crossed the plate with the winning run. The playing was sharp and brilliant on both sides.

CRAP GAME QUARREL LEADS TO STABBING

An Unknown Colored Man Plunges Knife Into "Sue" Newman's Abdomen.

VICTIM IN HOSPITAL

CLAIMS HE DOES NOT KNOW IDENTITY OF HIS ASSAILANT.

Affray Occurred Outside of City Limits on Grant Avenue, and Local Police Unable to Follow it Up.

In a wrangle over a crap game which took place on Grant avenue just over the city line, Sunday afternoon, John Newman, of West Third street, familiarly known as "Sue," was almost fatally stabbed. A colored man, whose name the victim does not know or refuses to divulge, plunged a knife into his abdomen three times and then slashed one arm in a fearful manner. As Newman fell to the ground with blood pouring from him, the entire crowd beat a retreat with the exception of one young man who ran to Dr. Cregar's office and asked him to go to the scene.

The physician called a cab before going out and he had fixed Newman's wounds temporarily before its arrival. He was placed in it and taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he lay covered between life and death until last night. He was then declared out of danger although the knife thrusts in the stomach were ugly ones and only by the fraction of an inch escaped piercing the vital organs.

It has been the custom for Plainfield young men to congregate on the outskirts of the city Sundays to play crap and poker and the gathering which preceded the stabbing was an unusually large one. There had been bad feeling between the negroes and whites in the crowd and finally a colored man and Robert Scott, of Muhlenberg place, got into an altercation about a bet. The negro drew a knife and made a lunge at Scott and as he did so, Newman jumped between them. The blade of the weapon entered his body to the hilt. The infuriated colored man then struck out desperately and his victim was unable to ward off the blows, while his friends were so frightened there would be a general fracas they fled in every direction.

The city police were notified of the affair but as it took place outside of their jurisdiction they could do nothing, although Sergeant Frederickson and several patrolmen scoured the vicinity in the hope of landing some of the gang. Newman maintains that he does not know the identity of the stabber and the other white men are non-committal. It is believed by the authorities that Newman and his friends intend keeping still until he recovers and can seek their own revenge. The Middlesex county officials have been apprised of the affair but as yet have made no move to capture the assailant.

Selecting Headquarters.

The committee recently appointed for the selection of Republican campaign headquarters in this city, is at present undecided between two locations. It is possible for them to secure the Casino or the Babcock building store formerly occupied by Woodbull & Martin for mass meetings.

Mrs. George E. Pierce and daughter, Miss Pierce, of Belvidere, Ill., who have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Thorn, of East Second street, have returned home.

FIRST ENGINEER WAS A PLAINFIELD MAN

Levi Shattuck at the Throttle of the First Train Run on the Jersey Central's Road.

WHY HE STEPPED OUT

THEN CALLED THE SOMERVILLE AND ELIZABETHTOWN RAILROAD.

Declined to Work on Sundays—He Rose to the Position of Superintendent of a Line.

But very few Plainfielders and probably only one or two of the New Jersey Central's great number of conductors are aware of the fact that the first man to don the uniform and run the engine for the local road was at one time a resident of this city. He was Levi Shattuck and the facts of his trials and tribulations as a railroad man have only recently been made known. The details have been published by the Railroad Employe in its last issue as follows:

"Mr. Shattuck was born at Fayston, Vt., in 1816. When he was 2 years of age his father removed the family to Massachusetts, where, in Amherst and North Hadley he lived with his parents until 1836. In that year he moved to New Brunswick, N. J., and engaged in the broom-corn business.

"In November, 1838, Mr. Shattuck removed to Plainfield and became an employee of the Somerville and Elizabeth-town Railroad, which at that time extended no further west than that town. Desiring to become a locomotive engineer, Mr. Shattuck engaged to fire for Joshua Martin, on the engine 'Philadelphia,' for eleven weeks, at the end of which time he was placed in charge of the 'Eagle,' as engineer. When the road was extended to Bound Brook Mr. Shattuck moved to that town, and while there the question of Sunday work came up. Mr. Shattuck told the then superintendent, Mr. John O. Stearns, that his conscience would not allow him to work on Sundays. The superintendent replied that if that was the case, a locomotive was no place for him, and so Mr. Shattuck, true to his convictions, stepped down and out. His place was filled by Samuel Pangborn, whose conscience was, probably, a little more elastic.

"For a short time Mr. Shattuck worked for the farmers near Bound Brook, but soon Mr. Stearns sent for him and gave him the position to saw wood and pump water at Bound Brook for locomotive use. He also occupied the position of freight agent at that station. About this time he was married to Miss Sarah L. Pack, of New York city.

"When the road was extended to Somerville, on January 2, 1842, Mr. Shattuck went with it, and for a while boarded with the family of Judge Taylor. After acting as freight agent at Somerville for a short time he was appointed to the position of conductor, running from Somerville to Elizabethport and return every day, Sunday excepted.

"For some time there was no ticket agent at Somerville, and the tickets were sold on the train by the conductors. These were collected on the boat on the way from Elizabethport to New York. The company then ran two boats, the 'Waterwitch' and the 'Cinderella,' between these points.

"On one end of the frame building, then occupied as a station at Somerville, was a bell, which Mr. Shattuck had to ring a few minutes before the time for the train to depart. This bell was afterwards taken to the fair grounds, where for some years it was used as a starting bell for the races. It should have been preserved as a historic relic.

"When the road was extended to Whitehouse, in 1843, and again to Phillipsburg, in 1852, Mr. Shattuck was compelled to go with it. Soon after this he received and accepted a proposition to become superintendent of the Corning, Blossburg and Tioga Railroad. He resided at Corning for fifteen years and then moved to Blossburg.

"About 1883 he resigned his position and retired to private life, residing at Mansfield, Pa. His last visit to Somerville was in September, 1888. While on his way home from that trip he was stricken with apoplexy and passed away November 1 of that year."

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS ON LOCAL GOLF LINKS

Labor Day Events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the Park Golf Club.

RESULTS IN DETAIL

SCORES POSTED AT BOTH CLUBS FOR SATURDAY'S PLAY.

Holiday Cup, Kickers' Handicap and Obstable Competition—Holiday Cup and Ball Sweep Stakes at Park.

The events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday included the two weekly competitions for the Golf Committee and Gaston cups and as a rule low scores were posted. For the Golf Committee cup, Robert Abbott and Arthur Murphy were tie for first honors with a net score of 75, while H. D. Hibbard finished next with a 78 net. The scores:

Robert Abbott, 74, plus 1—75; Arthur Murphy, 85, 10—75; H. D. Hibbard, 86, 8—78; C. B. Morgan, 85, 6—79; Henry L. Hall, 98, 18—80; Howard Huntington, 98, 13—81; W. L. Glenney, 80, plus 2—82; Dudley H. Barrows, 97, 4—83; F. H. Andrews, 103, 18—84.

Henry L. Hall, Harold Robert, F. H. Andrews and J. M. Uhler won the points for the Gaston cup. The scores:

Henry L. Hall, 98, 0—90; Harold Robert, 100, 0—100; F. H. Andrews, 103, 0—103; J. M. Uhler, 105, 3—102; A. L. Otterson, 104, 0—104.

The play at the Park Golf Club was for the President's and Park Golf Club cups. C. W. Faber, C. L. Nichols and Dr. H. K. Carroll won points for the handicap cup, and G. W. Faber, Dr. Carroll and C. L. Nichols won the points for the other cup. The scores:

G. W. Faber, 84, 0—84; Charles L. Nichols, 106, 30—86; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 104, 16—88; Nelson A. Miller, 110, 17—93; Charles B. Morse, 108, 14—94; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 112, 17—95; John W. Watson, 126, 30—96; Henry C. Wells, 118, 16—102.

The first round match play in the Governors' competition was the chief event at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday, with this result:

W. J. Bogart, 6, beat J. A. Woodward, 8, 2 up and 1 to play; C. B. Halstead, 5, beat J. A. Worth, 7, by default; M. Whitelock, 3, beat M. Delemester, 14, by default; E. B. Ellis, 4, beat William Russell, 11, by default; E. B. Floyd, 5, beat, William Middleditch, 14, by 8 up and 6 to go; William Davis, 11, beat L. B. Taylor, 10, by 5 up and 4 to go; H. W. Gladwin, 14, beat A. D. Tuttle, 7, 1 up; Hugh Talbot, 13, beat C. E. Halsted, 11, by 3 up.

The second round will be played next Saturday.

A special programme of events attracted the largest crowd of the season to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Monday. The entries in each were unusually large and good scores were returned. There was play all day for the Greens Committee Tankard and Holiday cup, the leading events. Dr. G. W. Endicott won a leg on the tankard with a net score of 71. These scores were posted in this play:

Dr. G. W. Endicott, 86, 15—71; Roger F. Murray, 81, 4—73; Dr. B. VanD. Hedger, 84, 8—76; E. B. Shoemaker, 86, 10—76; D. W. Taylor, 93, 16—76; C. B. Morgan, 83, 6—77; Walter Peterson, 81, 4—77; H. D. Hibbard, 86, 8—78; J. A. Tompkins, 90, 13—78; Dr. J. H. Carman, 93, 15—78; W. L. Glenney, 75, plus 2—80; Arthur Murphy, 88, 8—80; H. O. Munger, 95, 13—81; Howard Huntington, 98, 13—85; C. Burke, Jr., 97, 14—83; G. H. Squires, 99, 13—87; H. F. Fox, 101, 13—88.

In the play for the Holiday cup for those with handicaps of eighteen and over, Henry L. Hall and A. E. Barclay with a net score of 77 were tie for first place. This will be played off later. These scores were returned:

Henry L. Hall, 95, 18—77; A. E. Barclay, 97, 20—77; F. H. Andrews, 99, 18—81; T. W. T. Maxwell, 103, 22—81; E. R. Ackerman, 109, 27—82.

A kickers' handicap was another event of interest. The score was picked between 75 and 85 and happened to be 78. Six contestants returned these scores as follows:

A. L. Otterson, 97, 19—78; Roger F. Murray, 98, 20—78; H. D. Hibbard, 86, 8—78; C. C. Burke, Jr., 97, 19—78; Harold Serrell, 108, 30—78; Arthur Murphy, 88, 10—78. In the draw which followed Harold Serrell won.

In the afternoon there were clock golf competitions for men and women. Leighton Calkins and C. B. Morgan were tie with a score of 31, and in the play-off Morgan won with a 29. Miss Marjorie Fleming won the women's competition with a score of 25.

Probably the most unique event ever held on the course, was a scratch obstacle competition, the conditions for which were:

No. 1, a pinch over long grass and a post, par 3; No. 2, four posts around four stakes, par 4; No. 3, two pitches over fences and a put, par 3; No. 4, a put through a barrel, par 1, total par, 10.

Leighton Calkins won the event with a score of 15, the scores by holes being 4, 5, 3, 3. Miss M. Pendleton Rogers was second with a score of 17. Her scores by holes were 5, 6, 3, 3.

In the evening there was a dinner-dance, which proved to be one of the most pleasant features of the day's programme.

The chief competition at the Park Golf Club yesterday was the play for the Holiday cup. Each contestant was given the choice of playing thirty-six holes, choosing his best scores for each hole which were to count in the two rounds for the cup. The play resulted in a tie between Dr. G. Yahel, scratch, and John L. Watson, who had a handicap of thirty. The course and weather conditions were ideal for the game and many contestants were out.

Instead of the approaching and putting contest for mixed doubles, there was a ball sweepstakes for members. T. U. Dudley won first honors and P. H. Pheland second, while Samuel Townsend, Dr. H. K. Carroll, L. M. Harlow and Charles B. Morse were tie for third honors. Thurlow won in the play-off. These scores were posted for the Holiday cup:

Gus. W. Faber, 76, 0—76; John L. Watson, 106, 30—76; Nelson A. Miller, 95, 18—77; Herbert S. Rogers, 88, 7—81; T. U. Dudley, 93, 12—81; Samuel Townsend, 100, 17—83; Charles A. Mead, 97, 11—86; Henry C. Wells, 104, 16—88.

The event at the Westfield Golf Club yesterday was a thirty-six hole match competition or first and second eights. J. A. Woodward won the cup for the first eight by 2 up. E. B. Floyd was runner-up. S. A. Trevvette won the second cup by 3 up, the runner up being H. W. Gladwin. In the evening there was a dance at the club-house.

BENEATH A FLORAL BELL

FRANK E. KESSELRING AND MISS MABEL G. DEAN PLIGHT THEIR TROTH.

Miss Mabel G. Dean, daughter of Mrs. Laura Dean, of East Front street, and Frank E. Kesselring, of the borough, were married Monday night at the home of the bride's mother. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Rahsedl and was witnessed by a large number of guests from this city, New York, Passaic, Newark, Bayonne, Ocean Grove, Long Island and Clifton, N. J.

Miss Dean was attended by her sister, Miss Laura Dean, as bridesmaid, and Harry Kesselring, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The bride was attired in a gown of white net over white silk and wore a veil. She bouquet was of bridal roses. While the party was assembling beneath a pretty floral bell in the parlor the wedding march was played by Herbert Harold.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the conclusion of which Mr. and Mrs. Kesselring departed for a wedding trip. On returning they will make their home in this city. Both young people are very well known and they were remembered with a large array of handsome presents consisting of silverware, cut glass, bric-a-brac and furniture. The bride presented her attendant with a gold locket and the groom's gift to his best man was a pearl stick pin.

CAPTURED BIG DRUM FISH

With only a small line used in ordinary angling, John Butler, of this city, landed on Clifford's, S. I., Monday, one of the largest specimens of a black drum fish ever seen in this section. It weighed forty pounds and measures from tip to tip just forty inches. Butler was with Ephraim Compton and Frank Cleeves at the time and it required the efforts of all three to make the capture. The fish was gamey and they played it for an hour before it tired out.

Butler presented his prize to the men at Fire Headquarters and they anticipated a fish bake until they learned that there was no oven in the city capable of holding it. They had it taken to Ivamy's market and today it was divided into steaks and distributed.

PERSEVERANCE MADE THE BEST APPEARANCE

Plainfield Lodge Wins First Prize at Pythian Field Day Exercises.

3,000 MEN IN LINE

SOMERVILLE DOES ITSELF PROUD IN ENTERTAINING VISITORS.

Banner Day in the History of the Town and the Entire Programme a Success—Lodge of the Castle in Charge.

For making the best appearance in a procession where scores of organizations were represented, Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of this city, was awarded a prize of $15 at the Pythian field day exercises at Somerville, Monday. Wearing natty yachting caps and carrying canes of uniform design, the Plainfielders won plaudits all along the line and the judges had no difficulty in making the selection. When they passed the reviewing stand with Marshal Asa D. Pope at their head they were greeted with prolonged cheers. Crescent Company, Perseverance's uniformed rank, also presented a very pleasing appearance and executed the military manoeuvres with a dispatch and precision that called for favorable comment from the officers of the day.

The field day as a whole was an entire success and by many Pythians is believed to have surpassed most of those held within recent years. Fully 3,000 men were in line and the parade was a credit to the order. Somerville was in holiday attire with double emphasis and the decorations were far in advance of those at Asbury Park and Long Branch, where the two previous field day exercises took place.

Brigadier-General Hitchcock, of Jersey City, was in general charge at the head of the column and his aides were composed of some of the best known Pythians in the State. One of them was Quartermaster Charles McGinley, of this city. Grand Marshal Nelson Y. Dungan attended to the details of formation and started the procession off without the slightest hitch. It began at 1:30 and lasted nearly two hours, many Plainfield people being among those who witnessed it.

The reviewing stand was on West High street and the judges selected the prize winners as they passed. In addition to Perseverance those which were honored were the following: For the lodge having the largest number of men in line, prize $35, Neschanic lodge, of Neschanic; for the one having the second largest number in line, prize $10, Enterprise lodge, of South River; for the lodge having the largest percentage of members in line, prize $35, Neschanic lodge, of Neschanic; for the lodge having the second largest percentage of members in line, Enterprise lodge, of South River; for the lodge sending a delegation the longest distance, prize $25, Montana lodge, of Montana. For the uniform company the only prize offered were in the competitive drill. Several organizations tried for it and the first award of $60 was made to Palestine Company, of Jersey City. Unity Company, No. 4, of Elizabeth, was second

During the day there were two ball games for the amusement of the crowds, the competing nines in each instance being the Clintons and the Somerville West Ends, the latter virtually being the Scotch Plains nine. The first game took place in the morning and was won by the West Ends by a score of 4 to 3. They lost in the afternoon by 7 to 5. "Jimmy" Montrose, of this city, and George Allen, of Scotch Plains, formed the battery in each instance. Duke's farm at South Somerville and Washington's headquarters were visited by hundreds of people during the day and at night, beside the many impromptu band concerts, there was a dance in Germania Hall, which brought the formal exercises to close. It was a banner day for Somerville and the various committees from Lodge of the Castle, No. 93, which had affairs in charge, deserve unstinted credit for the way in which everything passed off.

Honor for the showing made by Perseverance lodge is due Marshal Asa D. Pope who planned the dress adopted and who worked unceasingly for a good turnout. Unity lodge, No. 102, of this city, had a good representation in line in charge of Jere Van Winkle, Jr., and Chancellor Commander Lafayette Larsen. Captain Flannery and Lieutenant Oliver Pearsce commanded Crescent Company.

Arthur Caisen, of Orchard place, has returned from Lake Hopatcong, where he has been camping for several weeks.

Miss May Voorhees, of Carlton avenue, who has been spending the past two weeks in New Brunswick, has returned home.

RECOLLECTIONS OF FIRST COMMON COUNCIL

John B. Brown, Only Surviving Member of That Body, Talks of Its Work.

ORGANIZED IN 1869

THE LIQUOR LICENSE FEE WAS $650 A YEAR LESS THEN.

At That Time $10,000 a Year Was Considered a Sufficient Appropriation — Mr. Brown's Career.

The recent death of Joseph W. Yates, who was one of the original members of the Plainfield Common Council organized in 1869, recalls the fact that John B. Brown, of 414 Park avenue, is now the only surviving member of that body. His memory is exceedingly good regarding events of the time when the city was not as large as Somerville. Where a majority of the business house are located today, there were cow paths and cornfields in those days.

Mr. Brown was born in Somerville and while a young man learned the blacksmith's trade in New Brunswick, where he was apprenticed. In 1846 he came to Plainfield and soon afterward started in business for himself on Somerset street. His first shop was a small one, but later he erected what is now known as the Heidloff building on Somerset street, where he continued successfully the blacksmith business until his health failed in 1875 when he retired. Since then he has lived quietly and enjoyed the fruits of hard labor. His home on Park avenue is one of the most attractive and comfortable in the city and Mr. Brown takes special pride in keeping the spacious lawn in the best of condition.

In recalling events of the early days, Mr. Brown tells with considerable pleasure of affairs of the first Council. The body was composed of eleven members as at present and Mr. Brown was one of the War Democrats. He served the town as Councilman off and on until 1878 and points with pride to the fact that he always worked for the best interests of the town, regardless of politics.

The original liquor license fee was $50 and those in that business were not allowed to sell anything but beer. Later an attempt was made to allow the selling of rum and this caused a storm of protests. After many heated arguments the Council agreed to raise the fee to $300 a year, this being considered a somewhat prohibitive measure. In those days there were very few drinking places in town and drunkenness was practically unknown.

Mr. Brown says that when he considers that in those days $10,000 was the yearly appropriation for everything, including light, police, streets, fire department and other things, he thinks the town was doing pretty well. One year a large sum was desired, but the taxpayers voted it down.

"In those days," says Mr. Brown, "the citizens ran the town, but nowadays the Council does this work. Then the majority of officers were elected by the people, but now it is the reverse."

In 1888 Mr. Brown was elected collector of taxes. He served but one year and because he enforced the law and did his duty he made many enemies among those who were friends. At the expiration of his term he consented to run again, when he failed to get as many votes as he did majority in the first election.

Although well advanced in years Mr. Brown still takes a lively interest in public matters and keeps himself well-posted on the affairs of the day. He does not show his age and there is scarcely a day but that he does not take a pleasure trip of some kind either by trolley, train or boat

HAS CONGRESSIONAL BEE.

William R. Wilson's Longing Desire to be Nominated.

While the friends of former Prosecutor William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth, are urging him to go after the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fifth district, Mr. Wilson told a reporter yesterday that he had not yet fully decided that he would enter the race. He intimated, however, that there were many reasons why he would like to, but there were other considerations which he could not ignore.

It is known, though, that the former prosecutor, who is a close personal friend of former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, with whom he studied law in the office of the present chancellor, William J. Magie, has sounded some of the most influential Democrats in the district, as well as in the State, and it is said that they have encouraged him to do all he can to land the honor.

INDEPENDENT TICKET IN THE FOURTH WARD

Anti-Saloon Element to Wage a Vigorous Fight in the City Campaign.

N. M. SMITH MENTIONED

MR. SMITH IS ALSO ACTIVE IN THE CAUSE.

Col. Randolph to be Renominated by the Republicans—Three Candidates After the Position.

The fight started in the Fourth ward a year ago against the saloon element by Rev. John MacMurray, at that time pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, is likely to be continued this year by those who were associated with the minister at that time. It will be remembered that Mr. MacMurray and his friends succeeded in defeating the purpose of those advocating a saloon on West Front street near Clinton avenue, and they almost succeeded in defeating the efforts of Michael Watson in getting a license for his place on Grant avenue.

Being encouraged by their success at that time, it is now proposed, according to reports, to renew the fight at the coming city election by putting an independent ticket in the field from the Fourth ward. Those interested in this movement contend that if so many signers could be secured to protest against John J. Goff's application for a license, there is surely propose of electing a ticket.

N. Mansfield Smith, of 730 West Fourth street, one of those who took an active part in the last fight, is said to be at the head of the present movement, and he is said to have assurances of plenty of support. It is even mentioned that Mr. Smith will be a candidate for Councilman on the independent ticket. His friends, many of whom are members of the Monroe Avenue church, have urged him so favorably consider the nomination. There is every reason to believe that Mr. Smith will be a candidate in opposition to the Republican administration candidate and any Democrat who may be put up.

Councilman Randolph's term expires this year and it is the intention of the Republicans to re-nominate him. There will be only one Republican vacancy in the Fourth ward for Council this year and the friends of Mr. Randolph believe he is entitled to another term. Thus far it is not known what the Democrats will do.

"A Father of Netherwood."

John F. Plummer, of New York, one of the "Fathers of Netherwood," was numbered among the guests at the White-Bowen wedding Thursday. Mr. Plummer was a pioneer settler in the Netherwood section and he never missed an opportunity to extoll its residential beauties. Though his home is now in the metropolis his visits to Plainfield are frequent and he enjoys them keenly.

INSTRUCTED BY A GERMAN

Gen. Meckel, a Pupil of Moltke, Taught Strategy to the Japanese General Staff.

Berlin (Germany) Special.

The London Times in a recent issue calls attention to the fact that the success of the Japanese army is due in large measure to the splendid training which was received under the direction of a Prussian, Maj. Gen. Meckel. He is a retired officer, still living in Gross Lichterfelde, a suburb near Berlin.

Gen. Meckel was born March 28, 1842, entered the Prussian army in 1860, and served as a lieutenant in the German-Austrian war. He also participated in the German-France war, and was wounded at the battle of

MAJ. GEN. VON MECKEL.
(German Strategist Who Was Tutor to Japanese General Staff.)

Woerth. Later he became an instructor at the military school in Hanover. In 1876 when he had attained the rank of colonel he entered the general staff of the German army. From 1885-8 he was active as reorganizer of the Japanese army.

Meckel was a favorite pupil of Moltke. Shortly before the death of the great field marshal he assembled the officers of the great general staff and said to them that the rivals of Germany were fully equal to it in equipment and bravery, but not in leadership.

This is just what the Japanese desired to learn—to direct and to lead an army. No one was better suited for this work than Gen. Meckel. Although he did not understand Japanese, and his words had to be translated by an interpreter, he nevertheless was successful in imbuing the "Yankees of the orient" with Moltke's great principles of strategy.

Almost all officers of the Japanese army have sat at Meckel's feet, and the excellent work of the Japanese general staff bears the traces of his instruction. He not only taught the Japanese how to lead an army in war, but also to prepare it in time of peace.

THE WORLD'S FATTEST BOY

He Lives in Illinois, Is 18 Years of Age and Weighs Pretty Nearly Six Hundred Pounds.

Chicago Special.

Our picture is that of Willie Harris, who doubtless is the fattest boy on earth. He is 18 years old and weighs 598 pounds. He is five feet four inches high, having a waist measurement of 71 inches, and a chest 67 inches round. His thigh measures 44 inches and his calf 22 inches.

Harris was born on a farm near Du Quoin, Ill. He has been in excellent health for the most part of his life, although at his birth he weighed only seven pounds. None of the other members of his family are fleshy. The lad is reasonably well educated. When he began to grow there were no over any chairs in the country school building large enough to hold him.

He is obliged to use two ordinary chairs now. At home he sleeps in a bed built especially for him. When he got into his bed at a lodging house the first night the bed broke down under his weight.

The only ready-made things he can buy for himself are collar buttons, neckties and pocket handkerchiefs.

Paper-Making Under Pressure.

The time necessary to convert living trees into newspapers was recently tested in Eisenthal, Australia. At seven thirty-five in the morning, three spruce trees were sawed down; at nine thirty-four the wood, having been stripped of bark, cut up and converted into pulp, became paper, and passed from the factory to the press, whence the first printed and folded copy was issued at ten o'clock. So that in 145 minutes the trees had become newspapers.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the plan being to make them suggestions of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

Modern attractive editions of famous books in the Public Library. Part 2.

Especial care is given at the Public Library in buying the works of standard writers, or in replacing those worn out in the service, to select good and attractive editions. In view of the popularity of little books, these have frequently been given the preference, provided type and paper come up to the requirements. These books have been so popular that a partial list is now offered.

Provided for Grandchildren.

It was announced in Philadelphia, yesterday, that William H. Weightman, the wealthy chemist who left his $60,000,000 estate to his daughter, Mrs. Mary Walker, had also made provision for his six grandchildren, one of whom is Aubrey H. Weightman. His will specifies that $800,000 which he had placed in a bank, be divided among them equally. Mrs. Walker is now raised as one of the richest women in America, her fortune surpassing Hetty Green's by $10,000,000.

H. F. Turrill Engaged.

The engagement is announced of Miss Ida Randolph Simpson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Simpson, of Frederick County, Md., to Howard Pinch Turrill, of Plainfield, N. J.—Frederick, Md., note in Baltimore Sun, of Aug. 30.

CRANKY SHOPPER PUNISHED

A New York Incident Which the Governor of Washington Remembers with Pleasure.

Henry McBride, the governor of Washington, was talking about department stores.

"A department storekeeper in Seattle," he said, "complained to me one day about the people, in outlying sections of the city, who were always having delivered to their homes papers of pins, thimbles, finger rings and similar infinitesimal packages. He said that sometimes a two-horse team would travel a mile to carry home a half dozen shoe buttons or a skein of silk.

"Then he described a trick that an old employer of his in New York had once played on a woman. She was a chronic offender. Two or three times a week she would harass a half dozen salesgirls an hour or more, and finally buy, and order delivered, a paper of needles or a quarter of a yard of ribbon.

"So the man decided to make an example of her.

"One afternoon, after her usual shopping excursion, there drove up to her door a huge dray, drawn by four horses, and containing six brawny, bare-armed laborers.

"A crowd collected. It was thought an enormous safe was to be moved.

"The woman stood at her front door. The laborers laid a heavy plank from the wagon to the sidewalk, and then, with many loud grunts of effort, they rolled back the fusion on to the plank and thence down to the street a tiny spool of cotton thread. They carried the thread painfully to the woman's doorstep, and there, after a desperate struggle, they up-ended it.

"Then they departed. The woman kicked the spool into the gutter immediately, but this action on her part only made more pleasing to the neighbors the little joke that had been played on her."

THIS DOG LIKES TOBACCO.

He Is a Black Spaniel and Recognized as Champion Stump Shooter of Philadelphia.

Every now and then a dog is heard of that has tastes in the way of beer or other intoxicants, but the distinction of owning a tobacco-loving dog belongs to Ellis Ward, the veteran rowing coach of the University of Pennsylvania, says the Philadelphia Record. Tobacco is as repulsive to the average dog as it is to some people, and though they will stamp out or bite out a lighted cigar, a little of the leaf in their mouth causes a splutter of many minutes. But it is quite different with the little black spaniel of Ward's. When only a puppy he would chew cigar stumps with a relish, and now the habit has so possessed him that he is never so happy as when a bit of tobacco is thrown his way.

He will watch a cigar smoker with more eagerness than the "stump-shooting" urchin, ready to dash for the discarded bit. Recently the dog has developed a taste for Turkish tobacco, and a Turkish cigarette gives him exquisite pleasure. The tobacco is not only chewed, but also swallowed, yet no matter how much is consumed the dog shows no signs of illness, and he is now a particularly healthy canine.

Nursery Hint from Far East.

The native women of the Himalaya mountains have a singular way of putting their children to sleep in the middle of the day. The child is put near a stream of water, and by means of a palm leaf or a tin scoop the water is deflected so as to run gently over the back of the child's head. The water pouring over the child's head apparently sends it to sleep and keeps it so, while the mother proceeds with her work in the fields.

ANTHRACITE COAL IS NOW $6.50 A TON

Advance of Fifty Cents Per Ton is Made in This City By All Dealers.

THE WINTER RATE

LARGE SUPPLY ON HAND AND NO FURTHER RAISE ANTICIPATED.

Railroad Storage Plants Stocked to the Limit—No Trouble Likely at the Mines.

According to the promise made some time ago, the retail price of anthracite in this city was advanced to $6.50 a ton Thursday. During the summer the price has been $6 and the local dealers decided to make a raise of fifty cents on September 1, instead of making several raises of ten cents during the summer as has been done in New York and other places. This price of $6.50 will undoubtedly stand during the winter as all of the dealers have a large supply of coal and there is little prospect of trouble at the mines.

One large dealer in speaking of the matter today said that he did not anticipate any trouble until April 1, 1906, when the agreement between he miners and the operators terminates. He said that he believed the miners are dissatisfied with the terms altogether and that when they terminate an effort will be made to secure additional advantages.

One encouraging feature about the trade is that there is a very large supply of anthracite on hand. The railroad companies have stocked their storage plants to the limit and every line dealer is also well stocked, in fact there is talk of stopping work at the mines for a week to prevent an over-stocked condition.

AFTER THE DELINQUENTS

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP DOESN'T PROPOSE TO BE TRIFLED WITH ANY LONGER.

Taking advantage of the recently enacted State law which says that townships may advertise and sell all properties, personal and real estate, on which taxes are due beyond the time prescribed by law, the Fanwood township authorities have commenced drastic measures against delinquents. The measure contains the clause that if the authorities do not take this action they lose all claim against the properties and this has been a spur in the present sudden move.

In the past Fanwood township has been very lenient and taxes have been allowed to accumulate against properties year after year, until the list has become burdensome. Now all is to be changed and Special Officer Henry Garrier has notified all delinquents that excuses for non-payment will no longer be accepted and that the letter of the law will be lived up to. Some of the residents have already asked for an extension of time in order to avoid the added expense of a sale charged to them.

Fanwood borough has had very little trouble from delinquencies as Collector Charles Sheelan has a way of convincing owners that "to pay up is best." As a rule his budget is clear when the annual report is submitted and he never has to hold more than one sale a year. The township's delinquent list has always aggregated several thousand dollars.

NO COMMISSION FOR KRINEY

SECRETARY OF STATE ABSOLUTELY REFUSES TO ISSUE JUSTICE'S WARRANT.

Despite his best efforts, Jacob Kriney, of West Front street, who was elected a justice of the peace at the last city election, has failed to receive his commission from Secretary of State Dickinson, and to use his own words, "they have beat me out of it."

Mr. Kriney when seen Thursday said that he had received word from Secretary Dickinson informing him that the returns from the First district of the First ward, did not reach him and the returns being incomplete, he was unable to give the candidate his commissionship, even though he believed him to be elected. Mr. Kriney cannot understand why Mr. Dickinson should fail to get the returns when they were forwarded to the county board of election and had to be passed on by that body within a certain time after election.

Mr. Kriney is still a justice of the peace, having been elected two years ago, but it has always been customary to recommission a man each year. He feels somewhat incensed over the action of the higher-up officials, but does not propose to take any further action in the matter.

FACTS FOR VOTERS ON PRIMARY ELECTIONS

New Jersey's New Law for Joint Primaries is Explained in Detail.

CONDUCTED BY BOARD

DUTIES THAT DEVOLVE UPON THE MUNICIPAL CLERK.

Requirements of Petitions—Separate Ballot Boxes—Right to Vote—Challenges.

Primary elections shall be conducted as public expense. Such primary elections for all political parties shall be held at the same time and place. The time this year shall be September 13, from 1 o'clock to 9 p. m., and said primary shall be conducted by the Board of Registry and Election.

The official ballots are prepared by the municipal clerks from petitions filed with them by the various parties. Districts casting 100 votes or less for governor only require one petitioner. Districts that cast over 100 votes will require ten petitioners. All petitioners must be members of the same party as the candidate petitioned for and reside in the district. The signers of petitions can only make one endorsement to the same convention, but there is nothing in the law to prevent one signing petitions for delegates to different conventions. These petitions must be filed with the municipal clerk not less than ten days prior to primary election.

The credentials for successful delegates or members of this committee will be furnished by their borough or township clerk.

Twenty days before primary election the municipal clerk shall provide and secure a suitable room in each election district of the respective municipalities in which to hold the primary election, and immediately upon securing said room, the clerk shall notify the Board of Registry and Election of such voting district that such room has been procured, and it shall be the duty of the clerk procuring such rooms to arrange the same for a polling place in the manner required by law for general elections.

Republican ballots are to be deposited in the Republican ballot box, Democratic ballots in Democratic box. Those having voted the Democratic ticket at last primary election, which fact is indicated on the poll sheet, cannot vote in the Republican ballot box at the following primary election, nor a Republican in the Democratic ballot box. In erasing names from the official ballots only black lead pencils are to be used. Any other pencil mark might give reason for the board rejecting the ballot.

There is nothing to prevent the voter from writing on the official ballot with a black lead pencil the name of anyone not printed thereon for which he desires to vote.

No one can vote at the primary whose name is not on the primary list, but there is nothing to prevent the name being placed on the list during said primary election.

Challengers for the primary elections are appointed by the chairman of the county committee and will be furnished with certificates which are to be filed with the election board. The same challengers will also act at the regular fall election, but will receive separate certificates for the purpose from the County Election Board.

QUIET AFTERNOON WEDDING

MISS GERTRUDE KEEN MADE THE WIFE OF WILLIAM BAKER.

In the presence of only immediate relatives and a few intimate friends, Miss Gertrude Keen, daughter of Sylvanus Keen, of West Third street, and William Baker, of Somerset street, were married Wednesday, August 30, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Vincent, of West Third street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. H. Howard. Miss Louise Martin and Henry L. Keen were in attendance as bridesmaid and best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Baker and they left later for a two weeks' outing through New England. On returning they will make their home on Somerset street. The groom is connected with several local fraternal organizations and is widely known in the city and borough.

Miss Edith Hoyt Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Shelley Dyer, of Cincinnati, and George Augustus Horne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Horne, of Willow avenue, were married Wednesday, Aug. 31, at 3:30 p. m., at the home of the bride's parents, Mt. Harrison, Cincinnati. The affair was a quiet one, only the members of the two families being present. A reception followed, which was attended by many guests. Among the Plainfielders attending the wedding were Mr. Horne's parents, his sister, Miss Elsie Horne, and his younger brother, F. Roland Horne.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Alma Dyer, as bridesmaid, while Mr. Horne's brother, F. Roland Horne, was best man.

The bride was formerly a resident of this city, having moved here with her parents four years ago. They lived at the corner of Central avenue and West Sixth street. They removed to Cincinnati about two years ago.

Mr. Horne, who has been a resident of this city most of his life, completed the North Plainfield High School course in 1893 and was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the Class of '95. The next fall he entered Lehigh University and was graduated from there as a chemist in 1899. Following his experience as chemist with a large concern, he entered the employ of B. T. Babbitt & Co., where he has attained the position of head chemist. For some time Mr. Horne has been very active in the various organizations at the First M. E. church.

After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Horne will reside in Hackensack, the change being necessitated by reason of the fact that Mr. Horne's employers have established their new factory in the town. Their many friends will regret their removal from this city.

CHIEF DOANE TO BE THERE

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN FIRE CHIEFS TO MEET NEXT MONTH.

Thaddeus O. Doane, chief of the Plainfield Fire Department, will attend the yearly gathering of the National Association of American Fire Chiefs in Chattanooga, Tenn., on September 13, 14, 15 and 16. Aside from the usual business of the convention, which will include the discussion of the causes of fires, the methods of handling them and the various forms of apparatus and appliances for fighting flames in cities, election of officers and selection of a place for next year's meeting, the feature this year is expected to be an exhaustive paper on the disastrous Baltimore fire of several months ago.

It has been prepared and will be read by William McDevitt, of Philadelphia, the chief engineer of the executive board of the National Association of Fire Underwriters. He is considered the greatest expert in the country on all matters pertaining to the causes of fires and their handling by firemen, and his address is being awaited by the heads as well as the rank and file of fire departments in every section of the country. He will illustrate the various points which he will make for the benefit of the assembled firemen with specially prepared stereopticon views of the Baltimore fire in particular and a sprinkling of views of other big fires throughout the country during the last year.

Among other things which will be subjects of talk among the fire chiefs while they are in Chattanooga will be the big tournament by firemen and exhibition of fire-fighting apparatus and equipment which was held last week on the World's Fair grounds in St. Louis. Nearly every State in the country was represented, and everything went off smoothly under the direction of Peter McCarty, secretary of the Southwestern Firemen's Association. During the tournament he brought up the subject of the organization of a national federation of firemen, embracing both the paid and volunteer departments, and having State and local sub-divisions. Its objects, as proposed, are the procuring of uniform legislation in various States for the benefit of firemen. This matter will also be taken up at the Chattanooga convention.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL TO BE HANDSOME ONE

Description of the Splendid Structure, Whose Erection Will Cost $105,000.

GROUND IS BROKEN

AMPHITHEATRE TO BE ONE OF ITS FEATURES.

Gymnasium in Basement — Foyer is of Marble—Private Offices in the Building.

Ground was broken Thursday for the new high school building on West Seventh street and Arlington avenue. Isaac Randolph, as contractor, has commenced the excavation for the cellar. The complete plans were filed in Chief Doane's office at Fire Headquarters yesterday for approval.

Although the plans were changed several weeks ago, they are practically the same as those described in this paper at the conclusion of the architects' competition. Fronting on Ninth street, and rising three stories in height, the new building of granite and brick will be a handsome structure. The entrance, approached by ten stone steps, is to be most elaborately decorated in carved stone and flanked by solid Corinthian pilasters. Double swinging doors of plate glass will admit to the granite platforms of the terrazzo floor; the foyer is to be of marble. The main corridor within will extend along the front of the building, with parallel arms to the rear. At the right of the entrance will be the offices of superintendent, principal, and clerk of the board, as well as a large ante-room and a board room. On this floor will be three class rooms averaging, as do all class rooms in the building, 32½x26½ feet. In rear, and reached on three sides by the corridor, is to be the auditorium, 60x59 feet, capable of seating 800 persons, including the gallery. A stage here measures 37½x16 feet. It is flanked by dressing rooms and retiring rooms.

On the second floor are four class rooms and two smaller recitation rooms. Across the front of the building is the school library, 48½x30½ feet, with walls lined with shelves. On this floor is the school emergency hospital. Here also are locker rooms, such as adjourn each class room throughout the entire building, where the pupils' street clothing is to be kept during recitation hours.

Laboratories and a big lecture amphitheatre will be located on the top floor. Here will be separate rooms for chemistry, physics and science laboratories, and a draughting room for drawing classes. Adjoining the chemistry laboratory will be a dark room for photographic work and light experiments, and there will also be storage rooms for apparatus and drawing models.

In the basement is to be a large gymnasium, perfectly equipped, with adjourning locker-rooms, lavatories and shower baths for boys and girls. On this floor will be the lunch room, too, where pupils will be served with light lunches, prepared in the adjoining kitchen. The remaining basement space will be taken up with manual training rooms and playrooms for boys and girls and with the heating and ventilating plants.

In the matter of lighting, no flaw can be found in the arrangements at the new school. In its four walls will be something like 115 windows on recitation floors. An air shaft over the gymnasium, which is to be glass roofed, will conduct light to the inner rooms. Electricity and gas will contribute artificial light.

On either side of the building will be entrances direct to the main corridor, the one on Arlington avenue leading from a driveway, with its elaborate stone porte cochere. The building, although fireproof, will be fitted with fire escapes, and all arrangements possible will be made for a quick exit on the part of the pupils.

Midshipman on Furlough.

Midshipman Fred T. VanAuken, a former resident of this city, is spending his month's furlough at the home of his aunt, Mrs. William Sebring, of Lincoln place. VanAuken, a graduate of the city High School, has just concluded his first term at the Annapolis Naval Academy, and came ashore early in the week from the U. S. S. "Nevada," in which he has been taking a cruise of practical instruction in seamanship off New London, Conn. Van has won his "Second N" pitch on the Navy varsity.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 11: "The Better Country."—John xiv, 1-3; Rev. xxi, 1-8. Our Inheritance.

It was into a world sick with sorrow and distracted by suffering that Jesus Christ came. Its pressing needs were many and varied.

The problem of food and clothing must be faced and solved. The craving of the heart for kindness and love is even more imperative than hunger of body. The mystery of the future rises higher than this. Supreme in importance above every other issue in our existence stands the question of our relation to God.

We recognize Jesus as the matchless leader among men because He recognized those questions and needs of ours, as all other religious leaders of importance have done, and found a solution of them, as no other man had been able to do. It is this which gives Him a unique place among men.

The clew to the mystery lies in our sonship to God. Other men may have dreamed it, may perhaps have said it in words. He lived it, made it an actuality and showed men how they might and should do the same.

This discovery having been once made, the anxiety and quest for food and clothing no longer hold uppermost place in thought and effort. Life has come to mean more than feeding of body. Suffering and privation can be cheerfully endured for His sake and for the sake of those whom He loves. Life becomes loving service for Him.

No longer does the future loom ominously and with dread. He has not lifted the veil which hides its activities from our sight, but He has given assurance that all our needs are there provided for and truly as they are here. Our Father lives, and it is His good pleasure to give the kingdom to His children.

Jesus has shown us the path of truth and joy in this life. We have tried it and proved the faithfulness of His promises. We trust Him for the future. This is not eyesight, but insight of faith. It gives inner assurance and settled peace such as is found in no other way.

We expect a better country. The progress of natural science gives no help in this matter. The discoveries of astronomy afford no aid in locating heaven. No telescope has caught the light from its walls and pinnacles.

But there is such that somewhere and some time we shall reach our home, where tears and pain are unknown, where sin of heart is no more and love and joy abound forever.

Whoever comes to know the inner life of Jesus comes to know within that such place and time must come. Since He has lived it cannot but be. It is of the nature of spiritual necessity. So we quiet our hearts with His words. "Let not your hearts be troubled."

We believe in Him. We wait for Him.

It is this which makes us pilgrims and not permanent owners here. We are stewards of His bounty, taking care of His things until the account is called for. We are getting ourselves ready for our own inheritance, fitting ourselves for its administration when it shall have been turned over to us.

This better country is not different from other men. Let us hold fast our hope to the end.

We are seeking a country. We look for a city. "We are going home to our Father's house, where the many mansions be."

The Cry of Need.

Never be too busy to listen to the cry of need. The thoughtful child on her way to school with a pitcher of water in her hand looked at the parched, dust mantled and drooping flower by the wayside, and in her pity for it tipped her pitcher, and a gentle stream washed the dust from its leaves, refreshed its form and invigorated its roots. As it lifted itself once more to the sun, its renewed life made her heart gayer and her feet lighter, while the little that she had donated from her vessel had left her more than ever needful for her home. Tip your heart a little and let its sympathy roll out in blessings to those who are weak and weary. They will be blessed in receiving, but you will be doubly blessed in giving. Yet give not for your own sake, but for their sakes.—Philadelphia Methodist.

The Promise of Thy Father.

Not by laying thy burden down shalt thou be free. Lift another's load and it shall lighten thy side. Add to the weight of thy ship by taking in the Son of Man and its speed shall be so quickened that immediately it shall be at the land. Put your leprous hand to the cross to help Him up the dolorous way, and when you hand reached the top of the hill thou shalt seek its leprosy in vain. Thy care shall be cured by Calvary. The promise of thy Father shall never deceive thee.—Christian World.

The Bridge to Heaven.

As a bridge builder throws his span across the chasm, so hath God, by His redeeming grace, connected earth with heaven, and that span has never weakened through the frosts and storms and floods of the ages, nor by the constant tramp, tramp of the innumerable host that, day and night since the world's morning twilight, have crossed to the reserved glory on the other side.—United Presbyterian.

God's Will.

Since God doth will that some shall dwell
In care,
And others shall know hardness, this is sure—
The lot that fits each nature He foresees;
And wherefore murmur when we must endure?

Some day His loving wisdom will be plain
As the sweet sunshine following after rain.

—Mary Bradley.

BEGS FOR MISTRESS.

MONGREL DOG KEEPS WOLF FROM BLIND NELL'S DOOR.

Old Woman Is Too Ill to Take Accustomed Place So Our Holds Cup to Receive Pennies of the Charitable.

"Blind Nell," the organ grinder who for years has gathered the pennies and the nickels of the charitable that pass State and Van Buren streets, at Chicago, is ill, but she placed her faith in a dog, and the animal is now carrying the bread that means life for both.

There are few people in the downtown district who do not know "Blind Nell." There are few business men who remember when she came. She was on the southeast corner when they were clerks in the stores that they now own. She was the link that connected them with the day that had been, and sometimes they paid her well for the memory. And the old dog, a yellow cur, was always at her side.

"Why do you keep him? He's getting old, isn't he?" inquired some of the old business men.

"He's all that I have," was the answer.

So it wasn't strange that men stopped and listened when they left the elevated and the street cars the other morning. Usually it was one of "Blind Nell's" airs that told them that they had reached the scene of another day's activity. Some of them stood in the middle of the street and waited for the familiar strains. But the old hand organ was silent. They stopped to "Blind Nell's" corner and there stood the dog, alone.

If he had been a man people would have said that he was transfigured. It seemed that he had shaken the years from him and that he realized his importance. His tail was placed on his side that attracted everybody's attention. "I am 'Blind Nell's' dog. 'Blind Nell' is sick. I can be trusted. Please help us both," it was the cry.

There was a cup fastened to his muzzle and he seemed to know his friends. Whenever one of them appeared he advanced and rubbed his nose against their legs. The caress told much. It told of how "Blind Nell" had at last given away and how she was lying ill in some uncomfortable spot. It told why the hand organ was silent. It told that even a mean, yellow cur was not without a heart and that he alone stood between the old woman and starvation. And the caress touched many and there was a heap of bright silver in the cup before the day's work had begun in the downtown district.

He disappeared while the morning was still young. His course was in Van Buren street and down Wabash avenue. All trace of him was lost as he rounded the corner, but the meeting of the old woman and the old dog with a cup of silver must have been a happy one.

He was back at the corner when the shoppers began to arrive. The women were touched by the story told on the placard and they contributed freely. At noon the dog disappeared again. He rested this time and perhaps the old woman told him what a great friend he was, for it was almost time for the stores to close when he reached the corner.

There was another flow of pennies, nickels and dimes and the cup was half full when a thief came along. He stooped and patted the animal on the back and at the same time tried to empty the cup. But "Blind Nell's" dog had learned to read men, and a growl warned the stranger that it would be unsafe for him to take any of the money. The dog disappeared as darkness came and "Blind Nell" will have all to eat that she wants for the next few days at least.

Has Troubles of His Own.

R. D. Urquhart, of Lynchburg, Va., is six feet six inches in height, and weighs 375 pounds. While stopping at a hotel in a North Carolina town he put up in a room which had four beds. He was the only occupant of the chamber. The first bed he crawled into was crushed under his weight. He tried each of the others in turn, and the slats of the three others also collapsed.

New Far Western Industry.

Men make five dollars a day in the forests of western Washington, peeling cascara bark. It sells for eight cents a pound, and is used medicinally. One pound of dry bark makes enough liquid extract to sell for two dollars at wholesale.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 12.

Topic.—What the Bible teaches about heaven.—John xiv, 1-3; Rev. xxi, 1-6.

What the Bible has to say about heaven is of the greatest importance, because nowhere else can we find any trustworthy information upon this all important subject. Heaven is the dwelling place of God (II Chron. vi, 30), the place where He especially manifests his glory (Rev. iv, 1-5), and where He will by and by gather all His redeemed children (John xiv, 1-3).

What, then, does the Bible say about heaven?

The Bible teaches that there is a place called heaven. "In My Father's house," says Christ, "are many mansions." This is a positive assertion. They actually are. This is the language of assurance, not of doubt or even of hope. Heaven is—this is the first great truth of the Bible concerning it. If we believe the Bible we cannot doubt it. This fact of itself should inspire the people of God to faithfulness even amidst the adversities of life. We are simply pilgrims here. Heaven is our home.

The Bible teaches that the inhabitants of heaven. (1) God is there. Christ calls heaven His "Father's house." God is omnipresent, but in heaven He especially manifests himself. (2) Christ is there. "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am you may be also." "Where I am!" Christ is there, and where He is that is heaven. (3) The redeemed are there —all those who have been redeemed in the precious blood of Christ. This includes all the redeemed from the apostles to the humblest disciple of Christ. To the former Jesus said, "That where I am ye may be also," and to a representative of the latter, the dying thief, He said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." To John, the elder said of those whom he saw in heaven, "These are they that have come up out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." The cross of Christ is the only open sesame to heaven.

The Bible teaches us of the conditions in heaven. It is true that here the teaching is meager and often hard to understand. Descriptions of heaven and its conditions are largely symbolical and figurative. Yet the Bible plainly teaches that it is a place freed from all the ills of life, the inhabitants of which enjoy perfect happiness. Such a place as our eternal home is worthy the utmost self sacrifice that can be possible in the acceptance of Christ as our Saviour.

The Bible teaches the condition of entrance into heaven. There is but one condition—the acceptance of Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour and Redeemer. We must accept His atoning sacrifice for us and consecrate our lives to God in Him. Will you do it?

A Delightful Incident.

The next issue of the China official Endeavor publication will have this interesting item:

A most delightful incident occurred at a meeting of the Christian Endeavor society in Union church, Hongkong. The pastor, Rev. Arthur G. Hickling, who is using his Endeavor society as a means of interesting and encouraging the Christian soldiers stationed there, had invited the Endeavor secretaries for India and China to come to the meeting and speak a few words about the work in other places, but quite unexpectedly two other strangers came into the little meeting, one of whom proved to be the founder of the first Christian Endeavor society in all India and the one of India's most famous missionaries. And what had called these four strangers, without any prearrangement, to come together at this little meeting? Simply the attractions of the Christian Endeavor name and the Christian Endeavor bond of fellowship and the pledge "to attend and take some part in every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting." Is it not a great advantage that the Endeavor society not simply inspires Endeavorers to loyalty to their local church, but also brings them into a strong sympathy with fellow Endeavorers all over the world?

Pen Points.

The Christian Endeavor pledge reads the same during vacation time that it does at any other season of the year.

That Christian Endeavor is progressive is proved by the quantity and quality of its forward movements.

The ideal pastor does not drive his society; he leads it.

That lookout committee cannot be characterized as "the eyes of the society" which does not see in the church bonnets, hats, or unprospective members for Christian Endeavor.

In the ideal prayer meeting prayer, not singing nor even testimony, predominates.—John R. Clements.

In Ohio.

They "do things" in a Christian Endeavor way in Ohio. The following is the summary of the work of Field Secretary Rev. C. H. Hubbell for ten months just past: Engagements filled, 120; addresses and conferences, 421; county conventions, 31; societies reached, 831; mileage, 17,308. With such untiring workers it is not to be wondered at that Ohio leads the list in the increase campaign.

In Persia and Spain.

Persia has thirty-five societies, and most of them sprung from a single earnest society in a boarding school, whose members carried the Christian Endeavor seed as they returned home. Spain has the same history.

BOSTON PHYSICIAN WEDS PLAINFIELD GIRL

Miss Ethel Plummer Bowen is Married to Dr. Franklin Warren White.

CHICAGOAN OFFICIATES

MISS MARION PLUMMER BOWEN IS THE MAID-OF-HONOR.

Reception Follows at Home of the Bride's Parents on Watchung Avenue—Couple to Live at The Hub.

Miss Ethel Plummer Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliott Bowen, of Watchung avenue, and niece of Herbert Wolcott Bowen, minister to Venezuela, and Dr. Franklin Warren White, of Boston, were married Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Rev. Louis Barton Crane, of Chicago, a relative, performed the ceremony.

The church was decorated with palms and a profusion of white asters, they being banked about the pulpit platform, the palms furnishing a pleasing background to the beautiful white flower.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marion P. Bowen, as maid-of-honor, and three bridesmaids: Miss Helen Dunbar Talmadge and Miss Elsie Burke, both of this city; Miss Marion Fuller, of Boston, and Miss Constance Holt, of New York.

The best man was Dr. Robert H. Vose, of Boston, and the ushers were Dr. Frederic C. Cotton and Lewis K. Morse, of Boston; Harrison C. Hall, of New York; Edward E. Blodgett, of Brookline, Mass.; L. Maxwell Brigham, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Pierrepont Beers Foster, of New Haven, Conn.

The bride was attired in a white satin gown trimmed with point duchesse lace. She wore a tulle veil and carried in her hand a prayer-book *bound in white vellum. The maid-of-*honor wore a gown of white crepe de chene and a large chiffon picture hat with long white ostrich plumes and carried a bouquet of white asters. The bridesmaids were gowned in accordion plaited white silk muslin and they wore large white chiffon picture hats with white ostrich plumes and also carried white asters.

Frank Smith, formerly organist at the church, presided at the organ and as he played the wedding march from Lohengrin, the bridal party entered the church. The ushers led the way, followed by the bridesmaids, the maid-of-honor and the bride, who was escorted by her father, who gave her away in marriage. At the altar the party met the officiating clergyman, the groom and best man, who entered the church from the rear. After the ceremony and while the party was leaving the church, the Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered.

Following the wedding, a reception was given to the relatives and a few intimate friends at the home of the bride's parents on Watchung avenue. The house was also decorated with palms and large white asters.

Dr. White, who is a prominent physician in Boston, is also prominent in society there. He is a member of the Eastern Yacht Club and the University Club. He and his bride will make their home in Boston following a honeymoon of a month's duration.

MRS. DUNHAM BURIED.

Funeral Services Over Remains of Aged Woman.

The funeral services of Mrs. Maxson Dunham, mother of Mrs. J. C. Van-Dyke, of East Fifth street, were held Wednesday, Aug. 31, at the home of her son, John V. Hass, at Millington and were largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Gibbs and Rev. Mr. Condit were in charge. Years ago Mrs. Dunham had selected the hymns she wished sung at her funeral, namely, "When the Roll is Called I'll be There," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "I Shall See Him Face to Face." These were rendered by a quartette choir from the church.

Mrs. Dunham's favorite selection of Scripture, "When I Pass Through the Valley of the Shadow of Death I Will Fear no Evil for Thou art With Me," was read. Mr. Gibbs spoke highly of Mrs. Dunham's Christian character and her selection of Scripture.

There were a number of floral pieces from relatives and friends, including one from the Ladies' Aid Society of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church, where she was a member for thirty years. The remains were taken to Peapack, where a short service was held for the neighbors and friends. The interment was made in the cemetery of Mrs. Dunham's first husband, Archie Hunt, whom she married in 1853.

Mrs. Martin McComas, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, is visiting friends in the West End.

PLAINFIELD A. C. TO IMPROVE OVAL

Having Secured Renewal of Lease, Club Intends to Make Many Changes at the Field.

DIRECT CAR SERVICE

GROUND TO BE FENCED IN AND MORE BLEACHERS PROMISED.

Drainage System to be Installed—Majority of Present Players Are to be Retained by Manager Johnston.

The Plainfield A. C. has secured a lease on Crescent Oval for another year, with the privilege of renewing the agreement for three years more, and plans are already being laid for making a number of improvements. Among the more important improvements will be the erection of a board fence about the entire field and the filling in of the diamond's left field to prevent a reoccurrence of the recent experience when that part of the field was covered by water. A system of drainage will be installed that will readily clear the diamond when necessary.

As an addition to the present grandstand, another wing will be built and bleachers will be extended further down the field on both sides of the diamond. They will be an improvement over the present style. The club also hopes to secure an extension of the trolley whereby patrons may be carried direct to the oval. An attempt was made to have the extension built this year, but certain obstacles presented themselves and delayed it.

Among other improvements will be the reservation of more room for carriages and automobiles where they will not be in the way of the crowds and yet give their occupants a clear and unobstructed view of the field.

There is every reason to believe that the present team with possibly one or two exceptions will remain here next season, as Manager Johnston feels sure that he now has a combination that is hard to beat. A first class pitcher will be engaged for the season.

DEATH OF JAMES J. DAY

PROMINENT WEST ENDER SUCCUMBS TO COMPLICATION OF TROUBLES.

James J. Day, one of the best known residents of the West End, died at his home on Liberty street, Wednesday, Aug. 31, after two weeks' illness with bronchitis. He had been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism and lately complications ensued. His death was totally unexpected as on Tuesday he spoke of feeling better than at any time in many months and was walking about the house.

Mr. Day was the son of the late Patrick Day and was the last member of his one time large family. He was thirty-four years old and had resided in this city all his life. In his younger days he was prominent throughout the county as an athlete and baseball player and was one of the members of the original St. Mary baseball team organized in 1888. He always retained his interest in baseball affairs and for the past few years has been connected with the management of the team of which he was also fond of fishing and spent a great deal of his time as the favorite "haunts" along Staten Island Sound. Surviving him are a widow and two children.

MR. HENCKEL IN CHARGE.

New Physical Director at Y. M. C. A. Assumes Duties.

Physical Director Fred A. Henckel, recently appointed successor to C. E. A. Haywood, at the local Y. M. C. A., assumed charge of the physical department of the association Thursday.

Previous to coming to this city, Mr. Henckel has been at his home in Albany, N. Y., and he arrived this morning directly from that city. He will not have classes to conduct until the fall term opens again on October 2, but will spend considerable time at his office in the association building, where he will be in charge of the summer sports of the association.

Funeral of Mrs. Lesson.

Funeral services of Mrs. Barbara Lesson were held Thursday morning from her late home on Watchung avenue. Service was conducted by Rev. D. J. Yerxes, Mrs. Lesson's former, pastor at the First Baptist church, and by the Rev. Dr. Gibbs, the family pastor at the Millington church. Joseph Mann, Robert Becker and William Leek, George Muchmore, of Summit, John Vesselar, of Bound Brook, and E. L. Irving, of Somerville, acted as pall bearers.

DAVID GORDON A GROOM

WELL-KNOWN BASEBALL PLAYER WEDS MISS SOUTHARD, OF THE PLAINS.

Miss Clara Bell Southard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elias M. Southard, of Cook avenue, Scotch Plains, and David Gordon, of this city, were quietly married last Thursday in the presence of only a few relatives and intimate friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. M. Shotts in the parsonage of the Scotch Plains Baptist church at 6 o'clock. Following a simple home wedding a cake and a recent death in the bride's family.

Miss Southard was attended by her sister, Miss Gussie Southard, while William Boyle, her cousin, was best man. Both bride and bridesmaid were attired in becoming gowns of crepe de chine.

Following the ceremony, the party adjourned to Mr. and Mrs. Gordon's new home at West Sixth street and Clinton avenue where a reception was held, coinciding with a wedding supper. The groom is an employe of the Managanese Steel Safe Company and is well known as the former Hope Y. M. A. baseball player during the City League season. He is a member of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and is greatly liked by a large circle of acquaintances. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gordon were remembered with a large array of presents.

Former Plainfielder Held Up.

Miss Miriam Raymond, daughter of President A. V. V. Raymond, of Union College, was held up by two young men while out walking at Schenectady, N. Y., last Tuesday, and was robbed of a hand bag and pocketbook. Miss Raymond was with Miss Doretta VanVoast, daughter of a prominent lawyer there. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond was for several years pastor of Trinity Reformed church in this city. His daughter is well known here.

Mr. Bernstein's Generosity.

Through the kindness of Mr. Bernstein, superintendent of the Sunday-school at Dr. McCloud's Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, who is summering at New Market, the 375 children and mothers of the Mary Morgan Fresh Air Home, Netherwood, were given a long straw ride to three big stages Saturday morning. Mr. Bernstein subsequently presented the Home with 200 cakes and 300 pounds of candy.

Visited Bayonne Lodge.

Past Grand Master Workman Vincent W. Nash, accompanied by Past Master Workman J. W. A. Banerscheb, member of the finance committee, paid a fraternal visit to Bayonne Lodge, No. 9, A. O. U. W., Friday night. The two men were called on for speeches during the social time which followed the business session. There was a special programme of singing and instrumental music.

Undertaking Firm Dissolves.

The undertaking firm of DeMott & Lambert has been dissolved by mutual consent. The business will be continued by Henry DeMott while the junior partner, John R. Lambert, will remove to Westfield and open a similar office.

DESPERATE BATTLE BETWEEN SIX TRAMPS

Posse of Dunellen Citizens Also Join in Affray at Greenbrook Tanks.

FIVE MEN CAPTURED

ANOTHER IS SENT TO MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL WITH SCALP WOUNDS.

Gang Engaged in Quarrel Over Sleeping Quarters — Quartette Sent to County Jail for Sixty Days.

Many pistol shots were exchanged and clubs and stones were freely used in a pitched battle between six tramps at the Greenbrook tanks, Friday night. Subsequently a posse of Dunellen citizens headed by Mayor Wyckoff charged on the crowd and captured five of them, while a sixth man was so badly hurt he had to be sent to Muhlenberg Hospital. The tramps were arraigned before Justice Von-Minden this morning and four of them were sent to the county jail for sixty days. The fifth, who gave his name as William Riley, of Allentown, Pa., was held for the Grand Jury. The man in the hospital is Robert Mansfield, thirty-two years old, of Philadelphia. He sustained several slight scalp wounds and severe cuts about the face but is not badly hurt and will soon be discharged.

The tramps had been hanging about the tanks all afternoon and the fight followed a quarrel as to who should sleep in an old factory just outside of Lincoln. Two of them suddenly turned upon Mansfield and were pummeling him with their fists when the others joined the fracas. Clubs and stones were picked up and used and when revolvers were whipped out, the railroad employes telephoned to Dunellen and also this city for help. A special engine conveyed the Dunellenites to the tanks and on their arrival the fighting men started to run away. They paid no attention to Mayor Wyckoff's cries to halt and two of them turned and fired upon their pursuers. The Dunellen crowd only ran the harder and finally rounded up the whole gang.

Mansfield was found lying on the ground and he was first removed to Dunellen. His hurts were patched up temporarily by Dr. Smakeley and he was then sent on to Plainfield in a carriage. He will be held as a witness against Riley, who is said to have done most of the shooting.

MR. MUMFORD'S BIRTHDAY

In honor of the anniversary of his birthday, Benjamin A. Mumford, of Arlington avenue, gave a dinner at the Plainfield A. C. Clubhouse Sunday evening. Covers were laid for twelve. The table and dining room were attractively decorated with flowers, ferns and palms by Stanley. The menu included a shore dinner. At the conclusion of the dinner all congratulated Mr. Mumford and wished him many returns of the day.

Those present were B. A. Mumford, George H. Johnston, Chief T. O. Doane, Dr. P. J. Zaglio, E. A. Brown, W. A. Boone, Dr. A. H. Dundon, John Slevin, Harold Chandler, Roy Phillips and J. P. Powers.

K. of C.'s Annual Clambake.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, held its annual outing and clambake at Sebring's Mills, Sunday afternoon. It was attended by members and friends to the number of 200. The committee which had charge consisted of William O'Keefe, Thomas Carty, John Traynor, Thomas Gough and David Mack.

CZAR'S ARMY ROUTED

Kuropatkin Reports That the Army Is Advancing North.

JAPANESE ARE CLOSE TO MUKDEN

Russian Chief May Attempt Another Stand at Mukden Base of at a Strong Position Close to It.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Routed at every point, their rear guard battling desperately against the pursuing Japanese, the Russian army is in full retreat. Already the commissariat and columns of artillery have arrived at Mukden and are continuing their march northward.

The Japanese guns are now only fourteen miles away from Mukden. The mikado's troops are rushing for the goal by eastern roads in an endeavor to cut off Kuropatkin.

Viceroy Alexeieff is on his way from Harbin to Mukden.

The emperor has received the following dispatch from General Kuropatkin:

"The army is advancing northward. It has extricated itself from the dangerous position in which it was placed, being threatened by the enemy and having a narrow front.

"The enemy throughout the day cannonaded our rear guard, especially its left flank, but without much effect.

"We lost about 100 men."

Fighting a continuous rear guard action with the Japanese, who hang to his flanks, Kuropatkin continues to fall back over roads made sodden by two days' heavy rain.

It is reported that in spite of the bad roads and persistent attacks on the Russian rear the retreat is orderly.

The Russian general staff denies the report that Kuropatkin's rear guard has been annihilated.

"We believe Kuropatkin will make another stand at Mukden is not indicated. In St. Petersburg it is argued that the fact that his commissary trains passed on through Mukden does not indicate that the Russian commander proposes to evacuate that city without a struggle, but only that they are taking up their proper position in the rear.

Field Marshal Oyama's report, as contained in dispatches from Tokyo, indicates that if the Russians attempt to evacuate Mukden they will encounter fierce opposition. Oyama states that there immediately. Oyama states that there immediately. Oyama states that there immediately

LIGHT VOTE AT PRIMARIES

Democrats in Several Wards Make Some Additions to Nominations.

DETAILED RESULTS

In the Fourth Ward Only Do the Democrats Make Any Real Show of a Contest for Local Offices.

So quiet were the primaries in this city Tues ay and so light was the vote, that a majority of the voters paid little or no attention to the matter. The members of the election board had as little to do that it was difficult for them to keep busy. Never before have the Democrats displayed such disinterestedness. Not as many as twenty-five votes were polled in any one ward for the ticket, while in many as few as one and two ballots were cast for the Democratic nominee.

In the Democratic primary there were a few nominations made yesterday. John D. McAleer was a candidate for delegate to the county and city convention and for member of the Common Council from the Second ward. From the same ward Joseph Harrigan received one vote for member of Common Council and L. B. Skillman for Justice of the Peace received one vote in the First district. In the Second district of the First ward, Walter L. Hatfield, Sr., received one vote for member of Common Council. In the Second ward Ernest R. Ackerman received two votes in the First district for member of county committee, and in the Fourth ward, Elmore D. Moffett for Justice of the Peace, and Charles Westerfield for constable, each received two votes in the First district. In the Fourth ward, only a regular Democratic nominee for Common Council was named previous to the primaries.

WEST ENDS GET WADDELL

Philadelphia Americans Battery Secured by Somerville.

BACKING THEIR TEAM

Visitors to Bring a Great Crowd of Rooters Saturday Who Will Put Up the Coin.

It is understood from a rumor from Somerville way that the celebrated and eccentric "Rube" Waddell and his regular catcher, Schreckenghost, will form the battery for the West Ends in the game at Plainfield, Saturday, with the Plainfield A. C. Manager Cawley, after casing about among many teams, managed to get this famous battery from the Philadelphia Americans in the American League. Waddell holds the strike-out record for the season, having sent more men back to the bench by this route than any other pitcher in both big leagues.

The balance of the Somerville nine, it is said, will remain about the same as it was in last Saturday's game with the Flemingtons, when McDonald and Kane, of the Saxonville team, of the Blue River league, played first and third, respectively, in place of Baldwin and Bradley, who were fired by the management. After the second Clinton game several others were threatened with release if they did not show up with the goods. Flannery, Enright and Kiest, being the trio, but Saturday they did good work in the 9 to 0 defeat of Flemington and were granted another chance.

One of the greatest crowd of rooters that has ever followed a ball team from Somerville will go to Plainfield Saturday to root. It is expected that not less than 1,000 people will make the journey by steam and trolley cars. There will be plenty of money among Somerville backers. It is stated that L. O. Mack, the old manager of the West Ends, who has no love for Plainfield even yet, has $500 up on the new West Ends and several thousand more ready for takers.

SOMERSET CO. BRIDGES

Freeholders Agree Upon $47,000 for Structures.

THE ANNUAL BUDGET

Yearly Estimate for County Expenses $120,000—That Cedington Avenue Bridge.

There was quiety doing at the regular monthly meeting of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders in the Court House at Somerville yesterday. All the members were in attendance.

The members reported the following as the probable cost of bridges in the respective townships and boroughs for the current year: Bedminster, $5,000; Bernard, $3,500; Bridgewater, $6,000; Branchburg, $1,800; Franklin, $1,800; North Plainfield, township, $2,300; North Plainfield borough, $3,500; Warren, $3,600. Total, $34,600.

The annual appropriation was fixed at $120,000 and the County Collector was authorized to borrow $50,000.

A petition for a larger bridge in North Plainfield at the corner of Somerset street and Cedington avenue, was filed. The Board will meet there Sept. 20 at 11 o'clock to investigate the matter and decide.

Other business—not of an important nature—was transacted. The Board adjourned to meet Friday at 11:30 o'clock to examine the macadam road at Bladen's Corner.

PLAINS PRIMARIES.

Only Thirty-Five Cast in Fanwood Township for Delegates to Various Conventions.

Although the total registration in Fanwood township is 309, only thirty-five votes were cast at the primaries yesterday, seventeen of these being Democratic. The Democrats elected Theodore Bruckman as delegate to the State and county conventions and Charles H. French to the Congressional convention. Edward V. Goodman and W. D. Johnston were elected county delegates by the Republicans and Charles Ball and L. B. Coddington as Congressional delegates. George Ball will go to the State convention and Edward Hand will be a member of the county committee.

In Scotch Plains William E. Sanbury was chosen as delegate to all Democratic conventions and the Republicans elected their regular ticket. Dr. Westcott will remain a member of the Republican county committee.

TAX RATE NO HIGHER

Likely to Remain at $2.52 in Plainfield for Another Year.

VALUATION $9,742,300

County Tax Rate to be .4675 and State School Rate .1698.

The Union County Board of Assessors met at Elizabeth, yesterday, to go over the county valuations and fix the county and State school rates. Plainfield was represented by its full Board of Assessors.

The report from this city showed valuations to be as follows:

Real estate, $8,976,300; personal, $1,380,900; deductions, $13,900; total, $9,743,300.

The valuations by wards are as follows:

First—$1,970,800; Second—$2,809,500; Third—$2,651,900; Fourth, $2,317,100. Last year the total valuation was $9,333,000, making an increase of $409,000 in real and personal property for this year. The report also shows that in the First ward there are 107 dogs and 795 polls; Second ward, 183 and 938 polls; Third ward, 128 dogs and 778 polls; Fourth ward, 89 dogs and 1,597 polls, a total of 500 dogs and 4,103 polls.

The local board of assessors will meet tonight or tomorrow to fix Plainfield's rate. It is almost assured that it will be no higher than last year, $2.52, and it is hoped to make it less.

The county rate his year will be .4675, and the State school tax rate, .1698, a total of .6376.

PLAINFIELD TO FACE THE NEW YORK NATIONALS

JERSEY CITY EASTERN LEAGUE TEAM ALSO TO PLAY A GAME HERE.

Manager George H. Johnston, of the Plainfield A. C., has completed arrangements for the appearance of the New York Nationals on Crescent Oval on Saturday, October 15, and according to the terms "Christy" Mathewson will pitch for the big leaguers and Beaman will probably catch. This will be one of the strongest attractions of the season, as there are a great many local fans who have never seen the New Yorks play and it will be a treat to see Matty, Bowerman, Dan. McGann, Gilbert, Dahlen, Brown, Bresnahan and "Sandow" Merkle, who have been playing championship ball, on the local diamond. Mr. Johnston is planning to give the leaguers a good fight and he will have a strong man in the box against them.

Another treat is in store for the local fans. Arrangements have about been completed to have the Jersey City Eastern League team meet the Plainfield A. C., here. The date for this game will be announced within a short time. These contests will open the baseball season in this city. Manager Johnston, notwithstanding the many difficulties confronting him throughout the season, has given the fans good ball, many of the games being equal to those seen in the big leagues. There is a strong opinion that he should have entire control of the team, many believing that better results would follow the adoption of such a plan.

In Recorder's Court.

Recorder Dond heard three complaints preferred by Patrolman Smalley against "Larry" Wallace, the tough who, while resisting arrest Monday night, inflicted upon the officer, painful and perhaps severe injury. Wallace was charged with being drunk, causing a disturbance and resisting and assaulting an officer. The Recorder sentenced him to a fine of $20 and imprisonment for seven days on each account. Wallace has not the cash wherewith to settle up.

REPENT THEIR MARRIAGE

Mrs. Henry C. Brose Now Seeks a Divorce.

SHE IS BUT FIFTEEN

Seven Months After Secret Wedding Ceremony Wife Wants Bonds Dissolved.

Proceedings for annulment of the marriage were commenced before Vice-Chancellor Bergen, of Elizabeth, in the Council chamber of this city, yesterday, when Mrs. Henry C. Brose, formerly Miss Nellie Williams, of East Fifth street, who has been for seven months the legal wife of Henry C. Brose, of Vine street, Mrs. Brose is a daughter of J. J. Williams and is said to be but fifteen years of age.

In the testimony given at the hearing yesterday, Mrs. Brose claimed that she was forced into the marriage. The ceremony, which took place secretly on February 4, was performed by Justice Joseph Clark, at Scotch Plains. At that time, both the young persons willingly answered the legal questions and the bride received a most willing and happy party in the contract. The witnesses were members of Justice Clark's family. At the time of the ceremony, Miss Williams was but fifteen years of age. Testimony revealed the fact that the two have not seen each other since the match.

When seen this morning about the matter, Henry C. Brose said: "The story about my making threats to the girl is entirely untrue. Further than this, I don't care to say anything for publication at present." Mr. Brose would not state his own age but he appears to be about 19.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES SHOW DECIDED CHANGES

GOAL FROM THE FIELD TO COUNT FOUR AGAIN INSTEAD OF FIVE.

Important changes have been made in the football rules for 1904 and for the benefit of local lovers of the game they are given here in full.

Instead of seven men in the line of scrimmage between the twenty-five yard lines there must be seven men in the line in every part of the field.

When there are only six men in the line of scrimmage the additional man in the back field must be stationed outside of either extremity of the line.

Goals from field, no matter how made, shall count four instead of five points.

The quarter-back or the first man receiving the ball from the center may run with it in any part of the field instead of only between the twenty-five-yard lines providing he go five yards outside of center.

The umpire and referee shall have distinctive signals.

When the umpire signals for a penalty the play may continue until the ball is dead, when the referee shall inflict the penalty. The side offended against may take either the penalty or the ground gained by the play.

When one side kicks out of bounds twice in succession or a touchdown or a safety the ball shall go to the opposing side on the thirty-five instead of the twenty-five-yard line.

Clinton Avenue-Dunellen Rubber.

The managers of the Clinton avenue and Dunellen baseball teams have arranged with Manager Johnston of the Plainfield A. C., to see Crescent Oval on Saturday, September 24, for their decisive contest in the championship series. The Plainfield A. C., will play as Westfield on that day. Clinton avenue will play the Bound Brook team on Saturday.

Hotel License Transferred.

With the change of ownership recently effected as "The Maples," the Fanwood roadhouse sold to Berthold Heim, a transfer of the license was made this morning before Justice Vail, at the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth. The transfer was made under application by Francis J. Blake, Esq.

Prof. Griggs to Lecture.

It was announced at the meeting of the "Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, held yesterday in Vincent chapel, that Prof. Edward H. Griggs would give his first lecture under the auspices of the society on Wednesday, October 12. The subject will be "Shakespeare."

PRIMARIES IN BOROUGH

Republicans Fail to Select State Convention Delegates.

BUT LITTLE INTEREST

Some Ballots Thrown Out As Worthless—The Entire Vote Cast.

While the registry lists in the borough did not suffer by reason of lack of interest Tuesday, nearly 700 voters complying with the law requiring them to register, the vote in the primary elections was very light indeed in fact the general feeling was that the men named on the primary tickets of both parties would conscientiously carry out the wishes of those whom they are to represent, so that no opposition seemed possible and the balloting took on the character of a mere form

So light was the vote in the First district, that out of 689 voters named on the registry list, but twenty-two cast ballots for the delegates to the State, congressional and county conventions. These twenty-two were evenly divided, the Democratic delegates and those to the Republican convention each receiving in this district eleven votes.

In the Second district, however, more than twice this number availed themselves of the opportunity to affirm the nominations for delegates. The total of ballots cast in this district was fifty-three, twenty-two Democrats and thirty-one Republicans voting.

Hatwood, the results are as follows: Delegate to Democratic State Convention, Alonzo D. Townley, total vote, 33; for delegates to Democratic Congressional Convention, Andrew Love, Sr., 33; W. B. Bennett, 35, and Jacob Vochi, 33. For delegates to Democratic County Convention, W. J. Conroy, 33; John T. Case, 33, and Herman Klinsman, 31.

For delegate to Republican Congressional Convention, Charles Place, 41; and for delegates to Republican County Convention, Julius J. Stubl, James M. Cooley, John E. Bennett, Andrew Lentine, Albert Runyon and Charles J. McNabb, each 41 votes.

Someone with a mind of his own supplied his Republican ballot with what was looking on all the rest, a delegate to the Republican State Convention. This addition, which was made in favor of W. L. Haviland, negated the ballot bearing it to be set out as worthless. A similar fate met one of the Democratic ballots which favored Stonewall Jackson as a delegate to both the Congressional and County Conventions. Andrew Love, Sr., Congressional delegate, and Herman Klinsman, county delegate, were the men at whose expense this change was made. This ballot and one other on which Klinsman was scratched, afforded the only instances of cutting, which occurred.

To Locate in Texas.

H. S. Potter, of East Second street, leaves Plainfield on Monday for El Paso, Texas, where he has accepted a position with the International Light and Power Company. His brother-in-law, H. T. Edgar, has recently constructed the lighting and power plant and also an electric railroad. Mr. Potter will be connected with the running of the electric railroad. Mrs. Potter will probably go to El Paso about November 1, providing Mr. Potter likes the climate and his position.

Sanitary Sewer Connections.

William M. Stillman, Esq., at his own expense, is making a connection from his new building on Madison avenue to the sanitary sewer in Front street. He recently requested the Common Council to do this work, but that body could not take the matter up at present. Mr. Stillman hopes that the city may reimburse him later on.

Special Train for Firemen.

At last night's meeting of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association it was decided to charter a special train for October 6 to make the trip to Flemington. The train will leave this city about 10 o'clock in the morning. A dozen new members were added to the roll.

Stricken With Paralysis.

Samuel A. Wallace, a brother-in-law of Mayford Ecl, with whom he lives on Grove street, was stricken with paralysis at The Normandie, at Asbury Park yesterday. Preparations are being made to bring the afflicted man home.

EDITORS HONORED.

Parker Greets Democratic Scribes With First Speech.

HARMONY ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESS

Candidate Said He Need Not Hesitate to Compare Statesmen of Cleveland's Cabinet With Those of Present Administration.

ESOPUS, N. Y., Sept. 9.—The Democratic editors journeyed by the steamboat St. John, which awaited them at Hyde Park on their arrival by train from New York. They were met by Secretary McCausland and the Rev. G. M. Hall and were conducted to Judge Parker's home.

The editors cheered for two minutes when Judge Parker greeted them.

When the handshaking was over the editors gathered on the lawn south of the house.

In reply to Charles W. Knapp of the St. Louis Republic, who was the spokesman chosen by the editors to address the presidential candidate in their behalf, Judge Parker said:

"It is indeed a great pleasure to welcome to Rosemount this body of representatives of the great American press, one of the mighty forces in the upbuilding and strengthening of a sturdy American citizenship.

"You have been in conference to the end that your work in this campaign may be as effective as possible. Organized effort and concerted action must always increase the effectiveness of the common endeavor of many hands.

"The leaders who have made a thoroughfare through history, down which in all the centuries their fame will march with giant strides, have all been among the people. Guided by hasty expression of the hurried judgment of the people, were yet guided in all their public acts by the knowledge of what the deliberate and mature judgment and will of the people would be.

"So the great papers are those which anticipate the careful judgment of the majority. The great tribunal of the American people may be implicitly relied on to decide all questions with unerring and exact justice when all the evidence is in and deliberation had, and those who would hold place as leaders of the people must be so thoroughly American, so discreet, so farsighted as to come at the pulse of the people as to discern the course public opinion will take. Though the instant judgment of the people may be often at fault, the ripe and final decision is always for the right. And that part of leadership is to know the right and to honestly, patriotically, fearlessly and zealously advocate it.

"Just as long as the press can discern and lead the unhurried and well considered judgment of the people so long will its power grow mightily and so long will it hold its place in the front rank of the unfaltering and vigorous march of national progress. To the upbuilding of the power of the press that is the best use of that power you have devoted yourselves.

"There are questions of great import to be passed upon by the people in November—questions that it will be your duty and, therefore, I am sure, your pleasure as well, to present honestly and so clearly that the people will understand them.

"I shall not take up your time, however, with any reference to the great issues upon which our party, through its platform and candidates, confidently appeals to the people for indorsement, and crave your indulgence while I briefly refer to a single feature of the platform of the Republican party.

"That platform opens with a declaration of that party's many years of control of the government, coupled with the assertion that it 'has displayed high capacity for rule and government which has been made even more conspicuous by the incapacity and infirmity of purpose shown by its opponents.'

"This challenge to a comparison of Democratic and Republican administrations since the Republican party came into existence should be welcomed. Fortunately we have eight recent years of Democratic administration of the executive department of the government which we will gladly compare with any similar period since 1860.

"The comparison will show that under Democratic control the administrative purity of the fathers was observed in the conduct of the government, that no one of its departments was permeated as of late with corruption rivaling the days of the star route frauds, that a successful effort was made to check the growth of expenditures, that it resulted in such instance in cutting down the expenses within the control of the executive department of the government below that of the preceding administrations. The comparison will also show that each succeeding Republican administration after 1808 increased expenses, and in some instances so greatly as to indicate reckless extravagance and waste of the people's money.

"During Mr. Cleveland's first term the average annual expenditure was about $292,000,000. For the past three years it has been about $510,000,000. The governmental expenditure last year mounted up to $582,000,000, which is not equaled by any year since the civil war, with the exception of the year of the Spanish war. There is an inevitable result to such extravagance. Instead of a surplus in the annual receipts of about $80,000,000—which the present executive found on assuming control—there is now a deficit to be found of $42,000,000.

"The Democratic address will not permit a further reference to the cost of administration, but it should receive careful examination at your hands. And you will be convinced that 'reform is necessary'—aye, far more necessary than in 1876—in the scale of public expense. And when convinced you will do less than your duty if you fail to make the people understand it.

"The challenge of the Republican platform permits you to compare the details—the everyday life, so to speak—of the Democratic administrations with both predecessive and successive administrations, and you will not shrink from it.

"The sturdy honesty, marked ability and thorough devotion to principle of all those in high place during those Democratic administrations may without hesitation be placed alongside of the qualifications of similar officials in any and all other administrations. Who, I pray you, would hesitate to compare the members of the cabinet of those years with the present one or with any one? Is the fame of Bayard, Manning, Fairchild, Endicott, Whitney, Vilas, Dickinson, Garland, members of the Cleveland cabinet, Olney, Carlisle, Lamont, Smith, Francis, Herbert, Bissell, Wilson and Harmon of that period dwarfed when contrasted with the cabinet officers of today?

"When the comparison is once completed upon the record of facts the people which is the better. They will declare the victor in the contest between administrations to be the one which in addition to other excellences saved many millions a year to the nation.

"Extravagance is running riot in federal, state and municipal governments in spite of the well directed efforts of some excellent officials. The indebtedness of municipal governments is stead ily growing, bond issues are increasingly frequent, and the people have not the satisfaction in many instances of a full equivalent in improvements for the money expended. And the federal government is leading in this riot of extravagant expenditure. Ere long the people will demand a reform in administrative expenses. And they will do it now if they are made to appreciate the whole truth.

"The Democratic party is not a machine. It is a body of citizens who believe that on the whole its fundamental principles are best adapted to the conduct of the government.

"Among so many patriotic and intelligent citizens it is inevitable that divergence of opinion as to minor questions and differences of view as to the correctness of the disposition of dead issues should be found. The party is constantly united today as to every vital article of faith which can reasonably enter into the pending canvass.

"Our adversaries are intrenched, in full possession of every department of the government, and it is a mistaken policy that would drive away voters who would help to oust them. The cause cannot be advanced by attacks on others within the party with whom we have had disagreements, but who are now working with us for a common ends.

"All men who have attained any degree of prominence have their friends, and the exercise of ordinary prudence forbids the alienation of allies who are willing and anxious to assist.

"The coming election is not to be determined by the September vote in hopelessly Republican states, where local issues and candidates even are grievously handicapped, but the result in Vermont on Tuesday admonishes us—and there can be no harm in giving voice to the admonition—that a harmonious co-operation of all and the elimination of personal, factional and unimportant differences involving no surrender of principle are essential to success."

Judge Parker read most of his speech. He read with great care and deliberation, looking at his auditors. The editors frequently applauded and several times broke into cheers and laughter at the speaker's attacks upon the Republican administration. The applause which the reference to Vermont reached toward the close when he deprecated attacks on others within the party. Cries of "Good; that's right!" and the like broke from various parts of the audience, and for several moments the speaker had to wait for quiet.

After the speaking Judge Parker and the members of his family greeted all the guests at an informal reception held on the veranda. The entire delegation and other visitors then proceeded to the boat, where luncheon was served.

Doc Bliss Is Dead.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 9.—Thomas W. Lansdrum, alias Dr. David C. Bliss, alias J. R. King, died in the Baltimore city jail last night of tuberculosis.

Lansdrum was sentenced to one year's imprisonment last spring for stealing a satchel from a runner of the Merchants' National bank of this city. Last week Lansdrum made his will, bequeathing his worldly possessions to Mrs. Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America. Photographs of Doc Bliss adorn rogues' galleries in all parts of the country.

Unknown Disease Kills Cattle.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Sept. 9.—A peculiar and unknown disease has attacked the herd of J. Julian Perrows, a Campbell county stockman. Five have died, and forty are ill with the malady. The cows are attacked with a cough. They run at the mouth and die in a short time. An examination of one revealed its heart four or five times its normal size. A veterinary has been sent to study the disease.

Bodies of Hurtig and Treiber Found.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 9.—The bodies of Julius Hurtig and Albert G. Treiber, the last of the five men who lost their lives in Saturday night's drowning in Lake Erie, have been recovered.

THE DEADLY KELEP

THE GUATEMALAN ANT WHICH MAKES WAR ON BOLL WEEVIL.

Experiments Being Carried On by the Government at Victoria, Tex., and the Results Thus Far Obtained.

The cotton boll-weevil sees its finish or rather it would see it if it could appreciate the full meaning of the experiments which the agricultural department has been carrying on at Victoria, Tex., with the Kelep, or Guatemalan cotton boll-weevil ant. In Texas and some other sections of the south cotton cultivation has been well nigh ruined by the devastations of the boll-weevil, and hitherto no natural enemy of the pest had ever been discovered and all methods of fighting the little insect failed.

The "kelep" was discovered by accident. Dr. Cook went to Guatemala to investigate the rubber industry, but in his travels he noticed magnificent cotton fields where the cotton seemed to grow without molestation of any sort. At first he thought he had discovered a cotton immune from the destructive work of the weevil. Closer investigation evinced the fact that the cotton plants owed their splendid condition to an effective little protector—the "kelep." Four thousand were shipped to the United States, and this army is now on the government plantation at Victoria, Tex., under the personal care and direction of Dr. Cook, tropical botanist for the agricultural department. Somewhat dubious as to the wisdom of using one pest to counteract the work of another, certain cotton planters tried to keep the government from bringing the ants into the country. An injunction was sought, but it was explained that the experiments would be conducted entirely on the United States property and the injunction was dissolved.

The ants now have been fully tried and found to do all that was expected of them. Under the direction of the government experts they will be put into the fields of any cotton planter who wishes them, and it is confidently believed that they will in time make weevil devastation a thing of the past.

When the ants arrived at Victoria Dr. Cook was not long in giving them a trial.

"Some of the colonies," he said "were released by placing the jar in which they were confined on the ground and inserting a boll cotton stalk on which the insects could climb out. They immediately began digging a burrow at the base of the adjacent cotton plant, and in the course of two hours the workers were ready for the queen and a delegation of two or three of them brought her out. The very strong homing instinct of the ants would have made it safe to release them in the plantations for study, even if their other habits had been less known. Instead of scattering or becoming bewildered under the strange conditions, they act from the first as though they were thoroughly familiar with their surroundings. Many colonies have been tested on a table isolated below by water. The insects were forced to come out of their cages by means of a ladder consisting of a cotton leaf with the stem bent back. There was no hesitation or preliminary exploration. The ants filed out at once and spread themselves over the table. Weevils were often caught, stung and carried back to the cage within a minute or two after the release of the ants from their captivity.

Despite the ferocious attitude held toward the weevil by the ant, Dr. Cook says that the fear that it might interfere with the cultivation or harvesting of the cotton is entirely groundless.

"The fact that the ant uses its sting in capturing its prey has led some to confuse it with the stinging ants which are serious pests in some tropical countries," he said.

The "kelep" does not belong, however, to any such category. It is a predaceous or hunting ant, which very seldom stings except to paralyze its prey and thus render the game easier to capture and carry off; but at other times it has no inclination to sting and does so only when actually seized or hurt. The sting, however, is feeble, so small and weak to penetrate the skin of the inside of the hand, so that the insects can be picked up with entire impunity.

If accidentally squeezed between the fingers or caught under one's collar a 'kelep' may be able to sting, but the wound smarts, in most people, for only a few minutes.

They do not crush or chew their food and are apparently unable to eat anything except liquids or substances soft enough to be lapped up, as it were, by their tongues. While the insects are feeding their jaws are usually opened wide as though to get them out of the way.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

A question often discussed by baseball fans but one seldom decided is: who is the best first baseman in the big leagues to-day? Every ball player is recognized as having some weakness, be it in fielding, batting or base running. In the opinion of Comiskey, owner of the White Stockings of the American league, John Ganzel, of the New York American league, is the prince of all first suckers of to-day. Comiskey was a first baseman of the first magnitude in his day and knows a good one when he sees him. As a fielder, full of ginger and always fighting, Ganzel probably has no equal, he thinks. High and low throws are alike to him and whether the ball is hit to either the right or the left of him makes him no matter no difference. Many a ball ticketed for a safe hit is knocked down by him as it is speeding over the bag close to the foul line and the runner is retired. Frank Isbell, Comiskey's substitute first baseman, is another great fielder, much on the same order as Ganzel. He is a product of Comiskey's, who retired him from the pitcher's box to teach him the intricacies of the job about first. But Isbell can't bat, run, field and throw that reason Comiskey picked up "Jigs" Donohue. Donohue is not regarded as in Isbell's or Ganzel's class as a fielder, especially on ground balls, either thrown or hit, but he can hit the ball timely and hard. George Lachance, of the Champion Boston team, has one qualification that entitles him to be classed as a first baseman and that is his hitting. As a fielder he is not up to the class of Ganzel or Isbell and as a base runner he is a "joke." All the others of the American league are one-sided players, troubled with either a lack of base hits or inability to field well. In the National league the brightest star is thought by many critics to be Fred Tenney, of the Boston club. "Kitty" Bransfield, of the Pirates is a good one, too, especially as he can hit the ball some, but for general all-around work Tenney is regarded by experts and ball players alike as the best in that organization. Tenny's one weakness is a low ball, especially a low throw. Anything above his knees he eats up with avidity, but lower than that the result is rather comical. Kling, of the Cubs, has developed wonderfully and is especially valuable on account of his great hitting ability. His effectiveness is somewhat nullified on account of his numerous injuries, the affliction of rheumatism and lack of perfection in fielding. Sitting the 16 first basemen of the two leagues down apparently brings the question of decision between Ganzel and Isbell as fielders of the American league and Tenney and Bransfield, of the National, with odds in favor of the New York American leaguer.

To do some thing no American has ever before accomplished is the ambition of John C. Lorden, one of the long bridge, the winner of the great Boston Athletic association Marathon run last year. In order to satisfy this ambition he has entered in the Marathon run to be held at the St. Louis Fair. It is a long run of 40 kilometers, or nearly 25 miles. At Athens in 1896 it was won by a Greek and at Paris in 1900 a Frenchman won it. Athletes from all over the world are coming to take part in these games, and in the long run Lorden will be pitted against the best long-distance runners on both sides of the Atlantic. John Lorden, who is 28 years old, is an Irish-American, having been born in the old country, but came over here at an early age. However, and all his noteworthy running has been done in this country. He is five feet seven inches in height and weighs 135 pounds. His weight never varies. While it was the Marathon of 1902 that brought Lorden into national prominence, it was not his first great race by any means. He ran in the race of 1901, and finished fifth. Again, in 1902, he ran and was beaten only by Sammy Mellor and J. J. Kennedy, of Roxbury. The next year he won. He has also won many cups in races at shorter distances.

John C. Lorden.

The final installments on the forfeit of $15,000 have been posted for the Jeffries-Monroe contest, the date of which is set for August 26, next. Of the total amount of forfeit, Jeffries has paid up $5,000, Monroe $5,000 and the same amount by the Yosemite club, under whose auspices the battle will be fought.

By defeating Harry L. Waldner in the contest for the northwest tennis championship at Minneapolis, Reuben G. Hunt added another title to his credit. Hunt now holds several tennis championships. He also successfully defended his title as champion of Wisconsin at Milwaukee by defeating George Parks.

R. F. Doherty and H. L. Doherty, the English champions, will not defend their doubles and singles tennis championships at Newport. The Dohertys failing to defend their championships, the winners of the East vs. West doubles match will become the doubles champions, and the winner of the all comers in the singles will become singles champion.

THE MOQUI INDIANS

INCIDENTS OF A VISIT TO INTERESTING NATIVES.

Village of the Aborigines in Western Arizona Which Had Not Been Visited by a White Man for Over a Year.

Late in the fall of 1872, a little party of government officials, including an army officer, an Indian agent, and an interpreter, set out from Fort Wingate, New Mexico, for the Moqui Pueblo Indian villages in western Arizona. A number of attendants closely followed the party, having in charge a pack train conveying goods for distribution to the Indians. For more than a week the journey lay through the Navajo Indian country along the southern border of the picturesque "Painted Desert" region, and beyond to the bank of the Little Colorado. Once across that tortuous affluent of the Grand Colorado, the trail led westward for more than a fortnight, traversing a broad, barren plateau that ended finally at the base of a great, detached, flat-topped mountain on which the Moqui town of Pueblo of the Moqui group had been built.

The people of the town were greatly surprised to see their visitors. Nearly a year, they said, had elapsed since any white men had found their way to the Pueblo, and they had begun to accept as true the revelations made in a dream to Hulitupi, a medicine man, that a wide spread cataclysm had destroyed all human beings except themselves.

Ordinarily strangers visiting the Pueblo were taken for shelter to a subterranean room, known as the "estufa," a cavernous place sunk in the sandstone rock on which the village stood, for use as a council chamber and a general lounging place. This Pueblo party would have gone had not the "Governador" insisted that it should take up its abode in an empty building in the town where it would be more accessible by the people.

The building was found to be acceptable and as soon as the agency goods brought by the train, could be opened and arranged, the distribution of annuities and presents began.

When the ceremony was well under way the agent turned aside for a moment to take a dose of quinine for some ailment from which he suffered. He quickly discovered that the drug had escaped from the packages in which he carried it and lay loose in his vest pocket. Taking into the palm of his hand what seemed an ordinary dose he hastily swallowed it. The act was observed by an officious old Indian who evidently conveived the idea that the agent was appropriating to his personal use some good things that properly belonged to the Indians. Turning quickly upon the Agent he demanded a share of the thing the official was appropriating to himself, whatever it might be. The agent made no objections and offered no explanations. Quietly approaching the Indian he motioned the man to open his mouth and when that was accomplished he dropped into it a quarter of a teaspoonful of the drug.

The story book tells us that the Indian is a stoical, emotionless creature, but the story is untrue characteristics of the race the individual in question was an exception to the rule. He went off at once into ludicrous contortions of body and face, that set every one about him, the Indians themselves, into paroxysms of laughter.

The quinine incident was scarcely over when an old warior whose wrinkled face seemed to confirm his assertion that he had seen more than a hundred winters on the earth, walked up to the agent in the front and meekly asked for a piece of fresh beef. Once, he said, in his boyhood days he had visited a military port where he had been given all the beef he could eat. He confided to the Agent in pathetic tones that he would be ready to die if he could only once more satisfy his appetite in the same manner. He was a firm friend of the white man, he continued, and one meal of beef by way of reciprocity, was all he asked. But when he was informed that the mess chests of his visitors were empty of his coveted food, his friendship quickly cooled, and his language directly became offensive. He moved away finally, heaping anathemas as he went upon the heads of his visitors for not including fresh beef among their presents for the Moquies. The friendship of such people, he loudly exclaimed, had ceased to be of value or to be desired by the juvinelle warriors of the great Moqui nation.

TRULY UNIQUE MONUMENT.

It Is the Arch of an Old Washington Hand Press and Marks an Editor's Grave.

Boston (Mass.) Special.

In Greenwood cemetery, Bristol, Vt., is a unique monument, erected by the Wilson brothers, publishers of the Bristol Herald, in memory, of their father, Myron P. Wilson. This monument is the arch of a Washington handpress, Tuft's pattern, and is in horse shape.

The interior of the arch was taken out and a marble panel inserted, on which were inscribed the names and dates of birth and death of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Wilson.

The press was used in Burlington some time before 1830 and 1840, but in what office is not now known. It came into the possession of John R. Forest, of Winooski, and in 1875 he sold it, with other printing material, to Myron, Preston and James Wilson. In 1870 the outfit was moved to Bristol, and used to print the Bristol Herald for about two years.

Myron P. Wilson, in whose memory the monument was erected, was born in Westford, Vt., April 1, 1819, and was the son of Loton E. and Lodica (Felton) Wilson. He entered the office of the Free Press, Burlington, in 1837, when George Stacy was foreman. A. L. Pangborne, William W. Atwater and a Mrs. Houghton, afterward of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Riverside Press, Boston, were employed in this office at the time. After completing his apprenticeship Mr. Wilson went to Keene, Essex, N. Y.; Cathage, N. Y.; Malone, N. Y.; and Gouverneur, N. Y.

About 1850, at the solicitation of the late Lawrence Brainerd and the late Ex-Gov. John Smith, of Burlington, he went to St. Albans and started a paper, the Franklin County Journal, which he later sold, and for a few years worked as foreman of the St. Albans Messenger.

In company with the late George Church he established the St. Albans Democrat, but in 1860 sold his interest to Church and again entered the Messenger office as foreman.

In 1861 he moved to Richford and started the Frontier Sentinel, which he sold in 1868 to J. B. Bowditch, now of Pawtucket, R. I. He moved to Burlington, thence to Bristol, in 1870, and died there December 25, 1893.

TEACHES A BIBLE CLASS.

Young Teddy Roosevelt Tells Oyster Bay Children of the Heroes of the Scriptures.

Oyster Bay (L. I.) Special.

One of the most interesting Sunday school classes in the United States is that taught by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., the 17-year-old son of President Roosevelt. The membership of this class is composed of little lads, who are devotedly attached to their young teacher.

The boys in his class are all about eight or nine years of age, and they are all rugged and sunburnt. The most of them are sons of men who make their living in Oyster Bay. Two are the sons of caretakers of the homes of summer residents out near the president's place. One is the son of a clerk in a grocery. The fathers of two of them are Oyster Bay storekeepers and two are the sons of men who work on Long Island railroad trains.

Young Theodore has made it his practice during the short time that he has had the class to give the boys a talk each Sunday on some of the noted Biblical characters. This is entirely aside from the regular lessons.

A few Sundays ago he talked to them about David and Saul. The lesson was about the arrest of St. Paul. The boys were told how St. Paul got permission from the captain of the Roman soldiers to speak to the people from the castle stairs; how they listened to him patiently at first and then attempted to mob him, and how he was saved by being brought into the castle and then scourged.

ARMIES AT BULL RUN

GREAT MIMIC WARFARE TO BE FOUGHT OUT THERE.

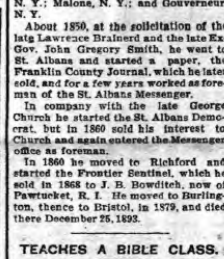
Thirty Thousand Regular Troops and Militia Are to Work Out War Problems on the Historic Battle Ground.

The roar of the cannon and musketry, din and clash of battle, the heavy tramp of marching armies and the thunder of the hoofbeats of the dashing cavalry which over 40 years ago shook the hills and the valleys of Virginia is soon again to be heard upon the historic battlefield of Bull Run. It was here that the first great battle of the civil war was fought, and it is here that the greatest army maneuvers which have ever been attempted in this country in times of peace will be carried out. The battle of Bull Run, or battle of Manassas, as it is referred to in the south, is to be fought over again. There will be no bloody carnage to be sure, such as marked the desperate conflict between the blue and the gray, and the features of gallant charges and desperate assaults will be lacking, owing to the improved engines of war, but the maneuvering of the 30,000 troops which will be present will be something more than military display. New problems of warfare which have arisen with the advent of the small bore, high-powdered magazine arm, the deadly machine gun and the powerful, long range seige gun, will be worked out.

The army of the regulars, the regular army and the militia organizations will come from almost every state in the union east of the Mississippi river, and great benefits to both the regular establishment and the militia organizations are expected as a result of the operations. The actual maneuvers will last from September 5 to September 10, but the greater part of the regular troops and some of the militia will be on the ground several days previous to and will remain for some time after the last of the sham engagements has been fought and the set problems of mimic warfare have been satisfactorily solved.

Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin, former adjutant general of the army, and now in charge of the military division of the Atlantic, with headquarters at Governors Island, New York, will be in supreme command, and the two divisions of the corps under him will be commanded by Brig. Gen. J. Franklin Bell and Brig. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, son of the famous soldier president.

The First division, under Gen. Grant, will occupy Camp Carter No. 1, near Manassas, and will wear the old style blue flannel blouses, while the enemy,



THE LOCATION OF BULL RUN BATTLE FIELD.

the Second division, under Gen. Bell, will be encamped at Thoroughfare, more than ten miles away, and will be uniformed in khaki.

The ambulance, medical and signal corps of the militia organizations will accompany the troops from their states and participate in the operations.

The high officers of the army who are now engaged in working out the details of the maneuvers are satisfied that when, after five days of fighting, of march and of countermarch, of night attack and armed surprise, the regulars and the militia rest on their arms, they will have a better idea of the general scheme of war than they could possibly obtain in any other way. And they believe, too, that the men of the blues and of the browns, after they have listened for days and nights to the roar of artillery fire, the rattle of the infantry volleys and the vicious drumming of the machine guns, will return to their posts or to their homes with a very wholesome respect for the instruments of modern war, and a vastly increased knowledge of how to use them.

The area of operations of the union and confederate forces before and during the Bull Run engagements was bounded by Centerville on the east, Groveton on the west, Sudley Spring on the north and Manassas on the south, and it is to this famous square that the maneuvers will be confined.

Officers of the army who have been at Manassas and Centerville recently, laying out the camps of the various divisions and brigades, say that the battlefield itself and the country roundabout has changed very little since civil war days—so little, in fact, that the maps used by Beauregard, Johnston and McDowell in July, 1861, and those used later by Jackson, Longstreet, Lee and Pope at the second battle of Bull Run in August, 1862, would still serve to guide the opposing armies of the blues and the browns through the woods and hills, pastures and fields of Prince William county to-day.

FASHIONS OF TOMORROW.

Advanced Fur Novelties and Handsomer Gowns Fabulous.

There is one piece of news that has leaked out before its time, as it were, and that is that velvet and velveteen will enjoy a great vogue this winter. This is always good news, for the beseemingness of velvet, especially in conjunction with furs, is indisputable, and every woman is aware that she will look her best in a combination of the two.

It is decided, too, that ermine is to take premier rank among the coming furs, yielding pre-eminence only to sable. As a lining for those who can afford it, it will hold its own against every fur in the market.

Velvet and velveteen gowns will be smartest made in directoire and Louis XV. hunting styles, while the princess gown created from costly velours is regal in the extreme.

A good many fashionable tailors are making the real Newmarket coat, which always requires perfect fitting and a tail, well proportioned woman to show it to advantage.

A daring but effective mixture in fall colors is that composed of orange and blue, and some of the blue serge Eton coats have double breasted waistcoats of orange cloth, the otherwise plain serge coat and skirt being braided in black in a narrow twisted scroll design.

The illustration shows an exquisite wrap of plum velours lined with ermine. The long shouldered effect widens out into pagoda sleeves trimmed with oriental embroideries.

LINGERIE NOVELTIES.

The Craze of the Moment Is For This Underwear.

The craze of the moment for lingerie de luxe is shown in beautiful and dainty clear white French lawn worked with patterns of the simplest description. The finest hand stitchery is used in making up the garments. Every woman likes dainty lingerie, so little patience in stitchery and the following of French designs solve the problem of cost at once.

A charming simple nightgown is made of lawn with a square or round yoke or lace collar cut in points. Colors admit of a good deal of variety, for they may be of the same fabric as the nightgown itself, or they may be composed of lace, embroidery or lace and ribbon insertion with cuffs to match. Here many of the sale remnants will prove useful.

For practical everyday wear lingerie of fine French linen, hand embroidered and buttonhole stitched, is excellent.

The manufacturers of shoes have added one article to the list that could be bought and included in a costume of "one color." Only a few seasons ago it was considered ultra fashionable to have slippers for evening wear match the gowns with which they were worn, and colored shoes for street wear were almost unheard of. Now in any high class shoe store one can buy white, champagne color, tan, brown, blue, green, red and violet colored shoes in several shades, the most fashionable tones being in evidence. To be sure, there are some women who have their shoes dyed to order, but as a rule they can be secured in almost any color. Huge silver or gilt eyelets are made in laced shoes, and fancy buttons are quite a feature in the buttoned models.

Herewith illustrated is an attractive shirt waist made with a V shaped yoke outlined with braid.

FASHION'S FRILLS.

Checks to Be Worn—New Embroideries in Walking Hats.

Checks are rampant again this fall. This, however, was a foregone conclusion, as the tendency has been that way since the spring, and perhaps—who knows?—we may succeed in rounding off the story during the autumn. The new checks are emphasized by a large overrunning plaid of definite color. A brown and white block check is plaided over with a line of red and white and black with blue or green, and so on. It will be quite the exception to see whole frocks made of the check, as most of the best creations will be deftly combined with some happy coloring in plain cloth.

Bonnaz embroidery, which is really nothing more than embroidered kid, is a freak of fashion chiefly used for the under brim of felt turbans.

WALKING HAT.

quill at the left side taken through a large ring of cut beads. It is early to prophesy as to just what shape of hat the modish woman will affect, but I am inclined to believe that flat and medium sized crowns will be chosen in preference to the very high ones.

A commonplace looking hat can be given an air of distinction by draping it effectively with a long veil. Veils made of crepe chiffon in light tones of gray, blue and lavender are bordered with taffeta ribbon in self color about three-quarters of an inch wide. The ribbon, although light, weighs down the edges and keeps them from flying about in the slightest breeze. Some of these veils are finished with deep hemstitched borders and have huge lozenge shaped spots or dhenille at wide intervals in order that they may not interfere with the wearer's eyes. These is something truly feminine about a long veil, and to this may be attributed its extended vogue.

The smart looking walking hat reproduced in the picture is a model following the Romney lines. It is made of cream felt faced and trimmed with hunter's green velvet. Through the chore are stylishly stuck two speckled quills.

JEWELRY FOIBLES.

Roses Are Much Used as Adornments For Gowns.

Some charming little hair accessories are emanating from the Rue de la Paix. The daintiest is an amber pin carried out in the form of an oak leaf, over which a pearl caterpillar is seen wandering. Another is an amber serpent, with a pair of gleaming ruby eyes, which coils into an attractive wide comb for the back of the hair. A third is a casque comb in dark shell representing a series of buds and leaves arranged in symmetrical array. These little hair adornments are quite a novelty after the stiff "tabs" folding over the hair which have generally characterized this style of comb.

The most fashionable way of wearing roses as a gown adornment is to choose the tiny kind, form them into couple wreaths and tack them on the front of the skirt and bodice. Many of the old fashioned brocades will be made to open over a white front trimmed with flowers that appear in the pattern.

Here is a stunning home gown of gray voile simply made with tucks. Medaria lace is inset in the skirt and forms a bolero on the waist.

THE MODISTIC HORIZON.

The Vogue of Painted Lace—Colors For Traveling Toilets.

There are indications no bigger than a man's hand on the modistic horizon that painted lace is again coming to the fore. On one or two handsome coats seen at a Paris atelier it has made its appearance. In one instance the lace was introduced on a beautiful coat of pompadour silk, with a hood of real valenciennes, while a deep flounce of the same ran all round the bottom. The flounce was headed by tiny rosettes of pale pink, mauve and blue ribbon.

WHITE CLOTH FROCK.

There is no reason to quarrel with painted lace any more than with painted chiffon, provided the lace subjected to this treatment is of the cheaper varieties. To paint old lace is almost a crime.

The colors most in vogue for traveling costumes just now are those which come under the general head of pain brulle, running up the scale from the palest buff to a bright and very charming nut brown.

In the millinery world the brilliant shades of parrot are still in great demand. Entire green hats are shown in the shops, and owls' heads, breasts or wings of vivid green are in high favor. The idea of having the hat match the costume is gaining popularity with amazing rapidity, and milady may find it necessary in the very near future to purchase a new hat with every gown. The large, short back sailors, with straight brims, or those bent down at the back have been christened the Charlotte Corday and are almost universally becoming. The crowns are square, round, oval or triangular and surrounded by velvet ribbon, arranged in conventional loops.

A white cloth frock is an indispensable possession of the smart woman, and the picture given is of this genre. The skirt is accordion plaited, while the stunning coat, with its three-quarter length basque, is bordered and trimmed with knife plaited frills of white taffeta glace, the upper part being arranged with frills that are curved to give a bolero effect.

THE WORLD OF CLOTHES.

The Indispensable Dinner Jacket—A New Voile Material.

The coffee coat, or, as many prefer to call it, the home dinner jacket, has ceased to be a fashion and has become an indispensable necessity. It is such a comfort to slip into a pretty loose dinner jacket after a strenuous day instead of getting into an elaborate dinner blouse. The coffee coat, too, is to the single girl what the tea gown is to the married woman.

Point d'esprit mounted on a lining foundation of brussels net is a delightful combination for a jacket of this sort.

A new material belonging to the voile family has recently made its appearance. It is very similar in weave to voile, but much finer and so glossy that when seen from a distance in certain lights it has been compared to spun glass. Gowns of this new material will be trimmed with heavy lace which sets off the pretty glossy fabric to the best advantage.

Could there be a daintier or more girlish waist than the one in the picture carried out in spotted challie, with cambric bemsitched yoke and pretty cavalier cuffs? JUDIC CHOLLET.

Grace of Motion.

Some Suggestions on How to Attain It

THE first thing to know in connection with grace of body is that every woman may possess it unless she is paralyzed or deformed. Now, fix that knowledge firmly and permanently in your mind. After that a hint or two by Edwin Wooton, the English writer on health and exercise, will be helpful in the pursuit of gracefulness.

In brief, physical grace results from muscular control and exact judgment. It would be better to put the mental part of the process first. Every aim must be clearly defined in the mind before it can be manifest outwardly, no matter what the aim be. Let us apply this principle.

POISING THE BODY.

A stiff, clumsy, heavy going girl or woman makes up her mind to transform her clumsiness into grace. Let her watch the most graceful little child she knows. Little children unless deformed are always graceful. There never was an awkward baby.

With the idea of easy motion in her mind, the clumsy woman will naturally think first of her hampering dress and corset. For physical exercising these must be changed for a costume that will not hamper the muscles. One step toward grace of motion has been taken. Next let the victim of awkwardness try if she can relax her muscles. Not one in five hundred can do this at first. The stiffness and awkwardness come from muscles held tense or perhaps shocked with fear. To relax the muscles is to withdraw all feeling temporarily from them. Here is a good way to do that:

Let the clumsy woman attire herself in a perfectly loose garment, say a Mother Hubbard. Now let her lie down on her back on a flat couch or the floor, stretch her arms and limbs out and get her consciousness away from every part of her body. From any sense of feeling she must not recognize that she has fingers, arms, limbs, back, stomach or even face and eyes.

When the girl can cease to realize any part of her body, then she has learned to relax her muscles and a long step toward gracefulness and ease of motion has been gained. Then, having thought the knots out of her muscles, she may begin to train certain motions into them. The secret of muscular training is to get all tenseness and consciousness out of all the muscles except just those which are to be used in the exercise lesson, then put all one's mental attention into those particular muscles.

One essential of physical grace is to hold the chest up and the head erect, chin in. To train for doing this habitually relax all the muscles except those of the legs on which you are to stand. Get all the consciousness of stiffness from the back of your neck and shoulders. Withdraw from the base of the brain the tense feeling that so often lodges there. Now you are ready to send the right kind of an impulse, that of steady erectness, to the back of your neck. So send it. Next the chest. Let loose the muscles around the waist in front. By a mental movement set them all free. Now lift the chest. Simply draw it up from around the waist and hold it so. You are to have no consciousness of your body except in the chest and rear neck muscles. Put your will power into these and hold them firmly. Do this continually. Ere long you will have educated the muscle till of themselves they will hold this pose.

The balancing exercise shown in the illustration is to correct the sloppy, wabbling gait so many women have let themselves fall into. Mr. Wooton's instruction for this exercise is to balance the body on one leg, throwing the body forward. Extend the free leg backward, raise the arms until the finger tips meet above the head, then extend them, the one crossing the other. Now bring the arms to the sides, the hands resting on the hips, and with the free leg kick backward and forward alternately. Repeat with the other leg. When fairly expert try to go through the exercise while standing on tiptoe.

AUTUMN MILLINERY.

What Parisian Artists Have to Say About Hats.

What is there about a Paris hat that differs from boldness of any other description? To the uninitiated in the mysteries of the milliner's art the difference is so slight that it can only be translated by the word chic. It is often thought that the secret lies in the poise of a feather or the placing of a flower. But it is a mistake. The arrangement of an adornment has little to do with the real success. There are two essential considerations that people are apt as a rule to ignore—that is, the quality of the material used and the exact angle at which the hat should be worn. A bow made of ribbon of an inferior quality has an altogether different effect from the one fashioned from a superior make, and therein lies the difference. In these nice little distinctions the French excel, and American artists are now fully alive to the fact. Among the popular hats for the coming winter will be the new Varennes, which has a high crown of funnel or conical shape. The trimming will consist of a double band of velvet in two tones, arranged in such a manner that the upper part of the crown is visible. A plume or panache of three small feathers will be placed in the center of the front and caught with a high narrow buckle.

MAUVE CHIFFON HAT.

The charming hat illustrated is created from mauve chiffon in two tones. One is of parma violets and the other *so delicate in tone that it appears al*most white. The feathers are in mauve and white, and the harmony is perfect. The high crown is surmounted by a ruching.

FOR EVENING FUNCTIONS.

Rich Fabrics a Feature of Fall Gowns of the Moment.

The eighteenth century style of evening gown is the choice for the coming season, and the most charming creations will be materialized from the richest velvets in the softest colorings. The bodices are to be draped with old lace. This fashion is particularly good form for stately matrons.

A lovely evening toilet seen recently was of pink satin, the skirt long and full. Still, one could imagine it clinging to the figure over the fine muslin underskirt. The bodice was cut exceedingly low in an oval shape which fitted into an ordinary depth of low bodice made of finely gathered white net. The sleeves were long and almost tight, reaching the wrist with a fullness of a mousquetaire glove. There was something charmingly picturesque about this gown.

A handsome black frock always stands out conspicuously at an evening function and the exception to which shown is a heavy Brocaded of rich quality, Spanish black net gracefully with motifs of chantilly lace covering the skirt, and the sweeping bodice is of net and lace, the decolletage being cut in a deep point.

FALL FASHIONS.

Hats Are to Be of Fanciful and Wonderful Patterns.

The glory of the summer girl is about to lose its luster, and she is already thinking about what to get for her fall suits and hats. And, oh, these hats! I think we have never yet had anything in the line of hats to compare with these in point of ugliness, and yet we had some pretty bad looking things the past summer. The new hats are as large around as cart wheels and have the brims of one color and the crowns of another, each a little worse than the last. There are gray felts with brims large and round, and these have quite prominent crowns in a brilliant orange. Red verging on yellow and yellow verging on red seem to be the best liked of all the combinations to put with the drab or gray brims. Some black brims are also endowed with surprising contrasts of color. How these contrivances are ever going to look well on a woman passes my understanding, but I suppose they will.

I saw in one place one large brown hat with a yellow crown, and on each side was an immense paradise plume in shaded yellow from cream to deep orange. One may judge that orange is to be a favorite color if the new hats now making are to be criterions. Bright green is also seen in many cases, and all the way through there seems to be a desire to have only the most pronounced of the primary colors.

Velvet in these decided colors is to be largely employed as trimming—that is to say, drapery—but I fancy that drooping feathers are going to be very popular.

So many of the new gowns now in course of construction are made with wide and full skirts that one might be excused for saying that all are to be so, but there are many women who will cling to the snug ones as long as possible. Of course these are modified and have either tucks or shirrings to bring them in closely to the hips and allow them to flare out widely at the foot. The illustration shows how the plan is carried out. In many of the new gowns a feature is made of having the front seam down the center, something which would have been considered an heresy a year ago. This allows a new arrangement of the shirring. The dress in the illustration is of the pretty and durable new peau de crepe. It is made over a slip lining and the three separate parts are superposed. The bottom of each is hemmed and trimmed with a transparent silk mull ruching in the same tint, which in this case was about the natural pongee. It was shirred closely at the hips, in three lines of shirring each being run several times.

The waist was in bloused shape, the silk was entirely covered with all over lace, and this in turn trimmed effectively with a banding of black lace and shirred ruches of black silk mull. The sleeves were covered with lace and had three deep falls at the lower part of the arm. Tiny shirring of white silk mull finished it at the neck.

This I call the last rose of summer, for it is among the last of the new de*signs for such wear, but it is safe to* say that it will be worn long into the fall, with the addition of one of the short and dressy Monte Carlo coats in pongee with a heavy lace collar. These in various slightly different shapes are to be quite as popular as ever, and rightly so. They are more dressy and elegant than any reefer can be, and are easier to get on and off. The bolero shaped trimming is quite a fad in the handsomest of the new ones. I seem that the lace trimming is laid on the yoke of the coat in such a way as to suggest one. Boleros will still be liked and seen on many of the finest of the dresses for late fall, and probably winter, for nowadays fashion picks out a good thing and holds to it, and if necessary varies it a trifle, but keeps the original idea. Boleros are becoming to every one, from children to old ladies.

Waists follow the lead of the boleros and are not made by any hard and fast set rule. Some look and feel better in snug effects, and these can be had, for there are many fine tight waisted suits with or without white vests and with or without bouquets at the back. Many others still cling to *the loose waists with their bloused ef*fects, and each has its votaries, but many more tight suits are now seen than for a long time.

OLIVE HARPER.

A SHREWD WOMAN.

How She Built Up a Flourishing Wholesale Flower Trade.

One summer day a lady who lived in New York went driving with her husband in the country north of the city. She had no thought of anything except enjoying the drive, the air and scenery. Suddenly she came upon a monster bed of purple irises growing along the roadside. A sudden idea occurred to the lady.

"How much will you take for the whole lot of those flags?" she asked the owner of the ground. He said he would take 25 cents.

The lady called her husband and began to gather the blue flags carefully, breaking those off with long stems. She filled her husband's arms with the exquisite purple blue blossoms, he protesting against the nonsense of it, but yielding pleasantly, as all good husbands do. After he had been loaded with all he could carry the wife gathered the rest of them.

In New York the lady took the whole lot of them, ten dozen in all, to a prominent New York florist. He in turn gazed in admiration at the graceful flowers of purple blue, so vivid one could fairly feel the color vibrations from them. The florist offered her $5 for the lot. She took the $5 note home and flourished it before the eyes of her husband, who could scarcely believe she had got so much money from that heavy load of trash. He declared she had hunkoed the florist.

"Indeed I did not," she answered. "What is more, he told me he would take all the flower novelties I could find from this time on, on condition that I sold none to anybody else."

When she carried the flags to the florist, the lady had no idea that here was the beginning of a thriving business in the wholesaling of old fashioned flowers, just common flowers that are always beautiful.

She remembered having noticed about fifteen miles out of the city a whole field of magnificent flaming red poppies which for gorgeousness she had never seen excelled. She brought a single one of these flowers to the retail florist to know if he would take them. This flower was four inches in diameter. The dealer told her he would give her a high price for them. She secured them and sent some of them, but had not yet learned how to pack them, so that when they reached the florist's shop nearly all their petals had shelled off. Not discouraged, she packed another lot, this time in pasteboard boxes, and brought them in whole. On the lot of poppies she realized very handsomely.

She got her hint and her start. She began a series of investigation trips among the old fashioned gardens and waste fields around New York city. She was thorough in the search. Having time that no one retail dealer could spare, she presently made the acquaintance of all the small flower growers, the farm people who were willing to sell the "weeds," like goldenrod and tiger lilies, upon their places, the amateurs who raised flowers for their own pleasure, but were willing to dispose of the overplus, also the beauty loving German garden women, who planted flowers along the borders of their beet and cabbage beds. All these were ready to sell such blossoms as they could spare. The lady always paid cash on the spot for the flowers, so that whether she lost or gained they were safe.

Before long she had control of more floral output than one dealer cared for, so she extended her acquaintance among them, and in a short time they learned to send for her when they had an overgrown order to fill. They knew that from her superior knowledge of floral possibilities around the city she would be able to fish up what they wanted if anybody could. And she never disappointed them.

One of the most interesting orders she ever had was for a great quantity of the wild sweetbrier. This order was from her first patron, the man who had dared to eat blue flags. The sweetbrier does not grow wild to any great extent around New York. But the woman flower broker remembered having seen a hedge of it in front of an old mansion in the country a considerable distance out. At once she went there, and the mistress of the mansion, seeing it was a woman who wanted the scented branches, kindly let her take away all she could carry and would not accept a cent for them. The woman flower broker has a lucrative business.

Middlesex county says that it does not want any of those voting machines and will not have any. Probably the bosses fear the result of an honest election over that way.

A Metropolitan paper in referring to Governor Murphy's senatorial aspirations, says "he is well equipped for the place." He may be, in some respects, but there are still a good many people who believe that a senatorship is an exalted office.

Don't beg in your advertisement. If there is one thing above another that people despise, it is a beggar. Write your ads in such a way as to leave the impression that it is as much to your customer's interest to buy as it is to your interest to sell.—Ex.

The address made by Mr. Parker to the Democratic editors yesterday was lofty in tone and was characteristic of the man. It was a decided contrast to the speech of a spellbinder and showed very clearly that the Sage of Esopus does not intend to sink to the level of a Mr. Bryan in his appeal for votes.

It is unfortunate that there is no legal remedy when an objectionable structure is erected in a district wholly devoted to handsome residences, for it does seem that the shack occupied by Bielman on Rock Front street will depreciate the value of property in the immediate vicinity as well as spoil the neighborhood. The house occupied by Marro, the Italian, is wholly out of keeping with the surroundings and it would be impossible to convince any fair minded person that it was not built for some ulterior purpose. In fact it is a disgrace to the neighborhood. Naturally the adjoining property owners are indignant, for it is useless for them to endeavor to buy the tract upon which the shack stands. The offers made to former Mayor Randolph, who owns a valuable estate near by, lead one to believe that the purchase of the piece of ground and the erection of the type of building which now disgraces the immediate vicinity was a scheme of a questionable kind, although there is no direct proof. Marro, the reputed owner, must answer to the local court for the alleged violation of city ordinances. We believe that if he is proven guilty of the offences charged no mercy should be shown him. Plainfield is too small a place for men who deliberately wreck a neighborhood and the sooner they are made to learn it the better it will be for the community.

AMUSEMENTS.

Rogers Brothers at Harvard, which opened the Bijou Theatre on Monday evening, September 19, a distinguished visitor will make his first bow to a New York audience, H. Wix and Wickham," one of the funniest and cleverest of modern comedy characters will then be introduced by that versatile impressario, Edward E. Rice. Mr. Wix is a department store manager, who, by a whimsical turn of fortune's wheel, is for a time placed in the proud position of heir to an English dukedom. Throughout the two acts of this nizn-modern musical comedy in which his adventures are presented, he is surrounded with a bevy of pretty girls, the principal obstacles played by capable artists, and all are set in the midst of a rose-bud garden of feminine beauty. Manager Rice has made all the improvements suggested by the city authorities and the cosey Bijou will be one of the most attractive places of amusement in the city. The sale of seats for the opening performances will commence Thursday morning, September 15.

Each week the patronage at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street Theatre shows a steady increase, due not alone to the inviting appearance of the reconstructed auditorium, but to the greatly increased importance of the class of attractions playing this the atre. In place of the lurid melodramas which all too frequently find booking on the combination circuits, there will be offered at the Fifty-eighth Street Theatre in quick succession the leading Broadway stars and attractions. Monday morning, September 12, Julia Marlowe, the attraction will be the veteran actor, J. H. Goodsell, and a strong supporting company, including several members of the original cast, in "The Bonnie Brier Bush." Following that comes Harry Kellar, the last of the great magicians, and he in turn gives way to "Ninety and Nine," which enjoyed a record run at the Academy of Music. "Checkers," the big melodramatic production now running at the Academy, will be moved to the Fifty-eighth Street house.

Julia Mooney, the "Fiz, Paff, Pouf" chorus girl who for the past two weeks has been enjoying the sights and sensations of the St. Louis World's Fair at the expense of Manager Whitney and Shubert, returned to New York Saturday and on Monday resumed her place in the chorus on the Casino. A letter from Edward Hooker, of the Press Bureau of the World's Fair, to F. C. Whitney, says: "Your Miss Mooney has attracted more attention than any lady who has visited the World's Fair, with perhaps the single exception of Miss Alice Roosevelt. She has conducted herself in a beautiful manner, and made friends of us all."

Jury Failed to Agree.

The failure of the jury to agree on a verdict in the landlord and tenant case of Mrs. McVey against Mrs. May Dunn, for alleged infringement of rent for apartments on North avenue, has resulted in Justice Hanchinh Hand, before whom the case was tried Monday afternoon, dismissing the case. William G. DeHaas, Esq., represented Mrs. Dunn.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE TO BE CHAS. C. BLACK

HUDSON COUNTY MAN TO BE NAMED FOR GOVERNOR THURSDAY.

New Jersey political events as they are now shaping themselves seem practically to assure the nomination of Charles C. Black for Governor by the Democratic State Convention which will meet in the State Street Theatre at Trenton on Thursday. While indications have pointed to him as the candidate ever since the opening of the campaign, there is an undercurrent of sentiment, particularly in South Jersey, favorable to some other candidate, and the man most mentioned for the gubernatorial nomination by those South Jersey Democrats is State Senator Thomas M. Farrell, of Gloucester County.

Those Democrats who are for Farrell express the opinion that if he should be nominated he would prove strong enough with the voters of South Jersey to make tremendous inroads in the Republican vote.

They profess to believe that Farrell's popularity is sufficient to materially reduce the adverse majority in the strong Republican counties, especially in Cumberland, the home of E. C. Stokes, the prospective Republican candidate, and to place in the Democratic column, on the gubernatorial vote at least, the close counties of Gloucester and Salem, and perhaps Cape May. It is claimed, however, that the advocates of the nomination of the Gloucester senator base for its basis more of a "favorite son" sentiment than any actual hope that Farrell can really secure a place at the head of the State ticket.

Differences of opinion as to who constitutes the strongest candidate will exist until the convention meets but it is understood that Hudson, Essex and Passaic Counties have become united and that Hudson will be aligned to make the nomination.

This, of course, means only one thing, that Robert Davis and the Hudson County Democracy will favor the nomination of Black for the office. He has been the one candidate to whom the Hudson people have consistently adhered from the start, despite all the opposition.

It is claimed by prominent Hudson County men that with former Senator James Smith, Jr., and State Chairman William J. Gourley, of Passaic County, supporting Mr. Davis, there will be little doubt of the result.—Trenton True American (Dem.)

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs has accepted the invitation of the clubs of Newark to meet there for the annual meeting to be held the latter part of October, 27 and 28.

Special interest in this meeting centers in the election of officers, which takes place this second year, when D. M. Miller, of Elizabeth, is chairman of the nominating committee, and has in preparation the ticket for the coming election.

TO ASSUME DUTIES.

Eric Moraller to Commence As Physical Instructor at De Pauw University This Fall.

Eric Moraller, who recently accepted a position as physical instructor at De Pauw University, Indiana, left yesterday to assume his new duties. While engaged in the work as physical instructor, Mr. Moraller will pursue a special course of studies in the college curriculum. He concluded a three years' course at the Y. M. C. A. Training School at Springfield, Mass., this June and has also studied at the Y. M. C. A. in this city.

A World's Wonder.

We often hear of the seven wonders, though in these times there are perhaps one hundred times that number, and perhaps the most popular region in this vicinity is Mauch Chunk. Mauch Chunk is high up in the Pennsylvania mountains, and the several peaks have wide outlooks in every direction. A main attraction is the Switchback Railroad, the road forms an eighteen mile loop over and around the mountains, and is a very novel engineering feat. The first incline extends up Mount Pisgah to a height of 1370 feet above tide water. The car then bowls along a distance for several miles only to reach the base of another mountain which is climbed to a height of 1580 feet above tide water. The descent to the home stretch lies through a beautiful valley, and when the journey is finished the tourist is rather anxious for a renewal of the experience. On September 28, 1904, the New Jersey Central is to run a popular priced excursion to Mauch Chunk, the rate for the round trip to be $1.00. Special train leaves Plainfield at 9:30 a. m., arriving at Mauch Chunk early in the day, and as the return trip does not leave the Mountain City until 5:40 p. m., there is plenty of time for exploring the charms of Mauch Chunk.

NEGRO ATTACKS A WOMAN

Miss Annie Davis Robbed While on Her Way Home.

ASSAILANT ESCAPES

After Asking for An Address the Highwayman Grabs Silk Bag Containing Money—No Clue.

Highway robbery in a most cowardly form, assault upon a defenseless woman, was committed on West Seventh street, Saturday evening, by an unknown colored man who attacked Miss Annie Davis, who makes her home with the family of Chief T. G. Donne on West Fifth street. Miss Davis was thrown to the ground by the assailant in his haste to wrench a silk bag from her wrist and she narrowly escaped a fracture of her left arm, that member having been broken several years ago and never having regained its full strength.

Miss Davis first saw the negro when passing the Congregational church parsonage near Madison avenue, while on her way home from G. H. Goddard's residence on East Ninth street. He approached her with a request that she direct him to the home of John V. Beekman, of West Eighth street. This she did, but the man dogged her steps across the street and followed her as far as Mrs. Rowland Cox's home, between Madison and Central avenues, explaining how difficult it was to find the place he was looking for.

Just as Miss Davis reached the middle of the block, the negro stepped beside her and tore the silk bag, she carried, from her left wrist, with such force as to throw her to the ground. The ruffian then fled through A. H. Atterbury's driveway toward Eighth street. Another negro who rode up just then on a bicycle assisted Miss Davis to her feet and offered to pursue her assailant, but failed to do so.

As Miss Davis was uninjured except for the nervous shock, she hurried home, and the police were notified by telephone. Detective McCarthy responded at once and was searching the neighborhood of the scene of the crime within fifteen minutes of its occurrence. T. O. Deane, Jr., arrived home at this time and assisted in the search, inquiring also at the Beekman house, where he was told that no man of the description given by Miss Davis was known.

While Miss Davis regrets the loss of the five dollars or so which the old-fashioned alligator pocket-book in the bag, contained, the cowardly character of the crime make it a particularly aggravated one. Beside the pocket-book, the thief secured a pair of aluminum-mounted straight-bowed spectacles.

Joseph Cooney, a private watchman in the neighborhood, was told of the case, but reported no suspicious circumstances on his beat. The police are still on the case and Chief Kiely has hopes of a capture very soon. This is the second attack of this character within the past two months and there is much indignation expressed in consequence.

Democratic Candidate's Tour.

The itinerary of the Democratic candidate for Governor has been fixed by a special committee of the Democratic State committee. The candidate will make his first public appearance at the convention of clubs at Newark on Wednesday, September 28. He will complete his first tour of all the counties by October 17, and his itinerary will include the following assignments: Essex, September 21; Passaic, September 22; Bergen, September 23; Somerset, September 24; Sussex, September 26; Warren, September 27; Hunterdon, September 28; Mercer, September 29; Middlesex, September 30; Union, October 1; Camden, October 3; Gloucester, October 4; Salem, October 5; Burlington, October 6; Ocean, October 7; Monmouth, October 8; Atlantic, October 10; Cape May, October 11; Cumberland, October 13; Monmouth, October 14; Hudson, October 15 and Morris, October 17.

ST. MARY'S OPENS.

487 Pupils Enrolled at Local Parochial School.

St. Mary's parochial school opened its doors on Tuesday to 487 children, and in spite of the removal since the close of last term, of the commercial and kindergarten departments from Stanford Hall to the main building, space was found for all and none of the classes will be called upon to fill with the city between two sections of pupils on the score of numbers.

It is said that should such action become necessary, Stanford Hall, which has been arranged for the meeting room for church clubs and societies, will again be brought into service and extra instructresses procured, thus giving all an equal chance.

Miss Boomp, of West Front street, will return the last of the week to Wellsley College, where she will continue her studies.

ELIZABETH ANXIOUS TO PLAY PLAINFIELD

MANAGER BURKE DISCOUNTS COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP HONORS.

Manager Burke, of the Elizabeth Stars, is apparently incensed at his failure to schedule a series of games with Manager George Johnston, of the Plainfield A. C. According to Monday's Elizabeth Journal the manager of the Stars is hurt by what he terms a shabby treatment at the hands of the Plainfield manager. He claims that three months ago the local team was claiming the championship of the county and that a series of contests was desired between Plainfield and Elizabeth.

In response to a letter, Manager Burke said that as soon as "Warry" MacLaughlin finished pitching at New London, he would be ready to take Plainfield on for a series, in fact any club in the county for the championship. He now claims to have written Manager Johnston on several occasions, but has received no answer. He attended the Plainfield-Westfield game here on Saturday and after the contest he spoke to Manager Johnston about the series. The Plainfield manager told him that he did not see how he could play him a series this month. He then explained that as a result of Saturday's contest, he was obliged to meet Westfield at home on September 24 and would be ready a date with Somerville on Crescent Oval for this Saturday. He deplored the position in which he was placed, but added that if his team had lost on Saturday it would have been possible for him to have given Elizabeth September 24. He does not consider that it would be honorable to throw down Somerville and Westfield to take on a new series with Elizabeth.

The Elizabeth Journal also says: "If defeating Westfield by any chance pleasingly happens the Elizabeth fans fail to see how the Acelians have put it all over Westfield, and the Stars will have to be taken into consideration before there are any bouquets thrown or pennants awarded. The Stars have met and defeated some of the strongest teams outside of the big leagues, and only suffered defeat when the visiting team was well-padded with National and American League men, and it is safe to say that neither Plainfield nor Westfield can defeat them without the aid of Leaguers. The team has been strengthened for the fall series.

"Manager Burke says that he will have no more to do with this so called county championship honor. If Johnston wants to come to time the Stars are willing to give them September 24 and October 8 on Crescent Oval, the latter game to be played at Elizabeth-port October 22. If the Plainfield club takes up the gauge, Manager Burke will send the Stars to Plainfield that will put up a good fight for championship honors, without playing a dozen games."

ALL TO CHARITY.

Somerville Spinster's Will Cuts Off Sole Near Relative.

The will of the late Miss Alletas Lord, of Somerville, a spinster and recluse, has been offered for probate in the Somerset County Orphans' Court. It is very probable a caveat will be filed against the document by her half-brother, Porter Lord, her only near relative, because the whole estate, valued at about $80,000, is left to churches and charitable institutions.

After minor legacies to a few friends she will bequeath $500 for a fund for a new rectory for St. John's church in Somerville, $4,000 to the indigent ministers' fund of the same denomination, $200 for a drinking fountain for Somerville in memory of her late brother, John H. Lord, and $1,000 to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Episcopal church. After these the balance of the estate is to be divided proportionately among the four beneficiaries, which will increase them sixfold.

Realty Exchange.

Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett has exchanged his present place of residence on Park avenue, near Muhlenberg Hospital, for improved Brooklyn property. Included in the deal is a property at Lebanon, Hunterdon county. Mr. Moffett has rented the Mulford property on West Fifth street, and will take possession October 1. The new owner of the Park avenue property lives in Brooklyn.

East Seventh Street Improvements.

After numerous petty delays for the past few weeks, the most serious of which was the encountering of large springs near Woodland avenue, Foreman Murtaugh, who is in charge of the laying of the sewer along East Seventh street, announced Saturday that he could finish up the work the later part of this week. As soon as the work is completed, Contractor C. M. Meeker will commence macadamizing the street from Richmond street to Belvidere avenue.

PLAINFIELD A. C. VICTORS

Westfield is Defeated in the Ninth Game of the Series.

TWO HOME RUNS MADE

The Locals Give a Fine Exhibition of Batting and Fielding—

The Detailed Score.

It was Plainfield's turn to win on Saturday, the local team defeating Westfield on Crescent Oval in clever fashion by a score of 6 to 4. It was one of the most exciting contests in the series thus far played, there being plenty of hitting and fielding. There were more errors than usual, but the game was a lively one throughout, the features being two home runs made in the second inning, one by "Pop" Dietrich, and the other by Fraser. They electrified the crowd and wild enthusiasm followed. "Pop" had a new bat and he predicted that there would be something doing. Fraser was in excellent form and when necessary he shut off the hitting and the runs. He was ably supported by the team. Hartman, the new shortstop, showed up well and put lots of ginger in the play.

Farmer was handicapped in his work, sustaining a severe injury to his finger. Dr. Zeglio was obliged to reset a joint which was knocked out of place. The catcher pluckily finished the game.

Waller was not quite up to his usual condition, neither were some of the other members of the visiting team. "Red" was touched for eight hits, including the two homers and a three bagger by Cregan. There was a decided improvement in the batting of the locals. The series now stands five to four in favor of Westfield and the tenth game will be played at Westfield on Saturday, September 24.

Bamford foul flied to Robertson, Cregan laced a three timer to left, Farmer singled, scoring Cregan, Courtney forced Farmer at second, Smithson to Rochford; Dietrich flied to Seward. ONE RUN.

Sixth inning—Rochford hit for two bases, Robertson hit by pitched ball, Barry fanned, Rochford and Robertson made a double steal, McManus struck out, Patience done likewise, Fraser pulled out of a sight place. NO RUNS.

Hartman flied to McManus, Smith beat out a hit to short, Patience got under Fraser's high drive in center field, getting his man, Ostick out, Rochford to Robertson. NO RUNS.

Seward singled, Cregan forced Seward at second, Barry to Rochford, Farmer forced Cregan at second, Rochford to Smithson, Courtney forced farmer at second, making the third out by being forced at second, Smithson to Rochford. NO RUNS.

Eighth inning—Smithson foul flied to Farmer, Rochford reached first on Smith's error, Robertson singled, stole second, Barry out, Hartman to Smith; McManus out, Smith to Hartman's error, Patience out on a nice stop by Hartman, who threw to Smith, retiring the runner. NO RUNS.

Dietrich easy out for Robertson unassisted, Hartman walked, Smith sacrificed, Smithson to Robertson, Hartman reached home on errors by Cotter, Smithson and Barry. Hartman got them throwing the ball all over the lot. Fraser flied out to McManus. ONE RUN.

Ninth inning—Cotter out, Ostick to Smith; Waller out, Courtney to Smith; Seward flied out to Dietrich. NO RUNS.

NEW YEAR'S FESTIVAL OF HEBREWS IS CLOSED

IMPORTANT RELIGIOUS FEAST ENDED SATURDAY NIGHT.

With the setting of yesterday's sun the annual observance of Rosh Hashona, the festival of the New Year, came to an end with the evening prayer in the Jewish Synagogue. This festival, which is among the most rigidly observed of all the feast days in the Hebrew calendar, has attracted many visitors from out of the city, many coming from New York and vicinity. After the regular afternoon service yesterday supplementary services were held for the benefit of those unable to get out earlier. When over ten or more of the late comers had gathered, a layman would read the service and the regular ceremony would be gone through with as was done by the congregation earlier in the day.

Some of the treasures of the Synagogue were displayed, including the solid silver pointer used in the reading of the scroll of the Scriptures and three volumes containing the portions of the Scriptures prescribed for use during the various festivals and feast day observances, such as the just concluded Day of Atonement which occurs next Monday; called in Hebrew, Yom Kippur. These old leather bound volumes, with their brass clasps are worth a large sum of money, having been printed in 1708 at Wilhelmstorff in Alsace, and are therefore 196 years old.

The young people of the congregation point proudly to the massive chandelier in the center of the church and which bears a bronze plate with an inscription stating it to be the gift of the Plainfield Hebrew Juvenile Auxiliary Society.

Reception to Bride and Groom.

Carrying a large couch, about forty friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Baker, who were married last week, marched in on the bride and groom at their Somerset street home Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Baker had returned within a day or two from Falmouth, Mass.

ATTRACTIVE GOLF EVENTS

Hibbard and Cruikshank Win Honors at Hillside

PARKS, 7; COLONIA, 6

Gus W. Faber Defeats John L. Watson for Holiday Cup—

Results at Westfield.

There was a good field at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday to take part in the weekly competition for the Golf Committee and Gaston cups, excellent scores being returned. The improved condition of the course was enjoyed by the contestants, as well as many others who just played around for the mere pleasure. H. D. Hibbard won first honors for the Golf Committee cup, with a net score of 74 and Robert Abbott finished second with a net score of 78, while E. B. Shoemaker, Henry L. Hall and M. A. Cruikshank were tie with a net score of 79 for third place.

These scores were returned for the Golf Committee cup:

H. D. Hibbard, 82, 8—74; Robert Abbott, 77, plus 1—78; E. B. Shoemaker, 88, 9—79; Henry L. Hall, 96, 71—79; E. A. Cruikshank, 98, 19—79; W. L. Glenney, 78, plus 2—80; C. B. Morgan, 97, 8—81; Roger F. Murray, 87, 6—81; E. N. Ironsenger, 98, 11—83; Dr. J. H. Carman, 97, 14—83.

In the play for the Gaston cup, the honors were won by E. A. Cruikshank, A. M. Barclay and Harold Bobert. These scores were posted;

E. A. Cruikshank, 88, 0—88; A. R. Barclay, 101, 0—101; Harold Mobert, 101, 0—101; E. W. T. Maxwell, 103, 1—102; Harold Bernall, 107, 5—104; J. M. Unler, 109, 3—106.

The tie for the third eight in the play for the Fourth of July cup will be played off next Saturday between E. B. Shoemaker and E. N. Ironsenger, as will also the tie between Henry L. Hall and A. R. Barclay for a leg on the Holiday cup played on Labor Day.

The chief event at the Park Golf Club on Saturday was a postponed team match between the home club and the Colonia Golf Club, in the Central Jersey Golf League tournament. The home team won by a score of 7 to 6, Nassau system. As most of those taking part in the team match have been competing for the Presidents' and Park Golf Club cups, they were unable to play in both events on Saturday, and the weekly competition went by default. There was a playoff for the Holiday cup between Gus. W. Faber and John L. Watson, and the former won with a score of 78. His opponent made a net score of 79.

This is the summary of the team match:

Park Club—G. W. Faber, 3; Arthur Peck, 0; Herbert Bogers, 3; C. U. Faber, 0; Charles A. Reed, 0; T. U. Dudley, 0; Rev. J. O. Wheaton, 2. Total, 7.

Colonia—H. D. Tucker, 0; A. E. Smith, 3; C. A. McCormick, 0; Edward Morris, 1; C. D. Ward, 1; G. W. Buck, 1; W. L. Oliver, 0. Total, 6.

In the second round match play in the Governors' competition at the Westfield Golf Club on Saturday, C. E. Halsted beat W. J. Bogert, 2 up and 2 to play; W. R. Davis beat R. H. Floyd, 6 up and 4 to play; H. W. Gladwin beat Hugh Talbot, 3 up and 2 to play, and M. Whitlatch beat R. B. Proudit, 5 up and 4 to play. The semi-finals between C. E. Halsted, M. Whitlatch, H. W. Gladwin and W. R. Davis will be played on Saturday.

Saturday night there was a dance at the clubhouse, there being a large attendance of members and friends. Those who received were Mrs. H. R. Knight, Mrs. W. E. Gibbs, Mrs. H. W. Gladwin, Mrs. Hugh Talbot and Mrs. H. A. Fairbairn.

MR. BENTON BURIED.

Funeral Services Over His Remains Were Held Saturday Afternoon.

Simple funeral services were held Saturday afternoon over the body of William B. Benton, who was drowned in the Raritan River about August 20. The funeral discourse was delivered by Rev. H. Duff Mulford, of Hudson, N. Y., at Runyon's undertaking parlors on Park avenue and interment was made at Hillside cemetery, where the Rev. John S. Zelie officiated.

Conspicuous among the beautiful floral pieces was one from Mr. Benton's fellow-employes at A. M. Griffen's hardware store, many of whom were present at the service. A large number of friends were present also, as well as relatives from Hudson and Brooklyn, N. Y., and Elizabeth and Jersey City.

Those who acted as pall bearers were Arthur M. Griffen, C. Frank French, Henry Patterson, N. H. Randolph, Asa F. Randolph and F. S. Valentine.

William Ianson, of East Third street, is recovering from the effects of two very painful abscesses, one on each side of the neck.

C. H. HAND PURCHASES P. S. & T. TROLLEY STATION

BUYS TRACT ON WATCHUNG AVENUE AND SECOND STREET.

Another important real estate deal has just been completed, whereby Charles H. Hand has purchased the property at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Second street, which includes the building now used by the P. S. & T. as a waiting room and office. The property extends 100 feet south-east from the corner of Watchung avenue and Second street and is eighty feet deep.

There is somewhat a mystery about the deal, it being a question whether Mr. Hand has secured the property for himself or the trolley company. It was formerly owned by the New Jersey Central Land Improvement Company. There is also some talk that Mr. Hand, together with Charles Sebring and Somers William, owners of adjoining property, will combine interests and erect an opera house on the corner.

Minister Brown Home.

Herbert Bowen, the American Minister to Venezuela, and brother of H. E. Bowen, of this city, arrived at New York yesterday on the steamship Caracas from Venezuela. Mr. Bowen said he was home on leave of absence and needed rest, as the climate of Venezuela had been particularly trying to his health this summer.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT MR. MELLICK'S BUNGALOW

CUP WON BY T. H. DAY WHO DEFEATED ARTHUR PETERSON.

A tennis tournament was held Monday at the Bungalow, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Mellick, in honor of their son, Roger Drew Mellick.

The play resulted as follows: Preliminary round—Odgen Rogers beat Lawrence Mead, 6-1; James Fleming beat Kenneth Browne, 6-0; T. H. Day, Jr., beat Jack Martin, 6-4; Roger Mellick beat Harry Steele, 6-2; Lymen Hibbard beat James Mellick, 6-1.

Second round—Odgen Rogers beat George Burke, 6-0; T. H. Day, Jr., beat James Fleming, 6-3; Lymes Hibbard beat Roger Mellick, 6-4; Arthur Peterson beat Dick Depew, 6-0.

Semi-finals—T. H. Day, Jr., beat Odgen Rogers, 6-3; Arthur Peterson beat Lymen Hibbard, 6-1; finals—T. H. Day, Jr., beat Arthur Peterson, 6-3; 6-4, winning a pretty cup.

LEGAL SCHOOL OPEN.

Indications of a Prosperous Year at School for Boys.

John Leal's school for boys was reopened on Tuesday for the fall and winter term and the enrollment was up to the usual number, many new pupils being received for the fall course. Mr. Leal and his corps of teachers were all on hand and the actual work was begun after the usual classification. Mr. Leal has had some improvements made in his school during the vacation season, including the removal of the front fence, making the property correspond with those adjoining. The prospects are good for a successful term at this school.

Held for Grand Jury.

A supplementary hearing was held before Justice Mosher Tuesday at the city court in the case of the assault committed by Michele Paoli against Sandy Woods in a fracas at an Italian shack near Scotch Plains two weeks ago. In a fit of rage following a quarrel that Sunday afternoon, Paoli struck Woods with a heavy bail, inflicting severe scalp wounds which have kept Woods under a physician's care since. Matthew Way acted as interpreter in the court proceedings, which were witnessed by a large number of Italians. Woods gave his testimony before the judge with head bandaged and looking weak and ill. Dr. Westcott, his physician, was present at the hearing. The State's examination was conducted by Francis J. Stats, Esq.

At the request of William G. De Mora, Esq., Paoli's counsel, the prisoner's examination was waived, Justice Mosher imposed a bail of $300 to await action of the Grand Jury. The bail was furnished by Joseph Patrucci, a neighbor.

Arrested for Drunkenness.

"Ten dollars apiece" was the verdict given by Recorder Dond in the borough court Monday to a quartette of drunks held over since Saturday night. Andrew Love, Jr., George Rockafellow, James G. Beekman and Frank Hale were the offenders. Each of the prisoners paid the tax and departed. While in jail Rockafellow became despondent and threatened to commit suicide, so Acting-chief Pope took his suspenders and draval from him and told him to tear up his shirt if he really wanted a rope. Beale, Hale, Love and Thomas Coddington, sons of James Coddington, of Harmony street, arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, made by a neighbor, were treated to a suspension of sentence.

Streets in Condition Again.

The damage done to the roadbeds of streets in the East End by the heavy rains of last month is now being repaired by the street gang and Street Commissioner Gavett announced Saturday that the work of filling in gulleys, resurfacing and rolling is nearly completed. The work has been carried on on North avenue, east of Berkman street, on Putnam avenue, on Woodland avenue and sections of Rahway road. There has also been work done on the streets through Netherwood, in the rear of the Netherwood Hotel.

New Assistant at St. Joseph's.

Father Chandler, who has been in charge of the Roman Catholic church at Stony Hill for many years, has been transferred to St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, as assistant to Father Miller. A younger priest will be put in charge of the church at Stony Hill.

Candidate Withdraws.

Charles D. Reese, of Westfield, who was announced as a candidate for the Assembly on the Republican ticket, has declared himself out of the contest and former Freeholder George E. Embree, of that place, is considered "the logical candidate" in that town.

TEACHERS' UNION MEETS

Celebration of Anniversary of Sunday-School Workers.

MISS YABA SINGS

Notes of Burmah Interests the Audience—Miss Beeching Presides.

The ninth anniversary of the Primary and Junior Sunday-school Teachers' Union was pleasantly observed Monday afternoon in the small hall at the Y. M. C. A. building. There was a large attendance of members and friends. Miss Nenie J. Beeching, president of the union, was in charge of the programme, which opened with a temperance song by the Misses Edith and Elsie Carlson, of Westfield, followed with a song and recitation by Miss Eva Wells, accompanied by the Misses Carlson on the mandolin and guitar.

A feature of the programme was a song by Miss Yaba, a native of Burmah, who has been visiting here for some days. She also repeated the Twenty-third Psalm in her native tongue and gave a short talk on her plans of work.

The programme continued with a recitation by Miss Jessica Hill, a mandolin and guitar duett by the Misses Carlson, followed with remarks and greetings by Miss Beeching, in which she congratulated the members on their excellent work during the past nine years. She referred with considerable pride to the progress made and the interest aroused in Sunday-school work by the union.

The rest of the afternoon was spent in a social way. A novel feature was a surprise birthday cake, hidden in a large watermelon, presented by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins. The members expected to enjoy a feast of watermelon, but upon opening it, they discovered a delicious cake instead. Ice cream was served with the cake by a committee from the union.

FIFE AND DRUM CORPS ENTERTAINED AT ELIZABETH

PLAINFIELDERS AS THE GUESTS OF THE IMPERIAL CORPS.

On invitation from Imperial Fife and Drum Corps, of Elizabeth, who on several occasions have been the guests of the local organization, Independent Fife and Drum Corps, of this city, went to Elizabeth Monday and partook of a bountiful dinner served in Columbia Hall, on Elizabeth avenue.

Nearly the full uniformed strength of the corps turned out, the guests assembling at the corps rooms on West Second street together with the men in uniform. Major Frank Manchester got his men under arms, that is under drums and fifes and the boys marched to the North Avenue depot where they drew up under the platform shed and made the whole place ring with their spirited music.

The rain interfered slightly with the size of the local turn-out, seventeen men going on the 8:36 train, when it was expected that thirty would be on hand. Arriving in Elizabeth, they were met by the Imperial boys, who are well known in Plainfield under their former name of Liberty Fife and Drum Corps, and escorted to the banquet room.

Full justice was done the viands and afterward, with Major Sheppard, of the Imperials, in the chair and Mayor Ryan, of Elizabeth, as the guest of the evening, toasts, stories and jests were kept going round until an early hour this morning.

Among the guests of the Elizabeth corps were a number of Rahway firms.

A CAMPAIGN BANNER.

Democrats Unfurl a Parker and Davis Banner at Elizabeth Saturday Night.

Political spirits ran high at the displaying of the first campaign banner of the season by Union county Democrats at Elizabeth Saturday evening. The big banner was unfurled at East Jersey and Broad streets. Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, J. V. F. Dilts and Walter Linbarger were among those present. S. S. Swackhamer made an address on "State Issues."

WORLD'S GREAT PITCHER

"Christy" Mathewson, of N.Y. Giants, a Renowned Twirler.

HE IS A PLAINFIELDER

The Home Life and Achievements of a Modest Baseball King.

It is the special pride of every local lover of the National game that probably the best baseball pitcher playing the game today is a resident of this city. He is Christopher Mathewson, familiarly known as "Christy," or "Matty" to those who follow the sport closely. In places far and near are persons who sound his praises and never tire of talking about his wonderful achievements. Thousands of people will attend games in which he takes part simply to see him pitch and he is the idol of all cranks.

Mr. Mathewson was born in 1878 at Factoryville, Pa., and it was while attending the public school in that town that he began playing ball. As a mere lad he attracted attention as a clever player. From his home he continued his studies at the Keystone, Pa., Academy and it was there that he displayed remarkable ability as a twirler. He liked the position and he soon learned to control the leather sphere in remarkable fashion. While at the academy he won every game in which he pitched, and later while at Bucknell University, he had a string of straight victories. It was at this time that he was induced to play professional ball. The game was attractive to him and he decided to make a business of it.

When he made up his mind to join the professional ranks, he promised his mother that he would neither play Sunday ball nor drink. This promise he has construed to keep and by so doing has won the respect and admiration of his fellows as well as the patrons of the game.

After leaving Bucknell he began playing for money by joining the Norfolk, Va., team. While with this nine he attracted the attention of the management of the New York Nationals and toward the end of the season was signed to play in New York. He pitched two games for New York that season, the first being against the Brooklyns. He defeated his opponents by a score of 3 to 2 and he still has the ball that was used in that contest. From that time to the close of the playing season he sat on the bench.

The next season, 1901, he was used frequently and continued to do good work, for which he received high commendation. In 1902 he performed the feat of winning seven straight games, the seventh being a shutout for Brooklyn, 7 to 0. At the beginning of last season he signed to play with the St. Louis Americans, but the baseball commission returned him to New York. His record during the season was remarkable and he did something which may never be excelled. He defeated Pittsburg in every game played against that team. In the forty-five games in which he took part last year he had a batting average of .226, was third in individual fielding average with .974 per cent, and was third in pitching, winning thirty contests, losing thirteen and having a per cent. of .697.

A year ago Mr. Mathewson was married and after the close of the baseball season he and his wife decided to make their home here. When not with the team he always spends his time at home. Of a quiet genial disposition, he always makes friends. He is very modest and he is never heard sounding his own praises or talking of his achievements, preferring to let his record talk for him. Last year he signed a three-year contract with the New York Nationals for which he is to receive a handsome salary.

His record this year promises to be the best since he became a professional. Thus far he has pitched thirty-nine games, of which he has won thirty and lost nine. His percentage is 7.6.

Early this season there was some doubt as to his regaining his form, but later performances show that he is still a top-notcher and able to "deliver the goods."

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION ENJOYS A "SPREAD"

MEMBERS MET ON SEPT. 7, FOR A GOOD TIME.

Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, met Sept. 7, in its rooms in the Washington Hall building on West Second street, and received one proposition for membership, and also transacted considerable routine business.

At the meeting the committee previously appointed to arrange for a smoker, reported that they had performed its duties and a "spread" was awaiting the members at Bitmm's Hotel, on Somerset street. After adjournment the members hied themselves to the scene of the "lay-out."

L. W. Niles acted as toastmaster and some of the toasts responded to showed that the members of 399 had prepared themselves for the occasion. After the "inner man" had been looked after an informal programme of song and dance was rendered. James Kermode rendered "My Wild Irish Rose" in great shape, followed by "The Stowaway" as an encore. Theo little "Willie" Dunne, of New Brunswick sang "Meet Me in St. Louis," and as an encore "All Aboard For Dreamland." Songs were also rendered by Frasee Putnam, J. Emerson Mowen, William Bond, William Smith, "Jack" Brennan, L. W. Niles, E. C. Searing, D. J. Carney and J. B. Hurlburt. Robert Scott gave a clog dance and Fred Meeker gave a sleight-of-hand performance.

Altogether the affair was an enjoyable one, and it was near midnight when the members started homeward.

MANNING DESCENDENTS HOLD ANNUAL REUNION

MANY PLAINFIELDERS IN THE GATHERING AT "STONE CROP."

The annual picnic of the descendants of the late Andrew Manning, with a few friends, was held at "Stone Crop," Sept. 7. The place of rendezvous is on the mountain, northwest of Bound Brook, the summer home of W. B. R. Mason, of that place, whose wife is the daughter of Mrs. David Townsend, who was the daughter of Andrew Manning.

Those present were Joel D. Manning, Miss Sarah Manning, Miss Harriet Manning, Mrs. Catherine Randolph, Howard M. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. ALFRED SPEER,

THE ORIGINAL

Port Grape Wine Producer in America.

The first native wine sold and used in San Francisco and Sacramento was from Speer's Passaic, N. J., vineyards, was shipped around Cape Horn before there was any railroad to California, and are now being used by physicians and first families there as the richest and best wine to be had

The juice of the Portugal Port Wine grape grown in N. J. is thick and rich same as the juice of pears and other fruits grown here. From California pears you can squeeze water as from a sponge; so with all fruits grown in California; while those grown in New Jersey are solid in substance—less juice but thick and richer. The New Jersey apples, for instance, make a cider that was always popular the world over. If you want a wine for sickness or for entertainments don't take cheap, watery wines but choose a first class old, full bodied, high grade wine from Speer's Passaic vineyards. Sold by Druggists.

THE STRIKE IN COLORADO.

Views of Noted Churchman Who Has Made a Personal Investigation of the Trouble.

Columbus (O.) Special.

Rev. Washington Gladden has made a personal investigation of the miners' strike in Colorado, and believes bad leadership is responsible for all the trouble, and he obtained from a man who is well-informed on the subject an explanation of the reason for this bad leadership, which he considers significant.

Said the informant: "It is largely due to the fact that when disagreements between the masters and the men have occurred, the people who have been brought up to take the striking miners' places have generally been ignorant, violent and brutal men. The miners have been compelled to take these men into their unions, and it is from this class now in the union that the worst disorders come. This class wants violent and headstrong leaders and gets them." Continuing, Dr. Gladden says: "The miners' union and the labor unions generally must learn to be reasonable and decent. If they insist on having the earth they will be wiped from the face of it. Tyrannies are not going to thrive in the twentieth century.

"The employers have got as much to learn as the unionists. They ought to be a great deal wiser, but they are not. They think they can put an end to labor troubles by force. And they never will. They have to learn to put as much brains and tact and good will and patience into the business of managing their men as they do the managing the mechanical or financial sides of their enterprise. Doubtless they must organize. No single employer or company standing alone can deal with a compact labor union. There will have to be collective bargaining on the part of the masters as well as the men.

"But this organization must keep in view the issues of peace and not of war. War, internationally or industrially, is simple idiocy. It settles nothing; it simply devours and destroys.

"Industrial disputes must be settled by reason, not by force, and no man is fit for large business, in these days, who does not recognize this as the end, and work toward it with all his might."

HAS AN ENORMOUS INCOME.

Princess Marie Bonaparte Is Considered the Richest Imperial Heiress in Europe.

Paris (France) Special.

Princess Marie Bonaparte, great-grandniece of Napoleon Bonaparte, is one of the richest heiresses in Europe, certainly the richest imperial heiress.

She was born July 2, 1882, and it is said that a grand match is designed for her.

Princess Marie's mother was the only daughter of Mr. Blanc, the founder of the famous casino at Monte Carlo, from whom she inherits a fourth share in the vast income derived from the gaming tables. The other shares are divided between Mr. Blanc's two sons and his daughter, Princess Bataszi.

The average net profits of the casino are about $6,000,000 a year.

Princess Marie's mother died at her birth, and her father, Prince Roland Bonaporte, who was descended from Prince Lucien, the emperor's youngest brother, has never married again. He is a great savant, and his daughter shares her father's taste, presiding with great charm over his salon, where all the savants of the world visiting Paris are made welcome.

No Rheumatism in Japan.

Rheumatism is almost unknown in Japan. The Japanese escape the malady, to a great degree, by avoiding the excessive use of alcohol and tobacco.

CAST FOR "HECTOR" AND ENTIRE PROGRAMME

SERPENTINE AND FANCY DANCES AND ILLUSTRATED SONGS.

Charles Lawrence's comedy, "Hector," which is to be produced at the South Plainfield Hall Friday evening, September 16, by the Willard Dramatic Club, provides in its happy arrangement of characters almost endless opportunity for the members of the cast to distinguish themselves in their interpretation of the wholesome humor of the author. The performance is to be for the benefit of the local council of the Daughters of Liberty and parts in the cast have already been assigned as follows: Frederick Long, a merchant, A. E. Willard; Louise, his wife, Mrs. Willard; Oscar Spence, a young student, Mortimer Slater; Jacob Einstein, a pawnbroker, Harvey R. Linbarger; August, a servant, M. D. Sweeney; Watson, a clerk, Walter Emmons; Fanny, a chambermaid, Miss Lottie Willard; a messenger boy, Herbert Willard.

The programme will also include serpentine and fancy dances by Mrs. Willard, illustrated songs by an artist from New York and cornet solos by Ben LaVere. The hall has a seating capacity of about seven hundred people, and a good stage. The latter will be improved by the addition of some of Mr. Willard's properties and effects, which together with Mortimer Slater's skill as an electrician, will add greatly to the effectiveness of the presentation. Frequent rehearsals are being held and the members of the cast are rapidly rounding into professional form. A large attendance is expected as the citizens of South Plainfield and vicinity are in the habit of filling the hall to its full limit whenever an attraction of any merit is offered them.

CHIEF'S IDEAS OF FIRE DEPARTMENT'S NEEDS

LIFE NET AND WATER TOWER HE SAYS WOULD BE OF SERVICE HERE.

Chief T. O. Doane in common with other practical heads of fire departments, argues that fire drills are essential to a high degree of efficiency in the fire department and this is realized by Chief Doane. In speaking of the drills, the chief says that he is not properly equipped for such drills or he would have inaugurated them long ago. One thing needed very much is a life-net. Every first-class department in the country has one or more of them now and the time has arrived, says Chief Doane, when PlainfieldI should have one. He declares that he will not ask the men to take unusual risks without this protection to life. It is only a comparatively short time that scaling ladders have been used in the department, but oftentimes these cannot be used owing to the absence of the life-net.

Another improvement sought by the chief is a water tower. This he believes to be very handy. While the tower may not be considered a necessity by many, the chief thinks that this will be known some day when possibly there may be a large fire in the city which will call for its use.

By the way of further improving the department, Chief Doane hopes that the time is not far distant when a fire house, fully equipped, will be built in the East End of the city. It is surprising how fast that section of the city is growing and it is too much to ask, he thinks, that the apparatus at headquarters be compelled to cover this rapidly-growing territory. It makes a long run from the centre of town to Netherwood or Crescent avenues or even to Woodland or Hillside avenues, especially when one considers the hills to be encountered in the Netherwood district.

In addition to a fire house in the East End the chief thinks it will not be a great many years when one will be needed in the southern part of the city, which is also building up rapidly in the vicinity of Muhlenberg Hospital. That also makes a very long run for the apparatus from headquarters and is hard on the horses.

Of course, these improvements, while desired, may be a long time coming, but Mr. Doane will continue to press his arguments until he gets them. Chairman Lee, of the committee on fire committee, agrees with the chief in many respects as to the improvements and as soon as the necessary money can be obtained they will undoubtedly be made.

Mrs. Whitney Now Over the Brook.

Mrs. "William O." Whitney, who recently figured in a sensational divorce case on Watchung avenue, has secured apartment at Manning and Watchung avenue, in North Plainfield. Some time ago she announced herself the widow of the late William O. Whitney, but she is still seeking to prove her title so as to inherit part of the estate.

LOCKED UP IN BREAD BOX.

Burglar Scare Is Created by Boy Prisoner's Frantic Efforts to Secure Freedom.

Marvin G. Honiss, of Bloomfield avenue, Bloomfield, N. J., was awakened at an early hour in the morning by a noise which he believed was made by a burglar in the front parlor of his house. He arose, got his revolver, and crept quietly to the door leading to the room, prepared to do battle with the intruder, but could see nobody. The noise continued all the rest of the night and Honiss sat by the window, revolver in hand.

It was daylight when a man on his way to work saw Honiss at his vigil, and asked him what he was doing there Honiss told him about the strange sounds, which at that moment were repeated. They were traced to a bread box, and Honiss joined the man in an investigation. When they opened the box, which was in front of a grocer's store, a little boy jumped out, much to their amazement.

He said he was Johnny Johnson, nine years old. He had gone into the bread box early in the evening while playing hide and seek, and, being tired from playing all day, had fallen asleep. The grocer evidently had fastened the hasp later, and when the little fellow awoke he found himself a prisoner. The noise Honiss heard was his kicking and pounding inside the box. If it had not been for a few gimlet holes in the box the boy undoubtedly would have been suffocated.

CAT AND DOG AS FISHERS.

Declared by Everybody Champion Anglers of Region Surrounding Littleton, N. H.

From Littleton, N. H., a truthful correspondent writes that the champion angler of those parts is a cat which hangs around the establishment of the Saranac Glove company. Her title was disputed by "Mike" Corliss' Newfoundland pup, but with the landing of a 14-pound trout the cat is in the lead.

The cat has been a most persistent angler for some time, bringing in fish, large and small, so regularly that its reputation got abroad. Included in her catches in the last two weeks are a

Mrs. Corliss' dog goes fishing every day, and never comes back without a trophy. His best catch recently was a sucker 15 inches long.

Girl Victor Over Rattler.

Miss Julia Divers, the daughter of W. A. Divers, a prominent citizen of Rocky Mount, Va., kept a large rattlesnake captive under her feet for ten minutes and came out unscathed. She and her father and her little brother were attending a picnic on Grassy hill, the foot of a big mountain near the town. While strolling with her brother Miss Divers stepped on the reptile. The snake was in coil, but unable to strike because of her weight. She realized her danger and planted the other foot firmly on the reptile and called to her little brother. He went nearly a quarter of a mile for his father, who killed the snake. The reptile measured four feet and had nine rattles.

John Cupsick, a miner of Hazleton, Pa., became extremely ill, and in a local hospital, a few days later, was pronounced dead by the doctors. Before friendless, his body was sent for dissection to a Philadelphia hospital. Just as the physicians were about to use the knife John aroused from his trance and asked this conundrum: "Why am I undressed?"

WEALTHY GIRL HIS BRIDE

Miss Mabel G. Lefler the Wife of George D. Whitley.

NEW MARKET WEDDING

She Was the Favorite Niece of the Late Mrs. Charles L. Fair—He is a Plainfield Draughtsman.

Miss Mabel Edna Lefler, niece of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair, and George Thomas Whitley, son of Francis Whitley, of Essex street, were married Sept. 7, at 8 o'clock p. m. at the home of the bride's uncle, Abram G. Nelson, in New Market. Miss Lefler recently came into possesson of a share of the estate left by her aunt, Mrs. Charles L. Fair.

The wedding was attended by many from New Market, Plainfield, Dunellen, as well as New York, Caldwell, Colorado, Boston, Brooklyn and other places. The Nelson home was handsomely decorated in green and white for the affair, while in the parlor where the ceremony was performed, there was arranged an improvised altar, surrounding which was a bank of flowers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church, and the wedding marches were played on the piano by Miss Irene Day, of New Market.

The bride was attended by Miss Martha C. Bunnell, of Union, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Dorothy Bunnell, of Union, and Miss Hannah Nelson, of New Market, as flower girls. All are cousins of the bride. The best man was Henry A. Pearce, of Essex street, and the ushers were John L. Nelson, of New Market, and Theodore W. Lefler, of Union, a brother of the bride. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Abram G. Nelson.

The bride was gowned in embroidered silk mull and she wore a tulle veil and lilies-of-the-valley and carried a shower bouquet of roses. The maid-of-honor's gown was embroidered cream muslins, trimmed with lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses. The flower girls were gowns of pale blue silk mull and carried baskets of flowers.

After the ceremony a reception was held during which supper was served by Stevenson. While the couple was receiving congratulations an attractive programme of music was rendered by Miss Day on the piano. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Whitley left for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Boston. They will be away two weeks and upon their return will reside at the groom's home.

The bride received from the groom a pearl brooch. The bride gave her maid-of-honor a pearl brooch and the groom gave his best man and ushers pearl stick pins. There was a wealth of wedding gifts received by the couple from relatives and friends, including a chest of solid silver from J. E. Chandler, Esq., counsel for Mrs. Hannah Nelson, the bride's grandmother. Mr. Whitley's associate workmen in The Walter Scott Printing Machine Works gave him a costly gold clock. The other gifts included furniture, cabinets, silverware, cut glass, linen and many other articles of use and value.

The bride has made her home in New Market for some time, while her aunt, Mrs. Charles L. Fair, paid for her education. She is a modest and attractive young woman and has a host of friends. Mr. Whitley met her while playing on the New Market baseball team as pitcher. The groom is a member of the Hope Y. M. A. and the Y. M. C. A. and Court Plainfield, Independent Order of Foresters. Until recently, when the team disbanded for the season he was the pitcher for the Y. M. C. A. nine and was also considered one of the best players in this vicinity. He is popular with his friends and associates, all of whom wish him success and happiness. Mr. Whitley will continue to follow his business in the draughting department at The Walter Scott Printing Machine Works.

Among some of the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leonard, of Caldwell; Mrs. Edwin Lefler, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. William Carson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jamieson, Mrs. and Miss Waters, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barclay, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Boulder, Col., Mr. and Mrs. John Bunnell of Union.

Let me say I have used Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh and can thoroughly recommend it for what it claims. Very truly, (Rev.) H. W. Hathaway, Elizabeth, N. J.

I tried Ely's Cream Balm and to all appearances am cured of catarrh. The terrible headaches from which I long suffered are gone.—W. J. Hitchcock, late Major U. S. Vol. and A. A. Gen., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Balm does not irritate or cause sneezing. Sold by druggists at 50 cts., or mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York.

VANDERVOORT GENEROUS

He Wanted to Deposit His "Claims" to Release Woman.

IMAGINARY FORTUNE

Former Plainfielders's Offer to Give Bail for "Nan" Patterson Was Refused.

When Nan Patterson, who is charged with killing Caesar Young, opened her mail in the Tombs, Manhattan, Wednesday, Sept. 7, she found a letter signed John R. Vandervoort, 360 West 144th street, who resided in Plainfield for many years. The writer said he had taken a deep interest in Miss Patterson's case, that he owned property worth $3,000,000, and that if somebody would come up to see him he would be happy to bail her out.

The actress's father hurried to see Mr. Vandervoort. He found an old man dressed rather shabbily, but sure that he had $3,000,000, which was at the disposal of the prisoner. Mr. Patterson took him to the bail bureau of the District Attorney's office. The old man carried with him a large bundle of legal documents wrapped up in a newspaper.

Assistant District Attorney Miner found that they were court decisions affecting property in Harlem, showing that a person named Vandervoort had laid claim to the old Jumel property.

He has turned up before with his mythical millions. While living in Plainfield several years ago he made over to the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America and other charitable organizations a part of his supposed Harlem property. About a year ago he walked into the Register's office and filed a deed transferring part of his share of Harlem to another person for $1. He has also advertised offers for his claims against the city for occupation of his lands.

The claims amount to $6,000,000. He believes that they were transferred to him by a grandson of Mme. Jumel. He announced after the Slocum disaster that he would defray all the funeral expenses of the victims.

POOH-BAH STANBERY OF FANWOOD DEMOCRACY

HE IS THE LONE DELEGATE TO DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS.

William B. Stanbery, the pooh-bah of Fanwood borough Democracy, is the lone choice of his party to represent it at the State, Congressional and County conventions.

From the same borough the Republicans have chosen three representatives. Dr. F. W. Wescott has been nominated a delegate to the State convention, L. D. H. Gilmoure to the Congressional convention and Charles Sheelen to the County convention.

In Fanwood township the Republicans have nominated George Ball as delegate to the State convention, Charles Ball and L. H. Coddington as delegates to the Congressional convention and Edward V. Goodman, William D. Johnston and George H. Johnston as delegates to the County convention. Edward L. Hand has been nominated for member of the County committee.

The Democratic primary ticket in the same township names Theodore Brachmann as delegate to State convention, C. H. French as delegate to the Congressional convention and Theodore Brachmann as a delegate to the County convention.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room held on the evening of September 6, 1904, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

By the death of Joseph W. Yates Plainfield loses a valued citizen and the Board of Directors of the Public Library a member who has been associated with its work during the past twenty-one years. Mr. Yates was always faithful in the performance of his public duties. He appreciated the advantages of educational institutions and did his part to encourage and sustain them. He was one of the original contributors to the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room and Art Gallery, and was always interested in its work and its growth.

We, his associates in this board record this minute in recognition of the loss which we, in common with our fellow citizens, have suffered in his taking away, and direct the transmission of a copy of the same to his family as a token of our sympathy with them in their bereavement.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and the like. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make them annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of the books on a given subject.

POLITICAL OUTLOOK IN OLD SOMERSET COUNTY

BOTH PARTIES ARE LIKELY TO POLL NORMAL VOTE.

A Trenton despatch in the N. Y. Tribune of Sept. 7, contained this reference to Somerset county politics:

"Reports received from Somerset County a day or two ago indicate general good feeling among the Republicans there. It is true that F. W. Olcott, who was one of the Republican electors for New Jersey four years ago, has declared that he will support Judge Parker for the present campaign, Mr. Olcott and Judge Parker have been warm personal friends for many years, it was said. It was not generally believed that Mr. Olcott's support of the Democratic Presidential ticket would lead him so far as to oppose State or local nominations. No other defections from the Republican party have been reported in Somerset County, but it is believed that some Hearst Democrats will decline to support the regular Democratic ticket.

"From information carefully gathered it would appear that President Roosevelt will receive the full and united support of the Republican party in Somerset County, and that, if ex-Senator Stokes should be nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor, there will be no break in the party support.

"Unless some changes in public sentiment occurs within a short time, Irving Hoagland probably will be the Republican candidate for the Assembly in Somerset County. The Democrats are undecided yet as to their nominee for the same office. The greater number of them, however, appear to be strongly in favor of the nomination of Nelson Dungan. The belief is popular that Mr. Dungan is the strongest Democrat in Somerset County, and that he would come nearer to defeating the Republican candidate than any one else who could be named. It is doubtful if Mr. Dungan would accept the nomination for the Assembly. Several of his intimate friends say that he would greatly prefer the nomination for State Senator, which is due next year, when, it is reported Senator Childs will not ask for a renomination at the hands of the Democrats.

BURMESE SPEAKER.

Nellie Tolu Addresses the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of First Baptist Church.

The meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, held Wednesday, Sept. 7, at the church, was addressed by Miss Nellie Tolu, of Burmah. Miss Tolu, or Miss Yaba, as she is often called, is the daughter of Yaba Tolu, a Karen, who was brought to this country about thirty-five years ago in company with another Karen boy, Myaung Poh Nay.

They were educated by the First Baptist church, and spent their vacations from college at the homes of the late William White, of North Plainfield, and the late Evan Jones, who resided at that time on Watchung avenue. Yaba became a teacher and Myaung is pastor of the Baptist church at Bassein, Burmah.

Miss Tolu has come to America to secure a medical education, hoping to practice medicine in her native land. She speaks English fluently and is an interesting speaker.

Inspector McCardell's District.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 18: "Is the World Growing Better?" — Ps. xxxvii, 1-12; Eccl. vii, 10.

This is a favorite inquiry with many. The answer depends largely on the viewpoint one takes.

In America the last half century has seen development of natural resources such as has never been paralleled in the same space of time in any other age. So it has become popular to emphasize the vast increase in material wealth and the improvement in means of transportation and the luxuries of life spread within the reach of the common people.

Beyond question there are more accurate knowledge on many matters and greater skill in preventing and curing disease than ever before. The average of life has been lengthened somewhat, and suffering has been greatly relieved.

Not so long ago the most intelligent of men had little idea of any country beyond the bounds of their own little land. The larger part of the earth was unexplored and its people uncivilized. There was no proper understanding of the forces of physical nature, no real science and no conception of the material universe.

Ignorance was coupled with superstition and suspicion of others which bred cruelty and enmity. So war was the normal condition of society and the usual occupation of men. Peace was impossible and individual liberty not even conceived.

In religion the end sought was mainly the betterment of the material conditions of life. So the highest happiness was found in gratification of the physical appetites, and the rites of religion were merged in orgies of lust and sensuality. Morality and religion were not united in thought and so could not be connected in practice. Justice, purity, kindness in dealing with others, was not a requirement of religion. Even the gods were cruel, lustful and false in their dealings. Worship might serve to appease such gods with offerings and secure favor, but who could be expected to love such deities!

Better thought has come to the world. Men have come to know that God is in His nature love, purity and justice. He requires of men that they shall be like Himself. He demands more than sacrifices of animals and human beings; He requires that all the acts of His followers shall be kind, clean and just. More than this, the thinking must be pure, and the intentions must be right. Nor is this all. The thoughts of the heart, the words of the lips and all acts must not only be pure, but the motives and purposes; they must come from a loving impulse. The heart itself must be filled with love to God and love to men. This is surely a betterment of the world in the realm of religious ideas.

There has been also a corresponding uplift in the actions of men. The parable of the good Samaritan is getting put into practice. Men are becoming more friendly in will and deed. With that new spirit has been seen a *Father*ly all has dawned the corresponding fact that we all are brethren. So love has been born, and enmity is fast dying.

So the gospel of the blessed Son of God is bettering the world and surely, steadily, lifting it godward and heavenward.

Lend a hand and lift a bit!

Forgiveness For Sin.

The true sign of forgiveness is no some mysterious signal waved from the sky; not some obscure emotion hunted out in your heart; not some stray text culled out of your Bible; certainly not some word of mortal priest telling you that your satisfaction is complete. The soul full of responsive love to Christ and ready longing, hungry to serve Him, is its own sign of forgiveness. Must there not be sorrow for sin? Must there not be resolution of amendment? Surely there must, but it is not sorrow for sin for the sake of the sorrowfulness that Jesus ever wants. He wants sorrow for sin only that it may bring escape from sin. I think that, with all we know of the divine heart of Jesus, He would far rather see a soul trust Him too much, if that is possible, than to trust Him too little, which we know is possible enough.—Phillips Brooks.

Loyalty to Christ.

Loyalty to Christ involves loyalty to man as man and brother, man of every clime and condition and nation. A little boy without father and mother was sent on the cars alone to a distant state to an uncle who offered him a home. When asked how he expected to reach his destination without any one to care for him, he said, "My Sunday school teacher sewed the directions on my coat," and showed them. They were these: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." Christ was traveling in his person and was served in serving him.—Evangelist.

The Rest of Heaven.

In contrast with the earth's weariness heaven smiles upon us, a place of rest. "They rest from their labors" is the first element of that celestial blessedness. Rest of body, mind and heart, toil against sin and self and Satan—these are changed to spontaneous, unwearied, invigorating exercises of soul and spirit. The lower services in which we may then engage are infinitely easier than the easiest we here perform. No play on earth is so delightful as the meanest work of heaven.—Bishop Gilbert Haven.

Forgiving Others.

Never harbor any ill feelings toward your neighbor, and if you should be tempted to fall out with your brother and friend always seek for an opportunity to reconcile yourself to him. Forgive others, and thou shalt be forgiven by God.

LUXURY OF TRAVEL

NATIVES OF THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS ENJOY IT.

When Going on a Journey They Take All the Comforts of the Home with Them, But These Are Few.

The up-to-date tourist who has the modern convenience of the Pullman palace car, of the observation car and all the extravagance and luxury that goes to make up one of the limited trains, of which we are so boastful, no doubt thinks that he has at last all the comforts that may attend traveling humanity.

He is mistaken. He may take a trip to the antipodes and find there that he never knew what it meant to take a trip with all the comforts of home.

Of course there is a difference in what one's home comforts consist of, but would it not be pleasant to travel with the best of your own particular possessions at your hand. This is the way the natives of the South Sea Islands travel. It is most laughable and interesting, too, to watch these people in their daily life.

TRAVELING WITH ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME.

With the ordinary citizen of our country a trip or an extended visit to friends is a most momentous occasion, planned for months and enjoyed in anticipation. No such weighty consideration is ever indulged in by the simpler races.

Suppose this to be a glorious morning at any season of the year, January ries with June in the splendor of her days, there is nothing special to do (there never is), let us visit. Well and good, we shall visit, whom, where? It matters but little, these islands are not large, generations of intermarriage have given relatives places in every port. Enough, we make ready. Last year that forerunner of civilization, the traveling salesman, was in our midst, now, accordingly, we possess the sewing machine, the kerosene lamp and the bicycle. The white woman has come upon us, tourists are beginning to come this way and the strong arm of fashion has gathered us in, mats are going out of style and the Mother Hubbard is coming on apace. These signs of progress are our greatest pride and where we go the sewing machine and the bicycle goes. I saw one family traveling accompanied by a black iron bed with spiral springs.

Into the long canoe goes these articles of the domestic hearth, then piles of mats, of clothes there is probably not enough to bother about packing, strings of beads go handily about one's neck and superfluous drapery hangs over the arm. Of course there are the pigs, dear family friends, why should they be left behind. In they go, legs tied together, and squaling like mad. Now the babies, all in together, who cares, they are our own pigs, the babes and the bicycles are pride of our hearts. Who cavils at the good things of life.

Between some of the larger islands goes a small steamer, but the natives usually prefer their own canoe, and I have met 100 miles out at sea a long canoe with a sail and perhaps a dozen oarsmen, all bright with gay color, the strokes keeping time to the lilt of the happy song.

Is this not the acme of happiness, your dearest at your side, your treasures at your feet, all care banished and providence for the morrow well assured?

Until you can take your first trip with such contented mind, never believe that you have tasted the true luxury of travel.

ANNA H. CLARK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 18.

Topic—How the world is growing better.—Ps. xxxvii, 1-12; Eccl. vii, 10.

Is the world growing better? It is a sad fact that some men would answer this question in the negative. They are not capable of taking a broad view of life or have not sufficient knowledge to compare their age with past ages, and hence unwisely think that the former days are better than these. Every age has its evil as well as its good, and yet when we compare the ages and take a broad and comprehensive view of life we cannot but conclude that the world is growing better. Much of the glamour of antiquity is acknowledged to be false. "The days of good Queen Bess" were anything but halcyon; the merrie England of old time was full of disorder, disease and discontent. The shining again for the fleshpots of Egypt the Israelites forgot the bondage and misery which were the accompaniments of those sensual pleasures.

But if the world is growing better how is it growing better? Thus in part:

1. The world is growing better by the overthrow of evil. To those who want to see improvement in the world evil doers and their deeds have always been a source of perplexity. But God declares that we should not "fret ourselves because of evil doers, * * * for they shall soon be cut down like the grass and wither as the green herb." This is true of evil as well as of evil doers. Compare the ages as to evil and we will see that it is being overcome. Intemperance today is not what it was fifty years ago. Up to a hundred years ago dueling was widely practiced in our land. Fifty years ago there were over 3,000,000 human slaves in America. More and more wickedness is being ostracized and pushed to the wall. Wickedness and crime still exist, for the millennium has not yet arrived, but the evil extant is surely not have the power and place that it had in the ages of the past.

2. The world is growing better by the advance of the good. Evil is being overthrown, while the good is conquering. Christ's kingdom is constantly advancing, and as it advances all that goes to make the world better and happier is vastly increased. Christian character was never so high as today; philanthropy was never so widespread; the successful world never took such care of the unfortunate and unsuccessful. "God is marching on," and as He marches evil decreases and good increases, thereby making the world better every day than the day before.

The Bible and Christian Endeavor.

Some people affect to believe that the day for the old substantial things that have grown so precious to multitudes of true hearted Endeavorers is passing, if not gone. Certain wise ones (?) tell us, in an assumed superior scholarly fashion, that our old Bible is being supplanted by a modern Bible put together by modern, up to date scholarship. How inconsistent some of these would be considered learned ones are! Dr. Burrell well says that they are really trying to revise the dictionary rather than the Bible. They admit that the work of some scientists and philosophers of a former day is standard; but naively hint that all knowledge of Biblical matters has skipped over past periods and suddenly alighted on all fours on the educated men of this generation. It's enough to make some of the fathers sit up in their graves and smile.

I wonder what some of our modern intellectual posers would think if they could hear the comments of the average Endeavorer. I have found by mixing with all grades of Endeavorers in these last days that the old Bible has not lost its hold on the common people, and the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation to all that believe. A few weeks of real soul training effort effectually answer about ten-tenths of high sounding theory as to the validity and authority of the Bible.—Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott in Endeavorer.

The Christian Endeavor Animal.

The little stuffed kangaroo which had decorated the Australian table was placed upon the speaker's desk on the platform in the evening, and he seemed to cock his ears, listening to all that was said. I mentioned in my address that some animals could run and others walk and birds could fly, but the kangaroo was the only animal so far as I knew that went forward by "leaps and bounds." But Christian Endeavor was going forward by "leaps and bounds" in Australia, and it fitly typified their movement. Thereupon they presented me with the kangaroo, which has already been sent to Boston, and we adopted it on the spot with great applause as the Christian Endeavor animal.—"The Building of a Commonwealth," by Francis E. Clark, D. D.

In Japan.

The native Japanese Endeavorers are making a practice of spending a moment or two in prayer for the soldiers each morning before rising.

The plan originated with the mothers' meeting in Okayama.

There are 126 living Christian Endeavor societies in Japan today.

India's New Paper.

India has a new Endeavor paper, Maulbi Karigal, which is the nearest equivalent for "Christian Endeavor." It will be published in Urdu and Hindi and devoted to the interests of Christian Endeavor in the united provinces. —London Christian.

DELINQUENT TAX SALE

Borough Property Disposed of Under the Law.

SIXTEEN TRACTS GO

Majority of Them Are Bought in by the North Plainfield Government.

The North Plainfield delinquent tax sale Thursday resulted in the striking off of the following parcels of real estate for the amount of taxes due as given below. Collector George F. Brown acted as auctioneer.

Three lots on Duer street, unknown owner, $12 70, to Mayor and Council; 19 Grandview avenue, Estate Isaiah Corfell, $41.24, to Harriett A. Tigley; 44 Grandview avenue, Florence Moon, $83.47, to Home Building Loan; lot on Grove street, C. P. Sebring, $39.63, to Mayor and Council; 39 Manning avenue, Eliza Dedrick, $37.53, to Mayor and Council; lot on Mountain avenue, Estate of H. E. Spencer, $16.80, to Mayor and Council; lot on Mountain avenue, unknown owner, $7.86, to Mayor and Council; 35 37 Prospect avenue, C. P. Sebring, $101.90, to H. D. Brown; lot on Rock avenue, Morris Engle, $190.4, to Mayor and Council; lot on Rock avenue, S. L. Bailey, $16.80, to Mayor and Council; 181 Somerset street, J. H. Greeley, $85.63, to Mayor and Council; 185 Somerset street, J. W. Mundy, $41.85, to M. R. Smalley; 189 Somerset street, J. W. Mundy, $31.93, to S. E. Codington; lot Watchung avenue, Esther Mundy, $10.73, to Mayor and Council; lot Westervelt avenue, Estate H. N. Spencer, $27.84, to Mayor and Council; No. 2 Willow avenue, H. E. VanDeventer, $140.26, to Mayor and Council.

There was a fair attendance at the sale but not much interest was shown by the majority, most of the properties going to the borough government as can be seen from the above list.

REGIMENTAL PRIZE WINNER IS IN DOUBT

LIKELY THAT IT WILL GO EITHER TO PLAINFIELD OR PRINCETON.

While many members of Co. K believe that their organization has won the prize in the regimental shoot, they have been unable to get definite information as to the standing. It has been reported that the company is a tie with Co. L, of Princeton, for first place, but even this cannot be verified. If the conditions are that the company qualifying the greatest number of men gets first place, the local company will undoubtedly win, but if they provide for the highest per centage in marksmanship, it may be doubtful.

Co. K made special efforts this year to have as many members as possible appear on the State range and qualify. The result is that the number qualifying is the largest in its history. This is gratifying to Captain Martin, who has given unusual attention to his command this year. He has been on the range whenever the Plainfield boys have been there to practice and he has coached them with considerable success. Being an excellent marksman, the captain has been well qualified to instruct those under him.

The local company has felt the absence this year of Sergeant Albert E. Littell, who has been laid up with a broken leg. There is perhaps no more enthusiastic member of the organization in the matter of rifle practice and argely through his untiring efforts the boys have become interested in this part of their work. It is often difficult for some of the boys to get off to practice at Sea Girt and if they are obliged to make a trip at other times than those prescribed it means some expense to them which they do not always feel like bearing. Word regarding the standing the company is expected at any time and the members are anxiously hoping that they have landed in first place.

Claims a Right of Way.

Howard Bird, of Dunellen, says that he has engaged counsel on behalf of his wife to institute suit against the Lovering & Garrigues Company for closing what he claims is a right of way over her property. He declares that the Company are using ten feet of her land, but says the original deeds were removed from the county seat many years ago to Trenton and never returned. An effort is to be made to find the records and thus define the exact line.

A PYROTECHNIC DISPLAY

Italian Celebration Attended by a Great Throng.

GIFT TO BANDMASTER

Medal is Presented to Leader of Musicians at Banquet in Hotel.

Fireworks such as seldom seen before in this city drew large crowds to Concert Park last Thursday on the occasion of the concluding exercises in the two days' celebration of the feast of Santa Maria Virginia by the Italian societies of the city and borough. The band concerts and fireworks drew nearly twice as many people last evening as the night before and there was no hitch in the musical programme or the display. Though the festivities did not conclude until late, few left the grounds before the final numbers were played and "Home Sweet Home" signalized the conclusion. Then there was a rush for the trolleys, which were taxed to their utmost capacity, not only those from the suburbs and from Westfield, New Brunswick, Somerville, and other towns on the through line.

The musical programme was especially well rendered. Under the direction of S. Nardiello, the twenty seven musicians on the stand gave most satisfactory rendition of a series of National and popular airs, interspersed with Italian melodies. Especially well performed was a piece where the melody was carried on by individual musicians dispersed through the grounds, giving an accurate representation of an echo.

The fireworks consisted of about a dozen elaborate set pieces and scores of mines, rockets and bombs. The exhibition was the feature of the celebration. Nicolo Mariano was in charge of the fireworks. The concluding piece was a lovely form representation of a fancy goblet, reproduced in red, green and blue fire. The band played Italian airs during its display.

At the conclusion of the exercises, the societies and band adjourned to the Hotel Waldorf, where a banquet was served and speech-making followed. S. Nardiello, the leader of the band, was presented with a handsome gold medal by Salve Velard, leader of the society. In the making the presentation the societies and Mayor Smalley, of the borough. A similar gold medal was presented to Nicolo Mariano, who was in charge of the fireworks display. Italians from societies of neighboring towns and Raritan were present at the banquet.

Salve Velard, the leader, announced this morning that the committee was nearly $70 behind in the sum required for the celebration. Opportunity for contribution from the public is asked to make up this deficit.

R. C. JUBILEE.

Three Months' Commemoration to Begun in the Local Churches.

Local Roman Catholics commenced Thursday a three months' celebration in commemoration of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary. From now until December 8, members of the faith will observe the rules laid down by the Holy Father.

The celebration is in accordance with proclamation by Pope Pius IX, fifty years ago. Plainfield Catholic churches will observe the commemoration of the jubilee by a series of special services and mass es.

Jackson to Build.

Permit has been secured by James W. Jackson, of Crescent avenue, for the erection of a two-and-a-half story dwelling on West Seventh street, near Plainfield avenue. The building will be a frame structure, to measure 26x40 feet. Oscar S. Teale, of New York, is the architect. The mason work will be in charge of J. H. Snyder and Rimmer, Apgar & Cunen is to be the carpenter firm.

Old Livery to Dissolve.

Mrs. Keely, who with the assistance of her son, John E. Keely, of East Seventh street, has conducted the extensive livery business since the death of Patrick Keely, some years ago, has decided to dispose of the same during the latter part of the month. With this action, one of the oldest livery concerns in the city will go out of business. It was started many years ago by the late Mr. Keely and conducted with considerable success.

Republican Meeting Place.

The Republican city committee has secured the Casino for holding mass meetings. It has been estimated that the Casino hall can hold more than 800 in mass meeting. The committee will probably decide upon some vacant store for their headquarters.

To Produce "Hector."

Considerable enthusiasm is shown by the members of the Willard Dramatic Club in the preparations for the *benefit performance of Charles Law*rence's comedy, "Hector," which is to be given Friday evening, September 16, in the South Plainfield Hall.

FATAL FEAT AT A CIRCUS

William Muir Dies As Result of Fall From Ladder.

HIS SPINE BROKEN

Fifteen Year Old Boy Conscious to the Last After Sad Accident.

As a result of an accident while performing athletic feats at an amateur circus given by some lads in the West End Saturday afternoon, William Muir, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir, of Manr street, lays dead at his home with a broken neck. The fatal injury was the result of a five foot fall from a ladder, stuck up in the ground and on which young Muir was performing a climbing act.

Before a group of about twenty-five of his young playmates, who had assembled on St. Mary's baseball field to see the amateur "circus," the boy had succeeded in climbing the perpendicular ladder and was in the act of descending head downwards by the aid of his hands and feet, when he missed his grip and fell heavily to the ground, striking directly on his head. His friends immediately rushed to where he lay. Though stunned for a few moments, he soon spoke, telling those who crowded around him that he was not hurt. When he tried to raise he fell back again with a cry, and the other boys, becoming alarmed, ran for assistance.

George Feiring and Louis M. Dunaven, at Pine House No. 1, across the street heard the boys' calls for help and rushed to the scene of the accident. Seeing that Muir was badly hurt, Feiring telephoned from the engine house to Muhlenberg Hospital and the ambulance soon responded. Muir was removed to the institution, where Dr. S. VanD. Hodges made an examination and discovered that the spine was broken about two inches below the base of the brain. The splintered bone protruded entirely through the back.

From the case was hopeless from the first, young Muir made a brave fight for life, retaining consciousness until the end. Death came at shortly after 5:30 Monday a. m. The entire family, with the exception of Mrs. Muir and Thomas M. Muir, a brother, were present at the death bed.

The young man, who celebrated his fifteenth birthday but two weeks ago, was one of a family of eleven children, nine brothers and two sisters. At the time of his death, Muir was employed at the Potter Press Works. He was a member of Hope chapel and attended the Sunday-school.

MR. FRENCH MENTIONED TO SUCCEED W. J. KEYS

BOROUGHITE BROUGHT OUT AS AVAILABLE FOR COMMITTEEMANSHIP.

The following political item dated from North Plainfield, but very probably emanating from Somerville, appeared in Friday's Newark Evening News:

"The leaders of the Democratic party in Somerset County are looking about for a man to succeed former Senator William J. Keys as member of the State committee from this county. It is claimed that Mr. Keys spends the greater part of his time in New York and only puts in an appearance here two or three days before each election. It is urged by some persons that while a member of the State committee he has done nothing to strengthen the party organization in the county and they declare he is unpopular with the National leaders.

"Many of the local leaders and party workers say that a change should be made. Elmer H. French, of North Plainfield, is looked upon as an available man for the place. He is much younger than Mr. Keys, and is very popular with the young men of the party. French distinguished himself by being twice elected tax assessor of the borough when the Republicans elected every other candidate on their ticket.

"Senator Childs is also looked upon with much favor. If Alvah A. Clark would accept the honor it is very probable it would be accorded to him.

"In any event the leaders feel that Mr. Keys has been on the committee long enough and that to continue him as a member of that body would prove a detriment to the success of the party."

A BANK DIRECTOR.

David M. Runyon, the Cashier, Succeeds Newton B. Smalley as First National.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley having retired from the directorate of the First National Bank, his place has been filled by the election of David M. Runyon, the cashier, at meeting ago Mr. Smalley presented his resignation and it was laid on the table by the Board of Director for future action. It is understood that Mr. Smalley insisted that affirmative action be taken, hence the acceptance of the resignation.

Mr. Smalley's retirement dates back to the time of the last election. He alleged that certain employes of the bank were working against the administration and he took exception to it, in view of the fact that the bank was a depository for the borough.

R. R. STATION SHEDS.

Permits for Their Erection at Grant and Clinton Avenues Granted.

Persistent requests on the part of citizens in the West End for some sort of covered shelter from the trolley to the railroad stations at Grant and Clinton avenue stations has resulted in action by the Jersey Central Railroad Co., in constructing storm sheds at West Front street and Grant avenue and West Front street and Clinton avenue.

The sheds will be fifty feet long and ten feet wide and will extend from the street to the platform. Permits of erection was granted Friday. Joseph Jewbee the company's carpenter at Jersey City, will have charge of the work of erection.

Somerset's Political Pot.

According to the Somerville Messenger, there are six candidates in Somerset County for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. The indications now are that the old saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth" will hold good in this case.—Newark Evening News.

UNION CO. W. C. T. U. TO MEET SEPTEMBER 29

TWENTIETH ANNUAL CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN ELIZABETH.

Officers and members of the Union County Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of which Mrs. M. E. Tomlinson, of this city, is the president, are making preparations for the twentieth annual convention to be held in the Fulton Street M. E. church, Elizabeth, on Thursday, September 29. There will be three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening, and an attractive programme has been arranged for each in which some Plainfield women will take part. Mrs. Tomlinson will preside at the convention.

After the opening of the convention in the morning at 10 o'clock, there will be the roll call, appointment of committees, courtesy, resolutions, pages. The greetings for the Union will be by Mrs. M. F. Francis and for the church by Rev. Dr. Galloway, with responses by Mrs. W. Taylor, of Westfield.

Then will follow the president's address and the annual reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer, after which the election of officers will be held. At luncheon there will be a meeting of the executive committee, superintendents and resolution committee.

The afternoon session will be opened with devotions by Miss Julia A. Barker, of New York, and the report of the executive committee. Then will follow reports of the various departments. Among these reports one will be presented on work among the railroad employes, soldiers and sailors by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, superintendent, and on Sabbath observance by Mrs. M. Winter, and Christian Citizenship, by Mrs. S. A. Osborne, of this city.

There will be the usual question box and social features. In the evening Rev. Dr. Galloway will conduct the devotions and the address of the evening will be by Mrs. James Parker, of Jersey City, followed by the closing exercises. It is expected that the convention will be one of the best in the history of the Union, as two years ago Mr. Smalley presented his resignation and it was laid on the table by the Board of Director for future action. It is understood that Mr. Smalley insisted that affirmative action be taken, hence the acceptance of the resignation.

Mr. Smalley's retirement dates back to the time of the last election. He alleged that certain employes of the bank were working against the administration and he took exception to it, in view of the fact that the bank was a depository for the borough.

RUSSIANS ANXIOUS.

St. Petersburg Public Fears Kuropatkin Is Lost.

NO DEFINITE NEWS FROM WAR.

Its Place Taken by Wild Rumors. Possibility That Manchurian Cabbage May Join Japanese Alarms Czar's Cabinet.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The continued delay in the receipt here of anything like a detailed official account either of the battle of Liaoyang or of the present situation at the front is proving more irritating to the public of St. Petersburg than any previous phase of the war. There are rife the most ominous alarmist stories of the alleged precarious situation of General Kuropatkin's army. None of these stories, however, are traceable to any authentic source. The fact seems to be that military operations in the neighborhood of Mukden are almost suspended on account of the effect of the rains upon the roads.

There is no current news to record, while if General Kuropatkin has transmitted any full account of the recent great battle it has not been allowed to circulate. The persistent silence is doing more than anything else to discredit the Russian cause in the mind of the public, with whom he has heretofore been an almost deified hero.

Reports that the Chinese are making preparations to occupy conquered territory are creating some uneasiness, for China has been all along an uncertain quantity from which any development or complication might be expected. No one knows precisely what pressure, real or political, Japan may be able to bring to bear upon the great, silent empire.

The logical belief always has been that China would endeavor to the utmost to refrain from taking side in the present conflict in order that she might be in a position to make the best terms possible with the ultimate victor, but it is realized that a continued Japanese advance into the heart of Manchuria might exert a powerful influence upon both the Chinese government and the nearby ill controlled regular troops, which the weak central government at Peking might find it difficult to curb, thereby precipitating serious complications upon the scene of actual hostilities.

There have been no developments here regarding the case of the Russian transport Lena in the harbor of San Francisco.

LENA'S BOILERS INSPECTED.

Captain Balme Sends Them In Need of Repairs.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14.—Acting under instructions from Collector of the Port Stratton, Captain J. K. Bulger, United States inspector of hulls and boilers, inspected the boilers of the Russian transport Lena. It is understood that he found them in need of repairs and recommended that the commander of the vessel be given time enough to put them in seaworthy condition. Collector Stratton immediately upon receiving the report of observations of the inspector, giving them his official approval.

Inspector Bulger was accompanied on board the Lena by Paul Keaknewitch, the Russian consul at this port.

Both the Russian and Japanese consuls held consultations with Collector Stratton, but nothing of what transpired has been given out.

The collector has forwarded to Washington a full report of what he has done in the matter. The impression prevails among those best informed that the Lena will be dismantled and remain here until the end of the war. She is still guarded by several vessels of the United States navy.

Zassoulitch Safe.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 14.—The sensational report circulated by the London Morning Post to the effect that General Zassoulitch's corps has been captured and Zassoulitch wounded proves to be as false as the majority of the war rumors emanating from the British papers. Authoritative denial is given that report as well as various others originating in the British and European press, particularly the London Daily Mail's statement that General Linevitch had marched into eastern Korea and cut Kuropatkin's communications with Fengwangcheng.

Baltic Fleet's Sailing Deferred.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—The Tageblatt's St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that the departure of the Baltic squadron has at the last moment been deferred for several days, apparently to await news from the far east. The fleet will remain for the present at Reval.

Congress in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14.—The opening business session of the fifth biennial convention of the fraternal order of Eagles convened at 2:15 o'clock, and of the officers there was but a single absentee, he being Hon. T. A. Bell of Napa, Cal., one of the grand trustees. Seven hundred new grand aerie members were admitted, and the attendance was 1,000.

A $50,000 Rockefeller Gift.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 14.—John D. Rockefeller has made an additional gift of $50,000 to the Young Women's Christian association of this city, to be added to the fund for the erection of a new building. Mr. Rockefeller subscribed $50,000 to the fund several months ago, thus making the total amount given by him toward the project $100,000.

AFRICANDER WINS.

Last Year's Suburban Handicap Victor Takes Cup Preliminary.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Africander, last year's Suburban handicap winner, won the Cup Preliminary, one and a half miles, at Brighton Beach. He was quoted at the good price of 20 to 1, but had to be hard ridden at the end to win by a head from McChesney. Eugenia Burch was third, half a length away. The time, 2 minutes 34 seconds, was slow. The Cup Preliminary is a weight for age exclusively for horses three years old and upward nominated for the Brighton cup, two and a quarter miles, which is run Saturday, the last day of the meeting. Hermis won this race last year.

The Pickett was a well played first choice at 7 to 5, with McChesney next at 5 to 2. Africander was an outsider.

The summaries:

First Race—Memphis, 20 to 1, first; Phantom, 6 to 1, second; Walter Pansy, 7 to 1, third. Time, 1 minute 14 seconds.

Second Race—First Mason, 8 to 5, first; Demonde's Right, 5 to 2, second; Gay Boy, 10 to 1, third. Time, 1 minute 45 2-5 seconds.

Third Race—Belle Strome, 11 to 20, first; Dandelion, 3 to 5, second; Pasadena, 5 to 1, third. Time, 1 minute 12 seconds.

New York Wins McAlpin Trophy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The weather conditions on the second day of the fall rifle, carbine, pistol and revolver meeting at the Creedmoor range were unfavorable, but the military marksmen worked with vim until dusk. The principal event of the programme for the day and the only one in which a conclusion was reached was the McAlpin trophy match, which was won by the team representing the state of New York. It was open to teams of the first brigade, United States army, United States navy, United States marine corps, the national guard or duly informed militia or naval militia of the several states and territories and the District of Columbia and from any foreign government.

Hudson Wins Three Readville Races.

READVILLE, Mass., Sept. 14.—All four of the races in the second day of the autumn meeting at the Readville track went extra heats, and the last one remained unfinished. Scott Hudson was the most successful driver of the day, taking two heats and getting a place in a second event. In the 2:21 trot, Irving Maitland, he had difficulty in getting through the bunch in the home stretch, while in the third heat Mainland broke at the seven-eighths pole. He won the other heats, however, easily. In the 2:17 pace he held Nancy H. back until after the third heat, and then he had things all his own way. Caspian took the 2:06 trotting event after a series of close heats.

Matinee Races at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 14.—The intercity matinee races at Brunot's island attracted a large crowd and proved of greater interest than any event of the kind since the days of the grand circuit at Pittsburg. Some of the best matinee horses in the country, driven by their owners, were on the card, and the track record was broken by Sadie Mack in the free-for-all trot, making the mile in 2:09¾. The former record was 2:09¾, C. K. G. Billings rode Charlie Mac an exhibition mile under saddle in 2:15¼, which is within three-fourths of a second of the world's record. Of the eight events Pittsburg horses won four, Cleveland three and New York one.

TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP NOW RESTS BETWEEN TWO

MISS SCHUYLER AND MISS REINHART IN FINALS AT HILLSIDE.

The women's championship title in tennis at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club now rests between Miss Sarah Schuyler and Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart. The regular annual tournament was played off on the club courts Saturday and resulted in these two women winning place in the final match, which will be played Saturday.

There were fourteen entries for play, and in drawing for opponents Miss Sarah Schuyler and Miss Hope Ivins drew byes. In the preliminary rounds Mrs. Fullerton Weaver defeated Miss Florence Stuart, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3. Miss Helen Martin went into the next round by default of Miss Helen Heff and Miss Elsie Goddard won from Miss Ruth Titus, 6-1, 6-0. Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart won from Miss Alice Titus, 6-1, 6-3. Miss Harriet Goddard defeated Miss Helen Brown, 6-0, 6-0, and Miss Antoinette Barclay took straight sets from Miss Ellen Merrill, 7-5, 6-1.

In the first round of play, Miss Sarah Schuyler won from Mrs. Fullerton Weaver, and Miss Helen Martin captured two sets from Miss Elise Goddard, 6-2, 6-1. Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart won from Miss Harriet Goddard, 8-6, 6-3 and Miss Antoinette Barclay won her way into the semi-finals by defeating Miss Hope Ivins. In the semi-final round, Miss Sarah Schuyler won from Miss Helen Martin, 8-6, 6-1 and Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart defeated Miss Antoinette Barclay, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1.

GREAT SCHOOL MASTER.

Tribute to Rev. Dr. George M. Whitney in Current Journal.

The educational number of the Christian Advocate for last month contains an article of interest entitled "Two Great Methodist Schoolmaster by Two of Their Former Pupils." The accompanying illustrations are the pictures of Rev. Dr. George M. Whitney, President of the Centenary Collegiate Institute, Hackettstown, N. J., 1869-1904, and Rev. Dr. Herbert B. Ridt, President of the Northwestern Academy, Evanston, Ill., 1873-1904.

The head master of Hackettstown has for his chronicler Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Noble, who gives to Dr. Whitney's character, attainments and personality such unqualified praise as can only come from profound respect and affectionate regard.

LOCALS DEFEATED.

Clinton Avenue Team Outclassed by Players From Stephenson Car Works.

The baseball game played between Clinton Avenue and the J. Stephenson Car Works, of Elizabeth, on the latter's the local grounds, Saturday, for $10 a side, resulted in a defeat for the locals by a score of 9 to 2. The visitors simply outclassed the Clinton avenue boys. Neither VanArsdale, Scott or Squires who pitched for the home team were able to stop the heavy hitting of their opponents and they got a total of eleven singles. The home team also put up a poor fielding game. The score by innings:

OFFER $500 REWARD.

Piscataway Citizens Want to Get Hold of An Incendiary.

For information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set the New Market public school house on fire, recently, the Piscataway Board of Education has decided to offer a reward of $150.

The National Fire Insurance Board will supplement this reward with one of $250 and private citizens contribute enough to make the total reward $500.

Quietly Married.

Miss Gerda Wilhelmina Norberg, a niece of Mrs. A. J. Evander, of Watchung avenue, and Chesterfield Emmet Johnson, both of this city, were quietly married Saturday evening by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street. The affair was a very quiet one and after the ceremony the couple returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evander, where a wedding supper was served. The bride formerly lived with her aunt.

Fanwood Bridge Planned.

Civil Engineer Frank J. Hubbard is preparing plans for a bridge over Green brook at Mountain avenue, Fanwood. The bridge is to be of ironwork throughout, with a forty-foot span. It will be constructed with a brick deck and macadam roadway and will much resembled the Girard avenue bridge recently opened. Bids for construction will be received Tuesday, September 20.

SCHOOL DAYS HERE AGAIN

First Sessions in the City and the Borough Tuesday.

FORMAL EXERCISES

Dr. Maxson, Dr. Probasco and Mr. Travell Speak at City High School.

Activities were resumed in the Plainfield High School at 9 o'clock Tuesday. Principal Ira W. Travell opened the session with Scripture reading and prayer. Following this were addresses of welcome by Principal Travell, Superintendent Maxson and Dr. Probasco, president of the Board of Education. Dr. Probasco spoke of the steady progress of the new high school and of the hope that the next commencement would be held in the new building.

A decided change in the order of sessions is necessitated this year by the addition of new subjects and increased attendance. Two sessions will be held but only the preparatory class and freshman will be in attendance in the afternoon.

The faculty has undergone a few changes since the close of school in June. Three new teachers have been installed—Miss Ariadne Gilbert, Miss M. E. Terry and Samuel Howe, Jr.

The pleasure of the opening exercises was largely increased by the large assemblage of old graduates who gathered to hear their stead work carried on by those who still remain.

At all the schools in the city, there was unusually large attendance but none is considered overcrowded, although special arrangements will have to be made in some cases to arrange for classes of more uniform size. In some cases transfers may become necessary.

Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the city schools, announced Tuesday that he was unprepared to give any figures as yet regarding numbers of the pupils entering.

"Throughout the city the enrollment will be large," he said, "certainly the largest yet, but I feel certain that we can accommodate all the pupils. In all the schools, parents have been making application for entering their children during the entire morning."

Superintendent Wightman, of the borough schools, said on Tuesday that the most pronounced indications of overcrowding would be presented when the numerous and inevitable mistakes as to the building and class-room in which the pupils belong have been corrected. At the same time some teachers will be compelled to hold sessions for one portion of the pupils in the morning and the other in the afternoon. In the Kindergarten the increase is naturally the greatest, reaching nearly 100 per cent. There are now in this department about sixty-five children in each building, the division being about equal. The total number of pupils is greater than in any previous year.

TELEPHONE COMPANY IMPROVING ITS PLANTS

DECIDED CHANGES MADE AT WESTFIELD SIMILAR TO THOSE HERE.

The rapid improvements made by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in this section of New Jersey, indicates the company is working to bring the service up to a high point of efficiency. After installing a new plant in this city to meet the constantly increasing business, attention was turned to Westfield, another bustling town, where it was discovered that the plant was too small for the growing business. A new office has been located at the corner of Broad and Elm streets, and the work of fitting it up was commenced. It is now complete, the cost of cutting in the new office being but a few days ago. The improvement has been under the supervision of Charles W. Runyon, manager of the local exchange.

The new exchange at Westfield is practically a duplicate of the one in this city, except being on a smaller scale. It is to be arranged that additional service can be engaged. There are now over 200 subscribers in Westfield and the number is growing. New aerial cables have been installed and Westfield now has every telephone advantage that larger cities enjoy.

Moffett's Record.

It is stated that Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett, of Plainfield, has announced that he cannot accept a renomination, for business reasons. This is to be regretted, as he, with his associates, made an excellent record in the last Legislature.—Rahway Union Democrat.

Mrs. W. F. T. Finch, formerly of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood, has returned home after visiting Mrs. A. J. Beal, of South avenue.

KNEW GREATEST ACTORS

Mr. Edwards Managed Tours of Booth and Bernhardt.

ON GOVERNOR'S STAFF

Eventful Career of a Plainfielder in the Show Business for Many Years.

While his local friends and associates are numbered in the thousands, few Plainfielders are aware of the wide theatrical career that has marked the busy life of Mans Edwards, formerly manager of Music Hall and who now has charge of the Casino. Almost from his boyhood he has been associated with theatrical folk and playhouses and has conducted the tours of actors whose names stand at the head of the profession and whose deeds have made worlds wonder. Booth, Bernhardt, Bothers and like stars went over routes that Mr. Edwards arranged for them and his ability in this direction had much to do with the success that marked their trips. At the present day he is known to players and managers from Maine to California and the older ones will readily recall the time when they eagerly sought his services and advice before making a venture.

Though born in London, Mr. Edwards has been in America nearly all his life, coming here with his parents when a boy of six. His father was one of the foremost woodcut printers of his time and was brought to this country by a New York firm which controlled the output. The family resided in Brooklyn at first and then Bond & Avery, the Boston firm which published the first illustrated edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," secured the services of the elder Edwards and they removed to that city.

Mans Edwards' career really dates from 1861 when he went to California and within a short time there was appointed Assistant Adjutant-General with the rank of major under the administration of Governor Haight. Completing a four year term he returned to New York in 1876 to enter the employ of Simmons & Wall, in those days a firm which stood as high in the managerial world as does Charles Frohman, the Shuberts or Klaw & Erlanger at this time.

The work he did for them attracted the attention of E. A. Sothern, a brother of E. H. Sothern, who will be remembered by many old time playgoers as the creator of many gentlemanly types, and young Edwards went with him as his personal representative. It placed him in the front rank of managers and positions were offered him on all sides. After touring the country with Sothern, he became associated with Henry E. Abbey, who directed Louis, Edwin Booth, John T. Raymond and other stars of like magnitude and who arranged for the first appearance in America of Sarah Bernhardt. Abbey found Edwards with Booth and the Plainfielder managed the great tragedian during the year that he took America by storm and played to packed houses in all the large cities. The profits were the greatest ever made by any star, Booth's share alone being $131,000, despite the fact that the season lasted but twenty-nine weeks. Edwards arranged the repertoire for each week and handled all proceeds, the total being nearly $350,000. He and Abbey also conducted the negotiations that led to the Divine Sarah leaving France and seeking new laurels.

Longing for a direct venture of his own, Mr. Edwards left Abbey and became associated with Maj. J. H. Pond in the Lyceum bureau business. They arranged and conducted the tours of Clara Louise Kellogg, Henry Ward Beecher, Gilmore's band and many others. The ventures met with varying success and finally Mr. Edwards wandered to become a manager for

WATER CO. HELD UP

Change in Name Leads to Trouble at South Plainfield.

OFFICIALS SUMMONED

Question As to Which Company Has the Right to Lay Water Mains Finally Settled.

The question as to whether a large number of Italians had the right to open Lehigh avenue, in South Plainfield, for the purpose of laying water mains, threatened the interests of the Middlesex County Water Company, yesterday morning. The Italians had opened a long trench on the avenue, when Jeremiah TenEyck, Harry Schofield and McDonough Brothers came to the conclusion that it was about time to find out the status of the case. They ordered the laborers to stop work and in the meantime Thomas Brantingham, a member of the Township Committee, was sent for.

It appears that a franchise was granted to the Midland Water Company seven years ago, giving it the right to extend its mains through any part of Middlesex county. Sometime later the company decided to change its name to that of the Middlesex County Water Company, but the officials carelessly forgot to notify everybody interested, and when the gang of Italians began work yesterday it was an important question as to whether the proper company was doing the work.

Mr. Brantingham found it necessary to call up New Brunswick and ascertain the correct name of the company. He was informed that both companies were really the same, and that the change in the name was the only difference. Before the citizens would allow the laborers to continue work, Mr. Kellogg, who is in charge of the company's office at Metuchen, had to make a trip to South Plainfield and satisfy the residents that everything was all right. It was long after noon before the men resumed work. They will be held in the auditorium of the association, one of the boys presiding. The bugle will sound "reveille" for the morning song services, which will be conducted by Lieutenant R. W. Hearne, of Newark. A member of the Paterson boys' department will follow with a paper on "Drill Regulations." A general discussion will follow the reading of this paper. The next hour will be a reading, by one of the Newark boys, on the subject "Records." This also will be followed by a discussion. "A Council of War" will be the next feature of the morning, in which a member of each department in the State will be represented.

Mess call will sound for dinner, and the meeting will be adjourned till the afternoon. The bugle will sound at 2:15 in the afternoon, at which time Lieutenant Hearne will speak on a "Call to Personal Work." One of the Trenton members will read a paper on "Educational Work," after which a discussion will follow.

The regular Saturday evening church meeting will begin by a song service, lead by the Boys' Orchestra. At the bugle call for "Dress Parade," Lieutenant Hearne will speak on a "Call to United Effort."

There will be no regularly scheduled meeting for Sunday morning, the first service being held at 3:15 for delegates only. It will be conducted by Charles B. Scott, of Newark. This will be followed by an older boys' meeting for members of the conference over fourteen years of age.

The evening services will be conducted in various churches as will be announced later, preceding the farewell service at 9 o'clock. This last meeting will be for delegates only and will be lead by Charles T. Kilborne, the State secretary.

It will not be known who the boys are who will take part, representing the various associations, as they will be chosen by their respective secretaries.

Horse Became Wedged in Stall.

William E. Earle, the stone dealer on Church street, came near losing a horse Monday evening. The animal had been sick for some time, and fell down in his stall, which was a narrow one, and became wedged in, so it was impossible for him to move. It required the united efforts of six men to pull the horse from his perilous position. When, by the aid of a rope, they had dragged the animal into the air, he was found to be unconscious. He recovered shortly, and was easily subdued.

Miss J. Louise Jenkins, of West Seventh street, who has been visiting the St. Louis Exposition, is now the guest of friends in Dubuque, Iowa.

HOPE Y. M. A. FORMS STRONG BASKET BALL TEAM

TO COMPLETE SCHEDULE AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

Basket ball plans for the coming season were fully discussed at a meeting of the Hope Y. M. A. held last evening. It was unanimously decided to organize a team and active training will begin at once. George E. Firstbrook was appointed manager and William Porter captain.

An effort will be made to play the first practice game of the season next Tuesday night when the North Plainfield High School five will oppose the Hope team, the latter association having decided to organize a team. Work on completing a schedule will be started immediately and two match games are to be completed each week after October 15.

No action was taken on becoming affiliated with the proposed city league and the matter was left open until details shape themselves more definitely. Captain Porter requests that all candidates for the team meet in the "gym" Monday, Tuesday and Friday nights for practice. The schedule will include games with all city teams and those of nearby towns.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS' GATHERING

Programme for State Conference in This City is Outlined.

OCTOBER 28, 29 AND 30

Three Days' Session to be An Unusually Interesting Affair.

Kenneth Hobbie, the boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., attended a meeting of the State committee on boys' work at Newark, last evening, in which the work for the coming conference was marked out. The meeting was held in the Congress Hotel, Newark, where the members of the committee were the guests of State Secretary Charles T. Kilborne.

The conference will be held on October 28, 29 and 30. In a general way the topics for the various speeches were chosen, but the speakers have not yet been appointed.

In accordance with the subject of the conference, the entire programme will be conducted in a military manner. There will be an army chaplain at the services, and the meetings will be opened by bugle calls.

The following is in part the order of services which have been decided upon:

Friday afternoon, October 28, social hour followed by supper at the association rooms at 5:30, served by the Women's Auxiliary Society. The toastmaster will be H. S. Peirs, of Paterson. Following the dinner there will be a welcoming address by one of the members of the local association. The response will be given by a Morristown man.

In the evening there will be a church service lead by James Phillipson, of Newark, assisted by the State Boys' Orchestra. Following the service of song, F. S. Brockman, of Shanghai, China, will make an address on the general topic, "The Christian Soldier," after which taps will be sounded for the breaking up of the meeting.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION OCT. 6 AND 7

ANNUAL MEETING OF STATE ORGANIZATION TO BE HELD AT ELIZABETH.

Christian Endeavorers throughout the county are planning for a profitable and helpful time at the eighteenth annual State convention of the organization to be held at Elizabeth October 6 and 7, and Plainfield will be largely represented as usual at these gatherings. Those in charge of the programme announce a progressive

Rev. Dr. John F. Cowan, of the Endeavor Week, will represent the United Society, and Robert E. Speer, so well-known to local Endeavorers, will represent the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. John Willis Baer, formerly general secretary of the United Society, will present the cause of home missions, and Rev. Dr. James L. Vance, of Newark, will give the key-note address of the convention.

It has also been planned to have the Southern Jubilee Singers present to render some of their characteristic songs on the opening night of the convention, Thursday, October 6. F. H. Jacobs will have charge of a large chorus choir that will have charge of the music each day of the convention. "The Best Things Done by Your Society During the Past Year," will be the topic of an open parliament to be led by Vice President Stults and the Junior hour will be led by Rev. Charles Herald, of Brooklyn.

It has been arranged to have the State banners presented at the closing session on Friday night. As Elizabeth is so easy of access from all parts of the county by trolley and steam roads, it is predicted that every society in the county will send an especially large representation.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION HOLDS ITS FIRST SESSION TODAY.

The newly elected board of directors of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association held their first meeting this morning. The officers are: President, Howard Craig; vice president, Chester Briggs; secretary and treasurer, Harry Thompson.

Paul Collier was chosen as manager of the basket ball team. Arrangements were made for a tennis tournament to be held next week. Play will commence Monday. The committee in charge of the tournament is as follows: Chairman, Chester Briggs, Theodore Gavett and Jack Douglass. As there are many good players in the school the playing will be very even and close contests will be a feature. A large entry list is anticipated. As in former years cups will be awarded to the successful competitors.

The board is planning for a field meet to be held later in the fall. It is also pushing arrangements for an entertainment to be held soon as a means of raising enough money to defray the expenses of the various athletic teams of the school.

LOCAL MEN ORGANIZE THE PLAINFIELD BAND

FRANK MANCHESTER IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF THE ASSOCIATION.

What is to be known as the Plainfield Band was organized last night, a meeting of those interested being held on Somerset street. Matters pertaining to the future work of the band were discussed at some length and it was decided to give concerts during the winter in some suitable place and next summer there will be open-air concerts. Frank Manchester was elected president and he now organization. Kenneth Bisset secretary and treasurer and Whitney Frazee leader and director.

Mr. Frazee has had a long experience in band work, having played a cornet for a number of years. He thoroughly understands music and is capable of directing a band of musicians. The new organization will consist of twenty pieces and the names of the musicians will be announced within a few days. The band will at once arrange for rehearsals and it is the purpose of the organization to present programmes of popular selections, interspersed with classical numbers.

CENTRAL TO BUILD HOTEL?

A Modern Hostelry May be Erected at Lake Hopatcong.

INCREASE IN TRAFFIC

Popularity of the Lake as a Summer Resort — Through Express Service, Maybe.

The natural advantages to be found at Lake Hopatcong and vicinity and the fact that as a summer resort it is becoming more popular each year, has led the New Jersey Central to consider the proposition of erecting a modern hotel at the lake, one that will contain every improvement and convenience for persons or families who desire to spend a short time or several weeks there. At present there are several hotels and cottages at the lake, and during the season there are a great many camps established, but the accommodations near the railroad station are not up-to-date as to appointments and it is with a view to improving those conditions that the railroad company may build a hotel.

There are not many places convenient to Plainfield that are as attractive as Lake Hopatcong. The body of water is nine miles long and about three wide and for boating, fishing and bathing it is ideal. This year there was a large increase in boats of all kinds on the lake, while the steamboats did a good business. There were more campers than usual and the hotels report more business.

The lake is not only an important point as a summer resort, but the supply of ice harvested there in the winter is a large consideration both for the New Jersey Central and Brady Brothers, who harvest the ice and send it to various points. There is a great amount of business done on the High Bridge branch of the Central—in the winter in carrying ice and in the summer in carrying fruit and summer excursionists. The road traverses a beautiful section of country, for either side of which are to be found picturesque mountains and attractive valleys, through which courses many streams.

This branch of the road is ably cared for by James McNulty, train master. He has been with the Central for many years and he handles the company's business with satisfaction to all.

There has been some talk of re-arranging the schedule of trains for next summer and giving Lake Hopatcong a service similar to that enjoyed by Asbury Park and Atlantic City, that is have certain trains run directly through between New York and the lake on express time. It is believed that this would have a tendency to increase the summer population at the lake and it would give business men an opportunity to make the trip in convenient time. The matter was discussed this season, but not until it was too late to put such a schedule in operation for the summer travel.

Officials of the New Jersey Central report that the summer travel has been very heavy, exceeding that of previous years. There are many pleasant resorts along the line of the road and all seem to have taken a healthy boom. It is the intention of the company to encourage this business as much as possible. It has been found that the Saturbanite has also had a tendency to bring city families to places along the road and not a few have decided to locate permanently in certain towns, believing that they can reach New York and return home with greater comfort than they can reach certain points in New York on a crowded elevated train.

YOUNG AUSTIN CAUGHT.

Negro Accused in Stabbing Affray, Captured by His Brother.

Busted by the Jersey City police for his participation in a stabbing affray, George Austin, fourteen years old, was caught by his brother, Ernest Austin, on Park avenue, yesterday afternoon and held until the police arrived. The younger Austin fought furiously to get away and in doing so nearly every bit of clothing was torn from him. A woman who thought he was being beaten by the brother preferred complaints against Ernest and both were locked up.

Ernest was subsequently released and George was arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning. He was remanded pending action by the Jersey City authorities.

Martine to Speak.

James R. Martine, of this city, will make a speech at Washington, Warren County, on Saturday night, before the local Democratic Club of that place.

KIRK TO BUILD BRIDGE

To Be Erected on Mountain Avenue Over Green Brook.

IT IS TO COST $2,215

Somerset and Union Freeholders Award Contract—William Forrier to Do Mason Work.

The contract for the iron work on the new line bridge to be erected over Greenbrook on Mountain avenue, near Scotch Plains, was awarded yesterday to the W. T. Kirk Company, for $1,600 and that for the mason work to William Ferrier, of New Market, for $615. There were nine other bids for the iron work and two other bids for the mason work. The Freeholders from Somerset and Union counties met yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Kensington to receive the bids for the work. The successful men in each case submitted the lowest bid.

The bridge will have concrete abutments, and seven lines of twenty-four inch steel I beams, forty-three feet long, with a brick arch and concrete covering. The work on the new structure will be started at once.

Interested residents in both counties have been making an effort for some time to have this bridge built, the old one of wood being worn out in the service. There is considerable travel over Mountain avenue, as it leads directly from Somerset street in the borough to Scotch Plains and Springfield, and in some times used as a speedway.

J. C. Cooper bid $2.50 per yard on the stone and mason work, but William Ferrier's bid of $2.15 was lower and more advantageous. Other bids for the iron work were: Scott Iron Works, $1,823; Easton Bridge Company, $1,790; Berlin Construction Company, $1,875. The Levering & Garrigues Iron Works submitted a bid in more than one form, and while it was higher than the accepted one, the exact figures were not announced.

MORE HIGH SCHOOL CONTRACTS ARE AWARDED

GEORGE J. TOBIN AND ALLEN B. LAING SUCCESSFUL BIDDERS.

At an adjourned meeting of the City Board of Education held last evening the last contracts in the construction of the new high school were awarded. They were for heating and electric wiring and both went to local men.

For the heating, George J. Tobin's bid of $14,940 was accepted and he will use the Woodbridge stem system. A representative of the American Heating and Ventilating Company, of New York, was in attendance and showed to the Board a model of the school as it would be equipped with its heating apparatus but the exhibition did not alter the final decision and selection.

There were nine bids for the electric wiring, the lowest being that of Allen B. Laing for $1,975 and this was accepted. The other bids were as follows: B. M. B. Foster Electric Company, New York, $2,091; Lord Electric Company, New York, $2,695; Peet, McAneny & Powers, New York, $2,457; Electric Construction and Supply Company, New York, $2,875; Craig & Agnew, Plainfield, $2,067; The William Brown & Son Company, Newark, $2,390; Kinsman Electric Construction Railway and Supply Company, New York, $2,492.

Brothers Have a Mix-Up.

Fearing that his younger brother was going to run away from the city, Ernest Austin, the colored bootblack, caught hold of the boy on Park avenue yesterday afternoon and held him while a friend went for a policeman. The younger Austin fought so hard to get away he was nearly stripped of all his clothing and when Officer Cash arrived, bystanders preferred a charge against the captor. Both were locked up, but Ernest was subsequently released.

No Bi-Municipal Game.

The bi-municipal baseball game which was to have been played this afternoon, has been indefinitely postponed. Mayor Bentley said this morning that as Captain MacMurray of the city aggregation, had failed to secure a team, the game would be postponed indefinitely.

Republican Candidate for Governor Addresses Convention.

VOORHEES' SPEECH

Former Governor Seconds Nomination—Cumberland County Named Him.

The Republican State convention at Trenton assembled Tuesday afternoon to nominate a candidate for Governor, after a preliminary session had been held at noon. Chairman Johnson directed that the roll of counties be called. Atlantic yielded to Cumberland, and Senator Bloomfield H. Minoh, of Cumberland, was recognized and took the stage. He said in part: "It was long since fully, positively determined who our candidate should be. The work of this convention has been thoroughly cut out for it. Cumberland County does not claim any special distinction nor recognize any particular territorial bounds which makes it necessary for the party to come to her for a nominee. She is glad today to present to this convention a man who is pre-eminently the candidate of the whole State."

Nothing startling followed the nomination until Hudson was reached. Then Prosecutor William H. Speer, of that county, who had been selected the night before to second the nomination in a formal speech, took the stage.

Mr. Speer said in part: "E. C. Stokes is versed in governmental science and art, and is not only a student, but a doer of men. In him is combined the man of knowledge with the man of works. With such a man the party of Murphy, Griggs and Voorhees is sure to win.

"Let us devote ourselves to the election of a man with a purpose as fixed as the stars, and who is for the common people."

Incidentally Mr. Speer took occasion to pour out personal abuse on Charles C. Black, the Democratic candidate for Governor, and to speak scurrilously and falsely of the Democratic National convention at St. Louis and the State convention in Trenton last week.

Former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, of Union County, also made a speech seconding the nomination. Briefly summarized, his words were:

"The Republican party believes in men who can do things and who have done things. This convention will name a man who for years has done things. By sheer ability he has made himself felt. His uncle ambition has been for cleanliness in government. Patriotic, he knows what the office of Governor means. He is entitled to the nomination as a leader, a loyal Republican and a loyal Jerseyman. He knows State affairs better than any one man in the State and his name is one to conjure with."

On motion of Major Louis, a resolution was adopted that a committee of three delegates be named to fill vacancies that might occur on the ticket.

Candidate Stokes now appeared, escorted by the committee, and was given an ovation. The whole body of delegates rose and the cheers were prolonged.

Chairman Johnson formally notified Mr. Stokes of his nomination and congratulated him upon his selection.

The chairman then presented him to the convention.

Candidate Stokes accepted the nomination in a long speech, in which he discussed State and National issues. He said he was profoundly gratified at the call from his party, and would accept the honor with full knowledge of what it meant.

Continuing, he said: "This distinction is a mark of confidence which I fully appreciate. It imposes on men a duty, and I shall devote myself unreservedly to its patriotic fulfilment."

He then reviewed the duties of the governorship, and said if elected he

CACHET OF THE MOMENT.

High Crowned Hats Are the Thing. A New Aigret.

High crowns are the cachet of the moment, and we are realising that the high crown and broad brim are more becoming than the plateau, which has been regarded ad nauseam and is hard to give up. But, after all, the felt plateau has at best a forlorn and shapeless appearance. It may be trimmed over so cunningly, propped up with a handeau and wired at the edge; but, like the horse in "Pickwick Papers," which is kept up and going by being "strapped tightly to the shafts," so the plateau is kept going by its accessories.

With the high crowned hats the parasol plume is in favor and comes in lovely shades of lemon, toning to burnt orange, and in brown and pink, shading to subtle gradations of claret.

A novel aigret has been invented which takes on the characteristics of the paradise plume, but is shorter and is placed in an upright position on the hat.

Mohair receives considerable attention in the smart dress models. The lovely luster of this fabric is one of its principal features, but the fact that it comes in all the fashionable colors and several weights is also appreciated. Fancy mohairs in stripes, fine plaids or conventional figures of contrasting or self color are a change from the plain materials, and dresses developed in these figured mohairs are very stylish. Tailored styles predominate unless white is used, when any amount of hand sewing in the shape of French knots and fine feather stitching is seen.

A hat which represents a novelty is here shown. It boasts a brim considerably broader on the left side than on the right. It is lifted at the edge, and the trimming takes the form of a long sweeping plume caught with a buckle and a cluster of ribbons under the brim.

THE TAILOR MADE WOMAN.

What She Should Wear In Order to Be Correct.

This is the season of the year when the tailor made coat and skirt form of costume appeals most strongly to the feminine heart. This gown for the early fall may be evolved from the thinnest of voiles over a silk lining or from heavy rough cloth, velvet or velveteen, which promises to be one of the winter's smart gown fabrics. The lines of the strictly tailor made are very severe, and the sleeves are comfortably tight. Indeed, we have come back to the real English ideal tailor made gown, which admits of elaboration only on the cuffs and in a pretty application of braid or buttons.

Novelties in waistcoats include pique, velvet, suede and silk. They are, however, only worn with the severe type of tailor costume and particularly with the basque coats. White suede or kid waistcoats are more popular. Leather trimming of all kinds is the best cry in the world of dress.

The trotteur gown sketched by our artist is of navy blue serge. The skirt is plaited and stitched with three tiered panels cut into points over a stitched underskirt. The natty little coat is also plaited, stitched and adorned with revers, epaulets and cuffs of old blue cloth outlined with open meshed black braid.

THE MORNING TOILET.

It Will Be of Checked Tweed as Broadcloth.

The smart morning toilet will be of checked tweed as well as of a rather heavy broadcloth. The cost de rigueur for this mode is of the long double breasted variety, with gigot or rather narrow coat sleeves.

White and gray felt sailors with very broad crowns trimmed with bands of crepe de chine are shown for morning wear. One model is trimmed with bands of burnt orange velvet, with a fancy buckle at the side and a close drapery of tambour lace on the brim. Another new hat model of moderate size is in blue felt and round in shape, with the brim slightly upturned. Blue coq feathers curling outward encircle the crown.

Tailor made suits for the fall as well as coats to be worn while driving or automobiling will be made of shantung pongee in the natural or dyed shades. The tan and ecru tones are delightfully cool in appearance, but later on will be too "summery," so blotting paper—blue, geranium, green and cocoa brown—will prove more popular as the season advances. Trimmings of fine satin faced cloth or the thinnest suede imaginable make a strong contrast to the rough surface of the fabric. If lace is employed it is dyed to match the gown, while button molds, covered with pongee and embroidered in spiders with coarse silks, make effective trimmings.

A very chic French hat to wear with a blue serge is in a mixture of pleated straw and felt of Robespierre shape, the crown simply trimmed with a fold of dark blue velvet and a bright orange paradise plume at the side.

Examine the pretty costume pictured and see how easy it is to copy. The double skirt is trimmed with arabesques of cut-out cloth. A tan gown of this description would be smart carried out with the cutwork of leaf green.

riod. A beautiful wedding frock which will appeal to the very youthful wearer is of softest white satin veiled with priceless lace falling from an empiecement of the same lace studded with tiny seed pearls.

One of the evening toilets in a recently created trousseau is of embroidered cream mousseline de soie made with a Louis XVI. bodice finished with quaint little paste buttons in the center of old rose choux. A scarf of old Venice lace draped around the shoulders forms the elbow sleeves. The skirt is very full and trimmed with an entredeux of point de venise outlined with old embroidery.

Dark Lincoln green will be a novel feature among the braided autumn gowns, and bright red and dark red will have a short run of popularity.

The dainty bodice pictured is of white crepe de chine. The very bloused effect hangs from a lace yoke and is fulled into a deep girdle of white satin. The caught up puffed sleeves have a ruffle of lace as a finish.

A Noble Career

Eliza W. Bowman's Record of Good Work

If a woman is guilty of a breach of the law or even a breach of some social conventionality she is held up to public blame in the newspapers, her picture is scattered broadcast, screeds are written concerning her by many no better than she is, the difference being that she has been found out, they have not. But if a woman, walking humbly in the light of righteousness spends all her years and substance helping those who need it, pouring out with lavish hand the treasure of her soul for the good of all who come her way, who mentions it?

Such a life of good works and perfect devotion to mankind Eliza W. Bowman of Chicago has led for half a century. No saint's life could be purer or richer in righteousness, yet today not so much space is given to her in the journals as to Mrs. Dollarina's last sew lace gown. Such is the unreal way we have of looking at things. Yet we may know well that in the grand roundup the deed which helped even one person to a nobler life will be as a star, while the lace gown will be the absolute nothing it really is.

MRS. ELIZA W. BOWMAN.

Miss Bowman had not great wealth, but she had a strong, comprehensive intellect and a heart great enough to take in for her children all living creatures that need sympathy and kindliness. Miss Bowman was born and bred in Virginia. She was born with the instinct of helpfulness, which took its shape in motherliness to a child of nine. When a little girl she was constantly planning and contriving for the crying food and supplies to the poor of her neighborhood without letting anybody else know it.

Her public life may be summed briefly. She helped organize the Associated Charities of Chicago. For forty years she has been the friend of the convict and prisoner, often their only friend. She was for many years matron of the Chicago Home of the Friendless and in that office found it grew till it maintained a foundling nursery, a kindergarten and an industrial school with separate departments for boys and girls. Later she was fourteen years matron of the Chicago Newsboys' home. Then came a terrible illness through poison from leaky pipes in the home. It bereft her of physical power for several years. Then up she got and went into active life again. She is now manager of the Working Girls' home, maintained by the Army of American Volunteers. She is a charter member of the Illinois Women's Press association. Writing for magazines and newspapers is one of her occupations, in some of which has she ever had one thought for herself. Her friends include every variety of the human species.

Through all this land the influence of Miss Bowman has spread from the Chicago Home of the Friendless and the Newsboys' home. She has an intuitive faculty of character reading and with it that rarest ability of putting herself in the place of another. A reckless girl, a forlorn girl, would be brought to her. Beneath all the seeming unattractiveness, even evil, she read always the undeveloped gifts for worthy achievement, whatever they were. She unfolded these to the boy and girl, themselves often unconscious thereof. She inspired the child to put out and endeavor to be somebody and do something. Not one or two, but hundreds of respectable men and women, not a few occupying very high places, owe all their start in life to the help and inspiration Eliza Bowman gave them in the Home of the Friendless or the Newsboys' home.

The number of those who have been directly or indirectly helped to higher aims and better lives by this remarkable woman cannot be estimated. Like a great river her life has run, enabling arid soil right and left to bring forth fruit a hundredfold, with no more thought for her own increase of resources than the river itself has. Over the door of Eliza Bowman's room in the Working Girls' home are these words:

"Sufficient Unto the Day."

Without her knowing it Eliza Bowman's life is all that the so called "new thought" people prescribe. "You cannot eat today the food of tomorrow; you cannot tonight sleep the sleep of tomorrow night. Do the things of today. Fretting and complaining make troubles ten times worse."

So, living, loving and learning, Eliza Bowman goes through life, leaving a glory in her path. Poor, mean and pitiful indeed beside hers seems the life of mere personal aim.

MARY EDITH DAY.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 25: "Is the World Growing Better?" — Ps. xxxvii, 1-23; Rev. vii, 9-17; xxi, 10.

This is a favorite inquiry with many. The answer depends largely on the viewpoint one takes.

In America the last half century has seen development of natural resources such as has never been paralleled in the same space of time in any other age. So it has become popular to emphasize the vast increase in material wealth and the improvement in means of transportation and the luxuries of life placed within the reach of the common people.

Beyond question there are more accurate knowledge on many matters and greater skill in preventing and curing disease than ever before. The average of life has been lengthened somewhat, and suffering has been greatly relieved.

Not so long ago the most intelligent of men had little idea of any country beyond the bounds of their own little land. The larger part of the earth was unexplored and its people uncivilized. There was no proper understanding of the forces of physical nature, no real science and no conception of the material universe.

Ignorance was coupled with superstition and suspicion of others which bred cruelty and enmity. So war was the normal condition of society and the usual occupation of men. Peace was impossible and individual liberty not even conceived.

In religion the end sought was mainly the betterment of the material conditions of life. So the highest happiness was found in gratification of the physical appetites, and the rites of religion were merged in orgies of lust and sensuality. Morality and religion were not united in thought and so could not be connected in practice. Justice, purity, kindness in dealing with others, was not a requirement of religion. Even the gods were cruel, lustful and false in their dealings. Worship might serve to appease such gods with offerings and secure favor, but who could be expected to love such deities!

Better thought has come to the world. Men have come to know that God is in His nature love, purity and justice. He requires of men that they shall be like Himself. He demands more than sacrifices of animals and human beings; He requires that all the acts of His followers shall be kind, clean and just. More than this, the thinking must be pure, and the intentions must be right. Nor is this all. The thoughts of the heart, the words of the lips and all acts must not only be good in the outward appearance; they must come from a loving impulse. The heart itself must be filled with love to God and love to men. This is surely a betterment of the world in the realm of religious ideas.

There has been seen a corresponding spirit in the relations of men. The parable of the good Samaritan is getting put into practice. Men are becoming more friendly in will and deed. With the new truth that God is Father of us all has dawned the corresponding fact that we all are brethren. So love has been born, and enmity is fast dying.

So the gospel of the blessed Son of God is bettering the world and surely, steadily, lifting it godward and heavenward.

Lend a hand and lift a bit!

Forgiveness For Sin.

The true sign of forgiveness is not some mysterious signal waved from the sky; not some obscure emotion hunted out in your heart; not some stray text culled out of your Bible; certainly not some word of mortal priest telling you that your satisfaction is complete. The soul full of responsive love to Christ and ready longing, hungry to serve Him, is its own sign of forgiveness. Must there not be sorrow for sin? Must there not be resolution of amendment? Surely there must, but it is not sorrow for sin for the sake of the sorrowfulness that Jesus ever wants. He wants sorrow for sin only that it may bring escape from sin. I think that, with all we know of the divine heart of Jesus, He would far rather see a soul trust Him too much, if that is possible, than to trust Him too little, which we know is possible enough.—Phillips Brooks.

Loyalty to Christ.

Loyalty to Christ involves loyalty to man as man and brother, man of every clime and condition and nation. A little boy without father and mother was sent on the cars alone to a distant state to an uncle who offered him a home. When asked how he expected to reach his destination without any one to care for him, he said, "My Sunday school teacher sewed the directions on my coat," and showed them. They were these: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, ye have done it unto Me." Christ was traveling in his person and was served in serving him.—Evangelist.

The Rest of Heaven.

In contrast with the earth's weariness heaven smiles upon us, a place of rest. "They rest from their labors" is the first element of that celestial blessedness. Toil of body, mind and heart, toil against sin and self and Satan—these are changed to spontaneous, unwearied, invigorating exercises of soul and spirit. The lower services in which we may then engage are infinitely easier than the easiest we here perform. No play on earth is so delightful as the meanest work of heaven.—Bishop Gilbert Haven.

Perceiving Others.

Never harbor any ill feelings toward your neighbor, and if you should be tempted to fall out with your brother and friend always seek for an opportunity to reconcile yourself to him. Forgive others, and thou shalt be forgiven by God.

MODES OF TOMORROW.

The Furs and Fabrics Which Will Be Popular.

Here we are preparing for the winter and beginning to wonder what kind of furs are to be the most fashionable. Seal has been so dear for the last few seasons, with the price still mounting, that we are obliged to seek something to take its place. Astrachan will be much used if we can judge by the garments now making, but after sable and seal the choice is for ermine. Chinchilla seems to have lost some of its prestige, for few garments are being trimmed with it. All the fur that comes in like with astrakhan, such as wadtail and Persian, are seen among the new things, mostly in the form of coats, but ermine is made into more different things for the neck than one can tell of. The neckwear is very pretty in the main and consists of stock collars with long tabs shaped like a beaver's tail. Some of them just fasten at the neck with breloques or clasps, but most of them are arranged to tie like a four-in-hand. There are Elan collars, with long tabs, stock collars forty-two inches long, four-in-hands, ascot ties and other shapes, and these are from thirty-six to fifty inches long. Some are even seventy. A few of these have a fringe made of the tails, but more are finished plain.

There are some very beautiful pelerines of ermine, with fine silk fringe at the bottom and fancy ornaments of silk braid. Some are Russian shape. Muffs to match are made as big as pillows and are also new muffs.

New dress goods are coming in rapidly now. Among the best of the new stuffs for suits one finds Venetian cloth as a first favorite and in all colors, and most of it is made unspottable by a patent process. Costume cloth is on the same order. There is a crepe de Paris, which is half wool and half silk, an eolienne beautifully lustrous in all the colors and black. Worsted goods for suits in broken plaids in both large and small effects are seen. There are many plaids, some in silk and wool, but others in all wool, all handsome. Some of these run the gamut from pale lemon through the oranges to deep brown. In fact the ground is generally a soft cream. The effect is rich and warm and not in the least gaudy.

Among the high novelties are frosted broadcloths, and there could be nothing more beautiful. These are in all the season's colors and require little trimming. The heavy mannish woolens are on view in all the colors.

AN AUTUMN COSTUME.

They are for the tailor effects, and there will be many tailored suits. Coats are so often seen to match that one does not think of them as novelties and yet they are. They are tight and have skirts. Rain proof coverts are among the handsomest and most elegant of all the things save the broadcloths, which will always be the lady's choice. Zibelines will be quite as popular as before, from those with occasional hairs to those of tall hair. Panama cloth and several striped and invisibly plaited stuffs are among the handsome materials. Panne cheviot and hair stripe sibeline and also plain camel's hair sibeline make stylish street suits. Dark green, blue, brown, deep prune and oxford gray are the favorite colors.

In one place there are, I think I may truthfully say, thousands of handsome street suits or vetutina. This rich and comparatively inexpensive velvet has a strong hold upon women's favor, and it really deserves it.

There can be no question as to the shape of the skirts, for they are becoming very wide around the bottom, and the top, too, but there they are held in so that the extra size does not show. In the illustration is shown one of the models, and it may be seen how the fullness is adjusted. The waist is pointed and the skirt is gathered so that when it is under the point of the waist the gathers show but regularly. I saw one where the skirt was gathered smoothly all around. The skirts flow somewhat in the ancient styles. Down the front is a close shirring, which may be black peau de soie. At the bottom of this skirt is shirred a wide black velvet ribbon, a style of trimming much favored on silks. The waist is shirred very closely to the center, where it finishes with a ruffle, and the sleeves are also shirred down the middle to the elbows. There is a shirring at the shoulder seam. The neck and forearm pieces are of lace, with velvet bands at the joining of the silk at the neck. The whole effect of this gown is quaint, but really elegant.

OLIVE HARPER.

The New Woman

She Leads the Way to International Brotherhood

It is notable that the first really effective movements for international peace and universal brotherhood should have been set going by women. War, it is plain, would ultimately cease if the women of warring nations were fast bound together in a sisterhood that influenced for peace all their respective private families. The Women's International Council, founded by May Wright Sewall, is already a power for keeping the peace. Men, like the lower animals, are constitutionally ready to fight. It is the animal still dominant in them, and women will have to rise and hold this brute in check by cultivating ever the sense of justice and brotherhood in such of the masculine sex as have not yet emerged from their influence. A recent additional bred toward international brotherhood has been taken by some women in Paris. There is now in operation in that city the British American Young Women's Christian association. It has been established for the purpose of aiding young American and English girls who find themselves stranded in Paris or who are obliged to live there on a very small income. At the B. A. Y. W. C. A. home board may be obtained for $4 a week. Attached to the establishment are instruction classes in French, physical culture, nursing and millinery. An American woman, Mrs. John Hoff, is president of this association, while an English woman, Miss Johnstone, is secretary. The home is at No. 5 Rue de Turin, in the part of Paris called the Europeen quarter. An employment agency for women is one of the features of this invaluable institution. Women of high social standing in the English-American colony labor unitedly for the prosperity of these home clubs. When American and English women thus work together with harmonious enthusiasm their men will not be long in following suit.

Did you ever think of the great difference between wishing and willing? The wishy woman sits still and says, "I wish I had money enough to go to the world's fair." The woman of will gets a hustle on her and finds a way to go to the world's fair or to achieve whatever else she desires.

Civilized people will never be free till each person can dress as he or she pleases without even exciting comment of an unpleasant kind. How far short of being civilized New York at least is may be judged from the fact that not long ago a learned Hindoo who walked along its streets in the robes of his native land was stoned. If an American wearing his ordinary coat and trousers had walked through the streets of a town in India he would not have been molested, scarcely even stared at. Which is the civilized country?

When you contemplate going in for some new health, beauty or food fad make sure before you do so that it will deliver the goods.

There is no tyranny like that of fashion in dress. "Fashion is the devil's first assistant," remarks our friend the Hayfield Mower. Its tyranny is so unbounded that if you go into any city's great department stores and ask for even a piece of dress goods not of the weave in vogue at the moment you are stared at as if you were a freak and told that it is "out of style." If you mention that you want it very much you are told again, coldly and curtly, that it is "out of style." And if you were to look every hattie gooks shop in a large city through, street by street, you could not get that article. The freedom that women need most is release from the fetters of fashion. Mme. Rejane, the famous French actress, as lovely physically as she is gifted, says that woman will never be beautiful till fashion goes out of existence.

As high praise as was ever bestowed on a woman was that uttered by the driver of the vehicle in which Dr. Emily Dunning, the first woman ambulance surgeon in the world, made her rounds in New York city. He said, "When she's at work she's a doctor; when she's off duty she's a lady."

To blame others for our failures shows only our own weakmindedness and lack of will power. The strong, steady, determined soul never whines.

Not long ago an evening reception was given for a brilliant young lady who wore a handsome white gown and was admired by all present for her easy, graceful manner and cultivated mind. She was a girl who a few years ago drove a milk wagon to help support her family, and she was taking a high school course. I could give you her name, but maybe she wouldn't like it.

An editor writing in his paper says it is the girls who are to blame for the universal tendency of young men to leave the farm for city life. Girls prefer the city man with his soft hands and clothes unstained by the soil, so the editor says. Yes, yes. It's always the woman. Isn't it?

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

THE MEAT PROBLEM.

An Important One For Women With Small Incomes.

Half the success of housekeeping depends on the person who does the marketing. Some families live meanly on a large income, and others fare well and enjoy continual novelty on a very small butcher's allowance. A little common sense goes a long way. If you have a small family, why buy a huge roast because it is the usual thing? It will only last and last until in the end, in desperation, it is thrown away because the family is sick of having it brought on the table.

The proportionate expenditure should be about one-third for meat. This leaves a wide margin for vegetables, fish, milk, etc, and it ought to be sufficient because most of us eat a great deal too much meat.

THAT ENORMOUS ROAST!

Beef is the most expensive meat, but this expense may be reduced by buying a large quantity at once and cutting off what you need at a time. When there is a family of, say, six it is an advantage to buy from ten to fifteen pounds of beef at a time. If this is cut from the best part of the small of the back it will give different cuts—fillets, sirloin roasts or steaks, pot roasts, pieces for corning and stew and trimmings for soups. Even the meaner cuts of beef round steak trimmings that are left when the large pieces are cut and the "shank" may be made palatable if properly prepared.

In buying lamb the same rule holds good. Chops bought separately are expensive, but by buying a quarter of lamb or mutton the price is lessened, and it can be kept fresh in the house until needed. Some butchers will even keep the large piece you have bought in their cold storage room and cut off the pieces as you need them.

Veal is not considered very nourishing, but it affords good chops and shanks, not to speak of stuffed breast of veal.

Good meat can be absolutely spoiled in the cooking. In roasting or broiling the meat should be underdone rather than overdone and never dry, for then it is indigestible. In a stews the meat should first be quickly browned all over and then water added, allowing it to cook slowly until well done. In this manner the juices are confined in the meat, and the slow cooking afterward makes it tender.

In cooking a roast baste well and often, as this adds richness and flavor besides giving a crisp crust on the outside.

The general color tone is brown oak and red. The divan facing the visitor is admirable in its suggestion of hospitality and comfort. A deep red rug faces the entrance door, which is not seen in the picture.

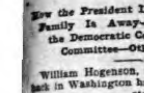
WASHINGTON LETTER

SUMMER DAY GOSSIP OF NATIONAL CAPITAL.

KEEPING BACHELOR'S HALL

How the President Lives When His Family Is Away—Secretary of the Democratic Congressional Committee—Other Items.

William Hogenson, the Lewis Institute boy in Washington hard at work. His stay at Oyster Bay has been regarded in the light of a vacation. It has been as much of a vacation as a president of the United States can take. The truth is that the highest officer in the land gets no real vacation. While temporarily he may be he has to attend to a certain amount of routine official business. The only way he can entirely separate himself from work is to get out of reach of railroads, telegraphs and telephones. This Mr. Roosevelt did last year on his big western tour when he escaped into the Yellowstone park for a week and got out of communication with his secretary and the rest of the world.

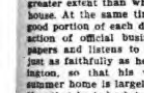


Escaping for a Vacation.

At Oyster Bay the president enjoys many personal privileges that are denied him in Washington. He is permitted to spend more time with his family and can indulge in sports and pastimes of which he is fond to a greater extent than he can in the white house. At the same time he devotes a good portion of each day to the transaction of official business. He signs papers and listens to official business just as faithfully as he does in Washington, so that his vacation at his summer home is largely in name only. Now that he is back in Washington he will feel the full pressure of official life. Scores and hundreds of politicians have been waiting for his return to discuss with him the situation and to press requests for appointments and if possible to secure promises to be used in the campaign.

Keeping Bachelor's Quarters.

When the president is in Washington and his family at his Oyster Bay home the white house is turned into a sort of bachelors' hall. A free and easy life is led, no formality being exacted, but everything conspiring to comfort and good fellowship. The corps of servants is limited, some being on their vacation and others at Oyster Bay, but enough are on duty to attend to the president's wants and to the comfort of the guests whom he always has with him. It is during periods of this kind that the president delights in entertaining little "stag" parties. He surrounds himself with his bachelor friends or those who are in temporary widowerhood on account of the absence of their wives and families and a jolly party sits down to the table morning, noon and evening.



Having a Friend for Luncheon.

Any of the president's friends who happen to be in the city are captured and brought into the bachelor circle. The president is famous for discussing matters of state and politics at his table, and it is a common practice for him to invite statesmen and politicians to luncheon or dinner for the express purpose of discussing public issues with them. When he is alone in the white house the following are very generally as stag party about the table can then devote their attention exclusively to politics or statesmanship, no ladies being present to require attentions and courtesies or to divert the drift of conversation to other subjects.

Among those whom the president delights in having at the white house are Attorney General Moody, bachelor of the cabinet; Commissioner of Corporations Garfield, familiarly known as "Jimmy;" special council in the post office investigations, Holmes Conrad; Secretary of War Taft and half a dozen others. In official life noted for good fellowship and for their sympathy with the president's policies and purposes.

Quaint Charley Edwards.

The democratic congressional campaign committee has as its secretary a newspaper man of most unique and original character. He is Charlie Edwards, who came to Washington from Texas several years ago, and was at once placed in the same class with that inimitable Texas philosopher Col. William Sterrett, whose fame has spread all over the country between Washington and the Lone Star state. Both these newspaper men are renowned for their originality, quaintness of expression, blunt honesty and the habit of speaking their own minds.

Like the Expected Account.

Edwards has been a rampant, shouting Hearst man but accepted the result at St. Louis with his usual complacency, although he has ascribed some of his opinions regarding the issues the party stood for in 1900 and 1896. He was asked the other day whether the proceedings of the St. Louis convention really committed the party to the gold standard. "Well now," said Edwards, "I think I can best illustrate the situation by relating a little story of the experience of a traveling man, a friend of mine.

"This drummer on his return from his first trip on the road turned in an expense account on which was such items as 'a pair of shoes, $3.50; one shirt, 99 cents; hat, $1.00;' and a few other things of the same nature.

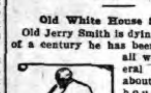
"'Here, what does this mean?' said the head of the house, 'we don't mind being liberal in expense allowances, but we are not buying wearing apparel for our agents. We've got to fix up a different expense account.'

"The next trip my friend turned in his expenses, which footed up a larger amount than on his first trip, but it was paid without a murmur. 'That's something like an expense account,' said the head of the firm. 'You don't see any overcoats mentioned among the items?' asked my friend. 'No, I do not,' was the answer. 'Well, the overcoat is in there all the same,' responded my friend with a grin.

"That is the way with the St. Louis platform and convention," laughed Edwards, "you may not find the gold standard among the items, but it is in there all the same."

Old White House Servant.

Old Jerry Smith is dying. For a third of a century he has been the man of all work and general factotum about the white house. A few months ago failing health compelled him to leave the old mansion, where he had served so faithfully since President Grant's first administration. One of his duties was the running up of the American flag on the white house every morning. Just before he had to give up work he made a blunder that betrayed his failing faculties. He ran up the flag Union Jack down, the signal of distress. The mistake was quickly discovered and rectified, but Uncle Jerry never got over it. He took it as a sign that he was falling and the time had come to give up work. He was relieved from duty and soon took to his bed, where he now lies slowly passing away with the cancer of the stomach. In his modest little home he has not been forgotten, as President Roosevelt, National Chairman Cortelyou and many high officials have called to inquire after the old man and let him know that he is well remembered.



Was the Official Duster.

Uncle Jerry is a Virginia negro and was first engaged at the white house by Gen. Grant. Up until the last few months he was a fine specimen of physical manhood. Fully six feet tall, broad-shouldered, with erect carriage and wearing a snow-white mustach and imperial, Jerry Smith was a regular colored field marshal. He was universally esteemed for his good nature, cheerfulness and willingness. No one ever heard him grumble about work that might be required of him. During his 30 odd years service he was employed in all sorts of positions, from cook to head usher at an official function. Of late years he seemed to be the official duster in the executive mansion, for he was never separated from a large feather duster, with which he was continually brushing furniture and pictures. In manner he was a colored Chesterfield. His death will remove a very conspicuous landmark from official Washington and will leave Arthur Simmons, a North Carolina negro who came to the white house as a refugee during Lincoln's administration as the remaining link between the old and new white house regimes.

Expensive Dove Cot.

A flock of Washington pigeons have preempted the gold dome of the library of congress for a mating and nesting place. This is probably the most ornate and expensive dove cote or pigeon roost in the world. A few weeks ago a pair of birds entered one of the ventilators of the rotunda and flying around surveyed the gorgeous fresco work, beautiful statuary and profusion of gold paint, and after mature satisfaction for they concluded to locate there permanently. They selected a cornice, in which they placed a nest made of excelsior, which has for its background the gilded dome on which $40,000 worth of gold leaf was used.

Pigeons in the Library Dome.

The example of this pair of pigeons has been followed until now quite a little flock gathers daily on the gold dome and their crooning can be distinctly heard in the reading room below. The birds fly through the ventilators every day in search of food and are very much at home in the beautiful building. The library authorities do not know how to get rid of them without closing the ventilators, which would not be comfortable in the present summer temperature.

The pigeons are of the "tumbler" variety and in flying about the rotunda they sometimes startle the readers at the public desks.

GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

IT IS NOW SOCIETY'S OUT-OF-TOWN SEASON.

WHEN MAN IS LEFT ALONE

The Situation Has a Funny Side to It —Brutal Scenes at the Brooklyn Bridge Entrance—Other Gotham Chatter.

NEW YORK.—"Society" is out of town, but society's husbands are in town most of the time, with the husbands of that part of the population which is not society. The disproportion in the balance of the sexes is not great enough to be immediately noticeable on the streets, but it is a novel disproportion nevertheless, and one that is plain enough in certain quarters. The results are more striking than the figures. They appear in the proportion of men in the audiences at places of amusements, at the restaurants, and in the churches that remain open. The whole arrangement is a familiar subject of satire. The fun-maker sees a huge joke in the situation of the pampered wife who drives, bathes, flirts and eats too much at "summer places," and a smaller jest in the pitied husband who "does the town" while his wife is away. It is quite true that the New York husband resolves to console himself for the hot and lonesome situation in which he is usually left by the summer arrangement. It is true that he takes a certain kind of pleasure in a free and easy dinner with gay music, and in a subsequent roof garden. But itis equally true that this freedom to come and go is one that the average husband very soon tires of and nothing is more familiar in the summer metropolis than the sight of the lonesome husband who has finished doing the things he found to do and has grown disgusted with his freedom. The evening shows many thousands of thoroughly bored men who are looking forward eagerly to September, the return of their families and the reestablishment of the winter schedule of living.

The Bridge Scandal.

THE foreigner who, returning home, has expressed the opinion that the most extraordinary thing in New York is the disgrace at the Brooklyn bridge, for once has expressed an opinion that tallies precisely with the opinion held by every decent New Yorker. The brutal scenes at the bridge entrance in the rush hours at the end of festival of life in the metropolis which no one has ever succeeded in exaggerating. A painter who succeeded in putting the thing on canvas would be accused of having a diseased imagination. People who once devoted a franc or part of eight-seeing time to visiting the slums, now go instead to the bridge entrance at half past five in the afternoon and look down into the human maelstrom. Nothing on the stage is half so theatrically exciting. There is much better chance of seeing human beings maimed and murdered than at any bull fight. Here is a battle that is governed by no laws. The government that is sensitive about the prize ring and has debated solemnly the child's play of football, looks on blandly at this trampling, murderous scene night after night. It is sinful for a man with gloved hands to punch another man in one round too many, but here children are torn from their mothers' arms and trampled to death, and the legalized panic and carnage is called the growth of population.

Scarcely less repulsive scenes are repeated in the elevated railway stations at the same hour. Committees protest, and commissioners map plans, but the outrage is perpetuated. "When the subway is finished," is an oft-repeated hope. "When the river tunnels are opened," is another promise. What New York really wants is an engineering Napoleon. Men who ought to know, say that these things need not happen. The police have thrown up their hands. They have slightly diminished the number of deaths, but in general New York's twilight scramble is as bad as ever it was, a continuous conflict as deadly as war.

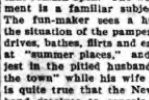
Eating in Many Languages.

NE philosopher has said that the New Yorker's one business is to get his meals is a more frantic spectacle than anything in modern life. Every foreigner marvels at the attention now given to eating. I presume that New Yorkers do not eat more than other folks, but the number of new restaurants, gorgeous and humble, is always one of the marvels of the town. Every trick of effete Europe has been copied, and the orient has been sampled for fresh devices. One may sate here in any language. Just now Japanese restaurants are especially popular, though not more so than the Chinese. There are now hundreds of Chinese restaurants, some of them very Chinese, some of them but slightly so. In the Chinese quarter there are now 20 or 30 well fitted places where there were but three or four five years ago. It is a growing fashion now with visitors to the city—and there are many thousands of sight-seers here at this season—to eat in foreign places, and the fashion lifts into prosperity very humble restaurants that were not looking for the invasion. There is a Greek restaurant on Forty-second street, and one or two other distinctly Greek places further downtown. Italian, French, Swiss, Russian, Spanish restaurants are legion. The Hungarian cafe on Houston street once had a great fame. There are so many other Hungarian restaurants now that this place—built in a cellar, with a background of casks and bottles—is no longer distinctive. The Assyrian restaurant on Reeter street has not yet been spoiled by popularity. When it is "discovered" that is on any "written up" in the Sunday papers, there will be cabs and automobiles in front of the door, the proprietor will cut through the wall and hire more waiters, and the place will be so much like any other that the searchers for novelty must turn elsewhere. This hunt for queer places that are not yet spoiled, is a game of itself. "For heaven's sake don't mention it!" the artists used to say when they found a new French restaurant with the potted plants and the parrot in the window, and madame behind the little counter. Vain hope! Somebody always does mention it. Then the cabs come, madame is famous—and spoiled.

A Millionaire's Amusement.



MILLIONAIRES can't eat their money. They must spend it. If they save it to leave behind there is no dreadful spectacle, for example, of the people grabbing a share. Mr. Whitney's money has just given the state an inheritence tax of $222,000. Mr. Carnegie is not the only rich man who is trying to die poor. Mr. Carnegie's toys are libraries. Here is Mr. Gould Brokaw with other notions. I discovered some weeks ago the Long Island palace of Mr. Brokaw. This is constantly being embellished. The grounds have recently been made still more like a Greek garden. But Brokaw still amuses with houses, stables, terraces, yachts, buswagons, hunting hounds and farming novelties. He has mastered the surface of the earth and somethings underneath. He has played everything that can be played on land. Now he wants to play in the air. He is building balloons. Santos Dumont appealed to his fancy and he is constructing some air boats much on the Santos Dumont lines for Brokaw's amusement. There are suspects to make other surface-living millionaires feel cheap. In furtherance of this plan Brokaw has already built a "balloon house," a structure suitable for his air horses, and although there is the usual mystery about his plans, the precise type of balloon, and so forth, the balloon fad is well entrenched on the Brokaw estate and before the out-door season is over the Brokaw contingent will make his trial trips in an up-to-date airship. Nothing that Brokaw does really excites surprise, and this latest enterprise is all but taken for granted, yet there is sufficient curiosity among his neighbors, servants and otherwise. If there is to be a grand trunk line in air traffic Brokaw may be the pioneer, though to do him justice he claims only to be playing.

"The Right of Privacy."

THE streets are dotted with tourists cameras; the excursion steamers, the watering places, Coney Island, Long Branch—all the near resorts—reveal the popularity of the camera. Supplementing the legion of amateurs are the professional al view-makers, and the newspaper news gathering photographers. The individual's right to forbid a photographer—and sometimes his right to thrash the photographer and break his camera—has been gone over a good many times, but a new vitality is given to the theme by Judge Parker's protest at Esopus against being photographed while in bathing. The letter of Miss Abigail Roberson, of Rochester, to Judge Parker has raised much discussion. Miss Roberson read Judge Parker's protest and immediately sat down to write what was doubtless intended to be a stinging letter.

Miss Roberson had sued a milling company for using her picture in connection with advertising without having her consent to do so. The decision of the court of appeals was against Miss Roberson, and the decision was written by Judge Parker. The democratic candidate, who has been much persecuted and annoyed, used the expression "I reserve the right," and Miss Roberson pounced upon this at once. "I take this opportunity to remind you," she says, "that you have not such right as that which you assert," and she quotes the court of appeals' decision in which the "so-called" right of privacy was discussed. The letter, which is superficially respectful, offers a blunt and gleeful deduction.

Doubtless most people are siding with Judge Parker in his later wish rather than in his earlier decision. It must be rather annoying to feel the camera looking at you all the time. The knowledge that a person may be made to look very ridiculous is a chance one shrinks from, and a badly-faked photograph has made many mourn.

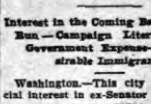
WASHINGTON TOPICS

PEOPLE AND THINGS AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

DAVIS WELL-KNOWN THERE

Interest in the Coming Battle at Bull Run—Campaign Literature at Government Expense—A Desirable Immigrant.

Washington.—This city has a special interest in ex-Senator Henry Gassaway Davis, of West Virginia, candidate for the vice presidency on the democratic ticket. He has been identified with many of the interests of Washington for years and been prominent in its social and religious circles. His is very familiar figure on the national capital. He is so well known as Senator Davis that lots of people believe that he is still occupying a seat in the senate chamber.



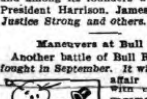
Ex-Senator Henry G. Davis.

In the winter season Senator Davis makes his home in Washington and takes a prominent part in public affairs. He is not regarded as a politician *and every other one of his ac*quaintances had to stop and think twice before they could recall him politically before the St. Louis convention gave him the second place on the democratic national ticket. After his 12 years service in the United States senate Mr. Davis again came into public notice here on account of the great interest he displayed in the Pan-American congress, which first convened in this city and which has since held sessions. The senator has had a great interest in matters affecting Central and South America and is understood to be very largely connected with business enterprises in those sections, particularly in Mexico.

The democratic vice presidential candidate is a staunch Presbyterian and while in Washington he worships at the Church of the Covenant, which is jocularly and popularly known in Washington as the "Church of the Government." It is an offshoot of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church where President Lincoln worshipped, and among its founders were the late President Harrison, James G. Blaine, Justice Strong and others.

Maneuvers at Bull Run.

Another battle of Bull Run is to be fought in September. It will be a mild affair compared with the engagements which took place some 40 years ago on that historic spot in Virginia, but it will be a sham battle, as part of the army maneuvers which are to take place under the direction of Maj. Gen. Corbin, commanding the department of the east. It will be participated in by the regular troops and detachments of militia.



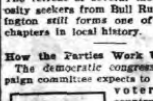
Politician Returning from the Battle of Bull Run.

According to reports already received at Gen. Corbin's headquarters, some 26,000 men will participate in these maneuvers and a lively and interesting occasion is expected. It is anticipated that this encampment of federal troops, together with details of the national guards from north and south will have an excellent effect in still further cementing the friendship of the north and south, which was once so widely divided. The survivors of the original Bull Run battlefields are becoming fewer every year, but it is expected that the maneuvers this year will attract many of the old foemen to the scene of their old gray to visit the old fighting grounds.

There are a number of old Washington residents who recollect very vividly the first Bull Run fight. The impression prevailed in the city and in congress and among many of the military men that the first contest would be a mere skirmish and the confederates would be so badly whipped that the war would come to an end at once. Citizens of Washington determined to go out to where the battle was expected to come off and witness this skirmish, much as they will go out in September to view the army maneuvers. The retreat of several thousand curiosity seekers from Bull Run to Washington still forms one of the comic chapters in local history.

How the Parties Work Uncle Sam.

The democratic congressional campaign committee expects to mail to the voters of the country no fewer than 10,000,000 speeches. The republican committee will not be far behind in the amount of literature they will disseminate. This means free distribution alone of speeches that can legitimately be called a part of the Congressional Record and be carried free through the mails under the frank of members of congress. Uncle Sam is thus worked every national campaign for a big bill of expense. These documents represent many thousand tons of mail matter which, if they paid the regular rates of postage, would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to distribute through the mails.



Chairman Cortelyou of Republican National Committee.

This is educational work and both parties take advantage of the liberal laws that permit public documents to pass through the mails free. The democrats are now reaping the harvest they sowed last session when they put forward their best speakers in the house and senate to make arguments which they concluded would be useful in the conversion of voters in this campaign. It is a remarkable fact, however, that of these speeches now being distributed 75 per cent. were delivered by southern men whose addresses will be of no advantage in those states south of Mason's and Dixon's line. It is admitted that the "solid south" needs no campaign material in its educational line. All of this southern contribution is intended for northern and western consumption.

There are only five northern democrats who have contributed to these campaign documents and four of them are serving their first terms in congress. The congressional committee decided that these new members should be given a show, so they were accorded the privilege of the floor and made addresses to be utilized in their districts for their reelection.

Economical Heating Scheme.

A new idea in the heating of public buildings in Washington has been suggested and is now being worked out by Prof. S. H. Wood bridge, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It is that of a central heating and power station for 14 of the great public buildings in this city. It is estimated that if such a scheme can be put in operation a tremendous annual saving in fuel and other expenditures can be made.

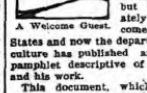
This Bill Pleases Uncle Sam.

It is proposed that one set of engines supply the power needed in the white house, the state, war and navy building, the treasury, the new municipal building, the city and general post office, the new hall of records, the department of justice and other buildings as they are authorized and built. Then it is proposed to utilize the exhaust steam from these engines for the heating of the buildings during the winter season. It is possible that this idea may be put into operation in a limited way with the present arrangements. At the capitol, for instance, the exhaust steam from the engines is now turned into the sewers and new coal has to be used to make steam sufficient to heat the big building. It was suggested by Prof. Woodbridge that the dynamos could be turned into the heating apparatus at the capitol it is estimated that a tremendous saving would be made. Huge condensing engines at a central station, it is urged, could use water over and over again and furnish steam enough to heat a large number of buildings.

Prof. Woodbridge will probably make a report on this subject at the next session of congress when an appropriation will be asked to put it into effect. The plan of heating separate buildings from a central plant is not a new one, as many towns and cities have it in operation.

Desirable Immigration.

Of all the immigrants that have passed the boundaries of the United States none has been so warmly welcomed as a stranger named Kelep. This alien comes from Guatemala and has been quickly naturalized. His American name being "Boll-Weevil Ant." He was only discovered April 20 last, but was immediately urged to come to the United States and now the department of agriculture has published an exhaustive pamphlet descriptive of the stranger and his work.



A Welcome Guest.

This document, which is entitled "The Habits of the Kelep, or Guatemalan Cotton-Boll-Weevil Ant," sings the praises of that insect in no uncertain key. Prof. Coquillett, who has prepared it, has made a close study of the ant, 4,000 of which were brought from Guatemala and deposited in the cotton belt of Texas. He feels authorized to declare that relief from the ravages of the boll-weevil is at hand. He states that the ant attacks and kills the adult boll-weevil and "thus holds this most injurious insect in check and permits the regular harvesting of a crop of cotton even under conditions favorable to the weevil."

The ant, he finds, injures no form of vegetation and takes nothing from the cotton plant except the nectar secreted for it on the leaves and floral envelope. He further finds that it is readily capable of domestication, transportation and colonization in the cotton fields of Texas. Two questions yet remain to be determined, one as whether Keleps will survive a winter climate of Texas and the other whether they can be propagated in sufficient numbers to protect the whole of the cotton belt.

Fond of Display.

HAS STRONG PERSONALITY

New Chairman of Democratic National Committee Is a Skilled Getter of Votes.

Indianapolis (Ind.) Special.

Thomas Taggart is a man of strong personality. Although he is 48 years old, his appearance is that of a younger man. His well-fitting clothes, closely trimmed mustache and business-like manner give the impression that he is a type of the successful American man of commercial life, but Mr. Taggart is better known for his success in politics than in the hotel business.

He is proprietor of the Grand hotel at the French Lick Springs, and has made a fortune out of this celebrated resort. Aside from business, Mr. Taggart has always been more or less active in politics, having first become conspicuous as a democratic campaigner in 1886 in Marion county, Ind., when he was elected to the office of auditor of the county, the first public office he ever held.

Four years later he was reelected auditor of Marion county. So popular was he while in office, and so skilled in political maneuvers in bringing out the full democratic vote on election day, he was elected chairman of the democratic state committee of Indiana in 1892, and served two years.

He has been district chairman of the Seventh congressional district of Indiana since 1892, as well as member of the democratic national committee from that state.

Mr. Taggart is an Irishman. He came to this country with his parents while a lad and settled with them at Xenia, O., subsequently the family removed to Garrett, Ind., and in 1877 young Taggart took up the hotel business in Indianapolis.

He is a man of medium build and pleasing address and makes friends readily in whatever company he may be thrown. In politics as in business he has always been sagacious and conservative, though in heated campaigns he has been a most aggressive leader of his political forces.

Possessed of exceptional powers as entertaining, he is always surrounded by a group of interested spectators in the hotel lobbies and other public places. Of course, he is best known for having been mayor of Indianapolis, which office he held from 1895 to 1901, but he is likewise conspicuous for the part he has taken in the councils of the democratic national committee

THE MUDDLE IN MOROCCO.

France May Be Compelled to Go to War to Suppress Bandits of the Raisuli Type.

London (Eng.) Special.

The French government is moving at last in a tentative fashion towards the control of Moorish politics. Algerian police have been sent to Tangier, and the *sultan is provided with a financial ad*viser, who may keep a tight hand on that potentate's rather careless expenditure. The success of Raisuli has prompted other adventurers to make demands, and threates to raid Tangier if these are not conceded. The game of carrying off Europeans as hostages may be checked by the advent of the Algerian police. On the other hand, this may excite the Moorish tribes to such a pitch of exasperation that France will be compelled to send a considerable body of troops. No other power will interfere, and it is plain that the French government is acting with reluctance. As the tribal fanatics are not likely to recognize French suzerainty, M. Combes or his successor may have to undertake an expedition by no means popular in France, where the spirit of adventure has greatly declined.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES

For President,

ALTON BROOKS PARKER, OF NEW YORK.

ALTON B. PARKER.

For Vice President,

HENRY G. DAVIS, OF WEST VIRGINIA.

HENRY G. DAVIS.

It isn't always the pretty ad that crowds the store. It's the stuff that goes into it that counts.—Ex.

Essex county found a grain of happiness when the farmer-orator from Union sat on the boss from Hudson.

Next to Mr. Parker's courageous gold telegram, a fair instruction to those compiling the Democratic party text book "to see that there is no word in it that reflects upon the personal honor and integrity of President Roosevelt."

If the Democrats of Somerset County have any idea of waging any sort of a fight in the present campaign they should place a North Plainfield man on the ticket, and David J. Carney, who has a host of friends in the borough, would be an ideal selection.

AMUSEMENTS.

The opening of the Manhattan Theatre, New York, for the season last Wednesday night, was a brilliant event, attended by an overflowing and distinguished audience in a driving storm. The occasion was the revival by Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company of Langdon Mitchell's fine comedy from "Vanity Fair," and the event eclipsed the original presentation of this play by Mrs. Fiske at the Fifth Avenue Theatre five years ago in the pleasure that is afforded and the approval it invoked. After an interval of few striking and many indifferent plays, it is a delight to witness this thrilling blend from a universally appreciated original, and to see such an actress as Mrs. Fiske in a role that so admirably fits her great talent, supported by a great company whose principals bring out the associative characters with striking fidelity. Mrs. Fiske undoubtedly is better fitted than any actress of her time to impersonate the wicked but fascinating Becky, who in her hands embodies one of the most enjoyable stage creations of the period. George Arliss, who has already distinguished himself in other roles, is playing his first season with Mrs. Fiske, and his interpretation of Lord Steyne surpasses any dramatic idea of this character before made known. Its run is limited, owing to other plans outlined for Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company.

Marriage Announcement.

Mrs. Miles T. Day, of East Orange, formerly of Mercer avenue, has sent out cards announcing the marriage of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Thompson, to George Francis Towne, on Thursday, Sept 15, at East Orange.

AMUSEMENTS.

"Checkers," the great character comedy and racing play, which proved last season one of the few real theatrical hits, began the fourth week of its fourth engagement in New York city, last Monday night, before an audience which packed the Academy of Music to the doors. The play is the strongest enough in the popular rated to play a repeat engagements in New York city, where one engagement is almost invariably enough, is strong indeed. But "Checkers" has not only made one repeat, but is now playing its third, and despite the hot weather and the opposition, drew $1,747 into the box office last Saturday night. This is due, doubtless, to the intense human nature of the play. Playgoers are reported to have seen it, not once, but seven and eight times.

The Hudson Theatre was brilliantly reopened Monday night in the production of Arthur W. Pinero's much heralded play, "Letty," and in the reappearance of William Faversham. The cclat of London approval does not, of course, always spell New York success, yet this passion drama of Mr. Pinero judged on its dramatic merits and by the reception it met last night, quite justified here its London reputation and should be one of the season's good things. The cast was a strong one, perhaps the strongest with which Mr. Faversham has ever been connected. He and his associates met the warmest kind of welcome and, what is of greater value, the heartiest approval of their efforts as the evening progressed. In fact, in one scene in the fourth act Mr. Faversham had an opportunity of which he availed himself so thoroughly that the house "rose at him" and he had twelve recalls. He has done nothing better than his acting in this scene. Mr. Faversham is provided with a part which fits him as well as the similar one he played in "Aristocracy" many seasons ago, that of the gentlemanly reprobate. It gives play to his finesse and to his mannerisms—and for plenty of cigarette indulgence. The scene sets were good, the second, a glimpse into cockney Bohemia, being especially effective.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT ON HILLSIDE'S COURTS

MEN'S COMPETITION FOR CHAMPIONSHIP MARKED BY FAST PLAY.

The courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club presented a very picturesque appearance Saturday at the opening of the annual fall tournament for the men's championship. The courts were in fine condition after the recent heavy rain, and the play was fast and in most cases interesting. A large crowd of interested spectators gathered at the courts, adding to the gayety of the scene, and inspiring the players to exert their best efforts. Though the woman's tournament finals were scheduled to be played in the morning, they were postponed till next week in order that all the matches possible could be played off in the men's event. Those who will play off next week in the women's tournament are Miss Mary A. Reinhart and Miss Sarah E. Schuyler.

The following are the scores for the three rounds played in the men's match Saturday: First round, W. S. Tyler defeated C. W. Abbott, by default; F. W. Goddard defeated A. T. Wills, 6-1, 6-0; E. M. Daniels, Jr., defeated G. H. O'Donnel, 6-4, 6-1. Second round: W. C. Glenney defeated A. B. Beebe, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5; J. T. Meyers defeated O. B. Tyler, 6-4, 6-3; T. M. Day, Jr., defeated O. H. Fleming, 6-3, 6-1; W. S. Tyler defeated A. M. Tweedy, 6-2, 6-3; F. W. Goddard defeated E. M. Daniels, 6-3, 6-1; H. D. Bulkley defeated Harold S. Brown, 6-2, 6-3; A. Lovell defeated C. King, 6-0, 6-3; A. D. Beers defeated J. F. Middleath, 6-1, 6-1. Third round, T. M. Day, Jr., defeated W. S. Tyler, 6-3, 6-1; J. S. Meyers versus W. T. Glenney, 7-5, 4-6, unfinished; F. W. Goddard versus Bulkley, 6-3, 3-4, unfinished; A. D. Beers defeated A. Lovell, 6-1, 6-3.

When the unfinished sets have been played, there will be only the semi-finals and finals to take place next week. T. M. Day, who won the trophy two years ago, and A. B. Beers are the only ones who are known to have qualified for this last round, and in all probability the contest will be hottest between these two. Both are playing a strong game. Mr. Day is the holder of the cup at present and Beers was the runner-up in last year's match.

Gen. Gilmore Stricken.

General Quincy O'Malley Gilmore, of the New Jersey National Guard, is suffering from liver trouble and has gone to the mountains of northern New York, for the benefit of his health. The disease has already begun active progress and it is feared that the General will lack the strength necessary to throw the burden from his constitution. Little real hope for his recovery is held out by his physician.

LITERARY.

The Metropolitan Magazine for September presents a capital new "soldier" story by Rudyard Kipling, entitled "Mrs. Bathurst." In this new tale all of the author's earlier strength and fancy, and all of his later skill and mastery of narrative, are happily combined to make a piece of short fiction unsurpassed by any of the recent achievements of the foremost story-tellers in the English tongue. This virile new story will prove of unusual charm to every one who loves a good story well told.

In life the truest winning often comes first under the guise of failure, and it is willingness to accept failure, and intelligence in understanding its causes, and using the acquired knowledge as a means to a higher end, that ultimately brings true success. If we choose, a failure can always be used as a means to an end rather as a result.—Annie Payson Call, in Leslie's Monthly Magazine for September.

DECISION RESERVED IN ISAAC LAMBERT'S SUIT

SQUIRE CLARK HEARS CASE AGAINST TELEPHONE CONCERN.

After several attempts the damage suit of Isaac Lambert against the Northeastern Telephone and Telegraph Company was tried in Judge Clark's court, at the Plains, Friday afternoon.

Two weeks ago the company was granted a new suit on account of Lambert, in naming the plaintiff, named the Philadelphia and New York Telephone Company. When the case was called Harry C. Runyon, counsel for the company, asked for a non suit and it was granted. Another suit was immediately started and was to have been tried Saturday of last week, but was adjourned at the request of the defendant's counsel. When the case was called yesterday the little court room was packed with the friends and neighbors of Lambert who had gathered to watch the legal battle their neighbor was waging against what they term soulless corporations. As they termed the company. Besides this, if Lambert was successful in his suit other suits were hinted at.

Lambert's interests were looked after by Walter Hetfield, Sr. Lambert stated in his complaint that the company in putting up their line past and through his property was exceeding the privileges of their contract by cutting down trees and taking more than the agreed number of feet upon his land in placing their anchors for the guy wires used to brace the poles. He placed his damages at $200. The company denied this and claimed their contract allowed them to erect their line through the property without restriction. After listening to the testimony and the able summing up of the case by the opposing counsels, the court decided to take the matter under consideration, so reserved his decision until Thursday afternoon of next week at 2 o'clock.

MISS PFEIFFER WEDS.

Married by Bishop Morrison, of Duluth, to H. R. Beguelin, of Brooklyn.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Miss Dayton Pfeiffer, of 818 Central avenue, and Henry Robert Beguelin, of Brooklyn, the affair being celebrated on Saturday last on Chatauagay Lake, Adirondacks, where the bride has been spending the summer. The ceremony was performed by the Right Rev. Dr. Morrison, bishop of Duluth.

*The affair was attended by the im*mediate relatives and a few friends of the couple. The bride is well-known here among the younger society people who will be interested to learn of her marriage.

Birthday Party.

In honor of the sixth anniversary of his birthday, Roy Leland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Leland, of West Second street, entertained a number of his young friends Saturday afternoon. The time was spent in playing games, after which supper was served to the young folks. The young celebrant received many gifts from the guests.

CO. K RETAINS TROPHY

Company L, of Princeton, Captures Second Place in Shoot.

CONTEST A CLOSE ONE

Robert Goldsack Is Probable Winner of Individual Marksmanship Competition.

While no official report as to which company won the Second Regiment trophy for the greatest percentage of members qualifying on the State range at Sea Girt this season, the figures given below are from a perfectly reliable source and prove that Co. K will retain the trophy.

The contest really lay between Co. L, of Princeton, and Co. K, of this city, and in spite of the fact that Co. L had the most money to spend on training her men, it has never also gainer conceded her ability to take the honor from Plainfield.

The Princeton contingent succeeded in qualifying forty-one men out of a total membership roster of sixty-seven, which gave them a percentage of 61.01, while out of a roster of seventy-one names, *Co. K found forty-*four men who could fill the requirements, which gives them a percentage of 61.09.

This percentage may be increased by the addition of another name, one who is thought to have qualified, but of whom they are not yet certain. The figures given are, however, sufficient to keep the trophy here for another year at least.

There has been no official announcement as yet, but as this percentage has been compiled from the official scores made by the men, no hesitation need be felt in accepting it as perfectly true.

Sergeant Selders should receive the full credit for his good work at the range as he went there on the last day, while still suffering with a broken collar-bone, the result of a fall, and made good scores in spite of the discomfort and pain incidental to firing the piece from the shoulder.

In the course of the qualifying shooting, Private Robert Goldsack, of K, this city, came within one point of Q. M. Sergeant A. I. Listell's score of 120, made last year.

This position would give Goldsack the individual championship of the Second Regiment, and entitle him to the medal offered the one who completes best with the requirements.

SOLD BUILDINGS.

Borough Realty Property Is Cleared of Residence and Barn Purchased at Auction.

The dwelling house situated on the North Plainfield school property at the corner of Somerset street and Park place was disposed of at auction Saturday afternoon, to Frank Mobus, for $101. By the terms of the sale he must move it west of Greenbrook road. The barn on the property was knocked down to Alex Kane for $13 and will demolish it for the lumber. Kane ran the bidding on the house up to $100 when it was secured by Mobus. William N. Pangborn was the auctioneer.

As a private sale Saturday, the Grace P. E. church parish house at Sycamore and East Sixth streets was disposed of to Contractor Kane who will remove it at once. In its stead Grace church will erect a more pretentious building. Several old buildings in the rear of French's mill have been sold to Kane and will be demolished.

BUSINESS PROPERTY SOLD.

W. W. Corlell Disposes of No. 223 West Front Street.

Through the agency of Albert Lederer, of the borough, W. W. Corlell has disposed of his business property, No. 223 West Front street, to Kantor, of Somerset street. The property is now occupied by Mr. Watts, as a butcher shop, while Mr. Corlell's residence is on the second floor of the building.

Mr. Corlell has owned this property since 1869 and during that time it has always been used as a market. Mr. Kantor proposes to open a dry goods store in the building next spring.

Police Hold Celebration.

The Jons Sobeski Society held its second annual ball at Higgins' Hall, South Plainfield, Saturday evening. One of the most striking effects was that presented by President Antonio Phillips, who unfurled the Polish flag and under his careful guidance the "soldiers" marched to the patriotic airs, which were ably played by Prof. Mikolajchake's Orchestra.

To Observe Rally Day.

The Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school will hold rally day exercises at the church on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. There will be a special programme consisting of a novel roll call of the entire school, an address by the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, and other interesting exercises. Music will be a feature of the programme.

TAX RATE FLUCTUATION

Twenty Years Ago $85,816.-20 Was Appropriated.

RATE THEN BUT $1.84

Now With All Improvements of a First-Class City, It Is But $2.52.

Just now when various cities and towns are receiving reports concerning their valuations and tax rates, it is interesting to glance backward twenty years and note the progress made in regard to Plainfield's improvements, tax rates and valuations. The taxpayers are now awaiting the announcement of the rate for the coming year and the prospect are that it will be a trifle less than last year, *when it was $2.53. The Board of As*sessors are striving to reduce the rate if possible, although the present rate is considered a fair one.

Twenty years ago the city had practically no macadamized streets, a volunteer fire department, no Board of Health, Public Library or sewage system and there were but three public schools. There were few sidewalks and the town streets were lighted at night by gas lamps, while the police department consisted of three or four men. To be sure all of these improvements cost money, but when it is considered that the increase in the tax rate during these twenty years has only been sixty-eight cents, one can realize that the addition has been a modest one and one not tending to extravagance.

It is generally admitted that Plainfield gets as much if not more for its expenditures than any other place of its size in New Jersey or the country. The town is noted for its freedom from "graft," while there are many towns where it is openly admitted that certain persons have to be seen before contracts are made. The taxpayers feel fortunate in having officials who are above this practice, men who cannot be bought and who have the best interest of the city at heart.

Twenty years ago, in 1884, there was raised $85,816.20 to run the city and the rate that year was $1.84. Some persons may say that is jump from this rate to $2.53 in 1903 is too much, but the valuations have about doubled in that time. In 1884 the valuation was $4,636,750, while last year it was $9,333,000 and there was raised for the city's expenses $233,325. The tax rate for each year from 1884 to 1904 is as follows:

1884, $1.84; 1885, $1.74; 1886, $1.86; 1887, $1.90; 1888, $2.18; 1889, $2.15; 1890, $2.24; 1891, $2.22; 1892, $2.20; 1893, $2.20; 1894, $2.22; 1895, $2.32; 1896, $2.30; 1897, $2.53; 1898, $2.42; 1899, $2.56; 1900, $2.50; 1901, $2.50; 1902, $2.50; 1903, $2.52.

Today the city has nearly every street macadamized, a well-regulated street sprinkling system, up-to-date fire and police departments, police patrol system, the fire departments has three houses, the property being owned by the city, and the latest apparatus. There is also a successful sanitary sewage system, a good system of street lighting, seven public school buildings and a new city high school now building, an efficient and wide-awake Board of Health, a well-appointed public library and reading room and art gallery, while good sidewalks are to be found in every part of the city. With these improvements the city is growing steadily and the fact that within a few weeks several large property deals have been effected, shows that property values are increasing very fast. Other improvements, such as a municipal system of collecting garbage, a city park and paved streets are considered things of the near future, but it is safe to say that the Common Council will not introduce them until the city is able to pay for them.

PLAINFIELD IS DOWNED

Somerville Wins a Clean Fought and Red Hot Contest

SCORE, NINE TO FIVE

The Great Wiltse Pitches, Warner Catches and Hoboken Does the Rest for Winners.

Not since the old baseball days in 1892, when the Crescents and the West Ends battled for supremacy on the diamond, has there been so much enthusiasm and excitement at a game in this city as on Saturday, when the old rivalry was renewed on Crescent Oval, between Somerville and Plainfield as early as Saturday forenoon field Somervillians began arriving in town and by 2 o'clock all trolleys and the steam cars coming from Somerset's county seat were crowded with fans, all on their way to the big game. The word was passed around that Somerville had spent enough money to take the game and they were sure of winning. Their calculations were not wrong for they carried off the honors by a score of 9 to 5, but not until their nerves had been severely shocked.

By 3 o'clock nearly every seat was taken on the oval and when the contest was called the biggest crowd of the season was present, numbering nearly 3,000 enthusiastic cranks. A large gang of Somerville rooters headed by Lon Mack and several others and carrying flags, took their position to the right of the diamond and from start to finish they yelled themselves hoarse. There was a large crowd of local supporters on the opposite side and the exchange of "hot air" delighted everybody. There were hundreds of small megaphones and these were used to good advantage.

Wiltse, of the New York Nationals, a Somerville boy, with a reputation of not having lost a game this year, was sought by "Jack" Warner, while the entire Hoboken team, including "Tuck" Turner, of the old Crescents, composed the rest of the team. Plainfield had its regular team, excepting "Happy Jack" Cronin, of the Brooklyns, who was on the sick list. Jack made one mistake. He forgot to bring along his assortment of twists and benders and his opponents landed on him for fifteen hits, including a double and a triple.

Plainfield jarred the hopes of the Somervillians in the first inning by making four runs and things looked mighty blue. Wiltse was a little wild and this coupled with two free passes and three hits noted four tallies. After that the home team only got an run, while Somerville made three in the second, one in the third and five in the fifth. In the latter inning Cronin was pounded for seven singles, including a double. That ended the scoring.

If Cronin had been in good form, the score would have been different, but the game was a good one and that is enough. It is quite likely that the teams will meet here again on Saturday, October 1. After Saturday's contest, a multitude of admiring friends carried Wiltse off the field and from the oval to town the constant cheering of the visitors could be heard.

EQUAL TAXATION FIGHT.

Mr. Black Says Railroads Escape Payment on $5,000,000 Worth of Property.

David J. Carney, the well-known Somerset county Democratic politician and leader of North Plainfield Democracy, spent Sunday afternoon with the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate, Charles O. Black, at his summer home in Glenside Park.

Mr. Black stated among other matters relating to the issues of the campaign that the railroads in Union county alone escape payment on over five millions of dollars; Middlesex loses taxes on eight millions and Somerset on over three millions and a half. In Hudson the figures are wonderfully increased, in fact the statements that Mr. Black makes are so amazing that the candidate wonders how the subject of equal taxation has remained so long dormant in New Jersey.

Beginning tomorrow Mr. Black will make a thorough campaign of the entire State. Sometime in October he will speak in this city.

J. B. Bests, of Washington avenue, has returned from Haines Falls, N. Y., where he spent his summer vacation.

Miss Freda Keiser, of the Roselle, has been visiting friends in Raritan.

BEAT AND ROBBED ITALIAN

Took Savings of Fellow Countryman at Pistol's Point.

CHOKED THEIR VICTIM

Six Armed Men Surprised Branzo in His Home and Took His Money.

Compelled to reveal its hiding place by revolvers pressed to his head, Michael Branzo, an Italian laborer at Smalley's quarry in the Notch, was robbed Saturday night of $260 and then beaten and choked in a cruel manner. The outrage was perpetrated by six strange Italians who had evidently made a study of the place and knew just when to catch Branzo alone and helpless. They disappeared before their victim could give an alarm and the authorities have little hope of capturing them.

Branzo has been a foreman at the quarry and is of a saving disposition, evidently with the intention of getting funds enough to return to his home across the sea. The other workmen at the place have been in the habit of coming to Plainfield Saturday nights to make purchases and enjoy a little recreation and while they were away Branzo would look after the place.

He was alone in the building when the door was suddenly flung open and the six men rushed in. His feeble attempt to drive them off resulted in his overpowerment and within a few moments they had stripped him of all his clothing and struck him repeatedly until his body was a mass of bruises. They then pressed the revolvers against his forehead and warned him if he did not tell where his savings were he would be killed. The terrified man believed them and while three went to the place indicated and secured the money the others stood by and struck him every time he tried to rise. No attempt was made to get any of the other men's money and it is believed the robbers thought what they would get from Branzo would be sufficient. He called for assistance as soon as they had gone but they had made good their escape. The city and borough police are aiding in the search.

MRS. MARY LAING, AGED 84 YEARS, DEAD

WELL-KNOWN HICKSITE FRIEND HAS PASSED AWAY.

Following an illness which began last July, Mrs. Mary H. Laing, widow of Isaac W. Laing, passed away at the home of her nieces, the Misses Harned, of East Front street, Saturday evening. She had been gradually failing and the end was not unexpected.

Mrs. Laing was the daughter of John and Phoebe Harned and was born at Woodbridge eighty-four years ago. She removed to Plainfield with her parents when but four years old, but at her marriage to Mr. Laing made her home on his farm near the Hillside golf course. At his death nine years ago she again returned to the city and had resided with the Misses Harned since. She was one of the oldest members of the local Hicksite Friends and until her illness began had always been faithful at meetings.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Charles Sandford, of East Front street.

While many relatives and friends from this city and other places were assembled in the Friends Meeting House on Watchung avenue, Tuesday morning, funeral services were conducted over the body of Mary H. Laing, John H. Shotwell, Friends' minister of Asbury Park, presided and spoke at some length, taking as his theme the words of the Savior to His disciples: "It is best that I go away but I send a comforter." Continuing he spoke of his acquaintanceship with the departed and her regularity in attendance at the Friends' meetings.

The interment was made in the Friends burial ground beside the body of her husband and at the grave side the minister's words were: "Blessed are they that die in the Lord for their works do follow them." There were many floral offerings with a profusion of chrysanthemums and oak leaves.

The pall-bearers were Frederick, Percy and William Sandford, Frederick Metcalf and George VanNest.

Contract for Parish House.

The work on the handsome new parish house to be erected at the corner of Sycamore and East Sixth streets, will be commenced within a short time, the contract for the same having been awarded to Charles M. Wilson, of West Sixth street. The structure will be built of stone and brick. The estimated cost of the new building is $20,000.

R. ABBOTT'S LOW SCORE

Makes a Seventy Gross on Hillside Club's Course.

MANY COMPETITIONS

Park Club Team No Match for Westfield—Play for Golf Committe and Other Cups at Hillside.

For some unknown reason there was a small list of entries in the various events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday, a majority of the active members being absent. In the morning Miss Margaret Goddard won the fourth leg on the Women's Handicap cup with a net score of 96.

In the afternoon the postponed match for the third eight in the finals for the club championship between E. B. Shoemaker and E. E. Ivesmonger was won by the former by 4 up and 3 to play.

A feature of the afternoon play was the work of Robert Abbott, who made the lowest score of the season, a 70 gross, and won the first honors for the Golf Committee cup. The remaining honors were won by W. L. Glenney and S. H. Patterson. The scores:

Robert Abbott, 70, plus 1—71; W. L. Glenney, 74, plus 2—76; S. H. Patterson, 106, 24—82; D. H. Rowland, 94, 10—84; H. C. Munger, 94, 12—82; D. H. Barrows, 86, 4—82.

The point-winners for the Gaston cup were Harold Robert, S. H. Patterson and A. E. Barclay. The scores:

Harold Robert, 100, 0—100; S. H. Patterson, 106, 2—108; A. E. Barclay, 106, 0—106.

There was also a light attendance at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, the weekly competition for the President's and Park Golf Club cups, being the only event. The limited number of contestants is due to the fact that the club team played a match at Westfield and this also accounted for the fact that the Bachelor-Benedict match was not played.

In the competition for the two trophies, H. B. Wells, J. L. Watson and Samuel Townsend won the points for the President's cup, while H. B. Wells, Samuel Townsend and Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll won the points for the scratch cup.

These scores were posted:

Henry B. Wells, 103, 18—84; John L. Watson, 117, 30—87; Samuel Townsend, 105, 13—92; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 110, 14—96; Charles L. Nichols, 113, 17—96; Joseph H. Howell, 111, 11—100.

The five-men team from the Park Golf Club that journeyed to Westfield on Saturday to play a match in the Central Jersey Golf League tournament, was overwhelmingly defeated by a score of 11 to 0. Nassau system. The home team proved much too strong for the Parks' good players and they did not allow a single man to tally a point. The summary:

Westfield—M. Whitstach, 0; Joseph Sherman, 3; C. E. Halsted, 3; W. J. Bogert, 3; E. B. Floyd, 2. Total, 11.

Parks—Geo. W. Faber, 0; Herbert S. Rogers, 0; Raymond B. Carrell, 0; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 0; T. U. Dudley, 0. Total, 0.

TRINITY REFORMED SUNDAY-SCHOOL'S RALLY

RECORD BREAKING ATTENDANCE AT VERY INTERESTING EXERCISES.

Rally day exercises were observed by Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, Sunday afternoon, and it was marked by one of the largest attendance of pupils ever noted. There were 435 present and in the roll call by classes, one answered with its entire membership while several had but one or two absent. The attendance was very gratifying to the officers and the exercises were very pleasing.

Musical features were furnished by Mrs. George Sasms, violin; Elmer Wheeler, flute; E. D. Young, cornet, and Miss Florence Bennett, soloist. Rev. Dr. Schenck delivered an address in which he compared the Sunday-school rally to an army. There are twenty-three million pupils in the United States, he said, and half this number are in the United States. These he divided into corps and divisions to represent the denominations and the Reformed church division he stated there are 108,000 children. Continuing his comparison, Pastor Schenck made each Sunday-school a regiment and each class a squad, thus making a highly interesting address and one in which the statistics were easily understood.

David Holland and family, of New York, spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Williams, of West End avenue.

MRS. THATCHER A SUICIDE

Wife of the Famous Minstrel Man Ends Her Life.

TURNED ON THE GAS

Found Dead in Her Apartments in the Navahoe, New York City, Last Evening.

Mrs. Mary T. Thatcher, wife of George Thatcher, the world famed minstrel man and former Plainfielder, was found dead Sunday in her apartments in the Navahoe, at No. 1 West 106th street, New York. Mrs. Thatcher was lying in her daughter's room, the keyhole and windows stopped with clothing and the gas turned on. She had been dead for several hours when found.

"Come back at half past eight o'clock tonight, and I will have a surprise for you. Remember to be on time." Mrs. Thatcher had said to her daughter, Mary L. Thatcher, nineteen years old, who went with Joseph E. Parker, of Somerville, early yesterday morning, to spend the day at Coney Island. Miss Thatcher looked at her mother queerly, but only got a warning to be sure to return on time.

Miss Thatcher and Mr. Parker returned to the Navahoe shortly after 8 o'clock. The daughter is said to have had a presentiment that something was going to happen. When she saw no light in the apartment from the other side of the street she asked her escort to remain in the hallway while she went up stairs to inquire. She could not open the door. The smell of gas was strong. She summoned Mr. Parker and he opened the door, to be almost overpowered by the rush of gas.

Policemen Farrel and Russell entered the house and opened the windows. Mrs. Thatcher was lying on her daughter's bed as if asleep.

No reason is known why Mrs. Thatcher should have killed herself, except that she had been afflicted with melancholia. Her husband is now in St. Louis, playing in "The County Chairman." Letters found on a table at Mrs. Thatcher's side were from her husband, who wrote every day, and each letter breathed sincere affection.

Miss Thatcher told one of the policemen that several days ago her mother appeared despondent. Mrs. Thatcher had also recently told her that should anything happen to her, Mary would find a satchel in the drawer, with a receipt for her jewels, in storage. The bag would also contain a ten dollar bill, she said. These she hugged away to her heart's fears that something might happen to her. The satchel and its contents were found as Mrs. Thatcher had explained. Miss Thatcher is prostrated.

Mrs. Thatcher, according to Mr. Parker, had been undergoing treatment for nervous trouble by Dr. Stone. The apartment house where she lived was being renovated and the tenants were compelled to leave. Mrs. Thatcher dreaded the prospect of moving and it preyed on her mind.

Her husband had planned to have her join him at Kansas City, and Mrs. Thatcher had arranged for her daughter's board at one of the dormitories of the Women's Cotlege.

Mrs. Thatcher was a very beautiful woman and her daughter has inherited her mother's attractiveness.

Although George Thatcher's name is familiar everywhere as a minstrel man of the old type, he is best known as the head of the famous trio, Thatcher, Primrose and West. He left minstrelsy and vaudeville only this season to enter the legitimate ranks and was meeting with much success. While in his heyday as a blackface comedian, Mr. Thatcher and his wife resided in Plainfield, making their home at West Seventh street and Central avenue, having purchased the property. Leaving the stage at one time, Mr. Thatcher opened the Hotel Maples on Terrill road but sold out within a year or so. They went from Plainfield to New York but both he and his wife have frequently returned to the city and visited local friends.

Alexander Millar and family, of Madison avenue, are home from their summer outing.

Thomas Lovett, of East Second street, has been visiting his son in New York city.

KNEW GREATEST ACTORS

John Stetson, proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Theatre in New York, now Proctor's, and other playhouses and opera companies. He remained with him until 1891 and then went to Chicago to take charge of J. H. Haverly's Eden Musee patterned after the enterprise of the same name in New York. Haverly afterward gave it up and Edwards managed it for two years when the erection of the elevated railway and other causes made it unprofitable.

At this juncture he received an invitation from Colonel William Morton, now of Newark, to take charge of the reconstructed Star theatre at Elizabeth, now Jacobs. He was not satisfied with the field and becoming interested in Plainfield spent his entire time to this city in 1897 as the manager of Music Hall. Under him the theatre, which had been dragging along under constant change of managements, took a new lease of life and for two seasons local playgoers had the best plays and the foremost artists in the country brought to their doors. During the last two years it was opened or until 1901, Mr. Edwards was so hampered by existing conditions that the Stillman family decided to turn the entrance into a store and let the hall remain idle. It still stands the same as it did on the last night it was opened to the public when "Quo Vadis" was presented.

The fact that Plainfield no longer had a theatre did not mean Mr. Edwards' departure as he had become so attached to the city that he then and there decided to make it his home no matter what developed. He has since remained and three years ago, at the solicitation of Mayor Fisk, assumed charge of the Casino and by reason of his wide experience has conducted it successfully. By his progressive methods and ready adaption to circumstances he has made it a substitute for a playhouse and Plainfielders have been appreciating it more and more.

Although he never appeared on the stage himself, Mr. Edwards' family has been theatrically inclined. His brother, Sam Edwards, is a headliner on the vandeville stage; his son, Rowland Edwards, is leading man for the "Her Mad Marriage" Company and his daughter, Miss Edith Edwards, is winning success in musical comedy. Mr. Edwards has been twice married. His first wife and the mother of his children died thirteen years ago. He remarried five years later and the present Mrs. Edwards is also very fond of Plainfield and has a wide circle of acquaintances. Their home life has been of the happiest and in Mr. Edwards' own words she is "a jolly good fellow."
